Bankruptcy Notices.

NO. 3,363.—IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the Southern District of New York.—In Bankruptcy.—In the matter of HENRY LE ROY PERSHALL, Bankrupt.—In Bankruptcy, 1900, I, the undersigned, the referee in said bankruptcy, hereby give notice that I will sell at public auction at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 10th day of January, 1901, at twelve o'clock noon on that day, by Peter F. Meyer, Esq., auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

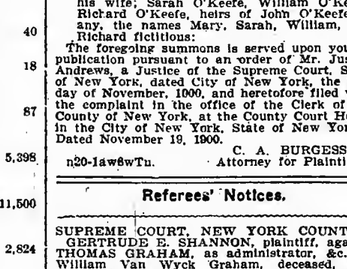
All that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land, with the buildings thereon erected, situate, lying, and being in the Borough of Manhattan of the City of New York, bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at a point on the southerly side of 95th Street, distant eighty-one feet nine and one-third inches (81 feet 9 1-3 inches) westerly from the westerly side of Madison Avenue; running thence southerly parallel with Madison Avenue and part of the way through a party wall one hundred feet eight and one-half inches (100 feet 8½ inches;) thence westerly parallel with 95th Street seventeen feet (17 feet;) thence northerly parallel with Madison Avenue and part of the distance through a party wall one hundred feet eight and one-half inches (100 feet 8½ inches) to the southerly side of 95th Street; thence easterly along the southerly side of 95th Street seventeen feet (17 feet) to the point or place of beginning.—Dated New York, December 17th, 1900. JOHN H. JUDGE, Referee.

HURRY & DUTTON, Attorneys for Plaintiff, 58 William Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York.

The following is a diagram of the property to be sold. Its street number is 24 East 95th Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York.

East 95th Street.



The approximate amount of the lien or charge to satisfy which the above-described property is to be sold is $28,451.25, with interest thereon from the 3d day of December, 1900, together with the costs and allowance amounting to $462.09, with interest thereon from the 10th day of December, 1900, together with the expenses of the sale. The approximate amount of the taxes, assessments, or water rates, or other liens to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase amount or paid by the referee is $472.01, and interest.

The above premises is sold subject to the covenants and restrictions as to character of buildings contained in the order filed recorded in the office of the Register of the County of New York, in Liber 12, Section 5 of Conveyances, at Page 228. JOHN H. JUDGE, Referee.

SUPREME COURT, NEW YORK COUNTY.—GRENVILLE E. SHANNON, plaintiff, against THOMA

LESS DRUNKENNESS UNDER RAINES LAW

State Commissioner of Excise Reports Its Operation Favorably.

BIG INCREASE IN REVENUE

Decrease of 6,307 in the Number of Places Where Liquor Is Sold.

ALBANY, Dec. 24.—State Commissioner of Excise Henry B. Lyman to-day issued a statement concerning the operation of the State Excise law during the past year He states that $61,289,275 have been collected in excise taxes since the Raines law went into operation, and in this connection says:

"In addition to the enormous revenue collected the statistics show a marked decrease in arrests for drunkenness within the State, being for the last year nine to the 1,000 population, instead of twelve to the 1,000 population, as under the last year of the old law. The decrease in drunkenness appears to have been in about the same proportion as the decrease in the places licensed to sell, so that there is an improvement from the moral standpoint, as well as from the consideration of revenue derived.

"The total receipts during the last year under the old law were $3,172,576; the receipts each year under the new law were: First year, $11,245,354; second year, $12,-372,340; third year, $12,633,981; fourth year, $12,686,056; from May 1 to Nov. 30, 1900, inclusive, $12,351,522.

"Notwithstanding the large increase in revenue under the liquor tax law, the number of places where liquors were sold have been decreased from 33,437 to 27,130, a decrease of 6,307.

"More than half of the criminal cases prosecuted by District Attorneys were upon evidence secured by the State special agent force.

"During the year litigation in 185 civil actions was completed, including forty-three bond actions, in which there were recoveries of $30,572; thirty-seven revocation proceedings, the balance being rebate proceedings, penalty actions, enumeration cases, certiorari proceedings, mandamus proceedings, injunction, and local option cases, in which the State Commissioner recovered, in penalties and costs, $3,459, making a total recovered for penalties and costs for the year of $34,031."

In conclusion the statement says:

"The successful administration of the law has required the earnest and united efforts of those connected with the inauguration and conduct of the department. At first the most mischievous doctrine that the law was only to be enforced by the officials of the Excise Department was persistently promulgated. This doctrine was willingly indorsed and adopted by officials who were disinclined to do their duty under this or any other excise law.

"In 1898, before the law was fairly in operation, its repeal was made a party issue, but the party making the repeal issue was seriously disappointed at the result, and since that time have carefully refrained from making an attack on the law in its political campaigns. This indicates that public opinion sustains the law and its administration."

ECCENTRIC WOMAN'S DEATH.

Woman Run Over in Jersey City Was Mrs. Ann Carroll—What Followed the Refusal of a Kiss.

The woman who was killed on the Erie Railroad Weehawken Coal Branch in Jersey City on Sunday was yesterday identified as Mrs. Ann Carroll, an eccentric character, whose home was at 316 Madison Street, Hoboken. She was fifty-five years old. She owned several houses in Hoboken, and at one time owned the meadow lots on which the public pound was established.

She had many disputes with her neighbors, one of which has become historic. In 1895 she quarreled with Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Rosenberg, who lived in the adjoining house. They alleged that she assailed them with squashes, pumpkins, potatoes, and other vegetables they kept for sale in a store they then managed. Rosenberg and his wife brought a civil suit for damages caused by her destruction of their property, and the case has been in the courts ever since, one appeal after another being taken by the Rosenbergs or Mrs. Carroll. The last hearing was in July last. The original trouble in the case was that Mrs. Rosenberg refused to kiss Mrs. Carroll. The latter went into the store one morning and asked Mrs. Rosenberg to kiss her.

"I haven't time for such nonsense," said Mrs. Rosenberg.

"Oh, you haven't?" queried Mrs. Carroll. "Then maybe you have time to catch this!" and she threw a pumpkin at Mrs. Rosenberg's head. This was followed by a bombardment with whatever vegetables Mrs. Carroll found within reach, and Rosenberg, who went to his wife's aid, came in for his share of them. All the vegetables that could be smashed were left in a condition that rendered them unsalable. Those that were too hard for this smashed other things, among which were fruit and pickle jars and bottles and even windows.

When the battle ended and the wreckage was cleared away the Rosenbergs estimated their loss at $40. In their efforts to secure a judgment it is believed they have spent five times that sum, while Mrs. Carroll, who always had two lawyers, is thought to have spent double that sum. In the last suit the jury gave a verdict for the Rosenbergs, and Mrs. Carroll filed an appeal.

Mrs. Carroll leaves two married daughters. Her name was originally McCarroll, but she decided that the "Mc" was a useless appendage, and dropped it immediately after her husband's death, fifteen years ago.

THE COST OF B'S EXPERIENCE.

Queer Sign on a Pushcart Attracts Attention in Wall Street.

A man stood at the corner of Wall and Broad Streets yesterday, with a flat pushcart loaded with pocketbooks and other leather goods. The fine quality of his stock attracted some attention, as it is not usual to see three-dollar pocketbooks displayed on pushcarts, but what attracted more attention than the stock, and which probably accounted for its display in that way, was the following sign painted in large letters and attached to the cart:

This is not a bankrupt sale, but a case of man's duplicity.
A has experience, B has money. Now A has money and B has experience and what stock is left and is here on sale.

Organist Resigns After Dispute.

Charles E. Colbeck, who two years ago became organist of Grace Episcopal Church in the Greenville district of Jersey City, has resigned. The cause was a difference of opinion between the organist and the Rev. Percival C. Pyle, the rector, regarding the musical service. Mr. Colbeck desired to give a full choral service every Sunday. Several members objected to this, as savoring too much of a High Church service, and Rector Pyle notified Mr. Colbeck that the full choral service could only be given once a month.

Labor Lyceum to be Rebuilt.

It was announced yesterday by the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum Association that it has decided to rebuild the Labor Lyceum at the corner of Myrtle and Willoughby Avenues, Brooklyn, which was burned a few days ago. A number of labor organizations which met in the building before it was burned have decided to co-operate with the association as far as possible in the erection of the new building.

SUMMER-LIKE DAY FOR CHRISTMAS EVE

Holiday Shoppers Perspired and Drank Ice Cream Soda.

WEATHER WAS UNSEASONABLE

Crowds Sought Open Cars and Fled the Heat that Was Clamored for a Few Days Ago.

Preternaturally warm weather developed many strange Christmas Eve spectacles in the streets yesterday, and the undefinable atmosphere of a general holiday which always pervades the passing crowds was more suggestive of the Fourth of July than of Christmas. It was a somewhat incongruous sight to see shoppers crowding up the elevated stairs, overcoatless and with coats unbuttoned, struggling through the throng with clipper sleds or club skates under their arms, and in the stores perspiring women flocking around the soda fountains calling for ice cream soda as on a midsummer day.

Only a few days ago loud and bitter complaints were made against the Metropolitan street surface railroad system because the cars were not heated. After a little delay the passengers got the heat; and they had it yesterday, perhaps for the same reason that it was so long in being turned on that nobody in authority happened to think about it and give the stop order.

The heat is all applied to one side of these cars, as is well known, and as a result on all lines the box cars were running with a decided list to starboard or port, as the case might be, for everybody wanted to get on the cool side. It was funny to see folks, especially women with children and bundles, get on and carefully bestow themselves and their belongings upon the side of the car that was unoccupied.

There would be but a brief minute of repose, and then hitch, hitch, along the carpet-covered bench, wondering glances up and down, and at last a move over to the other side if there was a possibility of squeezing in. The Broadway line ran many open cars, and though smoking is allowed all over them at this time of the year they were much patronized, and during the hours of the day when travel is lightest they did more than a fair share of the business.

Electric fans that have been still for many weeks were set a-buzzing in the restaurants, and at the down-town drug stores bowls of chopped ice took the place of the whipped cream used to set off the hot drinks.

It was warmer in New York yesterday than it was in Galveston or San Francisco, according to the Weather Bureau, and if there isn't a change in the weather to-day many a little boy of this city will envy the little boys down South, where they celebrate Christmas with firecrackers all day long and fireworks in the evening, and have presents, too.

New York has not had a white Christmas in eight years, but this unbroken record has done much to upset the gruesome old adage about green ones.

NO CHRISTMAS WITHOUT THIS.

Police Court Reporter Could Not Pass His Annual Chance.

The blazing sun of Christmas Eve was beating down with withering force upon the Essex Market Court building yesterday afternoon. The Magistrate, court attendants, and prisoners were performing their several functions with a listless air, owing to the oppressive heat. A faded woman with five little children entered from the dusty street and told a sad story of having been evicted for non payment of rent, and asking what might be done about it.

The police court reporter, who year after year chronicles the incidents of low life that pass in continuous procession before the Magistrate, stood mopping his brow while the woman told her story. At once he recognized the material for the annual Christmas eviction story. He was weary and oppressed by the gusts of hot air that came fitfully in through the open windows, raising the mercury to 75 degrees, but the force of habit was strong upon him. Removing all unnecessary apparel he tucked a handkerchief around under his collar and sent out this story:

"The Essex Market Police Court was just about to close for the day yesterday afternoon and the Magistrate was signing the commitments of a number of human derelicts to the island, where they would at least be snugly housed and warmly clad during Christmas Day, when there entered through the stormdoors of the courtroom a faded woman with five little ones, who clung timidly to their mother's sooty skirts. The little group seemed dazed with the cold, and when finally led up to the Magistrate's desk by a tender-hearted policeman, stood there shivering and silent. The mother was clad only in the thinnest of dresses, over which had been thrown a faded shawl to protect her from the pitiless weather. Her nose and fingers, as well as those of the children, were blue from cold.

"The Magistrate, thinking of the blazing fires of his own hearthstone and the thousands of the more prosperous who were at this hour wending their way homeward, bidding defiance to the icy breath of Winter, with warm furs and woolens, lent a kindly ear to this woman's story.

"She wept bitterly while she told how her husband was sick, and although they owed but $12 for one month's rent, the landlord yesterday had put them out upon the street in the bitter cold.

"The woman and children had stood about their household effects for hours, exposed to the biting Winter winds that swirled through the street, carrying bits of ice and snow. Then, almost dead with cold, they had started out to find the police court, having been directed by a kindly faced man in a heavy fur overcoat, who had taken pity on them. Even then the little party had wandered about a long time over the icy pavement before they found the courtroom and its temporary warmth.

"The warmly clad court attendants shivered sympathetically as they heard this story, and the kindly faced Judge told the mother that her case would be continued. Then he slipped some money into her hand. 'Go,' he said, 'and buy a ton of coal with that.'"

HIS TURKEY HAD FOUR LEGS.

Comrade's Joke Spoiled a Thirsty Stereotyper's Christmas Appetite.

"It was Christmas Eve, pay night, and the night of rejoicing and much drinking, and the night when, according to immemorial custom, every man in the shop walked home with a turkey, 'presented by the owner,'" said the old-time stereotyper. "As is generally conceded, there are few such thirsty souls as those in the stereotype rooms of newspapers—where they thirst for everything, from lager to truth. It was also conceded by those who ought to know that there was not a thirstier set of stereotypers in all New York than those of The ——.

"The ——, you must know, is an evening paper, and as we quit work about 7 o'clock that Christmas Eve, each man swinging a limp turkey by the legs, there was a concerted long paper bag rush for Madden's, around the corner, where it was intended to drink, and give vent to our souls with songs and carols.

"Among us was a fellow named Jim Corrigan, and it was thought Jim had about landed the fattest turkey in the bunch. Jim thought so himself, for he kept his eye on it until pretty well in the night, when no one cared whether the turkeys were fowl or suckling pigs. Some one conceived the idea of a joke on Corrigan. The legs were cut off of one of the other turkeys and after proper beveling on the edges, were shoved into Corrigan's turkey and fastened there with an invisible string, making a four-legged turkey.

"Corrigan noticed nothing. When he started to go, he picked up the turkey by the neck and, stripping off the long paper bag, resolved to carry it home in the altogether.'

"There was no trouble till he was seated in the elevated train, where he made himself comfortable and dangled the four-legged turkey between his knees, to the amusement of a number of passengers. The people became more and more interested in the monstrosity, until Corrigan began to notice that every one was looking at him. That made him angry, and he began to swear, first gently to himself, then not so gently, and finally without any mistake about it. At last he found the object of attention. He raised the turkey slowly to a level with his eyes and stared at the four legs suspiciously. He rubbed his eyes and looked again. Finally he blew his nose and spoke. 'Suffering Moses, I didn't think I had as much as all that. What a time I must have had,' he said. Then he extended his hand to make sure which of the legs were the real things. When he felt the four legs, it was the last straw.

"'A cripple, by thunder, a rank cripple they gave me for my Christmas dinner,' and before any one could interfere to prevent it he had hurled the turkey out of a window far down into the street—into the night."

XMAS DANCE FOR IMMIGRANTS.

Merrymaking Till Midnight Will Follow Dinner on Ellis Island.

Christmas among the newly arrived immigrants is to be celebrated in great shape to-day. Emil Schwab, who has the contract for feeding the people that come into the country under the care of the Bureau of Immigration, has arranged to give to the 500 now on Ellis Island a big dinner at midday. Many turkeys have been bought, and they will be served up with the orthodox accompaniment of cranberry sauce. There will also be a plenty of other attractive things to eat, including vegetables, pies, Limburger cheese, elongated sausages, and macaroni. A large majority of the diners will be Italians.

In the evening, when the immigrants shall have satiated their appetites, the big hall that is used as a bureau of registration will be cleared for a dance. Then, until midnight, the 500, or as many of them as are addicted to terpsichorean amusements, will revel. The orchestra that has been provided consists of a zither and two accordions.

MONEY FOR HOLIDAY GIFTS.

Heavy Calls on the Sub-Treasury for Gold and New Bills.

The color of the Christmas aside, there has been this year the greatest demand in the history of the Sub-Treasury for Christmas money, according to Cashier Marlor, who has been there for thirty years. According to Assistant Treasurer Jordan and Mr. Marlor this is one of the surest evidences of the general prosperity.

For the past two weeks the Sub-Treasury has paid out on a daily average $150,000 in gold coins, from quarter to double eagles; $500,000 in new notes, from ones to one thousands, and $4,000 in nickels and pennies. All of the specie has been just from the mint and bore the 1900 date. This money has been paid out in lots from 10 cents, where poor women have come in and asked for ten bright pennies, to the order of the American Express Company, which called for 30,000 half eagles, and the banker who wanted a new thousand-dollar note to give to his bookkeeper.

Yesterday another of the orders from stores for gold pieces to present to their employes was received from Hearn, the Fourteenth Street dry goods dealer, who asked for 1,500 quarter eagles, one of which was last night given to each employe in the house. In spite of the extra work entailed by this great demand, everybody has been waited on, and efforts to please all comers have been eminently successful.

GOV. ROOSEVELT AS SANTA CLAUS

Distributed Gifts to School Children at Oyster Bay.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Dec. 24.—Gov. and Mrs. Roosevelt's reception at District School No. 10, in this place, this afternoon, where they distributed Christmas presents to every pupil in the school, was very pleasing to them. The opening prayer was by the Rev. Mr. Russell, pastor of the Presbyterian Church. After this there were recitations by the scholars. Among these were Kirmet and Archer Roosevelt. Gov. Roosevelt was then introduced, and he said, in part:

"Schools amount to nothing unless interest is taken by the parents at home. Much depends upon this. I believe that I voice the sentiment of all the parents in this respect and the teachers are satisfied. Nothing can be substituted for this home practice. Now, children, I want to say to you, work while you work, and play while you play, and do both with all your hearts. Have a good time. Help any one you can. Do your work to the full extent of your mind. Every boy and girl should want to be a hero. When asked to do any errand, don't suggest that 'Susie' go, as you had been there last, but go quickly and happily, or you will find it heartburning to both your father and mother. I always feel that these meetings at Christmas are among the most pleasant I enjoy. In conclusion, I wish you all a merry Christmas, especially the teachers who have labored so hard for you, and also your parents, my friends and neighbors." [Applause.]

William J. Youngs then spoke to the children for about ten minutes. He amused the audience by reciting a poem he said he learned forty years ago. After the speech-making, Gov. Roosevelt distributed the presents. Every child in the school received a package of candy, and either a doll, book, wagon, or sleigh.

There were about 150 adults present and about 60 pupils, which crowded the room.

Salvation Army's Work for the Poor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It has been brought to our notice by a newspaper representative that a statement is being circulated for the purpose of publication to the effect that "most of the articles required for our mammoth Christmas dinner for the poor are being contributed to us gratis, and that there will be a large balance of money left over which will be applied to the general funds of the Salvation Army." Such a statement has no foundation in fact—on the contrary, very little in the way of food has been donated except a carload of potatoes from Chateaugay, N. Y.

Last year there was a balance of only $4,078 after all expenses were paid, and every penny of this, and a great deal more, was distributed through our Winter Relief Department. If there should be a balance this year it will be similarly treated. In any event, a statement of the income and disbursements will be sent to you as soon as the effort is over.

THOMAS HOLLAND,
Chairman of Committee on Arrangements.

Fire Chief Warns Holiday Makers.

In anticipation of the annual Christmas fires, Chief Croker of the Fire Department yesterday issued a warning to the citizens of the greater city in the matter of the peculiar affinity existing between the average Christmas tree and flames. He asked that special care be taken in all places, and particularly in school buildings, churches, and wherever there as a large number of people gathered. He asks that the department be notified at once of a fire, and that there shall not even be an effort to extinguish any blaze, no matter how slight, before notifying the department.

Xmas Brought Prosperity to Trade.

Although every Exchange in the financial district was closed yesterday, the day was only nominally a holiday for the army of brokers and bankers' clerks, who were busily at work getting their books in shape after the heaviest trading season on record. The brokerage houses with foreign connections were receiving cables, and some arbitrage business was being done. It was universally stated that the year has been the most prosperous one in the history of the Street, and as a result the Christmas presents to employes by banking and brokerage houses were said to have been lavish.

The Kaiser's Christmas Eve.

BERLIN, Dec. 24.—The weather in Berlin is mild, cloudy, and dry. To-day there were the usual Christmas Eve street scenes. Emperor William at 3 P. M. attended the distribution at Potsdam of presents to the troops of the Garde du Corps. He dined at the palace an hour later, and then joined in the family festivities, which included the usual array of tables covered with white cloths and the Christmas trees for the Princes, one for each.

Three Human Feet Found at a Dump.

Some boys who were delving in the refuse of the Jersey City dumps, at the head of Zabriskie Street, yesterday, found three human feet. They were taken to the Webster Avenue Police Station, where they were examined by County Physician Charles B. Converse. He said they were apparently the feet of women, and that the bodies had probably been dissected by medical students. The police are making an investigation with a view to learning, if possible, where the feet came from.

NEW YEAR'S WATCH IS OFF

F. D. Higbee's Greeting to 1901 for the Red Cross Fails.

PROMISED TO RAISE $300,000

Promoter of Scheme Explains His Connection with Meeting as Purely Business.

The New Year's watch meeting at Madison Square Garden under the auspices of the Red Cross Society at which it was intended to read greetings from potentates, Princes, and from citizens of more or less prominence in Europe and America, has been postponed. Instead of greeting the new century in this city in an entertainment at $1.50 a head, Frank D. Higbee, the promoter of the project, has decided to have an entertainment of a different character next March upon the day of the anniversary of the adoption on the part of the United States of the International Red Cross Treaty of Geneva. The day falls on March 11, and its main feaure will partake of the character of a reception and popular greeting to Clara Barton.

The action in New York will not, Mr. Higbee says, affect hundreds of other watch meetings all over the country, at which the greetings will be read, with the exception of Philadelphia, where the meeting also has been declared off. Several causes contribute to the local postponement, the chief one being the fact of the open-air meeting in City Hall Park on New Year's Eve. Mr. Higbee says he is far too experienced to run in opposition to a free show in the same city on the same night. Mr. Higbee said last night that his plans had been misunderstood by a great many people in this city. He made the following explanation of his position in reference to the Red Cross Society:

"My business," said he, "is evolving ideas and selling them for entertainment, advertising, and other purposes. After I had evolved the scheme of watch meetings and greetings, in connection with raising money for the society, as well as helping myself in a perfectly legitimate enterprise, I went to the Red Cross people in Washington and laid the idea before the Board of Control. Some dissented at first, others approved. I told them that the millionaires had been solicited long enough, and that I was about time to go to the people for Red Cross support and give them something in return for their money, such as an entertainment. The Red Cross needs money. I proposed to raise for the society $300,000 in approximately two years' time, and told them I wanted a certain salary at the end of that time if I made my word good. I am a high-priced man, and the sum I named staggered them at first. But, I said, if I do not realize the sum you are under no obligation to pay my salary. If I do, I want the salary agreed upon, for it will be worth the amount to you. The Red Cross people agreed as upon any other distinct business proposition and the contract was drawn up, the society agreeing to pay the necessary expenses. That's all there is to it. I am not getting any 'rake-off' or any commission whatever. I propose to raise $300,000 by a series of schemes, and, besides the present one, I have three or four more up my sleeve. I do not care to handle the money. If there are contributions, checks can just as well be sent to Washington, as the Red Cross must get it, anyway.

"Now, I know I can raise $300,000, as I said I would. I have backed other enterprises and have never yet made a failure. The collection of the greetings has cost $11,000. I attended the committee meeting at the City Hall this noon, and I told the members that I would send them a full set to be read at their celebration and afterward they could pay for it whatever sum they might see fit. The money, of course, goes to the Red Cross, as I have explained.

"I think the best answer I can give to my critics is that I have the full indorsement of the Red Cross Board of Control, and besides that a warm indorsement from Clara Barton herself."

Mr. Higbee said that so far he has received eighty-six greetings, and that all will be sent to the committees in the various towns. The postponement in Philadelphia was practically for the same reason as that in New York.

When the joint committee of the Municipal Assembly, appointed to arrange for the celebration of the opening of the new century met yesterday in the City Hall, a representative of the Red Cross Society appeared and requested that the city take the responsibility for the celebration arranged to be held in the Madison Square Garden on New Year's Eve. The first proposition by the representative of the Red Cross Society was to have the city pay for the musical arrangements and assume the full responsibility for the Red Cross celebration in Madison Square Garden. This the Municipal Assembly committee refused to do. Then the representative of the Red Cross Society asked that the city pay $1,000 for the telegrams received from the monarchs and leaders all over the world by the Conference with the new century celebration by the Red Cross Society. The Municipal Assembly committee refused to foot these bills.

The representative of the Red Cross Society left the City Hall after making this announcement:

"Well, there will be no Red Cross celebration anyway. If this Municipal Committee can do nothing now, you might cooperate with us in a celebration to be held under the auspices of the Red Cross Society on March 1, the anniversary of the acceptance of the Red Cross treaty by the United States."

The announcement was then made that there would be only one celebration, and that would be at the City Hall. Chairman Sulzer announced that there would be 800 singers there, and that as Frank Damrosch and his Choral Union promised to be present, there should be 1,200 singers.

The next meeting of the New Century Celebration Committee will be held next Wednesday afternoon.

JOY FOR THE CITY'S POOR.

Christmas Entertainments in Public and Charitable Institutions.

Preparations are rapidly completing or have already been completed throughout every public institution in the city for the annual Christmas celebration. In the jail, the hospital, the penitentiary, the infirmary, the public home, and the workhouse, the lame, the halt, the blind, the straggliers, and wounded in the ceaseless battle of life in a great city will for this one day at least feast and make merry to their hearts' content.

Warden Pickett of Ludlow Street Jail will act the part of Santa Claus to his fifty-two prisoners. He will not distribute any presents, but still he will try to make everything as pleasant as possible, with a joyous feast. Yesterday was a very busy day at the Charities Dock, at the foot of East Twenty-sixth Street. Hundreds of pounds of things good to eat were loaded on the boats that ply between the pier and Blackwell's Island. These articles were for the good cheer of the inmates of the institutions on Blackwell's and other islands under the Department of Charities and Correction.

Tremendous consignments of good things also were sent to Bellevue, Harlem, Gouverneur, and Fordham Hospitals, and the various city jails. The children in Ward 31 at Bellevue will have a Christmas tree, the work of the matron, Miss Agnes Brennan. There will be entertainments in various institutions in the city, and particularly at the Tombs, where volunteer talent will give a theatrical show. The inmates of the Manhattan State Asylum will be entertained also. Nobody will be forgotten.

There was a Christmas entertainment at the New York Hospital last night for the benefit of the children patients and those who have been treated there at other times. This was held in the children's ward, which was beautifully decorated. A large Christmas tree was placed in the centre of the room and around it grouped a number of little beds in which lay children who were too ill to be up. Several of the nurses contributed to the amusement of the little folks by music, songs, and recitations, and Santa Claus was there and distributed the gifts to the children.

In the rooms of the Volunteers of America, at 1 Fourth Avenue, last evening about 150 children were made happy with Christmas toys and a variety of candies and nuts, and other sweet things which appeal to the childish palate. The children were all members of the Sunday school class which is conducted in these rooms by Junior Sergeant and Superintendent William H. Smeaton, who conducted the exercises last evening and distributed the presents. The Rev. Alfred Myers, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church, made the Christmas address to the children.

$10,000 MORE THAN HE NEEDED.

St. Louis Manufacturer Gives His Employes a Christmas Present.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 24.—Russell E. Gardner, a vehicle manufacturer of St. Louis, has given $10,000 to his employes for a Christmas present.

When he balanced up his books for the year he found that his concern had earned $10,000 more than he expected, and more than he needed for his business or personal wants. He informed the employes that he would like to give it to them in proportion to their years of service and effectiveness for the firm. They were willing. Each received a check for the pro rata due.

Gardner is a remarkable man. He is only thirty-four years old, and yet is retired from active business. He says that no man should be a slave to work in pursuing more wealth than is necessary for his comfort.

"Money making is the easiest thing in the world," says Gardner. "Any young man with energy and application can accumulate enough wealth by the time he is thirty-five years old to support him in ease for the rest of his life. When he has got enough he should quit and live in comfort during the best years of his life."

Gardner made his wealth in fourteen years.

Gift for City Clerk Scully.

City Clerk P. J. Scully last evening was presented with a handsome silver tea service by a committee representing the members of Tammany Hall in the Twelfth Assembly District and the members of the Columbian Club. The presentation was a complete surprise to Mr. Scully, as he had received no intimation of the affair. James J. Devlin presented the tea service, and Mr. Scully managed to make a brief speech of thanks and to express his appreciation of the gift. After the presentation an informal programme was rendered and refreshments were served to about 500 persons. The members of the committee which conducted the affair were Assemblyman Leon Sanders, Chairman; James J. Devlin, Judge Henry M. Goldfogle, James F. Delaney, John F. O'Brien, James J. Leary, Senator Simon J. Foley, Alderman William Clancy, Herman L. Flan, Coroner Jacob E. Bausch, and Alderman James J. Smith.

Christmas Gift to Railroad Employes.

SYRACUSE, Dec. 24.—As a Christmas present to its employes, the Syracuse Rapid Transit Company announces that it will increase wages from 7 to 9 per cent., according to the length of service. About 250 men are affected.

DR. PEASE'S TESTIMONY.

President Murphy Thinks the Christian Scientist May Be Prosecuted.

President Murphy of the Health Board has asked Surrogate Fitzgerald for a certified transcript of the testimony given by Charles G. Pease, M. D., D. D. S., "C. S.," in the contest over the will of Helen C. Brush. It is understood that the President will submit the testimony to counsel for legal advice in order to determine whether he can prosecute Dr. Pease on the testimony he gave before the Surrogate.

Dr. Pease admitted that he had not reported Miss Brush as ill with consumption, and further admitted that in one case he had signed a death certificate without having attended the patient.

NATHAN ROTH MAY RECOVER.

John Galletus Held to Await Result of Boy's Injuries.

Nathan Roth, the nine-year-old boy of 166 Berry Street, Williamsburg, who was shot in the head on Sunday night by John Galletus, a crazed boilermaker, was so much improved yesterday that the doctors of the Eastern District Hospital have hopes now of his recovery. The bullet was extracted yesterday. It was found under the scalp over the right eye.

John Kelly of 179 Bedford Avenue, whom Galletus shot in the chest, was able to be about yesterday. His wound is slight.

Galletus was arraigned yesterday in the Lee Avenue Police Court. Magistrate Kramer committed him to jail to await the result of Roth's injuries.

HUSBAND DIES AT WIFE'S BIER.

Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Creco Will Be Buried Together.

A double funeral will take place to-day from the Italian Catholic Church in North Eighth Street, Williamsburg. It is that of Antonio Creco and his wife, Camilla, who died on Sunday within a few minutes of each other. They lived at 383½ Withers Street.

Mrs. Creco had been ill for a long time, and her husband nursed her. Mrs. Creco grew worse, and on Sunday she died. While Creco was bending over the body, silently weeping, he was stricken with heart disease and fell across the body. One son survives the couple.

SHIRT WAISTS Imported and Domestic

This event (always eagerly awaited) begins to-morrow.
Introducing all the styles of 1901.
Offering Unique Specials.

In devising the Shirt Waist this country has, for once, turned the tables on her sister Republic, and is the originator, Paris an eager follower. But the style influences of Paris predominate, and domestic manufacturers follow closely in French footsteps. That indefinable, elusive "smartness" ever associated with George, Martial, Charvet and Doucet fils finds successful simulation in American productions—at a good round saving of cost. We are amply stocked with foreign models and their home duplicates.

ALL SIGNS POINT TO A NEW, GREATER LEASE OF UNIVERSAL POPULARITY FOR THESE PRE-EMINENTLY SENSIBLE AND STYLISH GARMENTS.

An evolution and revolution of sleeves, collars, cuffs, trimmings, and even of fabrics, supply every stimulus of novelty. Effects are daintier than ever. The straight front is carried further. There is heavy demand upon delicate laces, embroideries and hemstitchings, trending to somewhat elaborate effects.

Reds, Violet, all the Blues, Tans of every tone, dull and bright Greens strike charming color notes. Altogether this year's gathering is notable, and every woman who values value, richness and high fashion will study, note and admire.

We name some striking specials that surpass all that have gone before.

Models from Parisian sources—the very limit of novelty, richness and fashion authority..... 25.00

Imported Organdie Waists, to be worn at smart functions, the Paris fads of the hour..... 12.50

CAPE DUTCH ARE WAVERING

Question as to Whether They Will Rebel Still in Doubt.

BOERS EVACUATE BRITSTOWN

Kitchener Reports that One Party Has Retired North—Invaders Have Done Little Damage So Far.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—The position of Cape Colony is hanging in the balance. According to The Morning Post's Cape Town correspondent, everything depends upon the quantity of ammunition in possession of the disloyal Dutch residents, fifteen hundred of whom have joined the Boers in the Philipstown district alone.

Energetic measures have been taken to stem the invasion, but there is unquestionably danger that parties of Boers will get through into parts of the colony and gradually raise the whole Cape into rebellion. Reinforcements can arrive none too soon.

Most of the dispatches from Cape Town, however, describe the raiders as doing little harm and as being rapidly inclosed by Lord Kitchener's combination. Lord Kitchener is in the heart of the disaffected districts.

He has the advantage of being personally acquainted with local conditions. Last March he supervised the suppression of the rising which occurred then. He is bringing down thousands of troops from the north.

The Standard's Cape Town correspondent says the Loyalists demand that martial law shall be proclaimed throughout Cape Colony, but adds: "Such a step is now impossible, owing to the lack of sufficient troops to enforce it."

The correspondent of The Daily Mail at Cape Town says:

"The pro-Boer papers are singularly quiet. They have been made uneasy by the promptness and thoroughness of the military action, but reports from various parts of the western provinces foreshadow perilous possibilities.

"A responsible Colonist who recently made a tour of the Colony, declares that 90 per cent. of the Dutch are simply waiting for the appearance of a resourceful leader to rebel."

The Cape Town correspondent of The Times telegraphs that scarcely any Cape Colonists have joined the invaders.

Civil railway traffic has been suspended largely in all parts of the Colony, and the movements of both the Boers and the British are almost unknown at Cape Town. It appears that one Boer column attacked Steynsburg, but was repulsed and fled, entrenching itself in the mountains.

Another Boer commando captured a party of police at Venterstad. Mounted colonial troops surprised 300 Boers fifteen miles from Burghersdorp on Dec. 25, and, after a brisk interchange of volleys, retired with a loss of two men.

Lord Kitchener, telegraphing to the War Office, under date of Naauwpoort, Dec. 24, 9 A. M., reports:

"Thorneycroft's Mounted Infantry have occupied Britstown without opposition. The Boers retired to the north in the direction of Prieska. They will be followed up."

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 25.—Regular railway service between Cape Town and De Aar has been restored.

The report of the destruction of a bridge south of De Aar turns out to be incorrect; only a culvert was damaged. Trains are running from De Aar to Kimberley irregularly. There are considerable delays elsewhere as the result of heavy rains.

Two hundred Boers have left Britstown after commandeering all supplies available.

BATTLE NEAR DE AAR.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 25.—Fighting is going on near De Aar.

Particulars are unobtainable.

New Zealand to Send More Men.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Dec. 25.—The Government has asked the Governor, the Earl of Ranfurly, to inform the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, that it does not wish the New Zealand contingent in South Africa to be diminished; that drafts will be forwarded to fill the ranks, and that additional mounted men will be sent.

H. O. WILBUR'S SON KILLED.

Thrown from His Horse in Chester Valley Hunt, on A. J. Cassatt's Farm, Near Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 25.—While riding cross-country to join the Chester Valley Hunt to-day, Henry L. Wilbur, aged forty-two years, son of H. O. Wilbur, the well-known cocoa and chocolate manufacturer, of this city, was thrown from his horse and killed on the farm of A. J. Cassatt, President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, near Valley Forge.

Mr. Wilbur, who lived at Bryn Mawr, started out on a magnificent horse, accompanied by T. N. McCartney, another huntsman. They were too late for the start at Stafford, a suburb of this city, where the hounds were released. The two men caught sight of the forward fox hunters on the Cassatt farm, and galloped at great speed to catch up with them.

On the further side of the property there is a three-foot rail fence, and beyond this a ditch. Mr. Wilbur's horse took the obstruction easily, but in landing beyond the ditch one of the horse's forward feet sank into a small hole. Mr. Wilbur was pitched forward and thrown headlong to the ground, where he lay unconscious. He was carried toward Devon, but his condition grew worse, and he died in a farm house. The exact cause of death is not known, but it is believed to have occurred from a broken neck. He leaves a wife.

COYOTE HUNTING IN KANSAS.

Farmers Get $3 for Each Scalp—Join in a Grand Round-Up.

Special to The New York Times.

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 25.—Farmers in Western Kansas are depleting the county treasuries by the capture of coyotes. Each coyote scalp is worth $3.

The method of capture is unique. A crowing rooster is placed in a cage and taken to an elevated place, hunters secrete themselves in gulches and kill a dozen or more in a day. Another decoy is to take a piece of meat, drag it through the grass and leave it on an eminence. The coyotes follow the trail to the meat in droves and are slaughtered with shotguns. Over one hundred farmers joined in a grand "round-up" of coyotes to-day.

Wolves Abound Near Minneapolis.

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 25.—Large numbers of wolves infest the vicinity of Minneapolis, and the farmers are in a state bordering upon panic for fear their live stock will be attacked by the brutes. This condition is particularly true as applying to Anoka County, adjoining Hennepin, where the prairie wolves are reported as being more numerous than ever before. Farmers are sending out invitations for a grand hunt in the near future by means of which it is hoped to exterminate or drive out of the country the animals.

SHIP MET STORM'S FURY.

State of Nebraska Encountered Head Winds and High Seas.

When the Allan-State liner State of Nebraska reached her pier yesterday morning the officers and crew declared the voyage to have been the worst they had ever experienced in their seafaring lives. From the Irish port of Moville, from which she sailed on the 9th, for two weeks the vessel was tossed and rocked incessantly, hardly a moment's abatement of the frightful weather conditions being noticeable during all this time. Terrific headwinds were met, and great, high seas swept across the decks, staggering the vessel with the persistence and fury of their onslaught. A run of over 100 knots was the exception during this time, while on five consecutive days, from the 12th to the 16th, the runs were less than this. The maximum run on these days was 83 knots on the 13th, while the 15th was represented by 50 knots on the ship's log.

When she docked yesterday morning the superstructure of the Nebraska gave evidence of the rough handling she had received on the turbulent voyage. The lighthouses on her bow were smashed and rendered useless, two lifeboats on the port side of the promenade deck were practically destroyed, the bridge railings were twisted, and other lesser damage to various portions of the decks attested to the severity of the passage.

Purser Sterrat, in speaking of the trip, called it the banner passage of his experience for high seas, gales, winds from all points of the compass, and other marine weather phenomena. "It was the worst," he said, "that any of us ever ran up against. Few ships have encountered such terrific gales and tremendous seas."

Capt. David Ingram of Vancouver, one of the passengers, said many of the passengers had on more than one occasion become alarmed for their safety. The report that many of them had put on life belts or spent the time in prayer, he said, was not authentic. The only person injured on the passage was William Thompson, one of the firemen. He was going down the forecastle ladder, when a big wave broke over the bow, catching him and throwing him against the rails. Two of his ribs were broken. Dr. Ogilvie, the ship's surgeon, attended him.

The engineers had their hands full in keeping the machinery in working order. The injuries were due to the terrific strain the vessel was put to, owing to the storms.

Commander Peters, who brought the Nebraska over, refused to talk of the passage.

POLICE SCARED GENDARMES.

New Yorkers' Welcome to Frenchmen Interpreted as a Notice of Arrest.

The French liner La Normandie arrived from Havre yesterday after a stormy passage, which was weathered without any appreciable damage to machinery or superstructure.

Among La Normandie's passengers were five French gendarmes, who are en route to Tahiti, in the Society Islands. They have already served ten years, and will remain on their new station in the Pacific for seven years, after which time they will be relieved by a new relay of policemen. They were all in the full uniform of the service, and were much the most conspicuous of La Normandie's passengers. They will remain in New York a few days, after which they will proceed to Tahiti by way of San Francisco.

When they left the pier several New York policemen spied them, and desiring to show some attention to their Paris brethern, accosted them and extended to them in English the liberty of the city. The gendarmes at first thought they were under arrest and began to expostulate in choice Parisian French concerning the peaceful mission which was responsible for their temporary sojourn in New York. An interpreter came to the rescue of the much embarrassed party, and the hospitable intentions of the New York contingent being made known to the Frenchmen, there was a general shaking of hands, accompanied by profusive nodding and courtesying on the part of the foreigners, after which both parties separated, apparently much to the relief of all.

Among others on La Normandie were M. de Beauregard, the Italian Consul General to Cuba; Baron P. de Langlade, and Comte Jean de Sieyes.

YOUTSEY'S CARTRIDGES FOUND?.

Discovered in Vault of Office Where Alleged Slayer of Goebel Worked.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Dec. 25.—One of the clerks in the State Auditor's office in searching the vault for old records to-day found a cartridge box containing eight metal patched smokeless powder cartridges, 38.55 calibre, corresponding exactly to the bullet found in the tree and which was believed to have passed through William Goebel's body.

The significance of the discovery lies in the fact that Henry Youtsey, convicted of participation in the Goebel assassination in October, was a clerk in the Auditor's office at the time of the assassination and had access to the vault where the cartridges were found, and that George Barnes, another clerk in the office, testified he saw Youtsey with a box of cartridges.

NO SHIPPING LOBBY, SAYS HANNA.

Subsidy Bill, He Adds, Is Business Measure, and Stands on Its Merits.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 25.—Senator Hanna was informed to-day of a statement which is in circulation to the effect that there was a powerful lobbey in favor of the subsidizing of American shipping at the Philadelphia convention and in Washington.

"The only lobby of that kind I know anything about," was the Senator's answer, "is a lobby of foreign steamship companies which is trying to defeat the bill. There was no lobby at Philadelphia at all. The subsidy bill is a business measure, and there is no desire to force it through Congress. We want it to go through on its merits. It has been three years in preparation and has been amended twenty times.

"The President, in all his messages, has urged the necessity of some such measure, and it was made a plank in the St. Louis platform and the Philadelphia platform. The details are left to Congress to work out."

Concert by Great Mormon Choir.

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 25.—One of the features of great interest in connection with the annual convention of the National Live Stock Association to be held here Jan. 15 will be a concert in the great Mormon Tabernacle by the Tabernacle choir of 500 voices, assisted by a number of vocal and instrumental soloists. The Mormons are proud of the musical feature of their service, and the choir is composed of the best singers in the church.

Fireman Killed in a Collision.

GENEVA, N. Y., Dec. 25.—A rear-end collision occurred on the Pennsylvania Division of the Central Hudson near this station to-night. The south-bound passenger train due here at 7:30 o'clock ran into a freight engine standing on the main line. Louis Peters, the fireman of the freight train, was killed.

HALL OF RECORDS CHANGES

Architect Thomas Does Not Believe Plans Will Be Modified.

Says the Scheme of the Judges Is Impracticable—Corporation Counsel Whalen Is Surprised.

Considerable interest was aroused by the publication in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday of the proposed project to change the plans of the new Hall of Records so as to convert the building into one that may be utilized for the purposes of the Supreme Court and the offices of the County Clerk, Surrogate, and Sheriff.

The plan, which originated in the minds of Justices of the Supreme Court, provided also that the present County Court House should be used for the offices of the Register, the Controller, and the Corporation Counsel.

John R. Thomas, the architect of the new Hall of Records, when seen at his home yesterday, said of the proposed plan:

"As every one knows, the Judges are men of great ability in their profession, but they are not altogether familiar with the fine points of construction of a modern building. On the surface the plan for erecting a taller building on the foundation for the new Hall of Records might seem feasible to the uninitiated. It has been said that the foundation is strong enough to hold a building nearly twice as high as the one contemplated. But I think, really, that those who have advanced the proposition have done so tentatively, and when they come to make a more thorough investigation they will see it as I do. The building is being erected on a compressible soil, and each portion of the foundation is proportioned to the load it is to bear, so as to equalize the settlement."

"It will be impossible to safely add to the weight of the building a number of stories or the weight on these foundations. Even if the architect was willing to take the risk and add to the height of the building it could not be done under the building laws.

"The height of the stories as planned for the Hall of Records is not suitable for courtrooms, except in case of the two Surrogate Courts. All of the granite and marble has been cut the proper size for the stories as planned, and to change the height now would require new material for the construction. So the whole thing is summed up in a statement that this project would mean to destroy all the work done up to the present, as well as to throw away the material that has been got out for this specific plan. That would mean enormous additional expense.

"It's the old story, the history of every public improvement in New York. As soon as a project is completed some one comes forward with a new scheme. Central Park illustrates it. They once wanted to hold a World's Fair there, and every now and then some one thinks that's the place for the Speedway. They forget that it's dedicated to park purposes and must remain so."

John Whalen, Corporation Counsel, when seen at his home yesterday, said that the plan, as outlined in this paper yesterday had come as a surprise to him. "I had heard nothing about it previously," he said, "and I have not gone into the matter very deeply. I do not think the project has been discussed very generally, or I should have certainly heard something about it. As the matter stands I certainly do not care to discuss it for publication."

Mr. Whalen was asked what he thought would be the effect of a change of plans upon contracts already let, but he declined to commit himself as to that. Asked what he thought of the feasibility of the project to put a higher building upon the foundations already laid, he said that the architect would be the best judge of that.

Controller Cole said he thought the plan could be carried out with little, if any, additional cost.

N. J. Slattery of Morgan & Slattery said that he had not previously heard of the project.

"I am inclined to think," he added, "that the Hall of Records will be used for the purpose for which it was planned. Of course, if new contracts were made, the contractors on the original plans would have to be paid."

MURDERED IN HIS HOME.

Frank Richardson, Millionaire Merchant of Savannah, Mo., Shot by Unknown Man.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Dec. 25.—Frank Richardson, a merchant and a millionaire, was murdered at his home, in Savannah, fourteen miles east of here, about 9 o'clock last night. The assassin escaped. Mr. Richardson was a brother of John D. Richardson, general manager of the Biscuit Trust at Chicago and New York. He was a trust stockholder.

About 8:30 o'clock last night Mr. Richardson left the Fife-Richardson store for some Christmas presents he had purchased.

In less than half an hour, Mrs. Richardson, who was sitting at the family home waiting for her husband to come to accompany her to an entertainment at the Opera House, heard two men entering at the front door. She arose and turned down the light, expecting to start immediately for the entertainment.

A moment later Mrs. Richardson was startled by the report of a pistol, and upon opening the door leading from the living room into the hall her husband fell forward and in a few minutes he was dead, never having spoken after the shot was fired.

Mrs. Richardson is prostrated over the terrible death of her husband, and has been unable to say much about the matter. However, she says that she distinctly heard two men at the front door, but heard nothing to indicate that there was any trouble of any kind, and did not hear any words passed.

RACE WAR IN INDIANA.

Negroes Compel Whites to Remain Indoors in Cementville — Have Everything Their Own Way.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind., Dec. 25.—A race war is in progress at Cementville, a small station on the Panhandle Road, five miles north of this city, and serious trouble is expected. The negroes are armed, and the whites are keeping within doors to avoid them.

The outbreak began yesterday afternoon, when Lee Ranger and John Redmond, negroes, became intoxicated and started in to intimidate whites. When their insults were resented other negroes joined Ranger and Redmond and captured Samuel Kendall's saloon. Nearly twenty shots were fired, but no one was hurt.

An appeal by telephone was made to Sheriff Rave for help, and he drove to Cementville and to some extent quieted the negroes while he was present. After his departure another outbreak took place, and message after message came to the local police to send men to the town.

Ranger was shot by Kendall, but how badly is not known, as he was carried away and secreted by his companions. Kendall's life was threatened, and about midnight he managed to escape from his store and came direct to this city, awakening Prosecutor Montgomery, and begging him to issue warrants and have Deputy Sheriffs sworn in to serve them.

It was almost daylight when the community became quiet, the negroes having everything their own way. So far to-day no outbreak has taken place. The whites are intimidated to such an extent that they are using every possible precaution to prevent a collision.

Pneumonia Among Naval Apprentices.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Dec. 25.—Despite the precautions taken by the officials at the training station there were twenty cases of pneumonia among the boys to-day, while on Monday one apprentice died. Every precaution is being taken to stamp out the sickness. Throughout the Fall and Winter the institution has had 700 boys under its roof, but there has been an absence of sickness, save for the slight illness usual among so great a number.

TWO ERIE TRAINS CRASH.

A Fireman Seriously Injured and a Score of Passengers Bruised at Newark Station.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 25.—Two trains on the Newark branch of the Erie Railroad met head on at Franklin Crossing to-night. A fireman was badly injured and many passengers were bruised and shaken up.

The collision occurred directly in front of the Franklin railroad station. The trains were a west-bound one due at 10:48 and an east-bound one due at 10:51. The rule was for the west-bound train to pull on to a switch in order to allow the east-bound train to pass. The east-bound train was on time to-night; the west-bound two or three minutes behind. As a result the west-bound train was standing in the station when the east-bound train ran into it.

It is claimed that the signal light which should have stopped the east-bound train showed the engineer a clear track. He realized his error when too late to stop, but as his train was under control, to be stopped at the station, the collision was not as serious as it might have been. The engines were badly wrecked. The cars also suffered considerably, but were not telescoped.

Most of the passengers received a severe shaking-up and about twenty received somewhat severe bruises through being thrown to the floor or against the backs of seats. The only person seriously hurt was the fireman on the west-bound train. The engineer of that train and the engineer and fireman of the east-bound train jumped before the collision.

The accident completely blocked the road, and the passengers on the two trains had to seek trolley cars. Those bound for New York came to this city by trolley and went on by way of the Lackawanna and Pennsylvania railroads. Most of the passengers on the west-bound train had Paterson as their destination, and they reached that city by way of Passaic.

RUN DOWN BY MOTOR VEHICLE.

Rose McCue's Spine Broken, Leg Fractured, and Shoulder Dislocated.

While on her way home after making Christmas calls yesterday afternoon Rose McCue, a trained nurse, living at 63 West Fifty-sixth Street, was struck by a rapidly moving motor vehicle at Forty-fifth Street and Broadway. She was thrown several feet by the force of the impact. Her spine was broken, her right leg fractured, her shoulder dislocated, and she received several scalp wounds. She is in Roosevelt Hospital, where the surgeons say she cannot recover.

The driver of the vehicle, Joseph Cavanaugh, of 125 West Forty-ninth Street, was arrested and locked up in the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station. He is an employe of the New York Electric Vehicle Company.

The injured woman was twenty-five years old, a native of Ireland, and was recently graduated from St. Vincent's Hospital. She was walking up Broadway shortly after 1 o'clock. She started to cross from the west to the east side of the thoroughfare at Forty-fifth Street, when the automobile, coming rapidly from the north, struck her just as she reached the centre of the street. The motorman declared he rang his gong, but that she failed to hear it. The vehicle after striking the woman and knocking her down evidently ran over her body.

The injured woman was carried into a drug store near by and an ambulance was hurriedly summoned from Roosevelt Hospital. Miss McCue's home is in Ireland, and she has only one relative, a sister, living in this country. No one could give the sister's address.

MAD DASH ON CENTRAL BRIDGE.

Policeman Cosgrove Pursues Runaways on a Disabled Bicycle.

Marvelous escapes of many spectators marked a thrilling runaway across Central Bridge and for more than a mile through the streets on either side yesterday afternoon at an hour when scores of drivers were returning from the Speedway. George Hein of 2,393 Second Avenue was driving a pair of colts up Eighth Avenue. They were hitched to a light wagon, all owned by Vincent Bolche of 1,486 Milford Place. At One Hundred and Forty-second Street an unexpected blast from the whistle of an elevated railroad locomotive at 1:30 P. M. caused the horses attached to a coach driven by Robert Nelson of 406 West One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Street to bolt. The coach horses ran into Hein's team and they ran as the others were stopped.

Bicycle Policeman Thomas C. Cosgrove was standing with his wheel at One Hundred and Forty-third Street and tried to mount his wheel as the runaway colts approached. Just as they came abreast of him, however, the wagon swerved and struck an elevated railroad pillar, and Hein was thrown out, landing squarely upon the policeman. The shock bore Cosgrove to the ground and twisted the handle bar of his machine.

The horses dashed on toward the bridge while the policeman started after, steering his wheel by the head. There was a wild scramble on the bridge to get out of harm's way. As the horses rushed across one big cyclist in his hurry crashed into one of the drawbridge gates, cut his hand, and badly wrecked his wheel. The colts, however, took the middle of the road and kept it while every one else clung to one side or the other.

Cosgrove with his crooked handle bar managed to overhaul them at Jerome Avenue and One Hundred and Sixtieth Street. He caught hold of the bit of one of the animals. He was thrown from his wheel and dragged about twenty-five feet before he brought the team to a standstill. The policeman's uniform was well-nigh ruined, and he had a bad cut on the forehead. The wagon was wrecked. Hein was badly bruised.

MARYLAND MEN TO CONFER.

Many Democrats Urge Extra Session to Act on Disfranchisement.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 25.—A conference of Mr. Gorman, Gov. Smith, Chairman Vandiver of the Democratic State Committee, and other leading Democrats will be held before Jan. 1 to decide upon numerous petitions from Democrats of Baltimore City, as well as other parts of the State, urging the Governor to call an extra session of the Legislature. The entanglement in the Municipal Government, including the deadlock between Mayor Hayes and City Counsils as to the legal construction of the city charter, has caused the Democrats connected with the regular organization who are opposed to Hayes to urge an extra session. The Democratic managers also are desirous of amending the election law so as to bar many negroes from voting at the next State election.

When appeals to the Governor from Democrats were first presented, shortly after the November election, they met with cold response. The Governor was not favorably impressed with the idea. Besides he was not so sure the Legislature, once in session, would pass the bill providing for disfranchisement. Then several Eastern counties did not view the scheme favorably. In Worcester County, according to the last census of voters, there were 1,003 white and 1,032 colored illiterates; a difference of only twenty-nine between the two races. In Wicomico there was objection, there being 1,686 white to 791 colored illiterates. In Caroline the colored illiterates exceeded the white illiterates only by fifty-eight.

An extra session would cost the State about $30,000—that is, assuming that it remained in session for twelve days, the time considered necessary to amend the election law.

It is stated in inner Democratic circles, however, that while Gov. Smith will not yet say he will call a special session, he is more favorably inclined to such a procedure than heretofore. If Gorman says so there will be an extra session.

FIRE PANIC IN THEATRE

Bowery Music Hall Ablaze with Five Hundred Persons There.

Audience Gets Out Without Trouble, but the Performers Were Frightened—Mrs. Fleck Wanted Her Poodle Saved.

While a vaudeville performance was in progress in the Manhattan Music Hall, 104 and 106 Bowery, last night, a fire started in the cellar of the building and the flames darted up through the floor just behind the back row of seats. There were about 500 people in the hall at the time, and a lively panic ensued. Fortunately, the ushers had presence of mind to throw open the doors, so every one on the ground floor was enabled to rush out to the street before the fire had fairly begun.

Those in the gallery and behind the stage, however, had some trouble. Among the former was Mrs. Fleck, wife of Alderman Fred F. Fleck, the proprietor of the music hall. With her were two women friends. The wave of smoke blinded them so that they could not see their way to the door, and they were wandering helplessly about the gallery when Roundsman Kavanagh ran upstairs and found them.

He told Mrs. Fleck that she must hurry, but she refused to leave the building until a pet poodle in her sleeping room on the floor above had been rescued. The roundsman grasped the three women, piloted them to a front window opening on the Bowery, and carried them to the street on a ladder that had been put up by the firemen. Several other women who were in the gallery were taken out in the same way by firemen.

When the flames were first seen to shoot out of the floor, Frank Cassidy was doing a bag-punching act on the stage. As he saw the fire and the rush for the doors, he did not stop his act, but continued to knock the bag about, shouting, as he did so, that there was no danger and calling to the audience to keep their seats.

Behind the stage there was great confusion. Most of the fourteen actors and actresses made a dash for the rear fire escapes when they saw the place ablaze. A few of the women waited to dress fully. John Martin, who weighs 300 pounds, the barkeeper, thought of their peril and started back to help them out. He pushed his way through the panic-stricken crowd rushing out at the front and finally reached the stage.

He found five of the women in the dressing room. They refused his offers of assistance, on the ground that they were not in street dress. He persuaded them that their lives might be in danger, and they consented to go with him. Pushing some and dragging others, he got them to the sidewalk unhurt.

By the time that everybody was outside the building the firemen had the flames under control, and half an hour later not a vestige of the fire remained. From the cellar it had burned a hole in the floor that covered about ten square feet. The total loss was not more than $800.

MOB NEARLY KILLS A REFEREE.

Furious at Decision in a Basket Ball Game, They Attack Him with Sticks and Stones.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 25.—A mob of 500 persons, despite the efforts of the police to protect him, came near to killing L. P. Pratt on the streets here to-night. He was hit with sticks and stones, and by fists. His head was cut and his body was a mass of bruises when he finally escaped from the mob. Three of the policemen who tried to defend him were also severely bruised.

Pratt was referee in a game of basket ball between the Pennsylvania Bicycle Club of Philadelphia and the Trenton Basket ball team. All through the game the referee had been abused by the Trenton players, and several of them threatened him with violence. Pratt finally ordered Stout, one of the Trenton players, out of the game for using bad language. The managers of the Trenton team told Stout to continue playing. Pratt then awarded the game to the team from Philadelphia by the default score of 4 to 0.

The Trenton players and the spectators tried to get at Pratt, but he was hurried to a dressing room and remained there for some time. The crowd, however, waited outside of the building, and when Pratt emerged under police escort the trouble began. The police were swept off their feet, and blow after blow was received by Pratt from the hands of the rioters. The police rallied to his aid, but could do little, for when they drew their clubs and began to use them the crowd resorted to missiles of all kinds, and these were hurled at Pratt and his escorts.

NEW LAWS ON KIDNAPPING.

Several Western Legislatures Will Consider Bills Making the Crime a Capital Offense.

Special to The New York Times.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Dec. 25.—It is believed the next Legislature will amend the law on kidnapping, making the punishment for this crime death, or at least a life sentence in the penitentiary at hard labor. The code of Iowa makes the crime of kidnapping punishable by a term of five years in the penitentiary or $1,000 fine, or both, in the discretion of the Court.

Heretofore the cases of kidnapping in this State have been by divorced persons who wanted to get possession of their own children, but with the inauguration of the kidnapping practice to extort money from the parents for the return of the child, it is found that the Iowa statutes do not provide punishment to fit the crime.

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 25.—No legislator in Wisconsin will have the temerity to introduce a bill to punish kidnapping by hanging, as the punishment for murder in this State is imprisonment for life. State Senator Julius E. Roehr will, however, if a bill is prepared, introduce at the next session a measure providing life imprisonment as a punishment for kidnapping.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Dec. 25.—The State Legislature, which convenes at Pierre in January, will be asked to pass a law making kidnapping a crime. Whether the sentence will be made a capital one or not remains to be seen. There are those among the lawmakers who are in favor of hanging.

FARGO, N. D., Dec. 25.—R. N. Pollock, member of the Legislature and leading candidate for Speaker of the House of Representatives, said to-day: "The statutes of North Dakota provide only a penitentiary sentence ranging from one to ten years as a punishment for kidnapping, at the discretion of the trial judge. I favor the death penalty for the offence. There is no punishment too severe for such crimes."

CHEYENNE, Wyom., Dec. 25.—Feeling here is strong against kidnapping, and a bill will be introduced in the Legislature making hanging the penalty for kidnapping for ransom. The matter has not taken a definite form as yet, but H. B. Emig of this city will probably father the bill.

Heirs of Benjamin Crocker.

Special to The New York Times.

RICHMOND, Ind., Dec. 25.—Ella and Anna Crocker, Chicago daughters of the late Peter Crocker, are entitled to the share of their father in the estate of Benjamin Crocker, late of Sacramento, Cal. He left $500,000, and their share is $50,000. Benjamin Crocker left neither wife nor children, and the brothers and sisters inherit the estate. Among the other heirs are Martin Crocker and Mrs. Jane Baer of this city, Calom E. Crocker and Mrs. Celia Simmons of Sacramento, Alvin E. Crocker of New York, formerly of Chicago, and Mrs. Clara Shead of Westborough, Mass.

TURKEY ORDERS THE CRUISER.

PLUNGED THROUGH A BRIDGE.

Milk Train Hurled Into a Westchester Creek—Peril of Passenger Trains.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Dec. 25.—The crew on the Chatham milk train on the Harlem Railroad, which was due to arrive at Mount Vernon at midnight on Monday, had a remarkable escape from death, while a passenger train which followed the milk train narrowly escaped destruction by the collapsing of Tanner's Bridge, over a creek midway between Dover Plains and Wassay.

The milk train, consisting of seven cars loaded with milk for Mount Vernon and New York, had passed over the bridge at such speed that the locomotive had reached the solid roadbed on the north, while the caboose, containing the entire crew, was on the edge of the southern abutment leading to the bridge.

Suddenly the centre of the structure dropped out and the entire train, with the exception of the engine and the caboose, plunged into the creek, thirty feet below. All of the cars were smashed into kindling wood. No one was injured. A passenger train which was following was flagged just in time to prevent it from running into the abyss.

When the cars were crushed a flood of milk poured over the creek, turning the water white. Three wrecking trains were sent to the scene to-day to repair the bridge. As the result of the wreck there was a milk famine on Christmas morning in West Mount Vernon, Bronx Borough, and Yonkers.

RUNAWAY IN CENTRAL PARK.

Miss Kerbey Thrown and Hurt, and Horse Dashes Into Another Carriage.

A runaway in Central Park yesterday afternoon resulted in a number of collisions and the serious injury of two persons.

Miss Alla Kerbey, twenty-three years old, of 60 West One Hundred and First Street and her friend, Mrs. Hartshorn of the same address were out driving in a light buggy behind a spirited horse, which at length became frightened at Ninety-sixth Street and the East Drive. Miss Kerbey, although she maintained her presence of mind and exercised considerable skill with the reins, was not strong enough to hold the animal, which dashed off down the drive at full speed. After a run of a few hundred yards the horse swerved into a lamppost and threw out the two women. Miss Kerbey had two ribs broken and her left arm was fractured. Mrs. Hartshorn, although she was thrown several feet with great force, escaped injury.

The frightened animal continued running, pursued by Mounted Policeman Conway. At about Eighty-fifth Street the buggy collided with the carriage of Maurice Guggenheimer of 36 East Seventy-seventh Street, who was riding with his daughter, both being driven by John Bradshaw. Mr. Guggenheimer and his daughter were not thrown out by the collision, but the coachman was, and his back was badly bruised. The horse after becoming exhausted was caught by Policeman Conway. Miss Kerbey in the meantime had been removed to the Presbyterian Hospital in a serious condition.

AN INDIAN ON THE WARPATH.

Enraged Because He Could Not Kill Man Who Struck Him, Drunken Red Man Kills Three Others.

MUSKEEGEE, I. T., Dec. 25.—John Tiger, a full-blood Indian, living on the Arkansas River, two miles south of Eufala, went to Eufala with his wife this afternoon, and, while intoxicated, met L. B. Roper and threatened to kill him. Roper struck Tiger with a board. No words passed between them, but Tiger went to his buggy, procured a rifle, and came back to kill Roper, but failed to find him. Enraged at this, he proceeded to shoot every one he saw. Jesse Beck was shot through the hips and killed. Dave Porter, a nephew of Chief Porter, and a mover named Johnson, on his way to Missouri in a covered wagon with his family, were also killed. Bud Taylor, aged eighteen, a boy, was shot through the shoulder, and is not expected to live.

Tiger immediately jumped on a horse and tried to escape, but was pursued. He was chased three miles, when he jumped off his horse, went behind a tree, and began shooting. Deputy Marshal Johnson, who returned the fire, struck Tiger in the arm. The murderer surrendered and was brought to Eufala. His arm will have to be amputated.

J. Smith, who lives two miles south of Checotah, became involved in a quarrel with T. Thompson over the affair at Eufala and began shooting, Thompson being mortally wounded.

STOCK JOBBING IN COLORADO.

T. A. Rickard Explains the Independence Mine Share Deal.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Dec. 25.—The latest developments in what is recognized as the greatest mining stock jobbing operation in a decade and in which unsuspecting Englishmen paid from three to five times the actual value of Independence Mine shares, is the statement of T. A. Rickard, the mining engineer who had charge of the property.

Mr. Rickard makes the statement that he, having made the reports on the mine which misled investors, must of course take the responsibility for them, but he repeats that his subordinates were responsible for the figures which he gave as representing the ore reserve of the mine. Before the meeting of shareholders in London Mr. Rickard said that he received the figures from the mine managers, first from Mr. Emerson, and later from Mr. Shipman.

On this authority he raised from time to time his estimate of the ore reserve in the mine until it had grown from about $3,500,000 to $13,000,000. The first figures have proved to be nearly correct according to the last estimate of the ore in the mine.

STUDENT FAILS; KILLS HIMSELF.

Wanted to Become a Priest, But Did Not Pass Examinations.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 25.—Because he had failed to pass his examinations and despondent of ever being able to become a priest, John Kolkmann, twenty-three years old, assistant sexton of St. Joseph's Church, committed suicide by hanging in the basement of the edifice last night while the bells in the steeple were calling the faithful to worship in the church overhead.

The gruesome discovery was made by the janitor, who went to fix the fire, and while the congregation was listening to the vespers the dead wagon drove up to a side door and took the body of the young man to the Morgue.

Kolkmann's ambition was to become a priest. He pondered over his theological studies diligently while other young men were enjoying themselves, and when his examination came failed to pass. This seemed to prey upon his mind, and is assigned as the cause for his act.

SALVATION ARMY'S GARGANTUAN FEAST

Christmas Cheer Provided for Twenty-five Thousand Poor.

Distribution of Well-Filled Baskets Followed by a Banquet in Madison Square Garden.

Twenty-five thousand of the unfortunate poor of the city were gathered from the four quarters of the metropolis by the soldiers of the Salvation Army yesterday, feasted to the verge of dyspepsia, blessed, and sent back happy to cheerless tenements or the lodging houses of the municipality. Within the immensity of Madison Square Garden Commander Booth Tucker's lads and lassies dispensed good cheer from morn till night.

The interior of the Garden was a mass of bunting and flags of all nations, the British and Filipino standards being prominently displayed. Fifty long tables decked with snowy linen and ornaments, with innumerable artificial blossoms, holly, and mistletoe, gree

EXPECT CHINA TO ACCEPT

Peking Ministers Think Terms Will Be Agreed To.

ARREST OF TUAN REPORTED

Joint Note on Its Way to the Court—Earl Li Too Ill to Receive It, and Ching Does So Alone.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—According to a news agency dispatch from Peking, dated Dec. 21, the foreign Ministers there are unanimously of the opinion that China will accept the conditions imposed by the joint note of the powers within a month.

The note was started on its way to the Dowager Empress and the Emperor immediately after its presentation, but wire communication is slow, and it probably will not reach them until Dec. 27.

The Shanghai correspondent of The Standard, telegraphing Dec. 24, says:

"The Government has arrested Prince Tuan and Prince Chuang on the borders of Shan-Shand Shen-Si provinces. Yu-Hsien has been ordered to return to Sian-Foo forthwith, to be executed, it is supposed.

"It is inferred from these reports that the Imperial authorities are preparing to concede the demands of the joint note for the punishment of the instigators of the trouble in China."

PEKING, Dec. 24.—The preliminary joint note was delivered to-day to Prince Ching. Li-Hung-Chang found that he was unable to attend the meeting of the Ministers, and his credentials and those of Prince Ching were presented by the latter to the foreign envoys.

Prince Ching, replying to the Spanish Minister, Mr. J. de Cologan, the doyen of the Diplomatic Corps, who presented the note, said he would immediately communicate its contents to the Emperor, and assured the Ministers that a speedy reply was the desire of the Court, as it felt that all China wanted peace and prosperity.

PARIS, Dec. 25.—A dispatch to the Havas Agency from Peking says:

"The Ministers assembled at the residence of Señor de Cologan and received Prince Ching, to whom the Spanish Minister handed the joint note of the powers. Li-Hung-Chang, who is still ill, asked to be excused. Prince Ching said:

"'I have the honor to accept the note concerning the re-establishment of good relations, and will transmit it immediately to the Emperor and communicate to you his reply as soon as received.'"

1,500 REFORMERS SLAIN.

Chang-Chi-Tung, the "Liberal" Viceroy, Said to Have Been Guilty of Horrible Treachery.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Dec. 25.—News of a terrible massacre of the reform forces in China and the beheading of twenty-seven of its leaders was received here to-day in a cablegram by W. A. Cumrow, Secretary of the Chinese Reform Association in America.

The engagement is said to have taken place in a populous section of the Yang-tse Valley in Central China.

It resulted in the killing of 1,500 men and the complete demoralization of the reform forces. The battle, into which the reformers were brought by treachery, occurred on Dec. 18, and the work of the movement has as a consequence been dropped in all that part of the country. The Chinese here are loud in their expressions of disapproval of the conduct of the campaign by their leaders.

It appears from the few details given in the cablegram received to-day that Long-Tsun, the reform leader, at the head of a badly armed force of 12,000, paid a visit to Viceroy Chang-Chi-Tung, who, though an imperial officer, was believed to be in sympathy with the reform movement. Long was invited to the Governor's palace, and with his 12,000 men was marched into the city.

They left all their arms outside the gates, taking the precaution only to carry their loaded revolvers. There were 5,000 imperial troops in the town, but nothing was feared from them. A delay of a day took place in order that other reform leaders might be sent for, and when the audience with the Governor was finally arranged, there were twenty-seven of the leading followers of Kang-Yu-Wei admitted.

Then a disagreement arose. The Governor had the leaders seized and taken into the courtyard, where they were beheaded. In the meantime, a secret order had been sent to the Imperial troops to descend upon a poorly armed rabble of the reformers.

The five thousand well-drilled soldiers took the country people completely by surprise, but nevertheless the latter pluckily fought their way through and escaped. They carried away their own wounded, but left 1,500 dead on the field and scattered in the streets of the city.

RUSSIAN COMMENT ON TREATY.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 25.—The Novoe Vremya, discussing the English newspaper indictment of the United States Senate for "its unparalleled attempt to overturn the Clayton-Bulwer treaty," says:

"The case is not unusual. Conditions have changed and the treaty must change, too. Russia afforded an example in 1870 in declaring that she was no longer bound by her promise not to maintain war vessels in the Black Sea."

The Bourse Gazette says: "Russia is gratified by America's diplomatic victory over England. Western Europe dislikes the Monroe doctrine because it desires to grab territories everywhere. Russia, which has sympathized with America since her independence, which liquidated American possessions to America, has nothing against the Monroe doctrine, and the old sympathies have grown more cordial in China."

WANTS LIST OF RUSSIANS' LOOT.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—Vice Admiral Alexieff, says the St. Petersburg correspondent of The Times, has issued orders to the men under his command in China to make detailed lists of the Chinese property—money, cattle, provisions, &c.—taken by them and where such property now is.

The correspondent also says that detachments of Ruslan troops in southern and southeastern Manchuria continue to pursue the work of exterminating disorganized Chinese troops and brigands.

Another Masacre of Christians.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—A dispatch from Peking to a news agency here, dated Dec. 24, says missionaries state that Boxers, thirty-five miles east of Peking, killed twelve Catholics and burned eight in the temples.

French Officer Killed by Boxers.

TIEN-TSIN, Dec. 24.—A French detachment of 100 men left here on Dec. 20 for Hung-Tsu, twenty miles westfard, to search for arms. Approaching a village across a frozen creek a force of Boxers opened fire, killing Lieut. Contal and wounding another officer. The French burned the village.

DOWAGER LADY CHURCHILL DEAD

Was Senior Lady of the Bedchamber to Queen Victoria.

LONDON, Dec. 25.—The Doweger Lady Churchill, Senior Lady of the Bedchamber, and an intimate friend of the Queen, was found dead in her bedroom at Osborne House this morning.

On retiring last night she complained of cold, but no alarming symptoms manifested themselves and her indisposition was not thought to be of a serious nature.

Before her marriage to the second Lord Churchill the Dowager Lady Churchill was the Lady Jane Conynghum, eldest daughter of the second Marquis of Conyngham, K. P. Her mother was, before her marriage, the Lady Jane Paget, daughter of the first Marquis of Anglesea.

Lady Jane was married to Lord Churchill on May 19, 1849. Her husband died in 1886. His widow was soon afterward appointed a Lady of the Bedchamber to Queen Victoria, who also made her a member of the Royal Order of Victoria and Albert.

The Churchills are related to the ducal family of the same name, the first Baron being the youngest son of the third Duke of Marlborough.

Mortality from Plague in Mysore.

CALCUTTA, Dec. 25.—Lord Curzon of Kedleston, the Viceroy of India, in the course of a speech to-day, said that since the appearance of the bubonic plague, in 1898, 25,000 deaths from the disease have occurred in Mysore State.

DEATH OF J. J. TRAYNOR.

Had Been Manager of an Orphan Asylum and Secretary of the Democratic Club.

James Joseph Traynor, for twelve years manager of the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum in Fifth and Madison Avenues, and who, in other days, was a prominent Democratic politician, died early yesterday morning at his home at 40 East Fifty-first Street of asthma.

His illness became serious only about two hours before he died.

Mr. Traynor had spent the early part of Monday evening at the Democratic Club, of which he was once Secretary, returning home at about 7 o'clock. He first complained of being ill at 11 o'clock. A physician was hurriedly summoned, but could do nothing, and the end came at 12:45.

Mr. Traynor was born in London sixty-eight years ago and was educated in Paris, where he became an expert linguist, having thoroughly mastered Spanish, French, and Italian. He came to this country when about eighteen years old, and after some time spent in the shipping business entered the Surrogate's office as a clerk, retaining his connection for seventeen years. While serving in this capacity he formed the intimate personal friendship of John D. Crimmins, Richard Croker, and John Kelly, and became Secretary of the Democratic Club about seventeen years ago, though he long ago gave up the position.

In later years he was a Director of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, and for some time acted as Vice President of that corporation. He retired from the management of the orphan asylum last January and since then has been in no active business.

Several young men who had been under his care in their boyhood days, but who now hold responsible positions in the commercial world, called to offer their condolence to his widow last night. Mrs. Traynor was Miss "Nan" McDowell, who came from Ireland to marry him. To-day is the fortieth anniversary of their wedding. Mr. Traynor leaves no children.

He was a member of the Catholic Club, the Democratic Club, and the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick. Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning in St. Patrick's Cathedral and the interment will be in Calvary.

ALL THEIR CHILDREN ILL.

Eight Members of One Destitute Family Down with Diphtheria.

Christmas Day dawned upon many a sad case of destitution in this city yesterday, but on none more pitiful, in the belief of neighbors, than that of Joseph Haganey and his family, who occupy a small frame shanty in the rear of 742 East One Hundred and Forty-third Street. Before nightfall, however, their miseries were in a measure reduced.

Haganey is forty-two years old and a tinsmith, who formerly had a good business, but he had been wholly incapacitated by rheumatism for the last six months. He had a wife and nine children. The children ranged in age from a baby in arms to a boy of fourteen. They might have weathered the storm, but several weeks ago diphtheria appeared among the children and two weeks ago the nine-year-old daughter Louise died from the disease.

The father's savings were then exhausted and neighbors had to make up a purse to help bury the child, but the disease spread to the other eight children, and one of them, John, the oldest, had to quit work and there was an end of his $2 a week for running errands, which had for some time been the principal support of the sufferers.

The house has five small rooms, but there is little furniture in the place. Only one bit of carpet lies on the floors and the only stove is in the kitchen. Two of the children are said to be recovering, but all the others are still very ill. The mother, too, is in no condition to give much aid. Kind-hearted people of the neighborhood yesterday made a house-to-house canvass for the stricken family and secured about $20.

Coal was bought, and in the provisions which were sent in was a Christmas turkey. Dr. W. A. Boyd of 362 Willis Avenue, who has attended the family throughout, said yesterday that the case is especially deserving.

FIGHT ON THE STAGE.

Firemen Michael's Skull Fractured in a Quarrel at the Germania Theatre.

There was a fight in the wings of the stage while the last act of the performance in the Germania Theatre at Eighth Street and Lafayette Place was being enacted last night. James Johnson, a scene-shifter, of 32 East Third Street, hit Frank Michael, a fireman, of 102 Barrow Street, on the head with a stage brace and his skull was possibly fractured. Johnson was arrested and Michael taken to St. Vincent's Hospital.

The fireman is in the employ of the theatre. What the quarrel was about no one seemed to know. Before the other stage hands could rush up, Johnson, it is alleged, had picked up a stage brace and beaten Michael on the head with it. The fireman fell to the floor bleeding and Johnson made his way hastily out of the theatre.

The play was not interrupted, but the actors on the stage wondered what had happened in the wings, but did not let the audience know anything was wrong. The head usher brought in Patrolman Powers, who sent Michael to St. Vincent's Hospital in an ambulance. Detectives afterward arrested Johnson at his home.

WANTED DUCK, GOT CROW.

John Loughlin Would Not Have Goose for His Dinner—Puns in Court.

John Loughlin of 70 York Street, Brooklyn, wanted duck for his Christmas dinner. He was offered goose, and in the end was made to eat crow, figuratively speaking.

"Mary," asked John of his wife on Monday night, "have you any fowl for dinner to-morrow?"

"Sure thing," returned Mrs. Loughlin, laconically.

"It's a duck, of course," with assurance.

"It is not; it's a goose."

"A goose, is it? And would you insult my good taste by putting a low-down bird like that before me?"

There was something of the strenuous life in what followed, and the emphasis of Loughlin's displeasure was observable on Mrs. Loughlin when she appeared against him in the Adams Street Police Court yesterday.

"He fairly knocked the 'stuffing' out of her," explained the court officer to Magistrate Brenner.

"Those were foul blows," said the Court to Loughlin, as he placed the accused under bonds to keep the peace.

ACCUSED BY LANDLADY.

Young Woman Charged with Stealing Personal Effects.

Mary Haughey of 12 Prospect Place, a handsome woman, was locked up in the East Thirty-fifth Street Station last night on the charge of Mrs. Annie Hargraves, the landlady of a boarding house. The prisoner is suspected of theft.

Mrs. Hargraves said she missed an umbrella and a skirt, and that her husband lost a coat and vest Monday, and she suspects the young woman. Detectives Burke and O'Neill arrested her last night, and found in her room a blanket which Mrs. Hargraves claimed she had missed, some pawn tickets for lace curtains and a gold pin, and some keys which fitted Mrs. Hargraves's apartments.

The woman wept at the station, denied the charge, and pleaded with Mrs. Hargraves to let her go because it was Christmas. The landlady refused. The detectives said Mrs. Haughey has been separated from her husband.

POLES ARRESTED AT WARSAW.

Fifty-two Are Accused of a Political Conspiracy.

VIENNA, Dec. 25.—A dispatch from Warsaw says fifty-two Poles have been arrested there, being accused of a political conspiracy.

Lieut. Hobson's Illness.

It was reported last night at the Presbyterian Hospital that Lieut. Richmond P. Hobson is steadily improving, though he is not yet able to see any of the many people who call daily to inquire after him. A quantity of flowers and packages were sent to the hospital for him yesterday, but these were not sent to his bedside.

FEAR AMERICAN RIVALRY

London and Vienna Papers Print Warning Articles.

Times (London) Says the Question Is Paramount—European Economical Alliance Suggested.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—The Times this morning prints another long article upon the progress of American steel and iron competition, concluding as follows:

"How much of the world's expansion will America take from us? How much will she leave for us to struggle over with other manufacturing nations? Apparently the problem will be solved far sooner than has been generally expected.

"The abnormal demand of the United States for its own engineering products is fast slackening, thus bringing the marvelous increase in American manufacturing capacity for the last five years, and especially for the last three, to bear upon foreign markets.

"It is a question paramount among all others, even to the efficiency of the navy subsidy."

The Times's Vienna correspondent says: "Under the title 'European Economical Alliance,' Paul Leroy Beaulieu in the Neueswelt-ertagblatt, after reciting America's immense resources and growing population, adds:

"'They may henceforth be regarded as the first industrial nation, and their superiority will become strikingly evident year by year. The United States will, moreover, soon have a considerable mercantile marine. Americans are already accustomed to regard Europeans, more particularly Continentals, in about the same light as Orientals, who vegetate in dreams of the past.'

"Herr Beaulieu points out that European States individually are comparatively restricted as to markets and cannot carry a division of labor, and he suggests an economical alliance and the regulation of tariffs by a permanent European commission. This commercial co-operation, he thinks, might lead to a gradual reduction of armament."

FIND SALT ESSENCE OF LIFE.

Chicago Professors Make Experiments with Muscles of the Heart.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 25.—Profs. J. Loeb and D. J. Lingle of the Chicago University have been experimenting for months on the muscles of the heart and have found, they assert that certain ions or products of the electrolytic decomposition of a solution of salt are the life-prolonging substances which work on the muscles through the blood.

The result of their experiments and investigations has not become generally known yet, as they are now preparing the story of their work for publication. Both professors have adopted the process of elimination in working out this result from the various theories advanced by scientists for the past ten years, they say, and have found by careful experiments on hearts of various animals that salt, the commonest thing in existence, is the essence of life which chemists and philosophers have sought for centuries.

The professors modestly refuse to talk about their investigations, but a pamphlet just prepared by Prof. Lingle called "Actions of certain ions on ventricular muscle" explains several of the experiments and investigations leading up to the results obtained.

Prof. Lingle took Prof. Loeb's theories and tested their truth in regard to the turtle. In his experiments he gave special attention to three points:

1. Will ventricular tissue beat rhythmically in solutions of non-conductors; or, in other words, is rhythmic activity an ion effect in heart muscle?
2. If the stimulus of this rhythmical is an ion, is it the calcium or sodium ion?
3. What is the role of other ions with respect to ventricular rhythmic activity?

After testing all these ions on hearts of turtles, Prof. Lingle has set forth his conclusions in his manuscript as follows:

1. The results of Dr. Loeb's experiments on rhythmic contractions in striped muscle and certain tissue apply very closely to the ventricular tissue of the turtle.
2. Sodium and not calcimus is the stimulus for rhythmic contractions in the heart.
3. A pure sodium chloride solution has an injurious effect on heart tissue.
4. Calcium, and possibly potassium salts, improve the rhythm by neutralizing this injurious action.
5. Hearts will not beat rhythmically in solutions of non-conductors.

SPEED OF WILD DUCKS.

Bayonne Kite Flier Finds that They Cover More Than Forty-seven Miles an Hour.

BAYONNE, N. J., Dec. 25.—William A. Eddy at 5 o'clock to-day measured by means of his kites the altitude of the thousands of wild ducks which were flying southward along the coast. The average height of the flying ducks was found to be 1,500 feet. They passed across the cross-wire space of Mr. Eddy's kites in about three seconds. This time was taken repeatedly, and twenty observations confirmed the speed traveled. It was found that the ducks were traveling very nearly 47½ miles an hour.

Although the kites were up but 500 feet, the ducks appeared to be afraid of them, and repeatedly great flocks steered off to one side or the other as they approached the point where the kites were.

Mr. Eddy had aloft two nine-foot and two seven-foot kites. On Dec. 20 Mr. Eddy by means of his kites found that the cirrus clouds were traveling at the rate of 173 miles an hour, which is the highest velocity yet recorded here.

WOMAN SHOOTS A NEGRO.

Fires Five Bullets Into Him—Fatally Wounds a White Man.

MACON, Ga., Dec. 25.—Miss Zena Dickson, a young white woman living in Manchester, a suburb of Macon, shot and badly wounded Elbert Kendrick, a negro, who was making an attack on her house early this morning. Miss Dickson lives with her sister and two brothers. Kendrick's wife was employed by them, and the negro wanted her to leave.

Kendrick went to the house early this morning, when only the women were at home, and demanded that his wife leave with him.

On being refused he opened fire, and there was a lively interchange of shots which soon attracted a crowd. Kendrick had two pistols and emptied both into the crowd, inflicting a wound on Tobe A. Mason which will prove fatal. He made his escape to the outhouse of his father, where a crowd of armed negroes gathered to protect him.

Deputy Sheriff Stephan and a posse went to the house and took the negro. He was taken to the Macon Hospital, where it was found he had been wounded five times. None of the wounds was serious, and he is now in jail.

DRUNKEN SOLDIER RUNS AMUCK.

Private at Fort Washington Wounds Three Men with a Bayonet.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—Frenzied by drink, James L. McDonough, a private soldier at Fort Washington, this afternoon attacked a Sergeant and four privates who had attempted to place him under arrest, and stabbed three of the party with a bayonet which he had concealed under his coat.

The attack was entirely unlooked for, and as a reeult Sergt. J. P. Staab is dangerously wounded in the left breast. One of the soldiers sustained a painful wound in the arm and another was stabbed in the shoulder. McDonough then escaped and a picked squad of fifty men are on the lookout for him.

Telephone from Key West to Havana.

KEY WEST, Fla., Dec. 25.—An interesting experiment has just been made here, which is said to show the possibility of successful telephone cable communication with a foreign country. The officials of the Southern Bell Telephone Company connected the telephone wires here and at Havana with the Gulf cable between the two cities. For a few minutes a roaring noise prevented any communication, but finally this subsided and the officials heard from Havana distinctly the words: "I cannot understand you." Havana, however, failed to clearly understand the message from this city.

STAMPEDE FROM SMALLPOX.

Over 2,000 Woodsmen Flee from Minnesota Pine Camps.

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 25.—Smallpox may stop work in the pineries of Northern Minnesota. The disease is ravaging the camps, having been brought in from Michigan, and the utmost alarm prevails. Two or three thousand woodsmen have already fled in an endeavor to escape the disease, and the indications are that unless stringent measures are adopted there will not be a man left in the pineries at the end of the present week.

Many of the camps, especially those in the Deep River country, are under quarantine, and an effort is being made by the authorities to prevent a further spread of the disease, but the men are thoroughly frightened and at the present time have no regard for mandates of the health officers. They are breaking away from the camps in droves and making for this and other large cities, where, it is feared, they will spread the plague.

Thus far none of the patients afflicted with smallpox have died, as the disease appears to be of an unusually mild type, and it is sufficient to keep the sick persons confined to their beds in the rough, uncomfortable log shanties, although the nursing facilities are poor. Unless the scare abates soon the lumber cut of the Winter will be materially reduced.

One New Case of Smallpox.

One new case of smallpox developed yesterday. It was that of Carlton Potter, six years old, of 2,704 Broadway. All persons in the vicinity were immediately moved upon by the official vaccinators, and every one who couldn't show a good scar of recent make, had to submit to the usual arm scratching.

MAY BE AUSTRALIAN PREMIER.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Dec. 25.—Edmund Barton, who was the leader of the Federal Convention, has accepted the Earl of Hopetoun's offer to form the first Cabinet of the Federation. He anticipates no difficulty.

The Earl of Hopetoun first offered the important post of Premier of the new Australian Commonwealth to Sir William Lyne, and was much criticised for so doing. Sir William, however, declined.

Edmund Barton, Q. C., is, unlike Sir William, a very popular politician. He is a native of Australia, having been born at Sydney in 1849. He was educated at Sydney University, and became a barrister in 1871. From 1883 to 1887 he was Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, and was Attorney General in 1889 and 1891.

It was largely through Mr. Barton's exertions that the federalization of Australia has been accomplished. He was a leader of the movement from the start, ten years ago, and has taken a prominent part in all the deliberations which have resulted in the success of the scheme.

FREE FIGHT IN LUMBER CAMP.

Dispute About Religion Results in Injuries to Twenty or More Men.

Special to The New York Times.

BANGOR, Me., Dec. 25.—A bloody battle occurred Christmas Eve at Adams & Knowlton's lumber camp on Chase Stream, Upper Kennebec River, and police and physicians, none of whom are nearer than thirty miles, have been summoned to the scene. The fight started in a dispute between a man known as "Wild" Hennessy and a Frenchman named Philip Ouilette over religion, Henessy being a Protestant and Ouilette a Catholic. The two fought first with fists, and soon resorted to clubs.

In a few minutes the fight became general, and about thirty men engaged in a terrific battle with axes, limbs of trees, and lumps of ice. A teamster named Wilson attempted to stop the fight and was laid senseless with a blow on the head.

Then, a teamster named Taylor took a hand as peacemaker and laid about him with all kinds of weapons. In a few minutes the ground was strewn with victims of Taylor's powerful blows, and those who had been injured in the general mix-up, it is thought that of the twenty or more hurt some will die.

WILL REFUSE TRUST'S OFFER.

Indiana Company Will Reject Rubber Combine's Proposition to Buy.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 25.—A dispatch from Mishawka, Ind., says: "The United States Rubber Company, the great Eastern trust which controls nearly all the rubber shoe industries in this country, has submitted in writing a proposition to the Mishawaka Rubber Boot and Shoe Company providing for the sale of the local concern. The offer, it is believed, includes a monetary stipulation of $3,000,000, President Beiger stating that the trust practically agreed to pay the Mishawaka Company $3 for each one of actual value.

"The local establishment is the most formidable rival of the trust, and three offers have been made in that many years by the combine to gain control of the Mishawaka plant, the one received last week, however, being the most tempting of any by about $500,000. President Beiger declared the proposition would be again rejected."

STEAMSHIP ANTILIA HERE.

Apparently Uninjured by Running Ashore at Great Egg Harbor.

The steamship Antilia, which went ashore at Great Egg Harbor, N. J., at 4 o'clock Monday morning in a fog, arrived at Quarantine last night apparently uninjured. She was floated yesterday morning by the tugs North America and R. C. Velt, which were sent to her assistance.

Capt. Hontell, when interviewed at Quarantine, said that the steamer apparently sustained no damage through the mishap, as she rested easily on a eandbar. He attributes the accident to faulty compasses or a strong current. While the steamer was aground he kept the engines working reverse to move her if possible and keep her from going ashore broadside. This he successfully accomplished.

CONSUL GENERAL A SUICIDE.

W. Irvin Shaw, Sent to Singapore, Kills Himself in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 25.—W. Irvin Shaw, who had been filling the position of United States Consul at Barranquilla, Colombia, and who was recently appointed Consul General to Singapore, committed suicide in a hotel here to-day. He opened an artery and slashed his throat and wrists with a knife. Ill-health is supposed to have affected his mind.

For three years he had attended to his duties as Consul at Barranquilla while revolutions shook the Southern Republic. Heat, fevers, and the arduous duties undermined his health and he asked for and obtained leave of absence early last August.

His dislike for the old post increased, and he sought another appointment and was successful in his quest, and a month ago was named Consul General at Singapore.

After receiving the appointment he decided that it would be necessary to return to Barranquilla to settle his affairs. He left the home of his sister in Germantown, near here, where he had been staying, two weeks ago, and sailed from New York on the steamer Aital. That was the last heard of him until he was found dead to-day.

Mr. Shaw was thirty-eight years old, and a native of Clearfield County, Penn. He is survived by a wife and two sons.

Canadian Stovemakers Combine.

Special to The New York Times.

TORONTO, Ontario, Dec. 25.—Dr. McCauley of Chicago has just completed arrangements for a combination of all the principal stove manufacturers of Canada. The firms interested are the Gurney Company, Toronto; the Buck Company, Brantford; the Tilden & Gurney Company, Hamilton; the McCleary Company, St. Catherine's; the Sarnia Company, and some Montreal firms. The capital will be $6,000,000, and it is stated that Edward Gurney of Toronto will be the first President. Dr. McCauley has been engaged on the work for almost a year, and only secured the last signature on Saturday.

President's Niece Married.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Dec. 25.—Miss Mamie Stambough, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Daniel Stambough, and Philip Gerald Cook, a prominent lawyer of Clarendon, N. Y., were married to-day at the Stambough home, in this city. The bride is a niece of President McKinley.

CHILD OF THE TENEMENT

Santa Claus Disappointed Little Minnie and Her Heart Was Sore.

But the Good Angel of the East Side Appeared and the Weeping Child Got Her Dolly.

She was only a tiny mite of a girl, and the paleness of her thin little face was heightened by the black ringlets that fell about her neck.

She stood on the stoop of a rear tenement that faced a court even gloomier than usual in the late Winter afternoon.

A shrill voice startled her, and she climbed slowly up the crazy stairs, through the dark hallways, to the fourth floor, back. There was no elasticity in her movements, and she seemed like a little old woman but for her short dress and tiny stature. The dress was patched and darned in many places, until its original color was lost, but it was clean, and the child's face and hands, too, showed a sense of tidiness.

Pushing open a door, she entered a room typical to those who know the tenements. Such light as there was struggled through a narrow shaft; to eyes unused to the gloom the objects in the place showed only in shadowy outline. A baby was squalling. In a corner, on a rickety bed, covered with one counterpane, lay the woman whose querulous voice had broken into the child's day dream down stairs.

"Don't you hear Tommie," complained the woman. "Whera have you been all this time?"

The child did not answer, but with a decision that marked the force of habit, crossed to the soap-box crib. Picking up the human fragment that was sending forth ear-piercing shrieks she raised it high in the air, again and again, with soothing words. Soon the baby forgot to cry, and a little later was asleep.

Then the "little mother" replaced it in the crib, and walked over to the bedside:

"Oh, mother," she said; "what do you think I heard? It is splendid. Yetta told me that if I hang up my stocking to-night a good saint will bring me something nice. Maybe whatever I want most of anything in the world. Do you think if I'm real good Santa Claus will bring me a doll, mother?"

The woman began to cough violently. When the paroxysm had passed she put a thin hand out and stroked the child's hair gently. Her voice had lost its harshness when she spoke again.

"I don't think I'd count too much on that," she said. "You see, we're in such an out of the way place that I dont think Santa Claus will find us. We've no chimney for him to come through."

"O! mother, don't you really think he will?"

"No, dear; I'm sure he won't."

Tears welled up into the girlie's eyes, but she turned away quickly, and the woman signed.

"I thought maybe I might be able to buy you a doll this Christmas," she said, "but the coats are hard to sew while my lungs ache so."

There was another violent fit of coughing, which was interrupted by a knock at the door. The child ran and opened it, and a fat, red-faced boy came in.

He was Otto Schlevitz, the sausage maker's son, who lived on the second floor, front. The Schlevitzs were the aristocrats of that particular tenement, and it was even related of them that they had rich relatives uptown. And it was known for certain that when the cobbler's wife, with the two small children, was about to be evicted, Schlevitz had come to the rescue with a month's rent over the amount due.

"We vas going to haf a Grismus dree py der schoolhouse," said Otto, "und Yetta got a sore droat und gant go. Maybe you goin' ledt little Minnie use her ticket. I pring her along pye me. Und eferybody vat's got a dickdy goin' gedt some bresendt off'n der dree."

"O, mother, may I go?" pleaded the child, "maybe my present will be a dollie. O, I'm sure it will be a dollie."

The woman hesitated a moment, then glanced over at the sleeping infant. The child understood, and even Otto, usually dense, sized up the situation.

"Yetta goin'; come oop und take gare of liddle Dommie," he said.

The arrangement was satisfactory and, a little later, the child was on her way with the fat boy.

When she entered the schoolhouse it seemed to her as if Heaven had suddenly disclosed itself. The great tree with its marvelous fruit and myriad lights, the "real live Santa Claus," and the sweet-faced women who loaded her pockets with oranges and apples and sweets seemed to the child too beautiful to be real.

But the great event was to come, and for the twentieth time she whisperingly asked Otto when she would get her doll. This time Otto did not get a chance to answer, for Santa Claus had stepped up to the tree and began to make a speech. After saying that his gifts were only for very good children, he added, in a deep, gruff voice:

"Now, it would cause too much confusion if all the little boys and girls unwrapped their presents here. You must all promise not to undo the packages until you get home. Will you promise?"

"Yes, Santa," came from a chorus of voices.

Then Santa Claus took the gifts one by one and distributed them indiscriminately. Minnie got a long paper parcel. When it was handed to her she turned gleefully to Otto.

"Oh, I'm sure it's a doll," she said.

On the way home she asked the boy if he thought it would open and shut its eyes and say "Mamma," like Yetta's big one. Otto was too busy performing the legerdemain trick of turning a peppermint candy cane into a boy to do more than grunt "Um."

Up the stairs flew the child to her mother's bedside.

"Oh, mother," she cried, "at last, at last I've got a dolly."

"Is it pretty?" asked the woman, smiling faintly.

"I don't know yet. Santa said we must'n look at our present till we got home." She was tugging at the string and, in a moment, had the paper off—then the cover of the box, and she saw—a set of tin dishes. One glance of keenest disappointment and then the wet eyes were buried in the counter-pane.

This is a true story. It was a nurse who devotes her life to ministering in the tenements who told it at a dinner up town the other night. When she reached this point half a dozen of the guests spoke up at once.

"Oh, please give me the address. I'd like to send that little girl a doll."

"Sorry," said the nurse, "but I can't confess to such unselfishness. The girlie and I went shopping together this afternoon."

And about that time it seems not unlikely that a little girl with a doll clasped to her breast was dreaming of how a woman in blue corrected Santa Claus's mistake.

VETERAN CONDUCTOR ILL.

Commuters Sent a Christmas Purse to Thomas Elliot of the Harlem Road.

Commuters on the Harlem Railroad for the last week have missed Conductor Thomas Elliott, who has been running on the road almost since Commodore Vanderbilt first acquired control of it. They learned that he was laid up with jaundice at his home in Pawling. A collection was taken up on his regular train Monday and a purse of $84.50 was forwarded to him as a Christmas present.

It is the first time in his railroad career that he has been unable to pull the bell-rope. He was in charge of the train that leaves Pawling at 6 A. M. and reaches Grand Central Station at 8:15. He first attracted the attention of Commodore Vanderbilt in 1855, who appointed him a trainman on the road, and he soon worked himself up to conductor.

He is now sixty-eight years old, and has the easiest run on the road, coming from Pawling in the morning and leaving New York on the return trip at 2:06 P. M., and reaching home at 4:30 P. M. Two of his sons, one an engine runner, were killed in the service of the road, and at one time one of his boys drove the locomotive and the other was baggagemaster of their father's train.

Lamp Exploded at Christmas Tree.

Mrs. Mary Ortleib, a widow with seven children, living at 188 West One Hundred and First Street, had a Christmas tree last night at her home. A kerosene lamp which lighted the room exploded, setting fire to the tree, and the furniture became ignited. John Swanson, one of the guests, attempted to put out the fire, when his clothing caught fire, almost entirely destroying his trousers and burning his hands and legs severely. The toys were all burned. The damage was $300.

HAS TITLE TO ASPHALT LANDS.

Agent of Warner Intereste Says There Is No War in Venezuela.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 25.—Patrick Sullivan arrived in this city at 10 o'clock to-night from Caracas, Venezuela, where he had been aa the representative of Charles M. Warner and Patrick R. Quinlan's asphalt interests. He brought with him the decree of the Venezuelan Government establishing the Warner-Quinlan title to the Felicidad asphalt mine, which includes 175 acres of pure asphalt.

The title is established against the claim of the New York and Bermudes Asphalt Company, which is known as the Asphalt Trust. This, Mr. Sullivan says, breaks the monopoly of the trust and opens free competition.

Mr. Sullivan says that there is no war in Venezuela, and no thought of war. A constitutional assembly is called for February, which will adopt a constitution and elect a provisional President. The Castro Government, he says, is firmly established, and peace and prosperity are looked for in the country.

HAS BULLET IN HIS HEART?

Revealed by X-Ray After Four Years, Chicago Paper Says.

CHICAGO, Dec. 25.—The Chronicle tomorrow will say:

"Proof that a man may live with a bullet in his heart was afforded yesterday by the use of the X-ray upon Charles B. Nelson of Cadillac, Mich., formerly a Chicagoan, who was in 1896 the central figure in a sensational shooting that nearly resulted in his death.

"Under the fleuroscope the ball in Nelson's heart could be plainly seen rising and falling with each pulsation of the vital organ. The bullet had been there since the night of July 1, 1896."

LIVELY SPEEDWAY SPORT

A Large Crowd Witnesses Many Brushes on the Course.

MAXFIELD'S TEAM VICTORIOUS

The Chicago Pacer Hontas Crooke Captured the Greatest Number of the Impromptu Races.

Thousands of people journeyed to the Harlem River Speedway yesterday and witnessed what was undoubtedly the liveliest and most interesting morning's sport this Fall. The gathering of trotters and pacers was an unrivaled one in point of speed and quality, while the crowd was a record-breaker for a holiday. They lined both sides of the stretch, standing two and three deep, and every point of vantage where one could see over the heads of the crowd was secured early and held against all comers until the last brush had been decided.

Both the crowd and the horses were out bright and early, attracted by the warm Springlike weather, and as the star performers put in an appearance in the stretch they were received with enthusiastic applause. The roadbed was not in as good condition as it might have been, especially near the finishing post, where it was very sticky and the footing uncertain. This, however, did not interfere with the sport in the least, and inside of an hour after the first arrival brushes became so numerous that they were hard to keep track of. The chestnut pacer Hontas Crooke, 2:09, driven by C. K. G. Billings of Chicago, proved himself about the speediest animal on the Speedway and scored the greatest number of brushes, meeting all comers.

The match race between James Murphy's team, Tom and Lotus, and Theodore T. Maxfield's team, Monopole, 2:08½, and Amokin, 2:14¼, was won by Maxfield's team in two straight heats. The contest was one of the closest races ever seen on the Speedway. Both teams raced neck and neck nearly all the way down, and Mr. Murphy's team was only beaten by half a length. This was the first defeat this season for the latter pair.

JOLLY BACHELOR'S VICTORIES.

Among the earliest brushes were two between Royalto, driven by David Lamar, and Jolly Bachelor, with H. S. Mapes handling the reins. Royalto proved himself a good starter, but a poor finisher, and lost the first heat by an open length. The second heat was much closer, Royalto taking the lead in the start and holding a length to the head of the stretch, where Jolly Bachelor closed the gap by making a desperate spurt and won by a head. George Coleman matched Hattie Walters, (2:21¼,) against Edward W., who was in fine form. After a nose-and-nose race over the entire stretch Edward W. crossed the line a winner by half a length. Great interest was centred in a brush between the roan pacer Moth Miller, (2:07,) driven by Dr. David Randall, and the old Speedway favorite, Jack, (2:12½,) driven by Dr. Gill. Both animals had been matched on previous occasions and each had the credit of a heat. After several false starts the pair got away well, Moth Miller having a slight advantage, which Jack offset before a hundred yards had been paced. Nearing the first quarter post, Jack took the lead, but only held it for a moment. Then followed as fine a brush as was ever witnessed on the stretch. First one animal gained a trifle and then the other, so that it was hard to pick the winner. Finally, Dr. Randall touched Moth Miller with the whip, which he stood and showed a burst of speed that carried him almost a half length ahead of Jack. By this time the horses were close upon the finish line, and before Jack made an effort to recover the lost ground Moth Miller had finished a good half length ahead amid the cheers of the spectators.

One of the prettiest three-cornered brushes of the morning was between the bay trotter Copeland, 2:09¾, the chestnut pacer Hontas Crooke, 2:09, driven by C. K. G. Billings, and the bay pacer Silvermaker, driven by W. E. Spires. The start was very ragged, and the first quarter was covered before the animals began to draw together. As they struck the head of the stretch a blanket would have covered all three. Finally Silvermaker fell behind, and there was a desperate struggle for a lead between the other two, but Hontas Crooke once more showed his superior qualities, and when almost upon the line showed ahead of his opponent and won the brush by a trifle. Gretchen, the handsome bay pacing mare, with a mark of 2:23¾, driven by Charles Massoth, proved conclusively that she was much faster than her mark by covering a remarkably fast half and leading the crack mare Kittie Stoner, driven by M. Gerson, home by a length. David Lamar, driving Teto, 2:14½, had a lively tilt with the bay gelding Belle Esprit, 2:12½, driven by Charles Reilly, and had a length to the good at the finish. In a return brush honors were about even. One of the hottest races of the morning occurred between the old rivals for Speedway honors—Hontas Crooke, 2:09, and the chestnut pacer Spinx S., 2:09¾, owned by E. E. Smathers, and driven by George Spear. The start was as fair as could be expected under the circumstances, Hontas Crooke taking the lead and setting a furious pace. Spinx S., however, was equal to the occasion and did not lose an inch. Everybody made way for the pair, so that they had nothing to interfere with them. After the first quarter post had been left behind Spinx S. increased her speed and began to close up the gap slowly but surely. Just as the head of the stretch was reached Spinx S. showed on even terms with her opponent. The struggle for a lead that followed excited the crowd to a pitch seldom seen on the Speedway. They shouted, cheered, and struggled with one another frantically to watch the result. It was either animal's race up to a point within a hundred yards of the finish, when Mr. Billings, realizing that a final spurt was necessary to win, urged Hontas Crooke to her utmost with voice and whip. She responded nobly and made a spurt that won the race, although it was only by a nose.

The pacer Fairview, 2:09¼, driven by I. P. Balter, did some fast work, her best brush being with Franker, owned by C. K. G. Billings, and driven by Frank Gibbons, whom she beat by a good length after a hard race. Hontas Crooke carried Jack to a break after a fast quarter had been covered, and the brown trotter Dark Secret, 2:27¼, driven by Thomas Lynch, led Kingwood, 2:17¼, driven by De Witt C. Flanigan home. Kingwood somewhat redeemed himself on the next trip down the stretch by beating Mike, driven by G. A. Grote, easily. Silvermaker, driven by Clarence Ware, was a trifle too fast for the bay pacer Gretchen, 2:23¾. Azote, 2:04¾, driven by Jack Currey, found an easy mark in Royalto, driven by David Lamar, and Franker, 2:14½, in a final brush with the bay pacer Fairview, 2:09¼, won out by a head.

As a finale to the morning's sport Hontas Crooke, 2:09, and Moth Miller, 2:07, were turned together. It was a nip and tuck go from start to finish, Hontas Crooke winning by a very narrow margin.

Among the many on the road were W. E. Newcomb, driving his team of black pacers; George Young, driving Dandy; Charles Welland, with Sallent; Louis Kahn, driving a handsome black trotter; Charles C. Lloyd, behind Richard B., 2:21¼; James Kennedy, with the bay pacer N. T. D., 2:23¼; Christopher Hackett, behind King Tom; A. T. Kerker, with Roslyn, 2:21½; Nathan Straus, driving the famous trotter Cobwebs, 2:12; and Thomas Todd, driving the pacer Dan Robinson, 2:14½.

During the afternoon the crowd was much larger than that of the morning, but there was very little speeding, owing to the crush of vehicles on the stretch. The mounted squad were kept busy warning people about turning except at either end of the stretch, and that there were no accidents seems remarkable. Several horses bolted, but they did not go far or do any damage before one of the officers had them by the bit.

LAKEWOOD HARNESS RACES.

The Heavy Track Causes Withdrawals from the Three Events.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Dec. 25.—An estimated attendance of 300 witnessed the afternoon races at the new track just completed by P. S. P. Randolph. The novelty of the attraction gave it an interest to many.

The track, never intended for trotting, was heavy from snow and rain, and several entries were withdrawn. The card included a 2:20 class with five entries and three starters; a 2:30 class, with seven entries and two starters, and a running half-mile dash, in which four starters appeared. Summary:

2:20 Class.—Trot or pace, best two in three, three-quarter mile heats.

GOLF AT LAKEWOOD.

Secretary Lynch Turns In the Best Gross Score of the Day.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Dec. 25.—The Christmas handicap of the Golf Club of Lakewood was held to-day under the most perfect weather conditions, and many entered into competitive play, mixed foursomes, and friendly matches. The links were comfortably filled throughout the day.

Jasper Lynch, the home club Secretary, turned in the best gross card of the day, playing 93 from scratch, as follows:

Out .....6 4 5 6 6 6 6 5 5—49
In .....4 4 4 4 4 6 5 7 6—44—93

His card was a prize winner, as was also that of F. H. Lovell, first, and S. B. Ferris, second. The scores:

DYKER MEADOW GOLFERS.

Three Scheduled Competitions Attract Many Players to the Links.

Dyker Meadow golfers turned out in good numbers yesterday on their club links, near Fort Hamilton, Brooklyn, and while many played simply for amusement, three competitions furnished plenty of sport for those who like the excitement of playing for honor and prizes. The four qualifying members who became eligible on Saturday for the cup given by Dr. William Jarvie played the first match play round. J. D. Dithridge and Arthur P. Clapp had one of the hottest games seen on the Dyker Meadow links this year. At the completion of the match, on the eighteenth green, honors were even, and six extra holes had to be played before Dithridge could earn a victory. In the other match J. H. Merritt beat C. P. Notman by 5 up and 4 to play. Merritt and Dithridge will meet in the final round on Saturday.

The postponed semi-final round in the club foursome competition between M. T. Lyons and J. L. Taylor against S. V. Beckwith and Grant Notman, was finished, the former pair winning by 5 up and 3 to play. They will meet F. J. Phillips and A. R. Fish in the final round on Saturday.

A general Christmas handicap was the popular feature of the day, and this was won by J. H. Merritt, who made the best gross score, as well as net. The leading scores were:

SPORTS AT ARDSLEY.

Golf Links Lively—Automobiles in Evidence and a Building Proposed for Indoor Racquets.

Golfers kept the Ardsley Club links, near Dobbs Ferry, active yesterday, although no regular contest had been arranged. The playing was of an informal nature, but the glorious weather gave snap to many a friendly match, and more than one box of balls changed hands as a result of the eighteen-hole rounds. The club has not yet put its links into Winter quarters; that is, the entire eighteen holes are still open for play, instead of being reduced to the nine holes on the clubhouse side of Broadway. Some of the members and friends who encouraged their Christmas appetites by a round on the links were A. De Witt Cochrane, the club champion; Frank J. Gould, A. E. Barron, Miss May Barron, A. P. Conant, E. F. Knapp, J. C. Lyman, Miss Brown, W. Ledyard, M. E. Sands, Mr. and Mrs. E. Remington, W. A. Hall, McMillan Hamilton, A. L. Barbey, Cyrus Field Judson, F. C. Harriman, E. F. McVickar, Fred Lincoln McCormack, Morgan Cowperthwaite, E. Van Etten, George H. Mairs, James C. Bishop, and John McCullaugh. Several automobiles added a touch of vivacity to the club scenes, among those who rode to the club in motor vehicles being W. A. Hall and Dr. J. C. Lyman.

Considerable disappointment was occasioned owing to the inability to use the skating pond. A large pond adjoining the new portion of the golf course back of Broadway has been flooded and during the cold weather two weeks ago there were several days of excellent skating. Plans have also just been completed to build a small house for indoor racquets and tennis, and work will commence within a few days, so that games may be played before the Winter closes.

GOLF AT WASHINGTON.

International Matches on the Links of the Capitol City.

It can truly be said that golf is no respecter of persons, for all classes find amusement and sport in knocking the little gutty over the links. Lords and millionaires are enthusiasts at golf just as much as the petty clerk, and on the public courses in Scotland the laborers go forth to the links at the close of their work, in the same fashion as young men here sally forth to vacant fields for a game of ball. It need be no surprise, therefore, to learn that the Rev. Dr. T. De Witt Talmage has joined the ranks of energetic golfers and is seen very frequently during the season on the links of the Columbia Golf Club at Washington, D. C.

This club is the youngest golf organization in the capital of the Nation, but it has an interesting course and a grand old manor house for its club headquarters. The club has recently completed its eighteen-hole course and is rapidly taking first rank among the clubs around Washington and Baltimore. The home of the club was formerly the residence of Marshal Brown, proprietor of the famous Brown's Hotel, in the days before the war, and which is still a popular Washington hostelry, although now known as the Metropolitan. Clay, Calhoun, Webster, and other prominent statesmen of those days were regular patrons of Brown's Hotel, and the genial proprietor, growing rich, built a magnificent home near the suburb of Brightwood.

The house was fitted with fine Italian marble mantels, open fireplaces, hardwood floors, and other luxurious furnishings. This house, with its 187 acres of ground, is now the home of the Columbia Golf Club, and it is no secret that many rival organizations envy the palatial outfit of the Columbia golfers. Several changes have been made to the old house to supply club conveniences for the 170 members. The eighteen-hole course is not a particularly long one, but it is exceedingly sporty, as it is well supplied with natural hazards. The playing distance is 5,160 yards, and the bogy score, 80 strokes. The longest hole is 437 yards, and the shortest is 145 yards. The Captain of the club team is Dr. Lee L. Harban. He is one of Washington's prominent golfers, and recently won the open Fall tournament of the Washington Golf Club, and a few days later won first honors in the Baltimore Country Club's tournament for the lowest sixteen score men. The regular club team consists of twelve players, and matches have been held during the season with the Baltimore Club. Alexander Britton is President of the club, and the professional greenskeeper is Samuel Purvis.

The Washington Golf Club and the Chevy Chase Club are the other golf headquarters in the Capitol City, and they keep open links the year round. The Fall and Winter are the busiest months for the game, and club matches are of frequent occurrence. Many Congressmen and other officials, both of the legislative and Diplomatic Corps, belong to one or more of these clubs, and the competitions are often of a decidedly international character.

CHANCE HORSE BREEDING

Curious Cases of How Winners Have Been Developed.

KINLEY MACK AN EXAMPLE

Raceland and Proctor Knott Were Cheap Colts—Mr. Easton's Opinions on the Breeders' Association.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 25.—William Easton, the New York thoroughbred horse auctioneer, says that the American Breeders' Protective Association is wrong in theory and is perhaps a trust to discourage the small breeder. The theory of the association is to buy in cheap, underbred mares and fillies or high-bred ones of bad individuality and sell them without their pedigrees as work horses. During the recent sales the association bought largely of the offerings through Secretary Chenault, and Mr. Easton frequently protested against his bidding on well-bred youngsters which had not been given a trial. Mr. Easton maintains that the breeding business is largely a matter of chance, and that if the association had existed in past years the turf would have been deprived of some of its most famous horses. He declares that the breeding of the high-mettled racer can never be reduced to an exact science, and recites instances from turf history to substantiate his claim.

Being an Englishman himself and well acquainted with English horses, Mr. Easton naturally turned to that country first for his examples. Queen Mary was his first example. No one wanted her; she finally secured an obscure home and became one of the greatest brood mares of her time. She foaled, among others, the filly winner of the Derby, Blink Bonnie, the dam of the great Blair Athol; imp. Bonnie Scotland, imp. Bairowrie. Haricot was another of her get, and she produced a St. Leger winner in Caller Ou, and was the grand dam of Hampton. Had she been offered at public sale here the Breeders' Association would probably have bought her and the world would never have seen Blair Athol. The dam of the famous Crucifix was also much despised at one time, and was so bow-legged that a wager was offered that her foal, afterward Crucifix, could be rolled in a wheelbarrow between her legs. Having foaled Crucifix, she afterward made a fortune for her owner, Lord George Bentinck.

SOME ENGLISH TURF HISTORY.

The famous Godolphin Arabian, generally believed to have been a Barb, was first the property of Mr. Coke, who presented him to Mr. Williams, the keeper of St. James's Coffee House, who in turn gave him to Lord Godolphin. It was by mere chance that he was bred to Roxana. She produced the superior race horse Lath and the stallion's reputation was made.

Marske, the sire of Eclipse, considered by many the greatest of all horses, was sold to a farmer, who sold him at half a guinea, which amounts to $2.55. In 1776 his owner, the Earl of Abington, asked 200 guineas for his services, although he was then twenty-seven years old.

Sydney Herbert refused to take Melbourne when he was offered to him with two other Humphrey Clinker yearlings. Had there been a breeders' association, the sire of the wonderful West Australian would never have appeared in the stud. Hybla, the dam of Kettledrum, winner of the Derby, was once given away, and Marmelade, before producing the famous Dundee, was sold for a song.

Mr. Easton recalls American as well as English examples of this character. Fancy Jane, before producing the queen of the turf, Miss Woodford, was traded for a barrel of whisky, and Belle Knight was bought by John Harper only to throw Freeland and nine or ten other winners. At a sale in Lexington Bob Baker bought Sophia Hardy for $25, in foal to Pardee. The foal was Hardy Pardee, which sold for $2,500. Mr. Baker got a gift season to G. W. Johnson and bred the mare to him. The result was Lieutenant Gibson, winner of the Latonia and Louisville Derbies and the Clark stake. Had the Breeders' Association been organized a few years earlier no Lieutenant Gibson would have been seen on the turf. May Hempstead was a seventy-five-dollar yearling and Larkspur, winner of a number of races and several stakes, was sold here in 1898 for $30. T. C. McDowell was very successful with Rush, Batten, and Spirituelle, all the result of gift seasons. Since that time he has paid large stallion fees and, with the exception of Monarka, has nothing of high class. This is noted to show what a figure chance plays in breeding race horses. Some few seasons ago John Wallace of this city was given a horse named Pete Kitchen, his owner thinking him worthless. The owner at that time had sixteen horses in his stable and Wallace's gift colt won more races than all of them.

Old-time trainers recall Rufus Lisle of this county. He owned a cheap lot of mares, some of which he used as buggy horses. He never paid for a season to any horse, always breeding to stallions offered him free. Nearly everything he turned out won. One of the horses he bred in this way was Castaway II., winner of the Brooklyn Handicap, from a good field. Star Bright was a $65 yearling. As a two-year-old he sold for $6,000. The grand racehorses Raceland and Proctor Knott were cheap colts. Kinley Mack is another instance. A veterinary advised Mr. Easton to destroy him as a yearling, thinking he had been rendered useless by an injured shoulder. He was saved by careful nursing, to win the Brooklyn Handicap and the Suburban, a feat never equaled by any other horse. No better illustration of the chances of the racehorse business could be adduced.

The late August Belmont on one occasion weeded out his yearlings. Twelve were sent to New York to be developed for the big stakes. Three were left to be given away in sales here. The cast-offs were King Crab, winner of eighty-one races; Badge, winner of sixty-eight races, and Flitter, a fine performer. The two first could beat any colt in the Belmont twelve.

The dam of Garry Hermann was bought by the association and is now working in the Southern cotton fields. He won more races than any two-year-old of the year. This has suggested the plan of numbering the mares when they are branded by the association, so that in case of a good winner being developed they can be reclaimed.

Mr. Easton is inclined to the opinion that the association is a trust of the big breeders, who do not like to see a small breeder pick up a mare like Sophia Hardy and get a colt that will beat the best from their extensive farms. He says, too, that the big breeders, who heretofore destroyed their supposedly worthless mares, now get an average of $35 a head for them. He fears, too, that a bid from the Breeders' Association often brands a mare as worthless and prevents young breeders who would be willing to take a chance of getting a good one from bidding on her. The association has never been more active than at present, and a few years should show whether its work has a good or bad effect on the breeding of high-class racehorses.

SLOAN RODE AND LOST.

Jenkins Won the Race Which was the Attraction at Tanforan.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 25.—Jockey Tod Sloan made his first appearance in the saddle to-day since his return from England. It was at Tanforan, in the Christmas Handicap. The race was won by Eddie Jones, an outsider, with Jenkins up. It was also Jenkins's first ride since returning from England.

Vesuvian, on which Sloan made his first appearance, was installed joint favorite with his stable companion, Andrissa. Greyfeld and Advance Guard received strong support, while Eddie Jones and Mortgage were coupled at 7 to 1. The start killed Greyfeld's chances. Andrissa set the pace, but tired before the stretch was reached. Eddie Jones assumed the lead in the last quarter and beat Vesuvian three lengths. The Lady was a close third, a neck in front of Advance Guard. Sloan was warmly applauded and was presented with a floral piece when he rode to the post.

The weather was fine, track good, and attendance large. Texarkana fell when leading in the steeplechase. The ride of Murphy on Lord Chesterfield is being investigated. Results:

1 Mile—Dr. Bernays, 105 pounds, (Dominick,) 1; Owensborough, 90, 2; Edgardo, 102, 3. Time—1:42. Five furlongs—Princess Titania, 105, (Farrell,) 1; Tola, 105, 2; Litmus, 103, 3. Time—1:02. Handicap, steeplechase; short course—Lomo, 155, (Cairns,) 1; Lord Chesterfield, 156, 2; Meaton, 128, 3. Time—4:21¾. Christmas handicap; mile and a fourth—Eddie Jones, 110, (Jenkins,) 1; Vesuvian, 110, (T. Sloan,) 2; The Lady, 111, 3. Time—2:07. Westchester handicap; two-year-olds; seven furlongs—Brutal, 102, (O'Connor,) 1; Canmore, 114, 2; Seide, 99, 3. Time—1:28. Seven furlongs—Gold Or, 110, (Coburn,) 1; Wooster Boy, 107, 2; Dangerous Maid, 99, 3. Time—1:27¾.

Results on New Orleans Track.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 25.—Imp. Mint Sauce, who on Saturday placed the $2,000 Crescent City Handicap to the credit of his owner, A. R. Cowser, to-day added the $1,000 Christmas Handicap to the score. The English-bred gelding was always the favorite, though his price receded from 4 to 5 to 9 to 10 in response to the play on Sir Florian, who was backed from 4 to 1 to 7 to 2. The others had but trifling support. Tom Kingsley set a hot pace for six furlongs and then tired, relinquishing the lead to Mint Sauce, who, carefully rated by McJoynt, was never worse than third. Sir Florian took the longest route, and though he ran a very fast quarter at the end, could never reach Mint Sauce, who won easily by a length. Summaries: One mile—Tom Gilmore, 99 pounds, (Scully,) 1; Bert Davis, 101, 2; Brown Vail, 101, 3. Time—1:42¾. Handicap; six furlongs—Senator Beveridge, 104, (Cochran,) 1; Isobel, 108, 2; Gallopin, 101, 3. Time—1:16¼. Handicap; steeplechase; full course—Isen, 144, (Lawlese,) 1; Donation, 142, 2; Terry Ranger, 140, 3. Time—4:50. Christmas Handicap; one mile—Mint Sauce, 120, (McJoynt,) 1; Sir Florian, 106½, 2; Fleetwing, 87, 3. Time—1:41¾. Handicap; mile and an eighth—Sir Gatlan, 98, ((May,) 1; Strangest, 104, 2; Hardly, 90, 3. Time—1:55. Mile—Ben Chance, 100, (O'Brien,) 1; Hood's Brigade, 90, 2; Uncle Bill, 101, 3. Time—1:42¾.

CONNECTICUT FOX HUNTERS.

Octogenerians Enjoy the Fun and Several Foxes Reward the Sport.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWICH, Conn., Dec. 25.—A Christmas fox hunt is a pleasure that is becoming annual with lovers of the sport in this neighborhood, and the party, starting out at sunrise this morning, was the largest ever organized. Joseph Weaver, Esq., Oscar Palmer, Rufus Marshall, E. P. Slocum, Walter Geer, Warren Burt, T. B. Lillibridge, Charles Abell, "Will" Chapell, Edward Ladd, D. O. Lillibridge, "Al" Lillibridge, Secretary of State Huber Clark, Frederick Comstock, "Jim" Comstock, and others were among the huntsmen. The sport ended with a feast at Adams Tavern.

Before the Norwich party had hardly got started Frank Crumb of Griswold captured the first brush, a small red fox. Mr. Crumb is eighty-nine years of age, but will follow a hound like a boy. "Sam" Phillips of Lisbon, the blind fox hunter, was out also. He is past eighty-one years of age, and so nearly blind that he can only follow by the bark of the hounds, yet a few days ago he shot a coon, and says that he can beat half the young fellows in the party at fox chasing. The boys were up in the edge of Franklin at 10 o'clock and had killed two foxes.

Williamsburg Athletes Contest.

The athletes of the Williamsburg Athletic Association held a series of very interesting competitions in their gymnasium yesterday morning in Williamsburg. A. A. Titus, H. G. Mackin, and F. J. Bermingham were the principal winners of the meet. The summaries:

Twenty-Yard Hopping Race, Scratch—Won by H. G. Mackin, N. H. Fleming second, F. J. Bermingham third. Time—0:05 1-5.
Quarter-Mile Run, Scratch—Won by H. G. Mackin, M. Bickard second, N. H. Fleming third. Time—1:26.
Half-Mile Walk, Handicap—Won by M. A. Bickard, (scratch;) F. J. Bermingham, (scratch,) second; A. A. Titus, (scratch,) third. Time 4:12½.
Running Hop, Step, and Jump; Handicap—Won by A. A. Titus, (scratch,) with 27 feet 4 inches; N. H. Fleming, (8 inches,) second with 26 feet 7 inches; F. J. Bermingham, (scratch,) third with 26 feet.
Pursuit Race, Scratch—Won by H. G. Mackin, A. A. Titus second, M. G. Bickard third. Time—2:23¾.
Running High Jump, Handicap—Won by M. A. Bickard and A. A. Titus, (scratch,) who tied for first place at 4 feet 5 inches and divided the points; H. G. Mackin, second, with 3 feet 9 inches.
One-Mile Run, Handicap.—Won by H. G. Mackin, scratch; F. J. Bermingham, 20 yards, second; James Feeney, 60 yards, third. Time—5:41.
Jumping for Distance from Flying Rings, Scratch—Won by H. G. Mackin, with 15 feet 2 inches; F. J. Bermingham, second, with 14 feet 2 inches, and A. Spalding, third, with 14 feet.
Putting the 12-Pound Shot, Scratch.—Won by A. J. Sloans, with 27 feet 6 inches; F. J. Bermingham, second, with 26 feet 3 inches; James Feeney third, with 23 feet 6 inches.

ATHLETES CROSS COUNTRY

Harriers Crowd the Trails in Runs for Trophies.

UNDER THE CLUBS' AUSPICES

O'Brien Won the Hamilton Athletic Club's Event—Paper Chase by Glendale Athletic Association.

Yesterday's good weather, backed up as it was by a holiday, served to bring out the local harriers in great profusion. The various trails in and about New York were well filled by the lightly clad, speeding athletes, and some capital sport was enjoyed. Down at Bay Ridge there were several good runs. The Hamilton Athletic Club started the ball rolling with a big run from the club's headquarters at the old city line, Sixty-fifth Street and Third Avenue. Right over the lots through the railroad cut and toward New Utrecht, turning at the clubhouse of the Dyker Meadow Golf Club, the athletes sped, the pace being set by Ernest Williams and James H. Bennett. They ran almost yoked for the greater portion of the journey, but on the home stretch after the turn H. L. O'Brien sprinted and won the run, with Williams second, F. Richards third, T. Brady fourth, J. Mallorey fifth, D. McSpedden sixth, H. Gleason seventh, William Short eighth, Howard Samuels ninth, James L. Mallorey tenth, and the rest straggling, all being from the home team, and the time 0:56½ for the seven-and-a-half-mile run.

The event was followed by the combined run of the Marquette Athletic Club and the St. Peter's Athletic Association. The start was made from Carley's Hotel, Sixtieth Street and Fourth Avenue, and the boys took a course over the farm lands of New Utrecht around the edge of Bath Beach, through the Shore Road, and about the end of the officers' quarters at Fort Hamilton, coming out on Fourth Avenue at Ninety-second Street, and home. Joseph Fagan of the St. Peter's Club won the run, with F. Manuel, Marquette Club, second; J. H. Burns, Marquette Club, third; J. Kelly, Marquette Club, fourth, and the rest of the big field strung out for half a mile. Time—0:48:4 3-5.

OARSMEN FLEET OF FOOT.

Wahnetah Boat Club Hold Their Annual Cross-Country Run.

There were twelve starters in the open holiday cross country run of the Wahnetah Boat Club of Flushing, L. I., yesterday afternoon, eight of whom completed the course. The winner was L. Lawler of the Mohawk Athletic Club of Flushing, whose time was 0:31:00. C. Tinge of the Seawanhaka Boat Club of Brooklyn was second; W. Allen of the Mohawk Athletic Club was third, and R. Gaither and J. Wiehe, the only members of the Wahneta Boat Club to finish, were fourth and fifty, respectively.

The course was from Broadway and Lawrence Street, Flushing, along Lawrence Street to Strong's Causeway; thence to Corona, and back to Flushing via Jackson Avenue.

Silver cups were given to the two outsiders, who finished first and second, and to the first two club members as well.

The order at the finish was as follows:

First, L. Lawler, Mohawk Athletic Club, Flushing; second, C. Tinge, Seawanhaka Boat Club, Brooklyn; third, W. Allen, Mohawk Athletic Club, Flushing; fourth, R. Gaither, Wahnetah Boat Club, Flushing; fifth, J. Wiete, Wahnetah Boat Club, Flushing; sixth, J. Douth, Star Athletic Club, Long Island City; seventh, J. Burns, Mohawk Athletic Club, Flushing; eighth, D. Bishop, Flushing Athletic Club, Flushing.

Glendale's Paper Chase.

The Glendale Athletic Association held a Christmas Day paper chase. Henry J. Schneider and William H. Laurens were the hares and they were sent away five minutes in advance of the hounds, who, armed with big bags of paper, started at a merry clip for the woods near Schuetzen Park. The course laid out was devious and tricky, for it rounded, turned, and altogether baffled the hounds completely. There was no chance to catch the fleeting hares, who won the run easily, having tangled the pursuing pack so thoroughly in the woods that they had their hands, feet, and what little clothing they wore completely damaged when they got out in the open again. John S. Jenkinson finished first, with Harry Schneider second and Frank J. Lambert third. Time—0:49:58¾.

SKATING AT CLERMONT RINK.

Kearny, the American, Defeated the Norwegian in the Handicap.

The first of the skating events in the Clermont Rink, Brooklyn, yesterday was the attempt of Harry P. McDonald of the New York Athletic Club to trim the rink record for half a mile. McDonald just failed to get there by a few seconds, doing the distance in the fast time of 1:29 3-5.

The Christmas Day Handicap, a one-mile race in which five skaters competed, turned into an international event by the presence of Peter Sinnirud, a champion from Norway, whose indoor records are not great, but whose performances on long stretches in his own country are said to be almost marvelous. The Norwegian was a stockily built chap, but he was beaten well yesterday by a little American schoolboy. Philip J. Kearny allowed the foreigner thirty yards' handicap, starting from scratch, but Saroney, who was also at scratch, and Kearny had a dingdong race of it, and they went at it so hard that they both caught the Norwegian at the end of the thirteenth lap, and then Kearny, skating beautifully with a long, sweeping stride, came on and won in a desperate finish by about a foot. The man from Norway came hard and almost nipped the American on the tape.

Half-Mile Against Time—Harry P. McDonald, New York Athletic Club. Time—1:29 3-5.
The Christmas Day Handicap, One Mile—Won by Philip J. Kearny, Pawnee Athletic Club, Brooklyn, (scratch;) Peter Sinnirud, Christiania, Norway, (30 yards,) second; Ward Claflin, Pawnee Athletic Club, Brooklyn, (100 yards,) third; Albert G. Young, Clermont Athletic Club, (80 yards,) fourth; Arthur Yale Saroney, New York Athletic Club, (scratch,) fifth. Time—3:14 4-5.

To be Buried with Her Grandchild.

A double funeral will take place this afternoon from the Union Baptist Church on Noble Street and Greenpoint Avenue. It is that of Mrs. Eliza Solker and her grandchild, Mildred Switzer. The child, who was six months old, died on Sunday and Mrs. Solker on Monday. The latter's death was due to pneumonia after an illness of two weeks. Mrs. Solker lived at 211 Guernsey Street, and was sixty-three years old. The burial will be in Evergreens Cemetery.

The Dawn of Love

A Hundred Thousand Yards of
The NEW COTTONS for 1901

THE first whiff of Spring over the hills of Winter. The Dimities from Belfast are here, as well as the brightest, daintiest, choicest first pickings from the product of best American manufacturers. Ready in most lavish variety. The printings are a sharp advance on the styles of a year ago; the finish of many of the fabrics is most remarkable—the new processes that sprang up last year have been so perfected that color, finish, and even the texture of cotton duplicates silk.

There are many reasons for this advance showing; chiefest is that both you and your dressmaker prefer to make style experiments with cotton stuffs. They are easier to modify than silks or wool fabrics; and the more expensive garments can be planned more surely after the cotton dresses are perfected. Then dressmakers are willing to work on cottons before the rush begins for more expensive dresses.

You are best served by meeting their convenience.

Then there are many patterns shown now that will not be duplicated. The great variety originally brought out cannot be maintained when the hurry-time comes.

The news in detail is told below:

Pongee Sublime, 25c. a Yard—
This is one of the newest printed cottons. In effect it would be called an India silk, though made of cotton. It has the silk sheen obtained by the perfected mercerizing process, as well as the same dainty sheerness and silky texture. The designs, too, are those you would look for among the India silks. Superb variety to choose from.

Corded Muslins at 12½c a yard—
Cords are arranged in clusters forming stripes and designs are printed in attractive new patterns of lacy stripes, wreaths, rosebuds, serpentine figures and conventional designs.

Printed Irish Dimities—
The advance guard is here. New patterns in the dainty designs that have made dimity the favorite that it is to-day, and will always keep it so, as long as this daintiness of pattern is maintained. Price 25c a yard.

American Dimities at 12½c a yard—
The Yankees have captured the trick of finishing the cloth the same as the Belfast people, and, as for designs, it's a question whether in some respects they are not better. We feel safe in saying you will admire every pattern in these thirty designs in white and black on tinted grounds.

Corded Striped Dotted Swiss Muslins—
Thirteen self colors and black; with cotton thread-like cords running through the dotted Swiss muslin, giving it character and new dignity; stripes are spaced two inches apart. A very effective fabric. Price 20c a yard.

Printed Batiste at 12½c yard—
A cotton that always has many admirers season after season; now more deserving than ever, for the cloth is fine and dainty enough to be an organdy, while it's better for being firmer and stronger, and the printed designs are appropriate to the cloth—original and beautiful.

A hundred and sixty feet of counter space has been devoted to the display ready this morning. The printed buds and flowers are as refreshing as a Spring flower garden—nothing is lacking but the perfume. You will enjoy the seeing as well as the choosing.

Rotunda, facing Broadway and Tenth.

Handkerchiefs Mussed—At Half

Vast has been the selling of handkerchiefs during the pre-Christmas season just ended. You bought thousands upon thousands of them—more than ever before. Transactions of such magnitude cannot but leave their mark on the remaining stock. The handkerchiefs from which you selected your purchases have naturally become mussed and rumpled, some a little soiled. But what care you, for the slight additional trouble, and the soap and water involved, in the face of a cut of one-half the price on these splendid, pure linen handkerchiefs? A drastic measure, perhaps, but they must not linger here. Nor will they, at these figures:

Handkerchiefs that were 12½c each are now 6c.
25c each are now 12½c.
35c each are now 18c.
50c each are now 25c.
75c each are now 35c.
$1 each are now 50c.

SILK WAISTS $3.25 from $4.75

This is a fine offering of stylish and pretty taffeta silk waists, in solid colorings of old rose, light blue, heliotrope, navy blue and black; with dainty cluster of cording down the front, and trimmed with gilt braid. They were well worth the price marked on Monday, $4.75; but the three hundred in this offering to-day are now marked at $3.25 each

The whole lot should be sold in a jiffy. All sizes in the group.

Second floor, Tenth Street.

Eiderdown Robes

Most comfortable garments they are—as lounging wraps, for use as bath-robes, for a hasty toilette in the wee small hours they are indispensable. These are more—they're good looking and attractive. Carefully made, too.

One kind, at $3.25, is in solid colors, with tight-fitting back; full front; collar bound with satin; girdle at waist.

Another, at $5, is of ripple eiderdown, in solid colors; with full front and back, broad sailor collar and cuffs bound with satin; girdle at waist.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Percale DRESS LENGTHS $1.25 Patterns at $1

They are the prettiest percales we could find for the holiday season, and we've sold quantities of them. Still have some left, however, in 10-yard dress patterns, each neatly banded. There are about 40 designs from which to choose.

But they're even more attractive now than they were a few days ago, for these patterns, that were $1.25 each, are now newly marked $1—a saving to you of 25c on each dress length. And they're new designs for next spring, such as those for which you will later have to pay the original price, 12½c a yard. Is it the saving worth taking advantage of?

Fourth avenue.

Eiderdown FLANNELS Greatly Below Value

There are 5,000 yards in the alluring offering—splendid goods made for this winter's wear. But the backward season made selling slow—the maker was already thinking of Spring styles, and wanted room for them. Here was our opportunity, which is now become yours; for these handsome flannels, obtained at our price, we now offer to you, some at little more than half, others at two-thirds of their value. And the best part of it is, that the wearing time's still before you—must come. Then you will felicitate yourself on having provided the warm, comfortable underskirt, dressing sacque, or what not, that these goods have furnished.

Fifty-four patterns are here for you to select from—attractively colored combinations of figured stripes, fancy stripes, and serpentine stripes. Some of them are bound to be your liking.

37½c Quality at 25c Yard
50c Quality at 28c Yard

Fourth avenue.

PETTICOATS

Here are two excellent values in Women's Petticoats, both well made and finished: Petticoats of black mercerized percaline, with side-plaited ruffle, are 75c each. Black sateen petticoats, with side-plaited ruffle, some unlined, others lined with flannelette, are $1.

Second floor, Tenth street.

40,000 Yards of Dimities Under-price

These Dimities are equal in both quality and design to the Belfast goods at 25c a yard. In fact, they have an unusual beauty because of the fine cords woven in clusters that run through the fine sheer cloth. The printing is fully equal to the finest that comes from abroad. There are the small dainty floral effects, some being divided by fancy stripes, foulard and monogram patterns, polka dots and figured stripes in black on white grounds—in fact the offering contains just such designs as you would gladly choose at full regular prices thirty days ahead; but they will be gone in a few days; for they are the kind of goods that make dress goods history for quick selling.

Equal to the foreign 25c goods, and never sold before for less than 18c, to-day, in splendid variety, at 12 1-2c a yard

Broadway, near Rotunda.

OFFICE FURNITURE

Business men who have changes of office appointments in mind for the first of the year, will be interested in both the regular lines and the special offerings of Office Furniture now displayed here. The office furniture is shown all by itself on the fifth floor, and it comprises furniture of the practical sorts, made after most approved models, and built in the most thorough manner.

We carry a complete line of roll-top desks in both oak and mahogany; typewriter desks in oak, standing desks, office tables, filing cabinets, revolving bookcases, unit bookcases, arm and revolving chairs, stationary and revolving top stools; in fact a well assorted line for the average business office. A far better showing than is found in the usual store, and at prices far more favorable than in the only other stores that handle goods of equal character.

We have about twenty-five of the celebrated "Cutler" desks, in two patterns, that we will close out at a special price. They are first grade in every particular, and one of the best-known desks in the world.

At $27.50, from $38—Quartered golden oak; high roll-top desks; 50 in. long, 32 in. deep, 50 in. high; double pedestal, with 4 drawers in each; slide over top of each pedestal; center drawer between; top has 34 pigeon holes and the usual pen and paper racks and letter drops. Each desk is fitted with the Cutler patent ink-well. Writing bed has center of bird's-eye maple, and desk is paneled on ends and back, and has heavy moulded base.

At $30, from $42—Quartered golden oak; roll-top desks; 54 in. long; same desk as above; has 36 open pigeon holes and 4 small drawers. Same construction and finish.

In the regular lines are these desks:

At $13.50—Golden oak desks; 42 in. long; single pedestal, with three drawers; bottom drawer is double depth; low roll-top with eight pigeon holes and two drawers; three paper and two pen racks; two letter drops; automatic lock to roll curtain; we built and finished.

Women's Capes Under-price

These are the refined and elaborate cloth and velour capes that were designed and made in Paris, by the foremost makers of these garments. They are all that remain of one of the most important groups of capes brought from abroad this season. In character and style, they are above reproach. They are reduced only because our plans are always lavish in the matter of variety maintained up to Christmas day, and now the time is here to dispose of the balance remaining. Still broad selection in the matter of style, as there is only one of a kind in the collection. Prices range this way:

Cloth Capes, were $46 to $70; now $34.50 to $52.50

in both dark and pastel shades, for street or evening wear.

Velour Capes, were $58 to $130; now $43.50 to $97.50

Second floor, Broadway.

Men's Overcoats

With Christmas a thing of the past, your unremitting struggles to delight others may pardonably be elbowed out of the way by an inclination to minister to your individual needs. An overcoat, for instance. We are ready for this reversion to egoism, with a splendid January stock, in which new styles, just introduced, play an interesting role.

Here, for example, are some excellent overcoats in rough-faced Oxford-mixed cheviots. They are made with broad shoulders and loose backs, satin shoulder lining and all-wool body lining, and carry with them a distinctive air of style. Their very moderate prices are $15 and $20.

A very swell Raglan overcoat, which can usually be found only at a fashionable custom tailor's, is of medium Oxford-mixed rough-faced cheviot; lined throughout with extra heavy silk; broad shoulders and very loose back. Here $32.50.

A new Raglan full of style, is made of black unfinished worsted cheviot, serge lined with satin sleeve lining and velvet collar. Price $22.50.

Clothing for Boys

Did Santa Claus remember the little fellows generously yesterday? Doubtless full many a bright five-dollar gold-piece is being carefully treasured up for well-considered investment. In such an undertaking a glance at our stock of boys' clothing will suggest a ready solution. It's astonishing what $5 will buy here in the way of an overcoat, or a suit that is handsome, stylish, and a happy combination of style and durability.

Here's a sailor suit, of plain blue serge, handsomely trimmed with narrow white or black braid, and exceedingly attractive, in sizes 3 to 12 years, at $5.

Then, an overcoat, of all-wool frieze, in blue, Oxford mixture, and silver gray, for sizes 4 to 16 years, at $5.

For $6, there's a blue chinchilla reefer, all-wool lined, with velvet collar, sizes 4 to 12 years. A very stylish coat.

Corduroy trousers, 3 to 16 years, 95c.

Dress Goods REMNANTS

The flotsam and jetsam which usually results from a continued, rapid selling, such as has characterized our dress goods stock these last weeks, is not absent here.

Now that the holiday storm and stress has subsided, we find remaining several thousand short pieces, representing as many hundred of the most attractive of our dress goods patterns. These remnants, ranging in length from 1½ yards to 4½ yards, offer golden opportunities to the seeker after material for separate skirts, waists or children's dresses.

Each piece is marked with its length, and the new price for the piece, which represents a substantial concession of a third to a half of former values. To the early comers belong, of course, the best choosing.

Lillian CORSETS

The best corset in the world needs a stock adjustment at times—such a time is now. And whoever buys a Lillian Corset below its regular price gets a corset of highest merit and shapeliness, with a very positive saving, for full regular Lillian prices are less than other imported corsets of equal quality are sold for. These offerings to-day:

At $1.75, from $2.75—Lillian corsets, in sateen; white and black; low bust; long over hips; trimmed with lace; white or black. Also some of black sateen, with medium and short hips.

At $2.50, from $4—Lillian corsets; long waist, medium bust; long over hips and abdomen; bias cut; real whalebone; of white or drab coutil.

At $3.50, from $5.25 and $6—Lillian corsets of white coutil; bias cut; long waist; real whalebone; trimmed with lace.

At $5, from $8.50—Lillian corsets of black Italian cloth; whalebone; bias cut; trimmed with lace.

Second floor, Tenth street.

PAPETERIES And Calendars

Both reduced. The papeteries are pretty boxes, with Wedgewood design on the cover, and containing a quire of cream writing paper of good quality, with square envelopes to match. Now 15c, though formerly marked, and fully worth, 25c a box.

The Calendars have silver-plated frames of handsome design, and are attractive and appropriate desk-ornaments for the incoming year. Now $1.50, though formerly priced at $2 each.

TRAP SHOOTERS' BIG DAY

Kenyon Wins the Christmas Cup on Crescent A. C. Grounds.

CAPT. MONEY WON A MATCH

Over Two Thousand Targets Damaged by the Gunners at Bay Ridge—Sweepstakes and Trophy Shoots.

The gunners of the Crescent Athletic Club had a busy day at the Bay Ridge traps yesterday, over 2,000 targets being trapped. The principal event of the day was the shoot for the Christmas Cup, a handsome silver trophy offered by the Shooting Committee. The conditions called for twenty-five targets at the expert traps and twenty-five at the Magau traps, with handicaps added.

The trophy was won by C. Kenyon, Jr., who scored 17 hits at the expert traps and 21 at the Magau, a total of 47. W. W. Marshall was second with a score of 46.

Next in importance was a shoot for a panel of mounted game, which required 15 single targets at the expert traps and 10 pairs at the Magau traps. G. Stephenson, Jr., won this prize with a score of 13 at the expert traps and 8 at the Magau, making with his handicap of two at each trap a perfect score of 25. G. W. Hagedorn, with a score of 23, was second.

A shoot for a trophy of Delft ware, 25 targets at the expert traps, was won by H. M. Brigham, who broke 23 targets, making with his handicap of 2 the maximum score of 25. Another 25 target match for a panel of game resulted in a tie between L. C. Hopkins and G. W. Hagedorn, who scored 23 each, Hopkins with a handicap of 0 and Hagedorn with an allowance of 3. They tossed for the prize and Hopkins won it.

A shoot for a stein, requiring 10 pairs at the Magau traps, was won by G. W. Hagedorn, who broke 12, making with his allowance of 2 a total of 14 targets. Another stein, offered for a 15 target match at the expert traps, was won by L. C. Hopkins with the maximum score of 15. Hopkins also won the 15 target match, expert traps, for a panel of game, tying with Jere Lott at the maximum score and winning in the shoot off. Several sweepstakes also were decided. The scores follow:

CAPT. MONEY AT LAKEWOOD.

Carteret Gun Club Champion Beat the Local Shooter in a Close Match.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Dec. 25.—The Country Club traps claimed the attention of the largest party of the season this afternoon, the chief attraction being a twenty-five-yard handicap rise for a fifty-dollar trophy presented by George J. Gould, President of the club. Besides this special Christmas day event the party filled the afternoon with five-bird sweepstakes and miss-and-out competitions. Among the gunners were Capt. Money of Carteret Gun Club, W. A. Smith, Riverton Gun Club; Alex Morton, Westchester, and others from out of town. The afternoon was ideal and the birds prime.

K. P. Thomas, a Lakewood gunner, shot a beautiful match with Capt. Money up to the fifteenth bird, tying Money on the seventeenth, but broke badly on the closing five, and the Carteret veteran won with a score of 22 kills. Scores:

Capt. Money, Carteret, 30 yards—

Sheepshead Bay Shooters.

Ira McKane won the chief honors yesterday at the trap-shooting tournament of the Sheepshead Bay Rod and Gun Club, which was held at the club's grounds, The Cedars, just back of the Sheepshead Bay race track. There was quite a field of well-known shooters in attendance, and some capital work was done, the birds proving a fairly good lot of fliers. The shoot was the concluding feature of the organization's year at the traps, and Philip Suss, John J. Pillion, and Ira McKane won the three handsome prizes offered as trophies for the events at the traps held by the club during the past twelve months. The scores:

Club Competition at Seven Live Birds; Modified Hurlingham Rules; Handicap.—Ira McKane, (27 yards;) 7; George McKane, (25 yards,) 6; John J. Pillion, (27 yards,) 6; William Van Pelt, (27 yards,) 6; Judge James B. Voorhees, (27 yards,) 6; Edward Heffner, (23 yards,) 6; Philip Suss, (25 yards,) 6; Edward Voorhees, (25 yards,) 5; Hans Kronlka, (26 yards,) 5; Frederick Lundy, (26 yards,) 5; Edward J. Beard, (23 yards,) 5; August A. Soeller, (23 yards,) 5; D. Rauscher, (24 yards,) 5; Daniel J. Heffner, (23 yards,) 4; William H. Boyle, (23 yards,) 4; Dr. J. H. Hill, (25 yards,) 4; Henry Kost, (27 yards,) 3; Frederick Von Fricken, (25 yards,) 2; William H. Lindy, (25 yards,) 1.

Extra Sweepstakes Competition, Three Live Birds, Same Handicap as Club Shoot.—G. McKane, 3; Rauscher, 2; D. Heffner, 2; Beard, 2; E. Heffner, 2; J. Voorhees, 2; Dr. Hill, 1; Soeller, 1; F. Lundy, 1; E. Voorhees, 1; Von Fricken, 1; W. Lundy, 1; Boyle, 1.

Hempstead Gun Club Shoot.

Special to The New York Times.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., Dec. 25.—A quartet of very interesting events comprised the trap-shooting tournament of the Hempstead Gun Club here to-day on its new grounds on Hempstead Heath. There was little or no wind, and the weather was almost perfect for fine shooting. Quite a holiday turnout witnessed the sport, and some good scores were made. All events were $5 entry fee, birds extra. Frederick B. Gildersleeve, Robert Carman, and E. Lewis made the top scores of the day. Gildersleeve took the holiday cup handily with a straight score, Robert Carman being the runner-up. Summaries:

Introductory Sweepstakes Race, Five Live Birds, Modified Hurlingham Rules, All at Twenty-eight Yards' Rise.—Robert Carman, 5; Frederick B. Gildersleeve, 4; George Molineaux, 4; R. S. Powell, 4; Edward Lewis, 3; George Houghton, 2.

Renewal, Same Conditions.—Gildersleeve, 5; Houghton, 4; Carman, 5; Powell, 4; Lewis, 3; Molineaux, 2; W. H. Charlick, 2; Isaac Carman, 1.

Holiday Cup Shoot, Scratch Competition at Twenty-eight Yards' Rise, Seven Live Birds Per Man, $5 Entrance Fee, Birds Extra.—Gildersleeve, 7; Lewis, 6; C. E. Langdon, 6; I. Carman, 4; R. Carman, 3; Molineaux, 4; Charlick, 3; A. Meyers, 2; G. Houghton, 4; Powell, 2.

At the Flushing Traps.

Special to The New York Times.

FLUSHING, L. I., Dec. 25.—Edwin J. Clarke, the basketball player of the Seventeenth Separate Company, captured the All-Comers' Trophy here to-day in the holiday shoot of the Flushing Gun Club, held on the grounds of the organization, midway between this place and Jamaica. A. Hendrickson, Capt. William A. Sands, and August Doncourt were Clarke's chief competitors, but he beat them all out and landed the prize. Sweepstakes shooting followed, in which the men mentioned above got most of the fun and prizes with the leading scores.

ON THE BROOKLYN SPEEDWAY.

Honors Divided Between Quarter Stake, Chanty, Cantab, and Frank Creamer.

No such throng has ever appeared on the Brooklyn Speedway as crowded the route to the sea in Brooklyn yesterday. The mild weather coupled with the fact that a spin on the road was just right served to bring out such a throng of spectators that speeding was almost out of the question, and the few regulars that did get a chance to "let 'em go" had their hands full in keeping their animals from smashing other rigs. The fun was all one way, it being impossible to turn and have it out again coming back owing to the large number of moving vehicles.

Nat Ward's Quarter Stake, 2:15; John Schliemann's Cantab, 2:14¾; James Shevlin's Chanty, 2:13½, and Frank Creamer's Frank Creamer, 2:16, were easily the stars of the day, while for teams I. L. Tillotsen's blacks, Princewood and Ruby, easily outfooted all that came their way.

Among others were Thomas Morgan, with Hero Alcyone, by Alcyone; Mrs. W. H. Guy, with the brown gelding Gerald, 2:21; Capt. W. H. Guy, with the black mare Iveta, 2:15½; W. K. Jenks, driving Annie T., 2:15½; W. B. Dennison, driving Spendthrift, 2:20; C. K. Robinson, with his bay mare Lilly J. Eddy, 2:24¼; Frederick G. Lemmermann, with Deacon and mate, a speedy pair of steppers; H. J. Hilliker, with Henry S., 2:21½; John W. Roemmelle, driving Vileta, 2:18¾; Daniel Ryan, driving the pacer Maggie Anderson, 2:19½; E. T. Bedford, with General Shafter; W. C. Hendrickson, with the lines over the backs of Dr. Wilkes, 2:26¾, and mate; J. B. Bensinger, driving Happy Nick, 2:19½; Thomas G. Knight, handling the lines over Boy Blue, 2:23½, at three years of age; James Mallen, driving Collette, 2:20¼; Matthew T. Keenan, driving the bay mare Myrtle, no mark; W. H. Beebe and Billy, 2:22½, Robert H. Taylor, driving the bay pacer Grover Cleveland, 2:22½.

The Parkway Driving Club was the Mecca for most of the drivers, and the half-mile track presented an animated appearance all day.

EQUESTRIAN MUSIC RIDE.

Members of Riding and Driving Club of Brooklyn Celebrate.

A large and representative society gathering turned out yesterday at the Brooklyn Riding and Driving Club for the annual Christmas Day Music Ride of the organization. Riding Master Harry Taylor had no difficulty in putting his big squad through some pretty movements, although the spacious tanbark ring was taxed to its utmost. Singly, then in twos, then fours, and then eights, and by sixteens abreast the riders rode, marched, countermarched, and galloped all to the music of a string orchestra. Applauding hundreds of the best known society folks in Brooklyn thronged the galleries.

The enthusiasm and presence of many familiar faces made the event a great holiday spectacle. After the ride many of those present enjoyed a trip down the handsome Coney Island Boulevard prior to their return to the clubhouse stables.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Hubbs, Mr. and Mrs. Dykman, Mr. and Mrs. Nichols, Mr. and Mrs. Steele, Mr. and Mrs. Tuttle, Mr and Mrs. E. A. Ames, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Corliss, Mr. and Mrs. S. Ackerman, Frederic W. Hinrichs, E. S. Hewitt, C. B. Hewitt, Miss Barnes, H. E. H. Barnes, Mrs. Ackerson, Mr. and Mrs. Stillman, John Arbuckle, Col. John N. Partridge, J. H. WOMEN BOWLERS TO COMPETE.

Championships Arranged for the Fair Sex in Chicago Tournament.

In connection with the National bowling championships, to be decided at Chicago Jan. 8 to 12, inclusive, there will be held a woman's United States bowling championship, under the direction of the Women's Chicago Bowling Association. There will be three championships decided; for teams of five women, teams of three, and for individuals, so that the scope of the women's championship tournament will be identical with that of the men. The prizes offered amount in value to over $1,500, and include one $150 cup, four $100 cups, a $50 cup, besides guitars, vases, collarettes, tailor-made waists, pictures, lamps, umbrellas, chairs, bowling balls, a corset, and three $5 boxes of candy.

Envious male bowlers have suggested that the women's tournament is likely to be a bit top heavy in that there will probably be more prizes than competitors. But it is hardly likely that the women would regard such a result as a calamity, for if each won a silver cup, a fur collarette, a five-dollar box of candy, an umbrella, and a Morris chair, she would probably be able to find a use for all of them. According to one of the officers of the Women's Association, however, entries are coming in so fast that there has not yet been time to count and to classify them. If energy and industry in printing and mailing circulars, soliciting prizes, and importuning the men for the support of the tournament will avail, there is no doubt that the coming women's tourney will be an unqualified success.

At the meeting of the Woman's Chicago Bowling Association, held last Friday, it was decided to make the organization a permanent one and to hold an annual tournament. The officials of the association, who are managing the championships, are Mrs. L. C. Wachsmuth, President; Mrs. Joseph G. Stebbins, Secretary; Mrs. J. A. Weber, Mrs. W. W. Thompson, Miss L. Dale, Mrs. Frank Brill, and Mrs. J. Grass.

Stagg to Inspect Eastern Gymnasiums.

CHICAGO, Dec. 25.—To inspect the best university gymnasium in the East and to complete arrangements for a Spring baseball trip, Prof. Stagg of the University of Chicago will leave to-night for a tour of the Eastern institutions. Before returning the professor will visit all the principal universities in the East for the purpose of picking up a few ideas which may be incorporated into the plans for the new Bartlett Gymnasium, which is to be built on the Athletic Field next Spring. Incidentally, Stagg will fill out a schedule of baseball dates for the first week in June, when it is planned to take the Varsity nine on a tour, and possibly plan for contests in track and football with some Eastern school.

Dartmouth Lost at Basket Ball.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Dec. 25.—The Washington Continental basket ball team to-night defeated the Dartmouth College Varsity five, last year's collegiate champions, by the score of 11 to 6. The game was fast, and was won by superior play by the locals. A return game will be played on New Year's eve.

IMAGINES HE'S A BATTLESHIP.

Man on Third Avenue Whistles, Backs, Fights the Spanish Fleet, and Thinks Doctor's a Lighthouse.

One of the queerest cases of hallucination the experts on insanity at Bellevue Hospital have had is that of Jacob Marks, a waiter, of 441 Third Avenue, who was taken to them in a strait-jacket last night. He imagines himself to be the battleship Oregon, and he whistles, backs, and lights with imaginary Spanish war vessels and sinks them.

Policeman Pierce of the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Station, saw Marks last night making his way down Third Avenue at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, backing against the elevated railroad pillars and making a noise with his mouth as a child imitates the whistle of a steam engine.

"Let go the port gun," the man would yell. "Now the top turret gun and smash them. Back."

Pierce seized the man and held him, while Marks puffed, whistled, and gave orders. Dr. Levy of the Harlem Hospital arrived in an ambulance and the man then became violent. He fought hard, but the doctor and the ambulance driver and policeman put him in a strait-jacket, which prevented anybody being injured.

The man imagined Dr. Levy to be a lighthouse, and he said he was drifting on the rocks. He gave orders to "back her," and "not let her on the rocks," and then he gave a howl in a deep bass tone, which he said was a foghorn.

When they put him in the Insane Pavilion he was engaged in another conflict with Spanish ships.

EXPRESSMAN ACCUSED OF THEFT.

Says Package Hidden Under His Vest Was Put There for Safety.

Henry Newman, thirty years old, of 629 Hudson Street, New York, an express driver for a local company, was arrested at the Adams Express pier, Jersey City, yesterday, charged by Superintendent Charles H. Peebles with secreting a package intrusted to him for shipment. It was hidden under his vest. Newman said he had no intention of stealing the package, but merely put it under his vest for safe keeping because it was marked "glass." He is held for further examination.

The package, which is directed to Mrs. E. Kahn, Monticello, Minn., will be used as evidence before being sent to its destination. Its contents are unknown at present.

CAUSED PANIC AT DINNER.

Because He Wasn't Invited Tullgiu Fired at His Uncle, the Latter Says.

Because Michael Tullgiu of 127 Gold Street, Brooklyn, declined to invite his nephew to the family Christmas feast yesterday, the latter is alleged to have pulled a revolver from his pocket and fired at his uncle.

John Tullgiu, the nephew, who lives at 508 President Street, Brooklyn, had been celebrating the festival in the early morning in his own fashion, and about noon decided to make a call upon his uncle.

The family were just sitting down to dinner when he arrived, and at the sight of the table laden with good cheer, John realized that there was a keen edge on his own appetite. After the customary greetings, therefore, he hinted in the plainest manner possible that an invitation to the feast would be very acceptable, but to these hints the uncle turned a deaf ear.

Seeing the eating begin without himself being bidden to draw up to the table angered John beyond measure, and it is alleged that he pulled out a revolver and fired at his uncle. The bullet went wild, but panic reigned at the family board. The uncle ran down into the street and returned with a policeman, who arrested John Tullgiu and took him to the Adams Street Station, where he was locked up.

Boy Shot While Defending His Mother.

GREAT FALLS, Mon., Dec. 25.—Jacob Werten to-day shot and fatally wounded his son John. Werten had threatened his wife and treated her badly, and the son interfered to protect the mother. The father drew a revolver and fired a ball into the boy's neck. The son is paralyzed and will die. Werten surrendered to the authorities.

Long Waits Between Acts Are Fatal on Any Stage.

There will be no long waits in this business. The last echo of the Xmas bells has barely ceased to vibrate, and already several important store events are clamoring for attention.

But before we can proceed—the store must be cleared of the aftermath of a record-breaking holiday sale—the odds and ends and small lots and hurt goods that have no place in our regular stocks—and it must be done quickly—in one day—TO-DAY!

A Quick and Decisive After-Holiday Clearance Sale

will therefore take place to-day—a sale that means great price reductions, great purchasing opportunities—a once-a-year chance that you must not miss if you can help it. So far, so good—now read:

A Clearance Sale of Celluloid and Leather Goods.

THE TERMS TO CHINA.

It would be interesting to see the text, which has not reached even the State Department, of the protest, or proviso, by which Mr. CONGER attempted to minimize the significance of his signature to the terms of peace laid down by a majority of the allies. Evidently we cannot unreservedly accept the version given even by the State Department, of the nature and effect of a document which that Department has not yet seen.

If it turns out to be true that, in affixing his signature to the terms of peace which have been forwarded and published, Mr. CONGER has reserved the case of the United States, he has not done us the grievous and irreparable wrong which the first announcement intimated. In order to make his signature innocuous, and to safeguard the interests of the United States, the "accompanying document" to his signature should have set plainly forth that the United States by no means wholly approved all the terms, and did not at all propose to employ its forces in enforcing all of them.

If Mr. CONGER made this evident, then the semi-official conjecture as to what he really did, which we published yesterday, would be borne out, and he would not have done any irreparable mischief. Even in that case, we repeat what we said yesterday, that he seems to have outlived his official usefulness. Our Minister in Peking "hath had losses." He has personal resentments of his own to gratify which are not the National interests he is not unnaturally disposed to think them. For some weeks he subsisted upon horse meat and dodged bullets, and, worse still, lived in daily expectation of murderous assaults upon the ladies of his family. Such an experience, as BURKE said about practicing law, "has not a tendency to open and to liberalize the mind." The United States has suffered quite enough, and too much, during the negotiations, from its representative's consciousness of his wrongs, without being called upon to suffer any further.

The friendliness of Russia for China, by the way, is curiously illuminated by the extract we published yesterday from The Novoe Vremya of St. Petersburg. That journal explains that the evacuation of Chinese territory cannot refer to the Russians in Manchuria, since "Manchurian affairs do not concern the Powers." There is a sublimity of frankness, of its kind, about this declaration. It means that, the partition of China being already accomplished, so far as Russia's "share" is concerned, Russia is opposed to its going any further. Since nobody really proposes to drive Russia out of Manchuria, her position should make her an ally of our own proposals, unless Mr. CONGER has succeeded in mutilating them beyond recognition.

FIXING THE RESPONSIBILITY.

If the Committee of Fifteen pursues its work with relentless energy and Mr. NIXON'S Tammany Committee on Vice keeps its word, we shall presently have a new Mayor and a new Chief of Police. We do not see how these two committees can fail to find abundant evidence of neglect of duty by the two officials we have named. When they have the evidence in hand nothing but faint-heartedness on the part of the committees or some powerful protecting hand can save Mr. VAN WYCK and Mr. DEVERY.

The Committee of Fifteen is confident that Mayor VAN WYCK can be and should be held responsible for the corruption and the flagrant violations of law that have become notorious. How can there be any doubt about either proposition? The Mayor is the head of the City Government. He is responsible for everything. If the head of a department or any public officer neglects his duty, permits laws to be violated which he is sworn to enforce, connives at corruption or participates in it, the Mayor can remove him. If he fails to remove him the Mayor himself becomes amenable to the law.

The law which prohibits the maintenance of houses for gambling and other disorderly purposes has been practically a dead letter since Tammany came into power. It is generally believed that in refusing to close these houses the police are acting under the orders of certain persons who receive large sums of money from the law-breakers in payment for this protection. These persons are powerful in Tammany. They have, or at least exercise, more power in the City Government than the Police Commissioners, or even than the Mayor himself. It may not be possible to procure good court evidence that would secure the conviction of these great criminals, though every well-informed citizen knows who they are. But it is not necessary to get at them at present. Their power will be broken if the Mayor and the Chief of Police are removed from office and honest men put in their places.

Mr. NIXON says roundly that his committee will take its evidence before the Grand Jury. NIXON and every member of his committee will be disgraced and made ridiculous if this evidence does not result in the breaking of DEVERY. There is evidence enough, and Mr. NIXON'S committee knows perfectly well how to get at it. Failing to convict they will be themselves convicted. Mr. PLATT says DEVERY is going to be put out anyway, and he has the power to keep his promise. We advise Mr. NIXON not to let the Republican boss cheat him out of the glory of a creditable action.

The Committee of Fifteen do not need to go before the Grand Jury. They can go to the Governor. The present Governor loves the axe too well to be trusted with it. It would be better not to ask him to remove another elective officer, for his unwarranted action in removing GARDINER would make the public distrustful of the justice of any action he might take against VAN WYCK. But Mr. ODELL is a calm man. Put the evidence before him and let the law take its course. As in the case of DEVERY, there can be no doubt that the Mayor has by his gross neglect of duty and manifest sympathy with crime and criminals given good cause for removal.

Yet we presume nobody really expects to see the Mayor put out of office. DEVERY will probably have to go. He is a pretty bad specimen, and he is very near to the criminals, both those above who control him, and those below whom he fails to control. But the Mayor, though he is quite as bad a specimen as DEVERY, since more is expected of him and he has had higher opportunities to be respectable, and although his responsibility for vice and corruption is quite as clear to the investigating mind, is in some measure protected by his personal and official insignificance. None but an insignificant man would have permitted his reputation to be kicked about in contempt as the reputation of Mr. VAN WYCK has been kicked about since the movement against vice and corruption began. He has made no move, given no sign, personally or officially. It is known, too, that he is a mere puppet of one machine and held by the terms of an agreement with the other. The Police Board is "bipartisan." A man in the Mayor's chair would, of course, have pitched the worthless Commissioners out neck and heels, in honorable defiance of PLATT and CROKER. A puppet does not act with that boldness. The Mayor is sheltered, too, by the consideration that it is impolitic to remove an elected officer whose vote showed that he was the sort of man the people wanted. So, unless the Fifteen are very daring, very persistent, and very successful, Mr. VAN WYCK will probably be allowed to serve out his disgraceful term.

It should be a cause of wonder that a people so deeply stirred and so thoroughly in the right should be cheated of their lawful privilege of having a respectable Mayor. But there is nothing strange about it. The security of VAN WYCK against attack is a just retribution upon the people for their amazing folly in accepting a Chief Magistrate of whom they knew nothing at the hands of a big and very dirty boss about whom they knew much, and all of it bad. It is a retribution upon the hundred thousand Republicans who voted for PLATT'S candidate, many of whom are doubtless now giving their time and money and their prayers to cure the evils they themselves brought on the city.

The lesson of the whole disagreeable business is that if we don't want Tammany vices to prevail in the city we mustn't elect Tammany Mayors. The committees will do something to make corruption less secure and vice less brazen. The people can do everything to make the town decent by electing a decent Mayor next Fall.

THE FINANCES AND THE FUTURE.

The greatest work done for the establishment of National unity, and for the peace, strength, and order which flowed from National unity, was done by the first Secretary of the Treasury of the United States. A work of like kind, on a broader field, with possible consequences even more important to the Nation and to the world, remains to be done in the finances of the country.

HAMILTON'S prime object was to establish a National credit that should give security at home and respect abroad, and to do this by means that would prove the powers of the National Government and attach to it the people whose interests were protected by those powers. This he accomplished by the assumption by the National Government of all the debts incurred for the cause of National independence, by the cautious but firm exercise of the power of internal as well as external taxation, and by the creation of a National banking system to give cohesion and strength to the scattered resources of the capitalists in the States and to bind the whole business community to the support of a sound National Government.

It is not easy at this time to picture clearly the tremendous task that he undertook. Credit did not exist. The debts that the Confederacy had contracted were unpaid, interest as well as principal. The Federal Treasury was empty. The States refused or neglected to respond to requisitions, and there was no power to enforce them under the Articles of Confederation. The States did not pay their own debts. Irredeemable paper money at various stages of depreciation flooded the country. The National Government had been with great difficulty established to bring order out of this chaos, but the new Constitution contained no specific grants of power adequate to the task. It was the genius of HAMILTON that found in its implied powers the authority so sorely needed. It was his marvelous practical knowledge, or, rather, insight, that enabled him to organize and use the means he may be said almost to have invented. He left the Treasury full to overflowing, with the credit of the Government securely established, with the power of ample taxation universally recognized and actually in undisputed operation, and with the firm conviction in the minds of the great body of the people that the maintenance of the National Government so grudgingly and timidly set up was absolutely essential to their welfare at home and to safety from foreign attack. And the condition precedent to this mighty change was the honest and able administration of the finances.

To-day a noble structure of National power, prestige, and prosperity rests on the firm foundations which HAMILTON laid. Noble as that structure is, it is but the beginning of what may exist in the future, if we have the wisdom and the courage to deal with present conditions in the spirit in which the foundations were laid. If HAMILTON were living we believe that the one thing that would be clearest and most impressive to his mind would be the fact that the United States has not yet established on an absolutely solid basis the gold standard, on which depends our ability to take our full part in the commerce of the world. He would see that without that the public credit, and the far greater fabric of private credit intimately interwoven with it, is exposed to disastrous and utterly needless disturbance. He would understand also that the defect in our system is due to that tendency, which he abhorred above all things, to pander to the prejudice of the ignorant. One can imagine the scorn with which he would treat the action of the Senate in emasculating the gold standard bill sent to it by the House, making the sure maintenance of the standard dependent on the discretion of a possibly hostile or weak head of the Treasury. And he would never give a moment's rest to that indomitable energy of his until the shameful step had been retraced and the standard of currency and credit had been put beyond the risk of any conceivable accident of politics.

To some doubtless this will seem, in this period of prosperity and apparently complete security, language of unnecessary seriousness. But it is, we are convinced, the language of simple, sober sense applied to well-known facts. The present Secretary of the Treasury has over and again avowed the same view of the actual law and of its possible consequences. The President has submitted to Congress his urgent recommendation for amendment in the line of this view. Large numbers of bankers and business men throughout the country have advocated the policy of the President and the Secretary. The situation was only recently set forth with the utmost clearness and force by the Hon. E. J. HILL of Connecticut in an admirable speech in the House of Representatives.

It is, however, to the bearing of our defective legislation on our interests at home that most of the discussion has related. Its bearing on the interests opening before us all over the world in the immediate future is of still greater importance. Purely commercial disturbance will affect these and cannot be wholly avoided. But when such disturbance comes we shall be heavily and uselessly handicapped if through the condition or the policy of the Treasury the perfect maintenance of the gold standard is in the least put in jeopardy or in doubt. And now, while the Treasury is so strong and the country in the full tide of prosperity, is the time to make the needed improvement. It cannot be done—the more's the pity—at this session of Congress, but not a day should be lost in the next.

THE ARMY AND THE CANTEEN.

A correspondent yesterday took exception to our statement that, in the matter of the canteen, the Prohibitionists and the saloon keepers were in alliance, not for the first time, against the measure of practical temperance legislation which the establishment and maintenance of the army canteen have provided. It happens that our correspondent's demand for evidence had been answered before it was made by another correspondent, whose letter appeared in Sunday's paper, setting forth how an agent of the Ohio Saloon Keepers' Association had started for Washington "on business," as soon as the House, at the bidding of the W. C. T. U., had thrown out the provision for the canteen in the Army Bill. As to the qualified approbation of the canteen which the saloon keepers assembled have expressed, and which our correspondent quotes, the saloon keepers are quite intelligent enough to know that the most injurious blow they could aim at the canteen was an expression of their benevolent neutrality. We may as well say that the position THE TIMES has taken on this question is not the product of any theory whatever, but merely the result of the compulsion which evidence induces in any honest mind. The only evidence that can be called expert in this matter is that of the officers of the United States Army, who are, necessarily, the only judges of what is for the benefit of that institution. Their evidence is overwhelmingly in favor of the maintenance of the canteen, and it is, to us, conclusive. Such efforts as Mr. DUNNE has made to discredit their testimony by suggesting that it was given through fear or favor seem to us deeply discreditable to the men who make such an effort, without touching in the very least the value of the expert testimony. And as for people, of either sex, who crowd the galleries of a legislative assembly and, without any knowledge of the actual merits of the question, or of the practical results of the decision of it, go squawking on some preconceived or adopted watchword, such as "the crime of the Government" in "allying itself with the rum traffic," we may be full of compassion for them without having on that account any other emotion than contempt for the adult male legislators who allow themselves to be intimidated by the squawk.

There is another aspect of this canteen question which has not been very much discussed because it is not very easily discussable, but is nevertheless of the first importance. An enlisted man who gets beer or light wines at the post exchange, which is his club, under the surveillance of his comrades and his officers, is subject to no other temptations than those of the beverages in question. But if he is driven, by the force of hypocritical legislation, out of the post and outside of his barracks in order to satisfy his thirst for alcoholic stimulants, he is at once and necessarily exposed to other temptations, a yielding to which involves physical and moral contamination far worse, according even to the standards of the W. C. T. U., than the yielding to the temptation, minimized in the canteen, to drink more than is good for him. This is an additional and very powerful reason why all of us, presidents of temperance societies and rural clergymen and editors of newspapers and innocent women of the W. C. T. U., who know nothing about this question of the canteen in the army, should consent to hold our tongues about it and leave the decision of it to the officers of the United States Army, who know all about it.

FOR A NEW COURT HOUSE.

The desire of some of the Judges of the Supreme Court for better accommodations for their work than they now have is entirely legitimate and commendable. Their desire to gratify it by taking over a building authorized and planned and begun for another public purpose is by no means so legitimate. The demand for a new Hall of Records, in which the archives of the city and the titles of its inhabitants to their possessions, should be safe and accessible, as they are not in their present quarters, was very urgent before legislative provision for it was made. The plans are now complete and the contracts let. No scandal has attended the operations thus far, except that for which the present Board of Estimate made itself responsible by preparing to convert it into a job for the benefit of two Tammany architects of no professional standing.

The Court House still sometimes called "new," though it is thirty years of age, does not, it seems, fulfill its requirements. But it was at least built for a Court House, and therefore must suit them better than a building authorized and planned for a very different set of public uses could be made to do without new legislation, an entire reconstruction of the original plans, and a virtual beginning all over again, which would involve a long delay, as well as a great injustice to the public interests which are to be served by the Hall of Records. Some of the Judges suggest that the records shall be stored in the present Court House, which of course would also have to undergo reconstruction for that purpose and could not be occupied by the records until it was vacated by the courts.

We fail to find in this scheme any decent pretense of reason or justice or public convenience. It is not necessary to dispossess the public departments for which the Hall of Records has been planned and begun in order to provide suitable quarters for the courts. The remainder of the block partly occupied by the new building, and extending to Broadway, is indicated as the suitable site of other municipal buildings. When these are completed the structure which is the monument of a huge municipal scandal should be razed to the ground and its site added to the area of City Hall Park.

THE SULTAN'S TROUBLE.

The heart of every humane spendthrift will be deeply touched by the sufferings of the Sultan of Turkey in the situation where he has been placed by the ingenious efforts of Germany to collect a little bill due Mr. KRUPP, and, by the same occasion, one due herself. Learning that Turkey was about to pay the long overdue indemnity to the United States through the indirect and subterranean channel of a contract with the CRAMPS for a cruiser, Germany interposes with a demand that before the Ottoman Empire buys any more warships it must settle its account with the KRUPPS. It is understood by everybody, of course, that this is merely a way of compelling the payment of money owed to Germany, the amount due to be added to the Krupp bill.

This proceeding is not only summary but sumptuary. It gets the Sultan again into trouble with the United States, for we had been gradually increasing the pressure on him until it had become unbearable, and as we have nothing to do with his other accounts payable, the plea that Germany prevents his settling with us cannot be accepted. He is now subjected to double pressure. It must be inconvenient.

But the sumptuary aspect of the matter is interesting. The old laws which bore that name aimed to regulate a man's manner of life. They forbade him to spend too much money for silk raiment, expensive vintages, and fast horses. It has not been usual to put sovereigns under the restraints of sumptuary laws. Germany's reminder about the Krupp account amounts to that. She says in effect, you must pay us before you can be permitted to add to your navy. Yet Turkey may really need another cruiser, and the bare necessaries of life are always excepted from the prohibitions of sumptuary law.

However, no way of looking at the Sultan's trouble relieves him from it, or offers encouragement. It gets distinctly deeper. Yet any really stern measure that we might take to collect our dues would probably involve us in labors we are not just now ready to undertake, and would tend to pile the Pelion of the old Eastern question upon the Ossa of the new.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Great man and good as Père MARQUETTE seems from all accounts to have been, it is hardly probable that what little is now left of his mortal tabernacle finds a single grave insufficiently spacious. Therefore is one tempted to uneasy questionings by the announcement of some Ann Arbor railway officials that, in the course of certain excavations making at Frankfort, Mich., they have unearthed a skull and several other utensils once used by the heroic missionary and explorer, Père MARQUETTE died in 1675, while on his way from Kaskaskia to Mackinaw in a canoe. His red companions buried him, according to Parkman, by a small stream in the west of Michigan, "some distance south of the promontory called the Sleeping Bear." Later the body was removed to St. Ignace, many miles to the northward of Frankfort, and on the other side of the strait separating Michigan's two parts. There the traveler who had gone so far rested quietly, and after a while the exact position of his grave was forgotten, a fact due, possibly, to inappreciation of Jesuit priests by a majority of those who were glad enough to walk into a new land along paths which he had opened as a discoverer and rendered comparatively safe by the effect which his virtues had produced on the Indian tribes. The position of the grave at St. Ignace, however, was re-established to the general satisfaction in 1877, and with this determination of the matter the railway men—and real estate speculators?—of Frankfort will have to contend. While cordially sympathizing with their desire to make the metropolis of Benzie County interesting, and while thoroughly agreeing with what we take to be their belief that the grave of Père MARQUETTE would be about the most interesting possession a Michigan town can hope to have, we must confess to serious doubt as to the authenticity of their find. There is no easily imaginable reason why the far-wandering Frenchman should have been buried at Frankfort, many why he should have been carried to St. Ignace. Still, the Michigan Historical Society ought to know more about the subject than we do, and if, as is reported, its members support the claims of Frankfort's antiquarians, of course that goes far toward upsetting received theories and establishing new ones. Anyway, there should be no quarrels over Père MARQUETTE'S bones. He was a man of peace, notable in his day and in many later days, because he helped instead of harming the Indians, and neither killed them nor was killed by them. Explorers of that sort are rare.

—We cannot see in the contention of The London Spectator that England's coal supply would be spared the speedy exhaustion which now threatens it if all her machines were moved by electricity instead of steam quite so much absurdity as does the correspondent whose letter on the subject we published yesterday. He was quite right, of course, in the assertion that a considerable percentage of available power is lost when a dynamo intervenes, as it always does, between a steam engine and the work it has to do, but the percentage is not so great that it cannot be counterbalanced, when the conditions are right, and absolute economy of fuel both can be and is attained by what The Spectator inaccurately called the substitution of electricity for steam. No such substitution has yet been effected, though scores of wise and ingenious men are bending all their energies to that end and hope to accomplish it before long. But even now the use of electricity does permit the saving of coal, simply because it renders practicable the replacing of many small steam engines by one large one, with consequent conditions of combustion vastly more economical than when it was necessary to do the same work by means of a multiplicity of smaller fires. Every locomotive on the elevated roads, for instance, must be supplied with the best, and therefore most expensive, sort of coal, and the conditions of its consumption are far from ideal. With one or a few central power stations, though it will be necessary to produce a larger amount of force than is now utilized, still a cheaper quality of fuel can be burned, and we are more than inclined to believe a smaller quantity of it. Electricity favors centralisation of power production, and therein lies some, if not adequate, support for The Spectator's claim. England's coal fields, to be sure, cannot be made to last "forever," if any drain at all upon their resources is to continue, but critics should not be too literal. The Spectator was right in urging resort to the new agent for the transmission of force, and though its argument was weak in certain details of expression, the foundation of its advice was sound.

METHODS, OLD AND NEW.

From The Chicago Post.

The one was dainty and demure,
In nothing e'er aggressive;
The other would success secure
By energy excessive.

The stronger deemed the other weak
And lacking in ambition.
"And pray," she asked, "what do you seek?
What is your great life mission?"

"Nay; speak yourself! What is your aim?"
The gentler answered boldly,
"I seek to make myself a name,"
The earnest one said coldly.

Then laughed the fairer of the two,
While pleasantly asserting:
"Though this may be no joke to you,
To me it's most diverting.

"You'd make a name, refusing aid,
But ere you can begin it,
I'll choose a name already made,
And with my smiles I'll win it."

SARAH BERNHARDT AS THE DANE

"Hamlet" Acted in French at the Garden Theatre.

The Strange but Fascinating New Prince of Denmark Associated with the Richly Humorous Shakespearean Clown of Constant Coquelin.

"Hamlet," translated into French prose by MM. Eugene Morand and Marcel Schwob, was acted at the Garden Theatre last evening, with Mme. Bernhardt in the title rôle and M. Coquelin as the First Gravedigger. Because of the unfortunate postponement of the performance from Monday night, probably, and the consequent disappointment of many persons who had secured seats for that evening, the house was far from crowded, but the performance, which from beginning to end was strangely interesting, and, in spite of its oddity and the bizarre character of some of the reading and "business," was not without positive value as an interpretation of Shakespeare from an intelligible point of view, was followed with close attention and many signs of admiration.

It never secured any very demonstrative expression of favor, however, and it is likely that this, in spite of its merit, will be the least popular of all the great actress's impersonations in this country. We English-speaking folks are fond of saying that Shakespeare's genius belongs to all ages and the whole world, but whenever a foreigner tries to act Hamlet we cry out that he cannot act it because he cannot possibly comprehend it.

This new Prince of Denmark, so low of stature, so wonderfully graceful in every motion and gesture, so agile, and so restless most of the time, but so incomparably effective in repose; this Hamlet of the short tunic, the daintily molded limbs, the broad, pale forehead surmounted by yellow hair; the strangely mobile face of a Pre-Raphaelite, or décadent cast—whichever one chooses to call it—this odd, pathetic, eloquent, courtly, gracious, lithe, explosive, grotesque, hysterical Hamlet of splendid contradictions, will please the few, the art-loving, the appreciative, if not the multitude.

This Hamlet is not to be fairly judged by direct comparison with any standard impersonation of the Prince now known or vividly remembered on the English-speaking stage. It is not nearly so "Shakespearean," in its tone, temper, and form, as the portrayals of certain German actors who have appeared on our stage in comparatively recent years, as Ludwig Barnay's, for instance, or Josef Kainz's. On the other hand, it is not as bizarre, as volatile in temperament, as essentially emotional rather than intellectual as the Hamlet of Jean Mounet-Sully, the exuberance of which was somewhat held in check, too, by the traditional requirements of the delivery of alexandrines on the French stage. Bernhardt's Hamlet does not shed tears or walk sideways.

Of the new French version of "Hamlet," it is enough to say now that it is lucid and sensible. There are no striking vagaries in the very creditable and intelligent attempt to render the humor and philosophy, the majestic thought, the horror and passion of the original into modern French prose. The arrangement, in five acts, follows our own arrangement of the Shakespeare play closely enough. The omissions and curtailments are generally copied after the best-known English stage versions. These translators, unlike most of the French writers of their generation, are familiar not only with English literature, but also with the manners and traditions of the English stage.

They were not always able, of course, to transfer famous passages from the one tongue to the other with all their original dignity. Much of the eloquence of the great soliloquies is lacking in the French. The wisdom of Polonius becomes the quintessence of the commonplace in French prose. But this speech Bernhardt now cuts altogether.

For "mobled queen" the translation has "la reine emmouflée," thus accepting the definition of the mysterious word of the quarto as "muffled" instead of "mobled." For "Frailty, thy name is woman," the new Hamlet says "Fragilité ton nom est femme." "To be or not to be" is rendered "Etre ou ne pas etre." Thus faithfully does all the text follow the original. A few familiar speeches like "Though I'm native here and to the manner born" are missing.

Mme. Bernhardt has greatly shortened the play, however, for her American tour, and she might well shorten it still further by omitting Voltimand and Cornelius.

The dignity, grace, and feeling of Mme. Bernhardt's acting in Hamlet's first scene made one forget the "eternal womanly" in her appearance that costume cannot hide. From the Prince's first reply to Claudius to the emotional outburst after the exit of Horatio and his friends, the commingling of princely grace and dejection in her acting was admirable. No Hamlet has ever made more, and with less fuss, out of Hamlet's acceptance of the message of the soldiers and his college friend.

In the first view of the Ghost, however, and the "Unhand me, gentlemen," the actress sounded the hysterical note. She seemed the very woman there. But in the interview with the Ghost, in which, like all other great actors, she gave the Royal Spectre the centre of the stage and did not put the Prince forward too much; and in the wild succeeding scenes he would be a carper, indeed, who could point out a serious defect in her acting. Personality, of course, cannot be hidden. But Sarah Bernhardt surely acts the Prince in these few episodes perfectly.

The bizarre, grotesque, and childish "business" in Act II. can easily be reconciled with the wild and extravagant text if one cares to undertake the job. In fact, both the blue-bottle fly business with Polonius, to illustrate the "buzz, buzz, buzz," and the silly bumping together of the pates of the two courtiers have been done on the English-speaking stage. It seems, after all, that there can be nothing new in "Hamlet."

The "business" with the players here and elsewhere is not particularly interesting. That motley group of montebanks, male and female, are surely not the famed Tragedians of the City. But the "Oh, What a Rogue!" is well rendered. The soliloquy on immortality is beautifully done, too. The scene with Ophelia, though, seems to lose all its complexity of emotion, and to become merely the scolding of a weak and utterly uninteresting woman by a strong one.

The fine speech to Horatio, before the play, goes for nothing, as does also the advice to the players. But the striking pictorial effect and the original force of the play-scene as Bernhardt does it are not to be gainsaid. The Prince leaves his seat at Ophelia's feet to climb stealthily up the front of the balcony on which the King sits, and this brings him face to face with that culprit as the fright seizes him. However, Mr. Sothern's acting in this episode, not to mention any other recent Hamlet, will be better liked by the multitude.

The "hire and salary" speech, with the King at prayer, is beautifully done, and so is all of the colloquy with the Queen, though the brutal spitting of poor Polonius, in whose carcass the Prince's sword blade is permitted to remain a moment or so after it has done its work, seems a questionable bit of "business." The change from violence to amazement and pity at the second apparition of the dead King is highly effective. In the churchyard, however, the fury of Hamlet seems to a mere Anglo-Saxon to run away with his impersonator, while the droning monotone over the skull of Yorick is, to speak frankly, tiresome. But what Hamlet of glorious memory has not had his tiresome moments?

It was nearly midnight before Coquelin emerged into view in the guise of the loquacious and philosophical Gravedigger, a character always allotted on the English-speaking stage to the "first low comedian." The most famous exponent of the merry rascals and mendacious valets of Molière was, of course, found to be quite at home as one of the best of all the clowns of Shakespeare.

Coquelin had been seen in only one other Shakespearean rôle, and his Petruchio, though a graceful and vivacious humorist, had not been regarded in this country as one of his best portrayals. There could be no two opinions, however, of the rich drollery and naturalness of his acting as the Gravedigger, of the graphic skill displayed in his denotement of the harmless vanity and inherent humor of the fellow.

The Gravedigger wore a faded blue tunic and a leather apron, and his stockings were not mates. Yet there was nothing grotesque or essentially theatric about him. He enjoyed hugely the jests he made with his slow-witted companion, and had plenty of fun in his colloquy with the Prince. It was, in short, a wholly commendable and artistic embodiment of a comparatively unimportant rôle. It will not increase Coquelin's fame, but it will do him no harm.

There is always a hint of humbug when a great actor appears in a small part. We do not generally want to see an Edmund Kean as the Duke of Venice, an Edwin Forrest as Banquo, an Edwin Booth as Horatio, or a Joseph Jefferson as Nick Vedder. But Coquelin is an artist always, and he finds something in this scraggly bearded, sapient wielder of the mattock to make the part worth his while.

What is left of the character of Ophelia is acted rather prettily and feebly by Mlle. Damiroff. Desjardins is a vigorous and effective Laertes. The Queen of Mme. Marcya, the King of Rebel, the Horatio of Deneubourg, and the Ghost of Durec are competent impersonations. Most of the other rôles are, at least, respectably filled.

The scenery from the Théâtre Bernhardt, in Paris, had to be cut down to fit the Garden Theatre stage. In the circumstances it was not as well displayed as the designers had intended. But the coloring is all charming and, while the great hall in the Elsinore Palace is a somewhat grotesque and unearthly specimen of architecture, the two outdoor scenes are fine pictures.

The lights were generally well managed last night. The Ghost was revealed at first behind a transparency, but stood in the open upon "the dreadful summit of the cliff." In the Queen's closet the pictures were life-sized panel portraits of the two Kings, and within the frame of that of the dead Hamlet the elder his spectre appeared.

MARIE DRESSLER A STAR.

She Scores a Hit in "Miss Prinnt" at the Victoria Theatre.

Marie Dressler appeared as a star last night at the Victoria and she gave a large audience a Christmas present in the shape of a musical farce called "Miss Prinnt," from which seriousness is a thing apart.

George V. Hobart, who wrote what he calls "An Evening's Entertainment in Three Sections," solved the problem last night with "Miss Prinnt." Instead of writing a farce around Miss Dressler he has written one for her and put in it such material as will make an audience out for an evening's laugh get what it came for even when the star eclipses herself. "Miss Prinnt" will not live through the ages; it would probably surprise no one more than Mr. Hobart if it did, but it amused a large audience last night, and there is every indication that it can go on doing so as long as Mr. Hammerstein can make room for it at the Victoria.

The story is of a woman editor of a newspaper somewhere—anywhere will do—who, in her desire to stir things up stirs them up beyond her fondest anticipations. It goes along with a lot of "Billy Baxter" and George Ade talk from the sporting editor, some smart sayings from Miss Dressler, a lot of pretty girls, good songs, lively music, and is an amusing lot of nonsense, even if the dramatic niceties have been cut to shreds.

Miss Dressler has been able to get a company together that, while it may not shine in any particular sense individually, works like a well-regulated machine. Last night at the close of the first act, when her "coon" song had made a hit and she had been recalled four times, Miss Dressler did one of the graceful things for which she is noted. Quick to see that the go of the song was due as much to the efforts of her chorus as to her own, she tarried just as the curtain was descending and, shaking her hands, one with the other, looked the chorus over and gave them a silent "thanks" of encouragement.

John L. Golden has written some catchy music for Miss Dressler's songs. "I'm Looking for an Angel" and the mosquito song in the last act will soon be whistled all over town. Eaton Spayce, the sporting editor, in the person of Thomas Evans; Jobyna Howland, and Theodore Babcock were prominent in the cast. Miss Dressler's essay as a star was eminently successful.

Theatrical Gossip.

"My Daughter-in-Law," which filled a long engagement at the Lyceum Theatre last Spring, will be sent on a Southern tour under the management of S. Goodfriend.

Manager J. Wesley Rosenquest has secured from Eugene Presbrey his new play, "New England Folks." He will give it an elaborate production next season at the Fourteenth Street Theatre.

Rudolph Aronson has received a communication from Herr Eduard Strauss informing him that he will be pleased to conduct one of the opening performances of his brother's opera "Wiener Blut," which will be produced at the Broadway Theatre early in February.

Miss Fritzi Scheff, who was to have made her New York début this evening in "La Boheme," is compelled to relinquish the rôle of Musetta to Miss Occhiolini on account of a severe cold which she contracted while en route with the company from Minneapolis to this city.

Charles Frohman has arranged to produce Clyde Fitch's comedy "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines" on Jan. 7 at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia. The cast will comprise Ethel Barrymore, H. Reeves Smith, Edwin Stevens, George W. Howard, M. J. Gallagher, William Sumner, Estelle Mortimer, Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, Fanny Addison Pitt, Sydney Cowell, Kate Ten Eyck, Anita Rothe, and others.

The cast which was recently completed for the musical comedy "The Burgomaster," to be presented at the Manhattan Theatre New Year's Eve, includes Henry E. Dixey, Knox Wilson, Raymond Hitchcock, William Riley Hatch, James T. Kelly, George T. Romaine, Harry Murdock, Eleanor Glusti, Lillian Coleman, Ada Deaves, Jeanne Caskie, Generva Gibson, Sallie Randall, and some seventy soubrettes, dancers, and comedians. The prologue depicts the ancient Whitehall in the village of New Amsterdam in 1660, and the subsequent two acts introduce a whirl of frivolities in New York of to-day and at the seaside, a masked ball, and the Paris Exposition. The Burgomaster, after his nap of nearly a quarter of a century, is exhumed and resuscitated in Printing House Square instead of from beneath the Dewey Arch, which no longer possesses local interest.

St. Petersburg People's Palace Open.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 25.—The Prince of Oldenburg, President of the Government Temperance Committee, at noon today declared the People's Palace open to the public. After the inaugural ceremonies the Prince and twenty of the higher army officers, including the commanding Generals, together with high officials, noblemen and ladies, dined side by side with peasants and the families of workingmen.

CHRISTMAS AT HOME FOR NEW YORK MEN

Hugh McLaughlin Played Dominos —Coquelin "The Grave Digger."

REV. DR. HILLIS WENT AWAY

Deputy Chief P. H. McLaughlin Got a New "Plug" Hat—Family Dinners at Home the Rule.

New Yorkers generally celebrated Christmas at home, with family parties and family dinners. The heads of families participated in the distribution of gifts to members of their household and their employes. This is how some individuals spent the day:

SENATOR THOMAS C. PLATT—Staid all day at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. In the evening, with his wife, he went to his son's residence on West Seventy-second Street, for dinner.

HUGH McLAUGHLIN—Attended the services at the Pro-Cathedral in the morning. Lunched at home and spent several hours with the children of the family. Late in the afternoon took a walk. Dined with the members of his family. In the evening played dominoes in the rooms of the Veteran Firemen's Association in the Borough Hall. Made many gifts and received many.

CONTROLLER BIRD S. COLER—In the morning went to the Amphion Theatre, where he talked to the children at the East End Christmas Tree Association's celebration. Spent the remainder of the day at home, "getting acquainted with my family."

LIEUT. GOV. WOODRUFF—Spent the day at home with his family.

DEPUTY CHIEF OF POLICE P. H. McLAUGHLIN—Spent most of the day at home with his family. Got a large number of Christmas presents, one of them a new "plug" hat, an anonymous gift. Went to Police Headquarters in the evening, woke up a few Detective Sergeants, and went home early.

THE REV. DR. NEWELL DWIGHT HILLIS—His Christmas Day is best described by his maid servant.

"Well, he got up as usual," she said, somewhat confusedly, "and he read some and—and—"

"Yes, and then what?" encouraged the inquirer.

"Well, then he ate his dinner."

"And what did he do then?"

"Why—why, then he went away," triumphantly.

"Went away; where?"

"Out of town, and—and I don't know any more."

ARCHBISHOP CORRIGAN—Celebrated mass in the private chapel of the archiepiscopal residence just after sunrise. Bishop Brannell of Helena, Mon., his Grace's secretaries, and all the priests attached to the Cathedral attended. At 8 o'clock celebrated a second mass in the chapel, and at 11 sang pontifical high mass in the Cathedral. At 1:30 had luncheon, his first meal of the day, with Bishop Brandell, Fathers Connolly, Lavelle, and the priests attached to the Cathedral. Officiated at Vespers in the Cathedral at 4 P. M. Dined at 7 P. M.

MME. SARAH BERNHARDT—Passed the day in her rooms at the Savoy, and in the theatre at rehearsal and the regular performance.

CONSTANT COQUELIN, with Mme. Bernhardt—Called with a few friends at Maurice Grau's house after the play Monday night. They remained until 3 o'clock in the morning. Coquelin dined in his room at 2 P. M., went to rehearsal at 3, and in the evening went to the Garden Theatre to appear in "Cyrano."

SENATOR GEORGE W. McBRIDE, Oregon—Talked politics at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, dined with relatives up town, and retired to his apartments at 10 o'clock.

GEN. CHARLES E. FURLONG—Made presents to Fifth Avenue Hotel employes. Received from the widow of President Grant a card wishing him the compliments of the season.

EX-JUDGE LEWIS E. GRIFFITH—With his wife came from Rensselaer County to the Fifth Avenue Hotel on the twenty-ninth anniversary of their honeymoon. Dined at the hotel and drank to the health of their son, who is in the United States Army in the Philippines.

SERENO E. PAYNE—Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee—Dined at the Fifth Avenue Hotel and about 9 o'clock last night boarded a train for Auburn.

NATHAN O. MURPHY, Governor of Arizona—Entertained friends at the Holland House.

CHARLES A. HESS—Visited his aged mother, called on his sick brother, the Police Commissioner, in the evening, with his wife, attended a reunion of the Hess family at dinner.

Senator E. O. Wolcott, Colorado—Spent the greater part of the day at the Waldorf-Astoria, where he took dinner.

DR. JOHN H. GARDNER—Entertained friends at his home. After dinner talked politics with Charlie Stecher and other habitues of the Amen Corner at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

THOMAS BYRNES, former Superintendent of Police—Had breakfast at home, 17 West Fifty-ninth Street, at 7:30 A. M., went to the Speedway with Palmleaf, his roadster; had a few brushes; went to mass; dined at 1:30 P. M. with his family, consisting of his wife, five daughters, his little grandson, Thomas Byrnes Hickey, and his son-in-law, Charles Hickey. Spent the day and evening at home.

POLICE CAPTAIN THOMAS of the West Thirtieth Street Station—Dined at the Hotel Victoria. Spent the entire day covering his precinct.

THOMAS F. RYAN, the traction magnate—Had a family gathering at his estate, Montebello Farm, Suffern, N. Y., for an old-fashioned Christmas.

J. EDWARD SIMMONS, President of the Fourth National Bank—At home with Mrs. Simmons and their daughter and son. There was a carriage drive in the afternoon.

CHIEF WILLIAMS, DR. DEERY—At home, in West Twenty-eighth Street. Dined with his family. Visited friends in his official brougham.

HENRY CLEWS—Had his annual family Christmas party. As he put it, the day was passed "very rationally."

LEWIS NIXON, Chairman of the Committee of Five—Joined his son Stanhope at the Christmas tree. Had dinner with his family.

JOHN WHALEN—The Corporation Counsel had his Christmas dinner with his sister in his home, on Washington Heights. In the afternoon Mr. Whalen went for a walk, and in the evening he was at the Democratic Club.

JOHN W. KELLER—Staid in his hotel apartments all the morning, and in the afternoon went to the Democratic Club. Had dinner with friends in the large dining hall. In the evening was at the Christmas reception in the club parlors.

P. J. SCULLY—In the morning visited friends. His new silver service, presented by his friends, was used for his Christmas dinner. In the evening called at the Democratic Club.

PERCIVAL J. NAGLE—The Street Cleaning Commissioner received many presents from political friends and employes of his department. A large turkey won at a Harlem raffle by a friend was sent to his house in the morning. In the afternoon visited many of his political friends. In the evening went to the theatre.

AUGUST BELMONT—Enjoyed the first of his convalescing days at Hempstead, L. I., yesterday. Was wheeled in an invalid chair from his sick room to the main dining room. Participated in the distribution of the family gifts and spent a few moments with his family. Mr. Belmont is still weak, but the remains of the typhoid malaria are being rapidly dissipated. Personally he attended to the distribution of the gifts to the help and employes of the place. Many received substantial presents of money in gold.

W. BOURKE COCKRAN—Gave a Christmas party to twenty-five children, sons and daughters of the employes on his place, The Cedars.

THE MANCHESTERS' CHRISTMAS.

Yuletide Feast of the Old English Kind at Mr. Zimmerman's House.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 25.—The Duke and Duchess of Manchester spent an old-fashioned Christmas Day at the Zimmerman home, and a Yuletide feast, strictly following the old English model in every detail, was served. There were no guests other than members of the family and Baron Lambert. The Duke presented to the Duchess an upright piano recently purchased in New York. All the servants were handsomely remembered by the Duke and Duchess.

Among the friends of Eugene Zimmerman and the Manchesters a frequent topic of conversation is Mr. Zimmerman's sale of his blast furnace at Decatur, Ala., to the Tutwille Coal, Coke and Iron Company of Birmingham. Mr. Zimmerman bought the property two years ago, but has not operated it. He says his only reason for selling it was that he could do so at a profit.

Mr. Zimmerman denies a New York report that he has placed $130,000 in a London bank to the Duke's credit in order to pay the latter's debts and enable him to regain his seat in the House of Lords. "I know absolutely nothing of the Duke's personal affairs, and I did not make him a Christmas present of $130,000," said Mr. Zimmerman.

A CHRISTMAS SILVER WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. Hartwell A. Wilkins Celebrate the Event with Their Relatives and Intimate Friends.

A few relatives and intimate friends joined in celebrating the silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Hartwell A. Wilkins at their home at 477 Central Park West last evening. Mr. Wilkins is well known as an ardent Republican and Union veteran, while Mrs. Wilkins, who was Miss Adele Smead, was a portrait artist of some renown before her marriage. They were married in Charles Street in this city by the late Rev. Andrew Wilkins, father of Mr. Wilkins, who was a Baptist minister in the Western part of the State.

Mr. Wilkins served in the civil war, enlisting as a private in the Seventy-fifth New York Volunteers in September, 1861, and coming out of the service with the rank of First Lieutenant. He is a companion of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion and a member of Alexander Hamilton Post, No. 182, Grand Army of the Republic. He is also Second Vice President of the Oratorio Society of New York, a member of the Harlem Republican Club, and of Marshall Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, of Lynchburg, Va., and also of the Lynchburg Chapter. After the war Mr. Wilkins engaged in business at Norfolk, Va., and later was appointed President of the Board of Registration of Surry County, Va., by Gen. Schofield, at that time Military Governor of Virginia, and superintended the first election held in that county under the Reconstruction act. He was in the Internal Revenue Service from the Fall of 1868 until the Spring of 1871, and then came to New York and formed a partnership with George M. Clark under the style of Clark & Wilkins, and the firm continues still.

Among those present last evening were Daniel Frohman and the Misses Frohman, Justice Leventritt, Justice Henry Bischoff, Jr., Mrs. Gilman Collamore, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Loewenthal, Dr. Granville C. Brown, Frederick H. Wilkins, a brother of Mr. Wilkins; H. Lester Wilkins, a nephew; Frank B. Smith, a cousin; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Strauss, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin T. Greenfield, Mrs. Katherine M. Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Ellwood Clark, Mrs. Stitch, Dr. and Mrs. D. H. Davison, and Mr. and Mrs. William B. Tuthill.

Mrs. Wilkins wore an elaborate costume of light-blue silk, with trimmings of rare old lace. The proceedings, however, were thoroughly informal. After general congratulations had been extended to the host and hostess and the many rich gifts viewed, there were vocal and instrumental music and recitations by volunteer talent. A midnight supper was served, after which the company resolved itself into a dancing party.

DYING MAN KEEPS SECRET.

Victim of Acid Poisoning Refused to Give His Name at Hospital.

The officials of the S. R. Smith Infirmary, at New Brighton, S. I., are greatly puzzled as to the identification of a man who called at the hospital yesterday morning suffering from acid poisoning and died a few minutes later.

The stranger came to the main entrance of the hospital shortly before 8 o'clock yesterday and told the nurse that he was ill. He was admitted to the main hall and sat quietly until Dr. Frank Smith, the house surgeon, was called. The doctor inquired what was the trouble. He replied: "I have been poisoned." The odor of carbolic acid was very strong, and the man's mouth was badly burned. Dr. Smith quickly realized the nature of the poison and administered antidotes, but twenty minutes later the man collapsed and died.

Though in great agony, he bore it without a murmur, and was able to converse clearly at first. He declined to answer any questions.

Coroner Trantor was notified and made an examination of the body. There was nothing in his clothing which would give a clue to his identity. The dead man was about thirty years of age and weighed about 170 pounds. He was dark complexioned, with black hair and light mustache, slightly sandy. He had dark brown eyes.

The man was comfortably clothed, but his clothes were well worn. They consisted of a gray sack coat and vest, black trousers with blue stripes, blue and white striped outing shirt, heavy gray woolen underwear, and socks, black lace shoes, and black Fedora hat, size 7½. He was evidently a foreigner.

SMALLPOX IN INDIAN BLANKETS.

Dr. Haury Says the Mokis Sold Thousands of Them to Tourists.

Special to The New York Times.

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 25.—Dr. H. H. Haury, a smallpox specialist in the employ of the Government, in a letter to the State Board of Health here to-day says the deadly disease lurks in thousands of blankets made by the Moki Indians in Arizona and sold to tourists.

He advised that the large quantities of wool in the home of the Mokis be destroyed, but the Indians made it into blankets and sold them indiscriminately to tourists and strangers. Dr. Haury says these blankets are scattered all over the continent.

FIGHT AT CHILD'S DEATH BED.

Father Picked Up for Dead, Visitor Tries to Hang Himself.

BRITTON, S. D., Dec. 25.—A number of friends gathered at the house of John Pyplar, near Veblen, to sit up with the body of one of his children. During the evening a fight occurred, and later Pyplar was found lying between the house and the barn with several gashes in his skull and with his throat and neck severely injured. He was picked up for dead.

Upon seeing his condition, Moses La Frombis, a tailor, disappeared and a little later was discovered hanging from the limb of a tree near the barn. He was cut down before life was extinct. Pyplar is in a fair way to recover. La Frombis is under arrest to await the result of the injuries to Pyplar.

DEAD WHEN CALLED TO DINNER.

White Plains Music Teacher Expires Suddenly in Her Room.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 25.—Mrs. Ada B. Gray, a music teacher, was found dead in her room at noon to-day. She boarded with Mrs. J. P. Ludeman of Greenburg Avenue. Mrs. Gray was in good health this morning. A few minutes before noon she left the parlor, where she had been chatting with other members of the family, to go to her room to prepare for dinner.

When the meal was ready the rest waited for her to appear and finally one of the family went to the room and found her dead on the bed. She was forty-eight years of age. Her husband was a merchant in New York prior to his death.

CUTTING PRICES OF COKE.

Independent Producers 35 Cents Below Frick Company's Rate.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Dec. 25.—Producers of coke have become involved in a price war over the contracts for furnace coke, which are now being closed for delivery during the first half of the new year. The result is that some of the independent non-Connellsville producers are selling furnace coke as low as $1.40 per ton.

Involved in the conflict over the coke prices are chiefly the H. C. Frick Coke Company, the J. W. Rainey Coke Company, the Washington Coal and Coke Company, and the Bessemer Coke Company. The Frick Company is said to be holding to a minimum price of $1.75 per ton on furnace coke at the ovens, while independent competitors are quoting as low as the figures named. One of the largest of these interests is holding at $1.55.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

Here is what one of the big men of the Stock Exchange has to say of the changes in the financial world that are taking place: "Mark this as a prediction. By 1910, and possibly within less time, members of the New York Stock Exchange will be trading in London securities, just as American securities are now being traded in in London. The money centre of the world will surely be on this side of the Atlantic, for never in history were fortunes being piled up so rapidly or to such enormous proportions as they now are here. Already we have more money than our rich men know how to invest to advantage, and the small percentages they are willing to accept are ample proof of it. We are sure to be supreme in matters of finance, and my belief is that the change will come in five rather than ten years. That it will come is the belief in Paris and in Berlin, as I learned from men who handle enormous amounts of capital in those centres, though they do not believe the change will come as soon as I have predicted. But come they admit it surely will."

It is the biggest thing of its kind in the world that is now in the harbor ready to begin work on deepening the approaches to this city. It is the dredging steamer Thomas. She is of steel and about 300 feet in length and fitted with twin screws. She is equipped with four-foot suction pumps, through which she sucks up the sand and mud and silt at the bottom of the channels she is to dredge, automatically loading her hull with the stuff thus removed. The Thomas is to work in connection with a sister ship now building at the Sparrows Point yards, and these two will dredge the forty-foot channel down the bay, a work which will cost the Government some $4,000,000 before it is completed.

That vast army of men and women who are interested in bowling are having their attention called to a ball that is made of composition. Even the best of the lignum vitae balls will chip and warp, no matter how careful one may be, and your expert bowler is about as careful of his favorite ball as he would be of his own child. This new ball, for which there is claimed an elasticity that the best of the wooden balls do not possess, is of a secret composition, and it is claimed for it that it will neither chip nor warp. It is said that no attempt will be made to put it on the market until next season, though some of them are to be subjected to practical tests by the more expert of the bowlers later in the present season. Bowlers generally think there is no particular field for the new composition ball, as they are wedded to the balls that have been in use for so many years, and are too conservative to make kindly to any change. But lignum vitae is getting scarce, and the price of balls is to be materially advanced, so great is the demand for them. The light-colored African wood seems to be the favorite in the alleys here, as it is less apt to chip and check and get lop-sided, though no ball with the finger holes has yet been made that will not become out of true. The impact and slide on the hard alleys before it takes on the rotary motion is the cause of that with all balls that are punctured so that the fingers may be inserted to give steadiness. The old balls without the holes remained true longer, but these are not in favor with the men of the younger generation, and they are the ones that are making the big scores. For the new balls it is claimed that the lop-sidedness will come less nearly in their life, because they are to be so much harder than the lignum vitae wood. That, however, is a matter that remains to be proved when they come into actual and severe use.

Whatever else may be said of Tod Sloan, the jockey, no one will question his personal vanity. He is a photographers' friend, and has probably been photographed in more poses than any man living, unless it be the German Emperor, who at least once a week on the average poses before the camera of some photographer. There is but one other possible rival, and that is the Prince of Wales. A dealer in pictures says, however, that Sloan's record far surpasses that of the future King of England. Sloan's idea is that the very greatest compliment he can pay to any of his acquaintances is to send them a photograph of himself. He has them in all shapes and sizes and poses. There is said to have been a trunk full of them in the incumbrances he brought back from England this Fall. Some bear the London makers' names; others those of Parisians for whom he posed. Just now the malls are loaded with these pictures, which he or some of his agents is sending broadcast as Christmas souvenirs of the "Adonis of the saddle," as he has a fancy for being called, if rumor be true.

"There is one feature of your smallpox epidemic that strikes us of the South as rather strange," said Mark Stern of New Orleans, as he chatted in the lobby of the Hoffman House yesterday. "I refer to the fact that there is apparently no attempt on the part of your authorities or your newspapers to conceal the prevalence or extent of the disease. It is a little in advance of our methods, I confess. Let yellow fever or smallpox appear in New Orleans, or in any of our Southern cities, for that matter, and there is a studied attempt to conceal the real condition of affairs in the newspapers. Our policy is to try and gloss over the extent of such a trouble. As one of the merchants I suppose I am to blame for it in a measure. The news that either the smallpox or the yellow fever is raging not only keeps buyers from town, but reduces the orders from customers, who are afraid that the infection will be carried to their locality in the shipments of goods. We are extremely touchy on that point—effect on our trade. So the extent of an epidemic is minimized in our publications. We see nothing criminal in it. Scares at such times are generally foolish, if people are easily excitable, and our people are so. In the cities themselves our Boards of Health and Quarantine Commissioners are fully as careful, perhaps even more so than your own. Locally the cities are always awake to the necessities of the situation. It is only in the public prints that we draw a veil over that which it does not seem to us necessary to uselessly expose to the public at large. Danger of infection is of the slightest in these days, and those who might spread a contagion are scientifically isolated. This is done without the blaring of trumpets. Yet here you proclaim your ills from the housetops. Every one who sees a New York paper knows of the situation, and there is no apparent attempt to minimize dangers. Instead there is a constant note of warning to the public. I shouldn't think your merchants would like it. As a matter of fact they cannot be in love with the methods, though they may not say so in public. But New York is so big and has such an immense territory to draw upon, and your fear of epidemics in this colder climate is so much less than ours, that I suppose it makes but little difference with their trade. Yet a Philadelphian has just told me that our Southern method would be more nearly followed in his city were the situation there such as it is here. But New York is so different from all other places in its methods of dealing with almost everything that I suppose your people know best. Yet your methods do strike one not used to them as being peculiar at least. Some would say they are injudicious from a business standpoint. I have noticed that they have been the same in the past, and so I presume they must be all right. But I have been vaccinated since I came here, and heard about that street car conductor who was at work after he had developed a case of the disease."

It was at one of the big department stores in town, and it was at the noon hour, when the tired shoppers were waiting for a chance to get into the overcrowded rooms where luncheon was being served. Across the entrance to the room a rope had been stretched to keep out the crowding and weary women, each one of whom yearned to be in the next batch to enter the room when the head waiter should remove the barrier to let out some who had been fed and to cry out, as he does, "Room for two more." Back in the crowd of waiting ones was an assertive and self-reliant woman. Rather overdressed she was, and she had a modest and quiet companion with her.

"Will you please let me pass, ladies?" she asked, in a domineering sort of fashion, using her elbows at the same time and explaining to such as protested, "I have a couple of seats reserved for me, and must catch the waiter's eye. He knows it, and knows that I must leave town on the 1 o'clock train."

Eventually she worked her way to the front of the crowd, dragging her companion with her. Finally she caught the eye of the functionary on guard. "I have two seats reserved for me, Sir, right over there in that corner," pointing vaguely at the same time.

The bluff worked. Bluff it was, pure and simple. No seats were reserved, and she knew it. But she cared not; she had passed the barrier and reached her goal ahead of her less insistent sisters. When there were vacant seats, she and her friend rushed for them, and there was a smile of triumph on her face. Cheek pays, even in a crowd of shopping women.

"Can any one tell why the powers that control the elevated road should have selected such a time as last week to paint the woodwork of the stairways leading to the stations on the Sixth Avenue line that are mastly used by shoppers? I'm but one of a dozen women of my acquaintance who has had a dress almost ruined at the Twenty-third Street station during the rush and crush of Christmas shopping week."

"It was because they were putting in an escalator for the better accommodation of the ladies and the work had to be completed just that time," responded the male companion of the complainant, who like all men had read the papers and knew all about it.

"But it was not on the side where the escalator is situated; it was on the down-town side and across the avenue. Now, what is the explanation for that?"

The man was discreetly silent.

If you can't reason with the cabman you can generally bluff him if you know the game. It was drizzling and cold the other night, when Col. "Jack" Fletcher and his wife and daughter emerged from the Twenty-third Street ferry house. They had just arrived from Chicago, and the Colonel looked anxiously about for a cabman. Only one was in sight. He was shivering in the shadow of the building when Col. Fletcher approached and inquired:

"How much to carry us to the Herald Square Hotel?"

Cabby eyed his man, saw he was a stranger, and, noting the two women with him, promptly replied:

"Six dollars."

"I don't want to buy your rig, my good man," said the surprised Colonel. "I just want to ride in it for ten minutes or so."

"Least I can take," declared the jehu, as he held the door of his cab open so that the trio might enter.

"Oh, very well," said Fletcher, coolly; "we'll walk, just come in from the Klondike, you know, and we're fixed for that sort of thing. Thought at first we'd ride just for fun, but we need fresh air and exercise, and we'll save our money."

Cabby saw the three turn to go. All wore heavy storm coats and boots and seemed prepared for rough weather. They struck out sturdily across the street, but had gone hardly a dozen paces before the cabman shouted:

"Hold on, there! Where'd you say you wanted to go?"

"Never mind," replied the Colonel.

"Herald Square?" persisted the driver. "Carry you for $3."

Still the Chicago trio kept on. Cabby jumped on his box and caught them at the corner.

"Make it $1.50!" he shouted, anxiously.

"All right," replied the Colonel, as he and his companions climbed in. "Drive fast, and there's a drink for you at the end of the route."

CATHOLIC CONVERTS' LEAGUE.

An Association of Former Protestants, with B. F. De Costa as President.

An organization composed of persons who have been Protestants, but have joined the Roman Catholic faith, has just been formed here. Twenty-two recent converts met at the Church of the Paulist Fathers last Monday evening to establish the organization. The Rev. George Deshon, Superior General of the Paulist Fathers, acted as moderator. The association was named the Catholic Converts' League of America. Dr. Benjamin F. De Costa, formerly rector of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, this city, and one of the most prominent of the Episcopalian clergy in the Diocese of New York, was elected President. George D. Mackay, a member of the New York Stock Exchange, was elected Vice President; Miss Annie Burritt of Bridgeport, Conn., a young women of wealth and position in that place and a former worker in the Episcopal Church among the poor, was chosen Secretary, and S. Coates, member of the firm of famous thread manufacturers bearing his name, was chosen Treasurer.

Among others at the meeting were Miss Elizabeth Miller, Miss Sarah Deshon, William Harris, an artist; Walter G. Hooke of Colby University, Walter Waters, an organist, and his wife; Frank Verinilye, a lawyer; Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Jones, Caryl Coleman, Jesse Albert Locke, once on the staff of the clergy of Trinity Episcopal Church, and Henry A. Adams, formerly rector of the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer, in Manhattan.

The object of the organization is to enlarge among the members an accurate knowledge of the Catholic religion, and to stimulate them to the regular practice of its duties; to propagate the Catholic faith by personal example and social intercourse by the establishment of Catholic libraries, the circulation and distribution of Catholic literature, and the support of non-Catholic mission work for the bringing of other Protestants into the fold; to foster fraternal relations among converts, and to assist those who have made sacrifices for the faith.

WOMAN FLOORS A KISSER.

Then Sits on the Man Until a Policeman Arrives and Arrests Him.

August Miller, fifty-seven years old, of 95 Montgomery Street, Jersey City, created considerable excitement yesterday on Newark Avenue by trying to hug a number of women. Finally he seized Mary Jackson, a stalwart colored woman. She knocked him down and sat upon him until Policeman Sniffen arrived.

Miller was locked up on a charge of disorderly conduct.

FORGED A PRIEST'S NAME.

Father Dougherty Annoyed by the Practices of a Petty Swindler.

The Rev. Father Francis J. Dougherty of the Mission of the Immaculate Conception has asked the police to keep a lookout for a young man who has made a practice of collecting money since last June by means of forged letters purporting to come from Father Dougherty.

This young man, whose name is, according to his representations, Francis A. Doyle, has been in the habit of representing himself as a collector for Irish Nationalist papers. He collects subscriptions for them on the pretense that the proceeds are to go toward his education for the priesthood. To substantiate his statement he displays several letters bearing the forged signature of Father Dougherty. His favorite field of operations is among servant girls and others who cannot afford to lose the money.

TROLLEY VICTIM UNIDENTIFIED.

Body of Woman Killed in Brooklyn Collision Sent to the Morgue.

The body of the woman who met death Monday night by a collision between two trolley cars in Brooklyn was still unidentified at a late hour last night. The body has been removed to the Morgue. The woman is not believed to be a resident of Brooklyn. A middle-aged woman who said she was Mrs. Maggie Frawley of 152 North Ninth Street called at the station last night and told Sergt. Kiernan that she believed the dead woman might be her sister, Mary Devlin.

She said her sister was employed as a nurse in an asylum at Amityville, L. I. She had called on Mrs. Frawley on Monday and remained until twilight, when she set out for home. Mrs. Frawley was told to go to the Morgue, which she promised to do. It was said at the Eastern District Hospital last night that the condition of the two women, Mrs. Elizabeth Warren and Mrs. Emily Tommenan, who were injured by the collision, was unchanged. John Fagan and Benjamin Allen, the motormen, were arraigned yesterday in the Lee Avenue Police Court. Magistrate Kramer adjourned the hearing pending the action of Coroner Delap.

WOMAN DIED IN A CHURCH.

Mrs. Kunz a Victim of Heart Disease at Early Mass in Newark.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 25.—The congregation gathered at early mass in St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church this morning was thrown into a state of excitement by sight of a woman falling dead in one of the pews.

The woman was Mrs. Barbara Kunz, seventy-seven years old, a widow, residing at 3,301 Fifteenth Avenue, this city. She appeared to be in perfect health when she entered the church, but the service had scarcely begun when she was seen to fall over in her seat. When the other worshippers went to her assistance they found her dead. Heart disease is given as the cause of death.

Nearly seventy years since, Dr. D. Jayne wrote the prescription for Jayne's Expectorant, and still it's the best remedy.—Adv.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

With Christmas in the past and the holidays begun, there will be a slight revival of gayety in town to-day. Some of those who went to the country for Christmas will return this morning to the city. The majority of the leisure element will not come in until after New Year's. In the continued absence of severe frost there will be meets and runs with the hounds at Meadow Brook and Lakewood.

***

This evening will bring a dance for young people, to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Henry O. Havemeyer (Miss Elder) for their daughters, the Misses Adeline and Electa Havemeyer. This dance will be the first entertainment of note that Mr. and Mrs. Havemeyer will give in their large and handsome Fifth Avenue mansion, and this fact adds to the interest of the event, as the house is known to be filled with rare and costly paintings and art objects. There will be a cotillion and a seated supper for about 100 guests.

***

Among the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Gould at the large house party that they are to give this coming week end at Georgian Court, Lakewood, are Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Miss Greta Pomeroy, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clews, Cooper Hewitt, P. F. Collier, and Robert Collier.

***

Yesterday was one of the quietest of Christmases in town, chiefly due to the fact that the majority of the members of the society world spent the day in the country. All the country clubs were open and filled with members and guests, and an unusual number of country houses also flung wide their doors. The notable house parties of the day were those given by Mr. and Mrs. H. McK. Twombly, at Florham; Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, at Staatsburg; Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, at Ophir Hall, Westchester; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt, at Hyde Park, and Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould, at Lakewood.

***

Dr. Andrew S. Clarke and Mrs. William F. Burden, whose engagement was recently announced, will be married very quietly in this city a week from to-day, Jan. 2. A number of small dinners are to be given in honor of Mrs. Burden and Dr. Clarke this week. After their wedding Dr. and Mrs. Clarke will sail for Europe.

***

Among coming entertainments are a dance to be given by Mr. and Mrs. H. McK. Twombly for Miss Florence Twombly on Friday evening, Jan. 18, and a dinner dance, the second of two—the first of which, as has already been announced, for Jan. 9—to be given by Amadee De Pau Moran of 17 West Fifty-sixth Street, for his daughters, the Misses Marie and Rosalie Moran.

Notwithstanding the rush of the holidays, the Wednesday nights at the National Arts Club continue to be well attended and grow more popular with the members of the club. Informal talks from artists and experts are the features of these Wednesday nights, and there is instrumental and vocal music in addition. C. R. Ashbee of Cambridge, England, will talk this evening on "The Preservation of Historic and Beautiful Places." Theodore Arnheiter will sing, and Mrs. Marshall will recite. Last Wednesday George De Forest Brush spoke on "The Arts and Crafts," with special reference to the farm rugs designed by Mrs. Douglas Volk and the pottery produced by the Brush Guild at his suggestion.

***

Among those booked to sail for Southampton on the St. Louis to-day are Mrs. Horace Porter, wife of Gen. Horace Porter, United States Ambassador to France; De Lancey Astor Kane, Howard Abel of Chicago, Haddon Chambers, Mr. and Mrs. James Bailey, C. Lawrence Perkins, Edward Valpy, Mr. and Mrs. St. J. Davis, Jr., and child, and George H. Jackson, United States Consul at La Rochelle, France. On the new steamship Vaderland, sailing for Antwerp to-day, there will depart, among others, Charles M. Dickinson, United States Consul General at Constantinople.

The death of Buchanan Winthrop, which occurred at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, was a shock, particularly to the older element in New York society. Mr. Winthrop had been walking on the avenue only on Saturday last, and the crape upon the doorbell at the well-known Winthrop house, 279 Fifth Avenue, stopped many carriages and pedestrians yesterday afternoon. There was a constant stream of callers to learn whose death the mournful emblem signified and to leave messages of sympathy. The news was also received from Lenox yesterday of the death there of Miss Marion Greenleaf from typhoid fever. Miss Greenleaf was the eldest daughter of Dr. Richard C. Greenleaf and Mrs. Greenleaf, (Miss Adeline E. Stone,) and the elder sister of Mrs. William Adams of Laurence, L. I. She was one of the most prominent young women in the Lenox colony, was a noted horsewoman, and had also a rarely fine soprano voice. For some years she was a pupil of Miss Emma Eames.

***

Among those who have rooms at the Tuxedo Clubhouse for the holidays are Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Pooler, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Rives, Mr. and Mrs. F. Lorillard Ronalds, Jr., Mrs. James A. Coats, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Seton, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. D. Lanier, Mr. and Mrs. William Kent, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan G. Barnwell, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Forsythe, Mrs. Henry Sedley, the Misses Sedley, H. Evelyn Pierrepont, Jr., and Fernando Yznaga.

***

George Thomas Brown and Mrs. Evangeline St. Claire Stanley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Peplow Forwood, were married very quietly yesterday evening by the Rev. E. S. Tipple of St. James's.

***

There were innumerable Christmas dinners last evening, and among those who gave large ones, most of them family affairs, were Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Butler Duncan of 1 Fifth Avenue, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lanier, Gen. S. R. Thomas, Miss Gurnee, Mrs. James Jesup, Mrs. Richard T. Wilson, Mrs. William Schermerhorn, Mrs. William Barclay Parsons, and Mrs. de Peyster. Mrs. William Rhinelander of 18 West Forty-eighth Street gave a large family dinner at Sherry's, and among her guests were Mr. and Mrs. Philip Rhinelander and Mr. and Mrs. Oakley Rhinelander. Mrs. James A. Burden, Jr., gave a luncheon yesterday at her residence, 8 East Sixty-ninth Street.

***

Mrs. W. S. Storrs Wells has issued cards for Fridays in January. Mrs. Berkeley Mostyn of 60 West Fifty-eighth Street has cards out for Tuesdays in January for receptions, at which she will be assisted in receiving by her débutante daughter, Miss Helen White Stevens.

Hudgins—Staats.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Dec. 25.—Miss Mabel Emerson Staats was married to-day to Luther Wilson Hudgins of Petersburg, Va., at the residence of her grandmother, Mrs. Clarissa Slawson. Guests were present from nine different States. The honeymoon will be spent in the South.

GREENPOINT STORE ROBBED.

Safe Opened, but Only a Few Stamps Secured by the Burglars.

The store of F. W. Woolworth at 859 Manhattan Avenue, Greenpoint, was robbed some time early yesterday. The burglars blew open the safe, but found only about one dollar's worth of postage stamps. Mr. Woolworth had taken the receipts of the day to his home.

An entrance was gained by forcing open a rear door. That the burglars were experts and had the finest kind of tools was shown by the work on the safe. Within a few yards of the store is the Greenpoint station house.

FERRYBOAT BREAKS DOWN.

Passengers Transferred in Lower Bay from the Robert Garrett.

The big ferryboat Robert Garrett of the Staten Island Line broke one of her paddle wheels while on her trip from Whitehall Street to St. George at 11:30 yesterday morning.

She drifted about helplessly for a short time, and then the tugboat Cyclops of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad took her in tow. A few minutes later the Castleton of the Staten Island Line ran alongside, and in midstream transferred the passengers on the Garrett to herself by means of a flying gangplank.

The Garrett's passengers reached Staten Island about twenty minutes late.

A TRUST OF NEWSPAPERS.

Alfred Harmsworth's View of How Journalism May Be Revolutionized in the Twentieth Century.

The North American Review will in its January number present an article on "The Simultaneous Newspapers of the Twentieth Century," contributed by Alfred Harmsworth, editor and proprietor of The London Daily Mail, published simultaneously each day in London and Manchester, who is due here to-day on the steamship Teutonic. The conception of Mr. Harmsworth of the newspaper that is to come is in part:

Let us suppose one of the great American newspapers under the control of a man of the journalistic ability of Delane, the greatest of the former editors of The London Times, certainly the greatest political editor in the history of journalism, backed by an organization as perfect as that of the Standard Oil Company, and issued simultaneously each morning in easy New York, Boston, Chicago, Pittsburg, St. Louis, Philadelphia, and other points in America; or at London, Liverpool, Manchester, Bristol, Edinburgh, Belfast, and Newcastle, in Great Britain. Is it not obvious that the power of such a paper might become such as we have not yet seen in the history of the press?

The methods of founding such a combination of publicity, the article says, would be those employed in forming a trust. It would require unlimited capital and intimate journalistic knowledge and ability. The initial steps would be to acquire the best brains, newspapers, and machinery, and to construct or control telegraphic facilities and other accessories to a complete and sure news service. Having the power to undersell, the simultaneous newspaper would either compel rivals to come into the combination by purchase or absorption. Natural results of such a trust would be ownership of cables, wires, dispatch boats, and special trains, paper mills, printing ink factories, and machine shops, with the likelihood of controlling railway and street news stands and the taking in of news agents as agents of the combination.

Criticising and discussing present methods of putting the news before the public, Mr. Harmsworth says that, in relation to illustrated newspapers, many of the illustrations of to-day are unnecessary and of such little merit that twenty years hence the present-day newspaper picture will seem to our sons as great a curiosity as a newspaper a century old now appears. He classes the shape of the ordinary newspaper as clumsy, and favors a small, portable, and neatly indexed publication of the size of a page of The North American Review. As to newspaper outrages on public taste, Mr. Harmsworth finds them in American issues. American newspapers seem to Mr. Harmsworth to devote too much space to news items altogether trivial and unworthy of publication.

MODERN RAILWAY TENDENCIES.

The tendency of American railway management to effect economies on a large scale, in a comprehensive way, has illustration very clearly when careful and specific comparisons are made of statistics covering operations for recent years. This is true of the important railroads of the country almost generally, though in some instances, naturally, the exhibits are much more telling than in others. In prominent properties of the South this progress is especially notable—as is shown in the tabulated statements presented herewith.

Commencing with the Louisville and Nashville, it will be noticed the managers have increased their tons per train mile from 193 in 1898 to 220 in 1900, and their tons per loaded car from 13.89 in 1898 to 15.27 in 1900. They have reduced the percentage of empty car mileage from 31.4 to 30.6 and have increased their expenses for maintenance of way per mile of road from $1,065 to $1,314, and have expended on maintenance of their locomotives $2,567 against $1,962 in 1898. In the same way they have increased the cost of maintenance of their passenger cars. All of this indicates that they are putting more money into the property and at the same time operating the road more economically by increased train efficiency.

The Cincinnati Southern Railway's managers increased their tons per freight train mile from 389 in 1898 to 421.79 in 1900 and the tons per loaded car from 14.6 to 16. They increased their expenses per locomotive from $1,583 to $3.094 and increased their expenses per freight car owned from $70 to $106. The maintenance of way per mile of road increased from $1,823 to $2,744.

And so on through the list. It will be noticed that the improvement in all the lines is quite marked—showing a tendency of the times.

***

Of the Southern properties whose statistics are quoted here—Louisville and Nashville, Cincinnati Southern and Southern Railway—all have fiscal years ending on June 30; and the comparisons are for the three years to July, 1900. And in detail this is the showing:

THE ROGERS WORKS OPTION.

It Expires To-day, but an Effort Will Be Made to Extend It.

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 25.—Katz Brothers, the brewers of this city, who are endeavoring to keep the Rogers Locomotive Works in Paterson, to-night issued a statement to the citizens of Paterson calling upon them for the last time to subscribe toward the capital stock of the new company. The option held upon the plant expires to-morrow. If there is a generous response to this last call, Katz Brothers will have the option extended a few days. If the citizens of Paterson do not show a disposition to subscribe the option will be allowed to lapse.

The subscription so far received amounts to $100,000. One hundred thousand dollars more must be raised if the Katz Brothers deal is to go through. The general belief is the chances are about even for and against the amount being raised.

Dividend or NO dividend, good or BAD monthly statements, Tennessee Coal and Iron Stock will sell at 200 per share. Four years ago, when Tobacco stock was quoted at 65, I publicly advertised that Tobacco would sell at 200. The speculative public pooh-poohed the idea, and the Directors, in order to counteract my statement, met and passed the dividend. Result, the stock dropped 12 points, to 53. But Tobacco was already CORNERED, the same as T. C. I. is TO-DAY, and it shot up like a rocket to 218. Similar results may POSITIVELY be looked for in T. C. I. Buy T. C. I., (not on a 5 point margin,) but put up 20 points margin, and don't sell it unless you can get at least 100 points profit. CHILDREN OUT DRIVING LATE.

Are Arrested and Afterward Taken Home by the Oldest Boy's Father.

While Policeman Kennell was walking up West End Avenue about 11 o'clock last night, he saw two little boys and a girl driving up the avenue in a buggy. Thinking that they might have stolen the buggy, he took them to the West Sixty-sixth Street Station. When they were standing in front of the Sergeant's desk, the boys stood one on either side of the girl, and the elder acted as spokesman, and gave his name as Johnnie Pehler, twelve years old, of 251 West Sixty-first Street, and his companion as Edwin McGrath, eleven years old, of the same address.

"What is your name, little boy?" the Sergeant asked of the girl, whose head he could hardly see.

"I am not a boy," she replied. "I'm a girl, and my name is Sarah Boyle, and I live in the same house as Eddie and Johnnie."

At this juncture both boys spoke up and said:

"She's my girl."

"I'm not your girl, Eddie," she replied. "I'm Johnnie's girl, 'cause his father has a horse and buggy and he takes me driving."

Johnnie said that the horse and buggy belonged to his father, and that he had started to take a drive with Sarah when Eddie jumped into the buggy without an invitation.

The Sergeant put the children in charge of the matron, and sent to the address given by the boys to notify their parents. A few minutes later Johnnie's father appeared, and said that the buggy belonged to him, and took the three little ones home with him.

THE WEATHER.

LOCAL FORECAST.—Fair and colder; fresh westerly winds.

There was light snow yesterday in the Ohio and Middle Mississippi Valleys and the lake region; elsewhere the weather has been mostly fair. There will be snow to-day among the lower lakes and thence eastward through Northern and Eastern New England. For to-morrow fair weather is indicated generally. It will be colder in New England and the northern portion of the Middle Atlantic States. On the Atlantic Coast the winds will be fresh and mostly westerly.

The record of temperature for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from THE NEW YORK TIMES's thermometer and from the thermometer of the Weather Bureau, is as follows:

YULETIDE BRIGHTENS MANY DARK PLACES

Cheers the Suffering and Unfortunate in Hospitals and Jails.

Good Dinners, Christmas Trees, Vaudeville Entertainments, and Music Provided for Young and Old.

Throughout the city yesterday many institutions, charitable and religious, and private individuals provided Christmas dinners for thousands of poor people. In the Tombs and in all of the many city prisons, in hospitals, in churches, and in public halls there was Christmas cheer such as only turkey and cranberry sauce and other gastronomic delights can inspire. Men, women, and children of all ages were supplied, and if in the entire city there remained one person who went to bed hungry it was his own fault.

In the high mud-yellow walls of the Tombs 426 prisoners were made temporarily happy. The usual Christmas dinner, including ice cream and cigars, was served at noon, while vocal and instrumental music was provided to enliven the gloomy surroundings. The women prisoners were allowed to leave their cells and were served on a large table, around which they sat. Dr. Samuel J. Kennedy, charged with the murder of Dollie Reynolds, and who was sentenced to death, but was recently brought from Sing Sing, having been granted a new trial, spent the day much in the same manner as the other prisoners, except that he was visited by his wife and father. His meal, also, was more elaborate than that of the other inmates, having been brought by his wife.

In the City Prinson, on the Island, 850 prisoners were fed. On Manhattan State Hospital, on Ward's Island, male and female inmates numbering nearly 6,000 were dined. A vaudeville entertainment given by the unfortunates on Christmas Eve and numerous packages sent by friends from the outside world put the poor lunatics in a frame of mind which led them to look forward to the great events promised for the following day much as if they were once again happy children.

At the infants' hospital, on Randall's Island, hundreds of tiny waifs were made happy. Miss Dumphy, who is in charge of the little wayfarers, had an immense Christmas tree for the benefit of the babies, and thousands of presents given by people from all over the city and including everything that can make baby life less monotonous were distributed.

At the Home for Incurables on Blackwell's Island and in the almshouse an entertainment was given during the afternoon, following the dinner, at which Christmas songs were sung and Christmas poems recited.

In the Harlem, Fordham, and Gouverneur Hospitals, as well as other hospitals throughout the city, the programme was varied according to the standing of the patients, but everywhere and in every ward there was some token of the season and some gift in remembrance of the day.

At Bellevue Hospital a Christmas tree had been erected for the benefit of the seventy-five children confined in the medical and surgical wards. A package containing toys, candy, and underclothing was given to each child. For the rest of the day there was joy in the wards and rejoicing and play as much as the nurses dared allow.

IN THE PRISON AT SING SING.

Convicts Enjoy Seasonable Dainties and a Minstrel Show.

The convicts in the Sing Sing State Prison had as merry a Christmas yesterday as the circumstances would permit, thanks to Warden Johnson and George Thatcher's minstrels.

The performance was given in the chapel of the prison, which had been specially decorated and supplied with a stage. Over 1,300 convicts dressed in their prison stripes were seated in the chapel, noticeable among them being Alexander Stewart, the boy who was recently sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment for killing another boy. A keeper sat by his side. Edward Gray Anthony, one of the convicts, a lawyer, mounted the stage and in a speech presented to the Warden and to Mr. Thatcher the thanks of the audience.

Roland B. Molineux had no visitors, and he passed the time in his usual way, drinking and smoking.

The dinner provided for the prisoners consisted of chickens, lemon crackers, bread, mince pies, cheese, apples, and two cigars for each man.

NEWSBOYS HAVE A MERRY TIME

Entertained at Banqueta Down Town and Up Town—A Raid on Pies.

Of all the dinners given outside the city institutions there is probably none that compares to the annual feast of the newsboys. For weeks before the memorable day the dinner is the one topic of conversation among the little urchins who distribute the news. It is their Horse Show and Charity Ball and opera season rolled into the ecstasy of a single night, and they come from far and near to eat turkey and pie and the other delicacies picked particularly to appeal to their unsophisticated palates.

The dinner last night was given in the building of the Newsboys' Lodging House, at 9 Duane Street, and, as on former occasions, William M. Fleiss of 47 Broadway was the host. Up to 7 o'clock the boys were held in cruel suspense standing in line kept in order by three policemen. They were Park Row "cops," and they knew the little tribe that is struggling to make a living, and they allowed them full swing, short of throwing pies at the dignity of the law.

At 7 o'clock promptly the first of the line was admitted, and there was a wild rush up the broad stone steps into the large hall, where boards had been stretched across horses. The boards were covered with white cloths, and squeezed as closely together as possible were plates bearing immense portions of turkey, big enough to satisfy two ordinary men. Better still, alongside of each plate was a round five-cent apple pie.

As the advance guard rushed in, there was a wild scramble for the pie. Each one tried to pick up every pie in sight, hoping to stick it under his coat for future use. Then it was decided to put a policeman in charge of the pies, and thereafter honesty reigned fairly supreme. The boys ate and ate until they began to grow pale and then they ate more for luck and the principle of it. Turnips went begging, so did potatoes, but huge bowls of tea were emptied, and it was pie, pie, pie.

In the midst of the feast the boys arose and gave three ringing cheers for their host, Mr. Fleiss. He was unable to attend the dinner owing to illness. In all, 500 boys enjoyed the feast.

While these 500 were being feasted down town, 700 other newsboys swooped down on several tons of eatables in Lyric Hall, Sixth Avenue and Forty-second Street, provided by Frank Tilford. It was the third annual dinner given to the boys by Mr. Tilford. They came from Brooklyn and Staten Island and from all quarters of the Bronx to the feast, on which they have learned to look as a steady institution.

Knowing the danger of penning up young America beyond the point of endurance, Sousa's Band was on hand to help the earlier arrivals—and they all were early—to pass away the time.

After the dinner the boys lined up on Sixth Avenue and marched down town. They carried banners with inscriptions to the effect that turkey was "a bore," that eating was "a habit," and that Mr. Tilford was a "darn good fellow." Then they went for the evening papers.

The Christmas distribution of gifts took place at the Newsboys' Home on Saturday night. Every boy received a present of a blue sweater with red or white stripes. Those who had studied hard at the home's night school earned a nice suit of fleece-lined underwear. In addition each lad got a pair of gloves and a warm flannel shirt and stockings. Clement March, a business man of New York, provided the sweaters, shirts, underwear, and gloves for the boys.

J. D. CRIMMINS DONS AN APRON.

With Other Members of His Family He Waits on Old People at Dinner.

John D. Crimmins donned an apron yesterday, and assisted by three of his sons and his daughters, Mary, Constance, Mercedes, and Evelyn, similarly equipped, waited on 260 old people, who partook of a good meal at the home of the Little Sisters of the Poor on East Seventieth Street, between Second and Third Avenues. Fifteen years ago Mr. Crimmins, with the late Joseph O'Donohue and Matthew Byrnes, agreed to share the expense of a Christmas dinner to the inmates of the home of the Little Sisters of the Poor, and it has been given annually ever since. After the dinner Mr. Crimmins presented each of the men with a pipe and a bag of tobacco.

One of the men, Edward Francis Gallagher, is proud of the distinction of having shaken hands with Lafayette; while another, Edward Shea, worked for the father of Mr. Crimmins on the Second Avenue sewer forty years ago. Another guest who received special attention from the Misses Crimmins was Katie Fitzsimmons, who enjoys the sobriquet of "the politician." She is more than one hundred years old, can read without glasses, and enjoys a glass of whisky. She had one yesterday.

SERVICES IN THE CHURCHES.

Elaborate Music and Decorations and Large Congregations.

The Christmas services at the various churches throughout the city yesterday were on the usual elaborate order as regards music and decorations, and were attended by unusually large congregations. The balmy weather, with the sunshine of Spring, caused the feminine portion of the congregations to take on a brilliancy of color that is usually noticed only on Easter Sunday.

Solemn pontifical mass was celebrated at 11 A. M. at St. Patrick's Cathedral. In addition to the regular sittings a thousand chairs had been placed in various parts of the cathedral, and yet a great many people were unable to obtain admittance. The celebrant of the mass was Archbishop Corrigan, and the assistant priest was the Rev. M. J. Lavelle. A half score of other priests took part in the ceremonies. The preacher was the Rev. Thomas F. Burke of the Paulist Fathers. Bishop Brondel of Montana was within the sanctuary. The music was on a scale of more than usual elaborateness. There were a full chorus and orchestra. The decorations were of palms, chrysanthemums, and lilies.

The high celebration at Trinity Church was well attended. The church was beautifully decorated with evergreens and the altar was brilliantly illuminated and decorated with roses and chrysanthemums. The celebrant was the Rev. Dr. J. Nevett Steele, assistant rector of the church, assisted by the two curates, the Revs. Joseph W. Hill and A. D. Wilson. The choir rendered a specially arranged programme. Dr. Steele preached the sermon.

At St. Paul's Chapel holy communion was administered. The sermon was preached by the Rev. W. Montagu Geer.

ALL NATIONS IN THE DANCE.

Costumes of Oriental Lands in the Immigrants' Christmas Carnival.

Ellis Island was the scene of an international celebration of the Christmastide yesterday. Men, women, and children, representative of many nationalities and creeds, all joined in the festivities of the occasion, some through a reverence for the day, while not a few celebrated because the joy of their companions was contagious.

The festivities began at midday dinner, when Caterer Emil Schwab substituted for the regular fare of dates, bread and water a meal of turkey, celery, and coffee. After the dinner there were celebrations in the different "pens," and in one of those in the male quarters there was a dance by the few occupants. Two youthful Syrians, Kaid Orbagi and Josef Kahl, opened the performance with the national step of their country, in which they jumped from each other's shoulders to the floor and back again. It was more like an acrobatic show than a dance. In the pen there was Valentin, an immigrant from an unnamed land, of musical bent. He borrowed a hair comb from one of the guards and played tunes for the dancers.

Joseph Fagoski and Wolf Schwartzka, natives of Galicia, gave the dance peculiar to their country, after which singing and dancing teams of Austria, Russia, Italy, Roumania, and Greece held forth. The performances of the afternoon closed with an elaborate trick act by Hova Alaikana and Kiri Banda, accompanied by their troupe of Cingalese musicians.

In the evening there was a real ball. An attaché of the Immigration Bureau was chief ball manager. Every one who could shake his or her feet danced. The programme that he announced for the dance was: Leader, Salaze Cirli of Austria; Deputy Leader, Mlle. Eidel Shivowitz of Russia. Dances—Round, square, emblematic of local customs of the countries represented by the dancers. Etiquette—Rigid and after the rules established for the government of the island by Assistant Commissioner Mc-Sweeney. Costume—Any color except green, this hue being precluded owing to the fact that there was not on the island a single son or daughter of Erin.

There were the fez of Turkey, the gayly-colored shawls of the Orient, the calico of Germany, and the gaudy finery of France. The music was furnished by Alexandre Roshenian of Armenia, who led on the violin, accompanied by Brahino Assad of Syria on a double-jointed flute and Bela Asiyzlo of Hungary on an instrument that sounded like a Chinese tomtom. Among those present at the dance were Selim Katel Hadad, Yousef Donaliba, and Belkin Chaia, who appeared in a triplicate jig hitherto unknown in this country; Hyne and Kira Banda and Lukou Bodiak of Colombo, Ceylon, who danced a jig which they said won for them many francs at the Paris Exposition last Summer. Mlle. Firge Kraut and Mlle. Zelda Sabelman, the former of Galicia and the latter of Prussia, closed the entertainment with a German folk-lore song, after which a Tower of Babel version of "Home, Sweet Home," was rendered in chorus.

GAY CHRISTMAS AT LAKEWOOD.

Driving Parties, a Drag Hunt, and Indoor Entertainments Amuse Society at the Resort.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Dec. 25.—This has been one of the brightest and happiest of Christmas days in the history of Lakewood. The early morning opened gray, with an occasional flake of snow dropping, but by 10 o'clock a warm sun broke through the clouds and cheered the hearts of thousands of sojourners, who were prepared to enjoy the numerous celebrations in sports and pastimes and indoor entertainments that had been arranged.

At the big Lakewood Hotel several large driving parties made an early start, among them the tally-ho given by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred De Cordova of New York, with their protégée, Miss Georgian Billiogs of Montana, and a party of friends. They drove to the deserted and historical village of Allaire, where they lunched, returning late in the afternoon.

A private drag hunt was a feature of the day. It was given by P. F. Collier, who brought with him ten couples of hounds. Those who rode the entire distance of nine miles were George J. Gould, Miss Greta Pomeroy, Henry Lloyd Herbert, Robert J. Collier, Raymond Herbert, Philip Clark, and the host. The throw-off was at Toms River, finishing here in Lakewood. Following the hunt, the party lunched with Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Herbert in the afternoon.

Col. and Mrs. G. B. M. Harvey of New York gave a dinner party at the Laurel House this evening in the private dining room, covers being laid for ten.

Ex-Secretary and Mrs. Cornelius N. Bliss entertained a number of friends at the Laurel in the Pines, where Senator Dunham was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. Coster of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould gave a Christmas dinner at their Georgian Court home. Among those at table were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lloyd Herbert, Miss Greta Pomeroy, Mrs. Kingdon, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hamilton, and Mr. and Mrs. James Converse.

The employes on the Georgian Court estate also enjoyed a Christmas entertainment to-night especially prepared for them by Mr. and Mrs. Gould, who distributed the presents from a great tree in the lounging room. A dance followed the entertainment.

HANNA LAUDS SALVATION ARM..

Calls the Organization the Kindergarten of Christianity.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 25.—The Salvation Army fed 1,500 poor people to-day in the Grays' Armory. Senator Hanna, who is a stanch friend of the Salvation Army, was present and was greeted with cheers. He made a short speech, in which he said:

"Christmas should be a happy day, consecrated to the highest attainment of true happiness. It should be confined to no class, or sect, but be consecrated to Him who came to earth for all men.

"It is a happy day, made happy by these kind and noble men and women, whom I call practical Christians. I am glad to have occasion to express my appreciation of the Salvation Army. It is the kindergarten of Christianity. It fulfills the needs that other institutions fail to fill. It gives an opportunity to those who have none; it lays the foundation of law and good order; it advances higher civilization, and the City of Cleveland is fortunate in having such a band of Christian workers. This labor, to be entirely successful, should have the support of all good citizens; therefore, my friends, renew your allegiance and give your support to this grand work.

"May God bless all those in this labor, and may we all join in the fulfillment of the higher promise."

The President's Christmas Day.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—The President and Mrs. McKinley had with them as guests at dinner this evening Surgeon General and Mrs. Sternberg, Dr. and Mrs. Rixey, Mrs. O. S. Hiestand, Gen. Corbin, and Secretary and Mrs. Cortelyou. The President did not go to church, but he and Mrs. McKinley took two drives out into the country during the day. Secretary and Mrs. Hay, Postmaster General and Mrs. Smith and Representative Payne of New York called on them.

Little Guests of the Howard Goulds.

PORT WASHINGTON, L. I., Dec. 25.—Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gould entertained 200 children in Liberty Hall to-day. To the little guests, whose ages varied from five to ten years, presents were distributed from a gorgeously decorated Christmas tree, the girls receiving dolls and candies, the boys tin soldiers, drums, and the like. Before the tree was visited, however, everybody ate as much ice cream, cake, candy, and nuts as he wanted, the hosts serving the sweetmeats. One feature of the entertainment was a Punch and Judy show.

Bryan's Greeting to His Friends.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Dec. 25.—William J. Bryan to-day, wiring from Lincoln, Neb., to The Evening Standard, states the following: "Please present greetings to my political friends of Leavenworth and of Kansas. The principles of Democracy still live, and the policies for which the fusion forces fought will yet be vindicated. We can enter the twentieth century with the confident belief that the people will soon return to the teachings of the fathers and to the traditions of the Republic."

Mrs. E.D. Morgan Makes Children Happy.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., Dec. 25.—Mrs. Edwin D. Morgan, at her home at Wheatley Hills, to-day entertained 116 public-school children of the district. Each received a bag containing toys, mittens, shoes, candies, nuts, an orange, and an apple, distributed from a Christmas tree by Mrs. Morgan herself. The children recited and sang songs, and then enjoyed an old-fashioned Christmas dinner. The merrymaking ended with a romp on the lawn.

Miss Helen Gould's Christmas Tree.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Dec. 25.—A big Christmas tree gladdened the hearts of the twenty boys at Woody Crest, the sanitarium Miss Helen Gould maintains, near this place. Miss Gould was not able to be present at the celebration, but last night she drove up with a wagonload of presents for the youngsters. Each boy received a pair of skates, clothing, candy, books, and toys, after which all sat down to a turkey dinner.

DEATH MARS CHRISTMAS GAYETY.

St. Louis Man Drops Dead Beside a Lighted Tree.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 25.—Timothy Bahnsen, President of the T. Bahneen Piano Company, dropped dead by the side of a Christmas tree in the midst of a joyous holiday celebration Monday night, at the home of his brother, John Bahnsen, 1,327 Park Avenue. His body lies in the parlor of his brother's home, and the light of the candles that Monday night shone on the happy faces of a merry family party falls on a group of mourning relatives.

Excitement caused by the burning of tinsel on the tree brought on apoplexy and he fell to the floor. Before a physician arrived he was dead. Instantly the scene of gayety and rejoicing was changed to one of gloom and tears.

THE PARISIANS' CHRISTMAS.

Churches Filled to Overflowing at the Midnight Masses.

PARIS, Dec. 25.—Christmastide was favored in France with bright, cheerful weather, and Parisians celebrated it in characteristic fashion. All the restaurants and cafés were crammed on Christmas Eve with festive supper parties, which did not disperse until early this morning. At midnight masses, with special musical attractions, filled the leading churches to overflowing.

The boulevards to-day were filled with throngs inspecting the attractive little booths which had been erected in continuous lines along both sidewalks, and in which toys, candies, fancy articles, and other Christmas novelties were displayed. A roaring trade, greatly in excess of that of previous years, was done by the booth holders.

The charitable side of the festival was represented by numbers of free meals and seasonable gifts to poor families and outcasts. Mme. Loubet gave 7,000f. to be used for the relief of widows in necessitous circumstances.

WILL START A CAT FARM.

Mrs. Ballington Booth's Scheme to Raise Funds for ex-Convicts' Home.

At the Christmas dinner given yesterday at Hope Hall, the home for ex-convicts established at Flushing by Mrs. Ballington Booth of the Volunteers of America, it was announced that a friend has presented a number of Angora cats to Mrs. Booth and she purposes to breed and sell felines of this race from the benefit of the home.

Last year a friend of the Hope Hall institution presented Mrs. Booth with several chickens of fancy bred strains, and the sale of their eggs and of the chickens themselves have added much to the hall's income.

Surgical Instrument Factory Burned.

CARLSTADT, N. J., Dec. 25.—A. Mollnire's surgical instrument factory at Woodridge was totally destroyed by fire at 9 o'clock this morning. The loss on building and contents will amount to $10,000, on which there was a partial insurance. Forty hands were employed in the factory.

Killed by a Locomotive.

Darius Williams, sixty years old, of 169 Seventh Avenue, while working on the Park Avenue drawbridge at 11 o'clock yesterday morning, was struck by a locomotive. His skull was fractured. Williams was removed to the Harlem Hospital, where he died last night.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., Dec. 25.—A destructive fire in Eau Claire, fifteen miles east of this city, to-day resulted in reducing half the business section into ashes. Total loss, $50,000; partly insured.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 25.—E. P. Yates & Co.'s granary, a five-story brick structure, was gutted by fire this afternoon, causing a loss of about $20,000, which is partially covered by insurance. The fire originated in the basement, and when the firemen arrived the flames had swept up the elevator to the top floor, where were stored 100 tons of hay, and it was three hours before the blaze was under control.

Lawrence, his wife; Helen S. McLean, defendants.

I, the undersigned, duly appointed referee by order of this Court, dated on the 19th day of October, 1900, do hereby require each person not a party to the above-entitled action who, on the 19th day of October, 1900, had a lien upon any undivided share or interest in the property hereinafter described to appear before me, at my office, No. 2 Wall Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on or before the 17th day of January, 1901, to prove his lien and the true amount due, or to become due, to him by reason thereof. The said property is described in the complaint in this action as follows:

All those certain lots, pieces, or parcels of land, with the buildings thereon erected, situate, lying, and being in the Sixteenth Ward of the City of New York, and which taken together are bounded and described as follows: Beginning at the corner formed by the intersection of the southerly line of Twenty-third Street with the easterly line of Seventh Avenue; running thence southerly along the easterly line of Seventh Avenue one hundred and forty-eight feet one and one-half inches; thence easterly at right angles to Seventh Avenue one hundred feet; thence northerly and parallel with Seventh Avenue thirty-nine feet eight and one-half inches; thence easterly at right angles to Seventh Avenue twenty-five feet; thence northerly and parallel with Seventh Avenue nine feet six inches; thence easterly at right angles to Seventh Avenue fifty feet; thence northerly parallel with Seventh Avenue ninety-eight feet six inches to the southerly line of Twenty-third Street, and thence westerly along said southerly line of Twenty-third Street one hundred and seventy-five feet to the point or place of beginning.—Dated New York, Nov. 26, 1900.

AUGUSTUS H. VANDERPOEL, Referee.

EUGENE L. BUSHE, Esq., Attorney for Plaintiffs, 150 Broadway, Manhattan, New York City.

The following is a diagram of the property above described, the street numbers being 215, 217, and 219 Seventh Avenue, and 160, 162, 164, 166, 168, 170, 172, and 174 West Twenty-third Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York.

Dated New York, Nov. 26th, 1900.

NEW YORK SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF New York.—GEORGE A. BARKER and JACOB RERRY, as surviving executors of and trustees under the last will and testament of George Bell, deceased, plaintiffs, against RICHARD KEEF and others, defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above entitled action, bearing date 28th day of November, 1900, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 7th day of January, 1901, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Philip A. Smyth, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land, with the building and improvements thereon erected, situate, lying, and being in the City of New York, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point on the southerly side of One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, in the centre of a party wall, distant two hundred and fifty-two (252) feet three (3) inches westerly from the southwesterly corner of One Hundred and Eighteenth Street and Third Avenue; and running thence southerly, and parallel with Third Avenue and part of the way through the centre of a party wall, one hundred (100) feet eleven (11) inches; thence westerly, and parallel with One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, twenty-five (25) feet; thence northerly, parallel with Third Avenue, one hundred (100) feet and eleven (11) inches to the southerly side of One Hundred and Eighteenth Street; and thence easterly along said southerly side of One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, twenty-five (25) feet to the point or place of beginning.—Dated New York, December 10th, 1900. LEWIS L. DELAFIELD, Referee.

M. M. FRIEND, Attorney for Plaintiffs, No. 11 Pine Street, Borough of Manhattan, New York City.

The following is a diagram of the property to be sold as described above, the street number being No. 158 East 118th Street:

The approximate amount of the lien or charge, to satisfy which the above described property is to be sold, is $17,433 31-100, with interest thereon from 28th day of November, 1900, together with costs and allowances amounting to $545 20-100, with interest from November 28th, 1900, together with the expenses of the sale. The approximate amount of taxes, assessments, or other liens, which are to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money, or paid by the referee, is $2,136 and interest.—Dated New York, December 10th, 1900.

PRISONER IN SORRY PLIGHT.

Declares Seven Policemen Beat Him with Their Nightsticks.

With five ugly contusions on his head, a battered face, and bleeding lips, Vincenzo Romei, twenty-six years old, of 224 East Ninety-seventh Street, scarcely able to stand, was arraigned yesterday morning in the Harlem Police Court on a charge of felonious assault. The arraignment was made by Policemen McGuire and Rosenfeld of the East One Hundred and Fourth Street Station.

Magistrate Brann asked the reason for the prisoner's condition, and the latter explained in broken English that when he was arrested at 1 o'clock in the morning seven policemen had beaten him unmercifully with their nightsticks. He said that he had been arrested under the elevated structure at Ninety-eighth Street and Third Avenue, and that it was so dark that he was unable to identify any of the policemen who assaulted him, but that he could furnish witnesses to the attack. The policeman arraigning the prisoner denied that they struck him.

Romei said that about 4 o'clock yesterday morning he was passing through Ninety-eighth Street, near Third Avenue. This is a negro quarter, and Romei says that he was set upon by a gang of negroes, thrown down, and robbed of $100. He became excited, and in self-defense, he says, fired four shots from a revolver at his assailants. The policemen testified that they saw a crowd scuffling, and, running down, saw Romei dart away and run toward the elevated structure. There he dropped on his knees and fired four shots. Policeman McGuire ran toward the man to arrest him. The Italian arose and, aiming his revolver at the policeman, ordered him to stop. The policeman dodged behind one of the pillars, and Romei ran, followed by McGuire. The Italian in turning a corner slipped and was rendered unconscious by the fall. Then he was arrested.

"It's a shame," said Magistrate Brann, after the policemen had told their stories, "that with 7,500 policemen in New York a prisoner cannot be arrested without being subjected to such a beating as this man has evidently had."

The Magistrate decided, however, to hold Romei in order to allow him to produce his witnesses to the assault upon him by the policemen.

NIXON FIGHTS SYSTEMS ONLY.

This Is What He Says in Further Explaining His Attitude.

Police officials, with the exception of Chief Devery, staid away from headquarters yesterday and the Central Office was as dull as it is on Sunday. The Chief went to his office early in the afternoon, saw a few subordinates and went away.

"This," he said, when asked if he would talk on the police situation, "is no day for discussing such subjects. I'm keeping Christmas and am not talking on any subject."

Chairman Nixon said that in order to avoid misquotation he had prepared this statement:

"This is a day of peace and good will and I do not wish to utter a word against any one. My statement of yesterday was mainly directed against systems. Bi-partisanship is a mistake in police administration, and I am sure that either Commissioner York or Sexton could, with full power, cure existing evils. What has given me the greatest satisfaction is the fact that not a single man in the Tammany organization has attempted to dissuade me, but that from all sources I have received encouragement, advice, and proffered assistance.

"The earnestness of purpose and sincerity of my colleagues on the committee have made our work harmonious to a degree seldom seen. As a protection to life and property the police of New York are unsurpassed, and it is a great injustice to the efficient body of men that a system of protection which enriches a few should lessen the pride and confidence we should have in the police force."

Mr. Nixon added that so far the Committee of Five had had no relations with the Committee of Fifteen.

FUND FOR MISSIONS.

American Board for Foreign Missions Wants $250,000 Contributed.

Samuel B. Capen of Boston and D. Willis James of this city, President and Vice President of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, have issued an appeal to the friends of the work of foreign missions to contribute to the Twentieth Century Fund of $250,000 to be collected for the benefit of the board. The necessity of a permanent fund is due to the variation each year in the amount of legacies left for its use.

The gifts from the living, it has been found from an experience of ninety years, practically maintain a certain average, but bequests by will are an uncertain quantity. Nearly $250,000 was bequeathed in 1892, in 1895 $147,000, in 1898 $187,000, and in 1899 $102,000. This fund will be set aside, and will be drawn upon only when a falling off in the legacies demands it. Assurances of $50,000 in subscriptions have been received.

MAGISTRATE IN GLOOMY MOOD.

Damped with Pessimistic Utterances Joy of Couple Who Would Marry.

Both were Hebrews, and yet they had chosen Christmas morning for their marriage. They were smiling and happy looking when they entered the Essex Market Police Court to have the Magistrate complete their bliss. But there was a hitch.

The Magistrate refused to marry them. He told them that they would look upon their union as a thing more sacred if they were united by one of their own faith. For some reason the Magistrate even went further. He grew pessimistic. He pictured to the smiling pair the misery and sorrow he daily saw passing before him borne on the shoulders of ill-mated couples. He declared that he did not want to shoulder the responsibility of marrying any one on Christmas morning. He threw cold water on the scheme in such quantities that the sweethearts finally said, still cheerful, that they agreed with him cordially.

Then they went away arm in arm in search of a rabbi.

Julius Bohm Not a Bankrupt.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Under the heading of "Petitions in Bankruptcy" I notice you have used the name of Julius Bohm as having been connected with Rudolph Bohm in the bankruptcy of the firm of Bohm Brothers of East Houston Street, as having failed with $73,000 liabilities, and as having applied for a discharge from his obligations. Now, I beg to state that this is an error, as Julius Bohm never went into bankruptcy, and the party you refer to is Joseph Bohm.

Still Greater Reductions

Our Fall and Winter stock this year was unusually large, exceptionally fine in quality, style and fit, and, through our reorganization sale, exceedingly low in price.

These most favorable conditions have naturally brought to us the largest business of our fifty years' experience, and now we purpose offering broken lines resulting from this broad selling at still greater reductions in price.

First offering consists of Special Sale of the New "Erect Form" W. B. Corsets!

In addition to the Great Sale of Underwear we will offer a special in the new "Erect Form" W. B. Corsets. These Corsets have met with such popular favor that the factories could not supply the demands. The manufacturers had on hand materials of Imported French Coutil in Blue, Pink and Lavender, with mottled designs all over. We had them make them up in this popular corset, and will offer them for sale to-day and while they last at the extraordinary price of 98c and 1.98 Each.

The sizes run from 18 to 26 only, and the actual value of these goods ranges from 2.50 to 5.00 pair. Don't miss this sale.

THE PROPOSED TAX LAW

Chamber of Commerce Committee Advocates Radical Changes.

REPORT FAVORS LOCAL OPTION

Would Exempt Mortgages and Reduce the Assessment on Capital Invested in Banking.

Local option in taxation is proposed by the Committee on State and Municipal Taxation of the Chamber of Commerce as a remedy for some of the evils of the present tax law in this State. The report is signed by Messrs George F. Seward, Charles S. Fairchild, Alexander E. Orr, John Ifarsen Rhoades, and Clarence H. Kelsey, and publicity is given to the plan so that if it is approved at the next meeting of the Chamber of Commerce the tax bill proposed can be presented to the Legislature early in January.

The report shows the many difficulties in the way of having adopted any tax law, and cites the failures of legislative commissions after exhaustive researches to find a remedy for the existing inequalities in the tax system. The theory of the original enactment known as the general property tax law, is that all property, real and personal, not exempt, should be taxed at a uniform rate. This theory of equal taxation is shown by the report to have resulted at the outset in unequal taxation. This has caused an extraordinary condition, according to the report, which says, among other things:

"All real estate is taxed. Some of it bears a double burden. But as respects personal property, the exemptions made mainly to prevent double taxation go so far that, perhaps, not more than 5 per cent. of the total is taxed at all. It is said that it is the personal property of women and children which is surely taxed, while the business man and investor can so adjust his affairs as to go free from the direct incidence of all taxation."

The right to reduce or suspend taxation in order to promote the introduction of industries or prevent their removal, should be permitted. The report also says that by reason of the conditions growing out of New York laws other States "are continually drawing capital and industries from our State."

DANGERS ARE FORESEEN.

The danger of granting power to local legislators is outlined, and "that some property will be relieved from taxation for political ends, that other property will not be relieved for the same reason, that corruption will result," is foreseen.

"The answer in the report to this criticism is that under the present system such dangers exist, and that to refuse to the Legislature to apply just tax laws is more disastrous than local failure. Also "that it is wiser to run some risk of the proper working of a system which is calculated to give good results than to the working of a system which is inherently vicious." The report continues, as follows:

"This city of ours is imperial in magnitude. It contains one-seventh of all the people of the Nation, and a far larger proportion of the wealth of the Nation. Surely government in America has come to a sad pass if we cannot make our Administration somewhat worthy of the metropolis. No one questions the quality of the Supervisors in the counties. Why not have faith?"

The bill proposed has been printed to Wheeler H. Peckham, Samuel B. Clarke, and George W. Wickersham, and nothing has been found in it "which runs counter to Constitutional provisions."

The new tax law suggested provides for a return to be made to the State Tax Commissioners of the gross revenue of each tax district in the State, the return to show the sum collected from each class of taxable property, the County Tax Commissioners to assess for State taxes on the returns made for each county or tax district. The most important enactment proposed is:

"That the local governing bodies may declare what property now taxable shall be free from taxation, or subject to taxation at a reduced rate."

Local governing bodies are not authorized to tax any interest that is now exempt or to levy taxes which are not now authorized by law. One of the first results which the Chamber of Commerce committee claims would come from the passage of the tax law would be the exemption of mortgages from taxation in many of the tax districts, which would probably spread over the entire State. The report then continues:

"This would lift from the people a burden which is equal to perhaps 1 per cent. annually of the entire mortgage debt on individually owned real estate in the Commonwealth. The loss of revenue occasioned would be inconsiderable. The saving to the people would be enormous."

BANKS ARE ASSESSED TOO HIGH.

The report also holds that banks are assessed too high. On this subject the report reads:

"Banks are taxed on their shares at their assessed value, and get no benefit from the exemptions for non-taxable securities contained in the law. It is stated authoritatively that in recent year assessments ranged from 10 to 119 per cent. of capital, surplus fund, and undivided profits; that the banks paid in taxes in the same year one-third of their net earnings; that this taxation was sometimes five times as much as that imposed on other invested capital, and that in interior towns generally the amounts so collected averaged locally from 28 to 76 per cent. of all the personal taxes collected.

"It must be true, in view of these facts, that capital is not invested freely in banking enterprises in our State, that some places are deprived of all banking facilities, and that the banks which do exist cannot render banking facilities in loans and currency issues in normal measure and at normal cost.

"The bill offered by your committee would enable the several political divisions to determine how far relief should be extended."

Under the proposed law the City of New York would be one tax district, with the power in the hands of the Municipal Assembly to regulate what amount of assessment in proportion of the actual value should be placed on real estate and what should be placed on personal property. Each city, county, or village having a board of assessors or an officer or officers authorized to assess property for taxation for State and other purposes is made a "tax district."

"Gross revenue" is used as a term to designate the total sum of money received by any tax district for public purposes. It does not include assessments for local improvements, money borrowed, money received as interest or held in trust or revenue from the sale of water, gas, or electricity or other services.

A change is also made in the method of levying and collecting State taxes. Under the proposed new law the State Board of Apportionment is given the power to ascertain the percentage of State tax each county shall pay and direct the local officials to make assessments and collect the taxes.

Under the proposed system the State Board would be able to show what amount is paid in taxes for any and all classes of real and personalty. The Chamber of Commerce committee is of the opinion that great reforms would result from this system of local taxation.

AMERICANS WIN IN GUATEMALA.

Get Possession of the State Railroad Against Strong Competition by Foreigners.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 26.—American capitalists have won a signal victory in Guatemala, according to a letter from United States Minister W. Godfrey Hunter, to his son in Louisville. Without any cash consideration whatever and in the face of strong competition from French, English, and German syndicates, the Central American Improvement Company, a Massachusetts corporation, comes into possession of the State Railroad of Guatemala, known as the Guatemalan Railroad.

The railroad extends a distance of 135 miles from Porto Barrios Rancho. The company agrees to extend the road at once from El Rancho to Guatemala City, a distance of sixty-five miles, at its own expense. It is given a lease upon the road for ten years, with all revenue from all sources. At the expiration of ten years the Government of Guatemala reserves the privilege of taking possession of the road by the payment of the cost of the sixty-five-mile extension, which Minister Hunter estimates at $4,000,000. Minister Hunter adds that it is almost a certainty that at the end of ten years the Government will not be able to buy the railroad at that price, and that it will become the exclusive property of the American company.

Under Government management the railroad has not paid expenses, and has been a serious burden. Minister Hunter says there are abundant traffic possibilities, and that with the extension to Guatemala the earning power will be greatly increased. Even if given up at the end of ten years the investment will prove a rich one, but the prospect that the ownership will become absolute for the cost of the extension makes it in the nature of a gold mine.

The victory over the foreign houses which struggled for the concession was achieved more by diplomacy than by any other cause, and it also illustrates the friendly feeling which exists between Guatemala and the United States.

INVITED HERE BY MARK TWAIN.

The Author Wants Friend in Colorado to Visit Him—How the Two Missed a Fortune in 1863.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Col., Dec. 26.—Judge Adair Wilson of the State Court of Appeals has received an invitation from his old friend Mark Twain to visit him in New York City.

"I would come to see you," writes Mr. Twain, "but I have decided never again to attempt a long journey on land. I like to ride on water, but my land journeys are over. Come and let us talk over old times."

Judge Wilson and Mark Twain were for years prominently identified with Virginia City, Nevada. They were city editors upon rival newspapers, and it was while working on the newspaper as city editor and reporter combined that Twain gathered together the inimitable stories of life in a mining camp of the far West that helped to make his name known throughout the world.

"It was in 1863, in the height of the civil war, when gold was selling at 200 per cent. and moving upward, that Twain and I both missed a fortune," said Judge Wilson today. "The Comstock lode was at that time creating great excitement in all the speculative circles of the United States. A party of miners made Twain and myself an offer of a third interest in property which brought $300,000 when put on the market, but we both declined."

J.D.ROCKEFELLER'S GUESTS ILL

Two Children of Harold McCormick Down With Scarlet Fever.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Dec. 26.—Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCormick, who are spending the holidays at Boxwood, the country seat of John D. Rockefeller, at Pocantico Hills, in Westchester County, are depressed in spirits over the illness of their two children, aged two and four. They are suffering with scarlet fever, and on Christmas Day their condition was serious. Tonight a bulletin issued by the Rockefellers stated that the children were out of danger.

Mrs. McCormick was Miss Edith Rockefeller, an heiress to millions. She was married to Mr. McCormick, who is the son of Cyrus Hall McCormick, a multimillionaire, on Nov. 26, 1895. Dr. Gutiant, who is attending the McCormick children, has isolated them in a room on the second floor of the Rockefeller mansion, where their wants are looked after by two trained nurses. Every precaution has been taken to prevent a spread of the disease, and the house is practically quarantined. Servants go about the house with solemn faces and on tiptoe, and the front door bell has been muffled.

AFTER J. D. ROCKEFELLER AGAIN

Another Requisition from Gov. Sayers —Gov. Roosevelt's Reply.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Dec. 26.—Gov. Sayers made another application to Gov. Roosevelt of New York a few days ago for the extradition of John D. Rockefeller and other members of the Standard Oil Company to answer to the charge of violating the Texas anti-trust law pending against them in the District Court of McLennan County.

County Attorney Cullen F. Thomas, who presented the application to Gov. Roosevelt, is in receipt of a letter from the latter in which he declines to grant the application for the extradition of the accused parties. Gov. Roosevelt says that he would be pleased to grant the application if it were shown conclusively that the alleged fugitives from justice were in Texas at the time of the alleged commission of the crime.

"WATCH MEETING" IN CHICAGO

It Promises to be the Biggest Event of Its Kind in the Country.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—Word was received here early to-day that, as the New York Red Cross meetings had been abandoned, the strongest forces at the command of the American National Society would be directed toward making its Chicago "watch night" meeting at the Coliseum the principal event of the kind in the country.

Greetings from many persons in other countries were received on the belated steamers that arrived in New York Monday. Among these were reviews of the progress of civilization of the world during the nineteenth century and prophetic outlines for the new century from Zola, Dreyfus, Sara Bernhardt, Edwin Arnold, Hall Caine, Nikola Tesla, J. K. Jerome, and Israel Zangwill. The sealed packets containing copies of these greetings are being rushed out to different parts of the country in time to reach the most distant points by New Year's Eve.

The chorus of fifty voices for the Coliseum meeting next Monday night is engaged in daily rehearsal of the patriotic songs of various nations.

Canadian Pacific Not in Combination.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Dec. 26.—T. G. Shaughnessy, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, was shown to-day New York newspaper articles asserting that a combination is under way by which the Canadian Pacific, Northern Pacific, Erie, and Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul would work in harmony, thus forming a new line from New York to Vancouver.

"While there is the very best of feeling," said Mr. Shaughnessy, "between all the roads mentioned and the Canadian Pacific, there is no combination of any kind. The roads mentioned may work more harmoniously in the future than in the past, as it is in their interests to do, but there is no truth in the story of a combination and a new transcontinental railway."

Faster than Ever to California.
Every day in the year the Overland Limited leaves Chicago 6.30 P. M. via the shortest route, Chicago and Northwestern, Union and Southern Pacific Railways, and arrives San Francisco 8:45 P. M. third day. Best of everything. Double drawing room sleeping cars, buffet, library car, (with barber,) and dining cars. Full information at Northwestern Line Office, 461 Broadway.—Adv.

MORE BRITISH CAPTURED?

Squadron of Yeomanry Reported to Have Been Entrapped.

THE LOYALISTS LESS UNEASY

But the Disturbed Area of Cape Colony Is Apparently Larger Than a Year Ago.

CAPETOWN, Dec. 26.—A squadron of yeomanry which had been following the Boers from Britstown is reported to have been entrapped.

It is said that there were several casualties and that the remainder of the force was captured.

Gen. Kitchener has left Naauwpoort and gone northward.

The rapid concentration of troops in the disturbed districts, through the personal energy of Lord Kitchener, has allayed the loyalists' uneasiness.

ZEERUST, Transvaal, Dec. 24.—The Boers have captured two wagons containing Christmas luxuries destined for the camp of Lord Methuen.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—The paucity and obscurity of the dispatches from South Africa give rise to renewed anxiety. Apparently the disturbed area of Cape Colony extends further south than it did last December, and Lord Kitchener does not appear to have had much success as yet in driving back the invaders.

The War Office had received no news last evening of the reported capture of Yeomanry near Britstown.

A Burgherrsdorp dispatch has a mysterious reference to "an unfortunate mistake of the enemy for Brabant's Horse," which resulted in the sounding of "Cease fire" and enabled the Boers to occupy all the commanding positions, the British retiring from a difficult predicament.

Gen. Clements's success against the Boers in the Magalies Berg region is also doubtful, the last dispatch reporting that "it was considered advisable not to force the Boers from their positions."

The British press continues in the main optimistic, but the condition of affairs brings home the enormous difficulties that will face Lord Kitchener in patrolling and policing such immense tracts of country, even when the Boers shall be finally subdued.

The Daily Mail, which makes a strong appeal to the Government to "face the facts and send Lord Kitchener more troops," says:

"There is a real risk in being lulled to sleep by carefully censored messages."

A dispatch from London on Tuesday night said that Lord Kitchener, telegraphing to the War Office, under date of Naauwpoort, Dec. 24, 9 A. M., reported:

"Thorneycroft's Mounted Infantry have occupied Britstown without opposition. The Boers retired to the north in the direction of Prieska. They will be followed up."

MAORIS TO FIGHT THE BOERS.

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Dec. 27.—The sixth contingent of New Zealanders, 200 strong, half being Maoris, will sail for South Africa in three weeks.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—The decision to include Maoris in the New Zealand contingent is extremely interesting, as at the beginning of the war the Government promised not to employ blacks.

CONCILIATORY PROCLAMATION.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Lord Kitchener, according to a dispatch from Johannesburg, has issued a proclamation, dated Pretoria, Dec. 20, announcing that burghers who voluntarily surrender will be allowed to live with their families in the Government laagers until such time as guerrilla warfare has sufficiently abated to admit of their returning in safety to their homes.

The proclamation also promises that all property and stock brought in at the time of surrender will be respected and paid for if requisitioned by the military authorities.

BRITISH PRESSING DE WET.

MASERU, Basutoland, Dec. 24.—The British are pressing Commandant De Wet in the Ladybrand district.

Lord Roberts at Madeira.

FUNCHAL, Madeira, Dec. 26.—The steamer Canada, with Lord Roberts on board, arrived here last evening, receiving a salute of nineteen guns on entering the port. An official reception was tendered to the Field Marshal by the authorities to-day, and at noon he started for Gibraltar.

HUNGRY WOLF ROAMS CHICAGO.

Follows a Man Home and Is Shot At, but Escapes.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—Within the limits of Chicago, and scarcely ten miles from the City Hall, a bold and hungry wolf roams at night. Emboldened by hunger, the wolf is reported to have invaded Elmwood Cemetery, a mile west of the city, and to have dug part way to a coffin before being discovered and driven away.

Among those who have seen the animal and are willing to give it credit for remarkable cunning are F. Marwood and Otto Longfield. Mr. Marwood chased it out of his yard with a rifle, and admits he was unable to hit it.

The next day the beast followed Longfield to his home. Procuring a shotgun, Longfield stealthily went out to meet and slay the hungry animal. At the same time he heard a commotion in his poultry house. Before he could get there the wolf had taken a fowl and was barely visible in the darkness, a gray streak speeding away toward the woods. The farmer fired, without success.

NEW CO-OPERATIVE SYSTEM.

Socialists Will Invite Millionaires to Become Stockholders.

A new style of co-operation was decided on last night at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Co-operative Brotherhood, in 156 East Fifty-second Street, in which it is to be joined by a smaller body known as the Co-operative Association. The Co-operative Brotherhood is made up of about 500 Socialists.

According to the new plan millionaires can become shareholders in the enterprise. An appeal addressed to philanthropists and workingmen was decided on "for the purpose of encouraging people to secure their own supplies daily."

Notwithstanding the fact that the Co-Operative Brotherhood proposes to do away with the capitalistic system, men like Andrew Carnegie or John D. Rockefeller or J. Pierpont Morgan will be eligible as shareholders, but will not have any more voting power than the working people.

Standard Seamless Tube Plant Sold.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 26.—The National Tube Company has closed a deal for the plant of the Standard Seamless Tube Company, Ellwood City, Penn., for $500,000. This includes ten acres of land and a plant with a capacity of sixty-five tons of finished steel tubes per day. The services of R. C. Steifel, who invented all the machinery sold to the Shelby Steel Tube Company, and has since improved on the inventions, go with the deal. This places the National Tube Company in competition with the Shelby Steel Tube Company.

Survivor of Maine Disaster Married.

PADEREWSKI REPORTED KILLED

The Famous Piano Player Said to Have Fought a Duel—The Story Not Verified.

A report was currently circulated last night at the Metropolitan Opera House that I. J. Paderewski, the Polish pianist, had been killed during a duel, which was said to have been fought on a small island in the Seine River, near the city of Sevres.

A thorough investigation of the report in Paris and London was made, but no confirmation of such a duel having taken place could be obtained.

PARIS, Dec. 27—5 A. M.—Inquiries in quarters most likely to be correctly informed on the subject show that nothing is known in Paris to justify the report circulated in the United States that M. Ignace Paderewski, the pianist, has been killed in a duel in France.

BANK IN RECEIVER'S HANDS.

Old Town Bank of Baltimore Cannot Meet Liabilities—Charged Against the Cashier.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 26.—Another Baltimore bank has closed its doors. Judge Stockbridge to-day, with the consent of the President and officers of the Old Town Bank, appointed Roger T. Gill of the law firm of N. Rufus Gill & Sons receiver of the institution. Mr. Gill gave bond in the sum of $1,500,000, twice the value of the assets of the bank.

George Schilling, a stockholder and depositor, and Robert L. Gill, a depositor, were the complainants. In their statement to the court they state:

"While the bank, until a recent period, has done a successful and profitable business, it has recently incurred heavy losses by the bad faith of its cashier, Theodore F. Wilcox, in that, without authority, he wrongfully, without the knowledge of its President or Board of Directors, permitted Isaac Robinson and the United Milk Producers' Association to draw from the bank large sums of money, and incurred losses thereby which the bank is unable to bear.

"Rumors affecting the financial condition of the bank are in circulation, in consequence of which large sums of money have been withdrawn by depositors, and it is a question of but a short time when the bank will be compelled to close its doors. The bank is unable to pay its liabilities in the usual course of business, and unless a receiver is appointed it will result in a struggle to keep the doors of the bank open and depositors will suffer loss."

The answer, filed by President E. G. Shipley, is as follows: "The bank admits that by reason of the facts stated in the bill of complaint it is no longer able to meet its current obligations, and believing that it ought not to further undertake to continue to do business, but that its assets should be held for the mutual benefit of all persons interested, it consents to the appointment of a receiver or receivers, as prayed."

Both the firms mentioned in the bill of complaint are in receivers' hands.

The bank was chartered by special act of the Legislature in 1858. Its authorized capital was $150,000. The officers and Directors are: President—E. G. Shipley; Cashier—Theodore F. Wilcox; Directors—William H. B. Fusselbaugh, E. G. Shipley, Charles W. Hatter, Daniel Donnelly, N. Rufus Gill, Jacob W. Hook, J. Henry Snyder, and George Schilling.

The condition of the bank at the close of business Sept. 5 was as follows:

RESOURCES.—Loans and discounts, $912,-158.55; overdrafts, secured, $20,315.11; stocks, securities, &c., $60,065.36; banking house, furniture, and fixtures, $46,000; other real estate and mortgages owned, $2,563.54; due from National banks, $99,715.76; due from State banks, $14,-123.28; checks and other cash items, $54,241.22; exchanges for Clearing House, $43,639.21; money in bank, $80,856.05. Total, $1,335,093.38.

LIABILITIES.—Capital stock paid in, $150,000; surplus fund, $150,000; undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid, $14,934.80; due to National banks, $17,227.55; due to State banks, $3,156.07; due to private banks and bankers, $38,349.68; dividends unpaid, $1,465.61; individual deposits subject to check, $909,645.89; demand certificates of deposit, $5,369.63; certified checks, $20,218.15; cashier's checks outstanding, $15,000. Total, $1,335,093.38.

The United Milk Producers' Association, a company owned by farmers and dairymen who ship milk to this market, went into a receiver's hands in September. Its assets and liabilities were approximately $200,000. The Old Town Bank held considerable of the company's paper, and Mr. Wilcox, its cashier, was appointed co-receiver. At a meeting of the unsecured creditors to-day it was decided to continue business under plans submitted several days ago by a finance committee of the stockholders.

At a recent meeting of the creditors of Isaac Robinson, a canned goods packer and fertilizer manufacturer, a preliminary statement submitted by the receivers showed liabilities of $836,252.89 and assets $712,-965.89. Efforts are being made to form a stock company to take over Mr. Robinson's business.

It was stated by one of the bank Directors to-night that the paper of the two concerns held by the bank approximated $180,000. Receiver Gill said that, in his opinion, from a cursory examination, there were sufficient funds on hand or secured to pay dollar for dollar to depositors.

Thirty or more stockholders and depositors applied for a co-receiver to-night, and Judge Stockbridge signed an order requiring the officers of the bank to show cause to-morrow why a co-receiver should not be appointed.

THE OTHER BALTIMORE FAILURES.

Additional Receivers of the Economy Savings Bank Appointed.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 26.—Three Baltimore banks embarrassed breaks the splendid record of sixty-five years without a bank failure in this city. The appointment of a receiver for the Old Town Bank, following upon the failure of the American National Bank and the Economy Savings Bank, has caused a tremendous sensation in financial circles. Crowds of excited depositors stood in front of the Economy Bank all day.

Thomas R. Clendinen and William Colton were to-day appointed co-receivers with D. L. Brinton of the Economy Savings Bank. The co-receivers are required to give $250,000 bond. There are some 3,000 depositors, and the deposits aggregate $340,000.

The Directors of the American National Bank held a meeting to consider the status of the bank and plans for rehabilitating it. No statement was issued. Temporary Receiver Aldrich is still examining the affairs of the bank, and it will probably be several days before he will be ready to submit a report to the Controller.

A call of the Controller for an assessment of 25 per cent. upon the stock would indicate that the capital stock and surplus of the institution has been wiped out. But it is not thought that depositors will lose.

REPLEVINS WEDDING PRESENTS.

Wife Refuses to Give Up Property, So Husband Goes to Law.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—Wedding presents and personal property secured from his wife on a writ of replevin by Robert K. Coble of Evanston mark a variation from the ordinary method of settling domestic difficulties. His wife, Coble says, refused to yield up any of the family possessions, and he applied for a writ of replevin, which was served Saturday night.

The property regained by Coble is valued at $8,000, and consists of collections of stamps, coins, and minerals; Japanese swords, Damascus blades, cut glass, Bohemian vases of antique pattern, relics from India, Sefu bowls and vases by Makuze Kozan, manufactured in the seventeenth century. A library is also included containing 4,000 volumes and valued at $6,000.

VANDERBILT FAMILY MAY INVEST IN GAS

Senator Depew Has Advised Buying Stock in Chicago Concern.

RUINOUS WAR HAS ENDED

Members of Flower & Co. Would Not Be Surprised If Vanderbilt Interests Controlled People's Gas Company.

Is the younger generation of the Vanderbilts going into other than railway investments?

Wall Street has been discussing reports that some conspicuous members of the family are to undertake or go into gas-making enterprises in the larger cities of the country. One rumor is that Alfred Vanderbilt is to invest some of his fortune in Chicago and elsewhere in gas projects. It is impossible to get any confirmation of these reports, but that interests closely related to the Vanderbilts are making such investments is not disguised.

While frequently reported that the gas war in Chicago had been settled, it was never officially announced until yesterday, when Senator Chauncey M. Depew stated to a reporter for THE NEW YORK TIMES that he had himself brought the settlement about and that it was of such a character that wars of the same kind between conflicting interests would be impossible in the future. Senator Depew says that he is and has been a large holder of People's Gas stock and that as "the largest custodian of other people's property in the United States," he has advised his clients to invest in the stock, believing, he says, that it is one of the surest paying 6 per cent. properties in the country, especially since he has succeeded in bringing the conflicting interests together.

"It was while I was in Chicago just before the close of the campaign," said Senator Depew, "that the opposition to Mr. Yerkes was brought directly to my attention in a forcible way. I investigated the matter and expressed the belief that it was nonsense to carry on this war of extermination any longer. Money of stockholders and bondholders was being wasted, and when I said that the interests ought to be reconciled I was told that it was impossible to get them together. I replied that I never saw the time when conflicting interests could not be harmonized if the right means were used. Out of that grew the negotiations, and there will be no more wars between Chicago gas interests.

"I have been a stockholder of Chicago Gas for some time, believing it to be one of the best properties in the country and one of the best managed. During last year, on a further examination of present conditions and the future possibilities of the company, I advised several of my clients who invest on my suggestion to put the stock in their boxes as one of the surest and most certain 6 per cent. securities I knew of.

"It has not only its present business, which is excellent, but the possibilities coming with the growth of Chicago are practically limitless. I am not a Director in the company, but on examining it as an investor and the interests of my friends similarly situated and hearing on all sides of the differences of the company with other interests, I advised a settlement by compromise concessions on all sides.

"I am happy to say that the negotiations resulted in the various interests getting together and adjusting their differences upon a basis which makes the People's Gas Company one of the sure and stable properties of the country. I think that the management is able and conservative, and that having harmonized the differences with conflicting interests, they will also succeed in satisfying their customers and the public so as to be free in the future from the raids they have been subject to in the past.

"I think I may say that I am to-day the largest custodian of other people's property in the United States. The clients of mine trust me absolutely and allow me to do what I please with their affairs. I have advised and made many large investments in People's Gas, and I may say that my advice has been taken by very large investors, who, now that the differences are over, want no safer investment than this stock offers. I am naturally not at liberty to tell who my clients are, but they are well known."

"As to Chicago itself," said Senator Depew in answer to a question on that subject, "there has been an effort making to attract capital there, not to frighten it away, as has been done. I found that the big men of the city had become alarmed at the reports that had gone abroad to the effect that Chicago was not a safe place in which to invest, and that it was inadvisable to start great corporations there, from the attacks that had been made on them in the Council. The solid men of the city have gotten together to have a stop put to this, and the City Council has been brought to its senses. I believe to-day that Chicago offers greater opportunities than any city in the country outside of New York for manufacturing. Its growth is destined to be enormous and its resources are practically limitless. Its railroad and shipping facilities make this certain."

Senator Depew was asked if he knew of any contemplated changes in the Directorate of the company consequent upon the purchases made of the stock. He replied that he was not a Director and that he knew nothing of what might be done in that direction.

A member of the firm of Flower & Co. was asked if he had any knowledge of a change in the People's Gas Directorate.

"I don't know anything positive about it," he said. "There have been a lot of rumors, but that is all."

"Do you know if the Vanderbilt interests will be represented on the board?" was asked.

"No; I don't," was the reply; "but I wouldn't be surprised to find them in control."

THE CHICAGO GAS WAR.

Arguments in Hyde Park Citizens' Suit Against the People's Company Ended.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—Arguments in the suit of Hyde Park citizens against the People's Gas Light and Coke Company were closed to-day before Judge Dunne. The bill asks the Court to restrain the gas company from charging more than 72 cents a thousand feet for fuel gas in the Hyde Park district.

Near the close of the argument a heated discussion was engaged in by attorneys of both sides, the contention being made by the gas company's counsel that the plaintiffs were basing their arguments on two bills. The attorneys for the gas consumers insisted that the basis of argument was on the fact that the gas company was liable for the contract imposed upon the old Mutual Gas Company, which the consolidated company assumed when the Mutual was merged into the corporation under the Consolidation act.

Judge Dunne will give his decision in ten days. Pending this the gas company is restrained from removing meters or from collecting the dollar rate.

Electrical Expert Moore Dead.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Dec. 26.—Former Councilman William H. Moore, aged forty-six years, died at his home on West Sixth Street this noon after an illness of six weeks with typhoid fever. He served two terms in the Common Council. Mr. Moore was an electrical expert, and was associated for a long time with Thomas A. Edison. He made several trips abroad for Mr. Edison, one of them being to Japan to secure peth from a jointless reed for a filament in an incandescent lamp bulb. Mr. Moore was borne near Rahway. He leaves a wife and one daughter.

WOMAN GAGGED BY BURGLARS.

Mrs. Slater Was Compelled to Witness the Looting of Her Own Home.

Mrs. Mary Slater of 682 East One Hundred and Seventy-third Street was a silent spectator while her home was robbed in broad daylight by two daring burglars.

Mrs. Slater was a spectator because she was bound so securely that she could not get away, and she was silent because she was gagged so effectually that she could scarcely breathe.

The police are looking for two short, thick-set, heavily bearded men, who, after robbing the house, left Mrs. Slater lying helpless on the floor, where she was found some time later by her younger sisters.

Mrs. Slater was in her home alone on Monday afternoon, when she heard some one walking about in the parlor. Going in to see who was there she found two men, who had evidently entered by a window.

She started to scream, but the men immediately grabbed her, covered her mouth up with their hands, and bore her to the floor. One held here there while another drew a piece of heavy twine from his pocket and tied her feet together. He next tied her hands together behind her back, and then picking up a soft cushion, forced it into her mouth. He then passed a piece of cord around her neck and tied it in place. It gagged her so effectually that she had great difficulty in breathing.

Leaving her lying on the floor, the burglars ransacked the house from top to bottom with the greatest deliberation.

They secured $35 in money and about $30 worth of clothes, and left after giving a parting glance at Mrs. Slater to see that she was bound securely.

About an hour later Rose and Annie Hoey, six and nine years old, respectively, sisters of Mrs. Slater, who had been playing on the sidewalk a few blocks away, tried to get into their house. They found the front door locked, and after ringing the bell repeatedly without any effect, they went down the cellar steps and up into the kitchen from the basement.

Their screams when they found their sister bound and gagged on the parlor floor soon attracted the attention of neighbors, who released Mrs. Slater. A doctor was called in and succeeded in reviving her.

The burglary was reported to the police of the Tremont Avenue station. Mrs. Slater says that she would recognize the men anywhere.

SUIT FOR $20,000,000.

Sixteen Children to Bring Action Against Their Father and Uncle Over St. Louis Real Estate.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 26.—A suit involving the title to $20,000,000 worth of the most valuable and fashionable residence property in St. Louis will be brought in about a week against J. Charles Cabanne and his brother, Sarpy Carr Cabanne, by their sixteen children.

It is contended that the defendants broke the provisions of their father's will when they disposed of the estate. It is claimed that the will provides that the estate must be held intact until the children of J. Charles and Sarpy Cabanne are of age, when it is to be divided among them, provided that the children had not consented to the sale of the estate or any part thereof.

Forty acres of forest park, owned by the city, Westmoreland and Portland Places, part of Westminster Place and McPherson Avenue, occupied by the wealthiest families of the city, are included. One of the most prominent lawyers of New York has been retained as chief counsel, though his name is withheld for the present. The attorneys are to receive half, or $10,000,000, if the case is won.

LONG SEARCH ENDS IN GRIEF.

St. Louis Man, Who for Ten Years Sought His Daughter, Finds Her Body in the Morgue.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 26.—After ten years of anxious search, and almost weekly visits to the Morgue, Ernest Haars, a contractor and builder, of 12 Shaw Place, found his daughter cold in death on a slab to-day. After a disagreement with her father, Miss Haars left her home, saying that she would take care of herself, and that he need never expect to see her again. She kept her word, and diligent inquiry and search failed to disclose her whereabouts. Occasionally the father would hear indirectly that she had been seen in the city by some old friend, but her abode could never be located.

Whenever an unknown woman was taken to the Morgue Mr. Haars would visit the place to see if it was his daughter, and to prevent her burial in the Potter's Field in an unmarked grave. He would never reveal his identity to the officials in charge, saying that it would be time enough if he should be so unfortunate as to find his missing offspring there.

Christmas day a woman known as Mrs. Rose Maddox, employed as a dishwasher at the Moser Hotel, dropped dead and was taken to the Morgue, where her body awaited identification. Mr. Haars went there to-day, and identified the body as that of his daughter. She had kept her promise. The father wept when he saw the body, and his grief was pitiable. The body was removed to the Haars residence, and will be buried from there to-morrow afternoon.

CASE AGAINST VALET DROPPED.

C. L. Buckl of This City Had Charged His Man with Theft.

Special to The New York Times.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 26.—Philip Brown of New York, valet for Charles L. Buckl, a lumberman of that city, was in court to-day to answer to a charge of larceny of several bottles of champagne made by his master. When the case was called Attorney McSperry of New Jersey, was present to prosecute Brown.

Before the hearing began, however, it was ascertained that Brown had summoned as witnesses Mrs. Buckl and a number of women, and to prevent embarrassing them the proceedings were dropped. Brown was arrested on the complaint of Buckl last Saturday, and spent Sunday in jail.

It is said that the valet will now sue his master for false arrest and imprisonment.

Held for Passing Worthless Checks.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWALK, Conn., Dec. 26.—George Benedict, alias George Comstock, is under arrest at South Norwalk charged with passing worthless checks upon Norwalk merchants. He secured several hundred dollars in money by ordering goods, having them sent to a fictitious address, and pocketing the difference between the amount of the check and the amount paid for the goods. Two weeks ago Benedict worked the same game very successfully in Greenwich and Stamford.

CHARLES H. CRAMP NOTIFIED.

Informed that Contract for Turkish Cruiser Has Been Signed.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 26.—Charles H. Cramp, when seen to-day, said: "We have received a cablegram from Gen. Williams informing us of the signing of the contract with the Turkish Minister of Marine for the construction of a first-class cruiser.

"The provisions of the contract we do not know, nor can I say just when work on the cruiser will begin, or when it is to be completed. Gen. Williams is now on his way home, and he is expected to arrive here in about fifteen days. We will then be better able to know more about the contract."

SERGT. DEEVY BENEFITS BY THE VETERAN LAW

Enlisted After Lee's Surrender, but Was "in the Civil War."

CAPTAINS NOT YET APPOINTED

Rumors of Chief Devery's Intention to Resign, but Police Board Has Not Heard of Any Such Move.

Corporation Counsel Whalen decided yesterday that a man who enlisted in the army after the surrender of Gen. Lee at Appomattox and before the issuance of the peace proclamation by President Lincoln was "in the civil war" and was entitled to all the privileges of a veteran of many battles.

This decision greatly affects the police situation as to who are to be promoted to the vacant Captaincies on the force. The matter was brought up by a protest of Sergts. Jefferson Deevy of Manhattan and Edward J. Kenny of Brooklyn. Corporation Counsel Whalen holds that these two men are entitled to be placed at the head of the list as veterans, and two of the Sergeants in the first twenty-five eligibles for promotion will fail of appointment any one that "everything in police matters was as satisfactory for the Brooklyn organization as before the shake-up by Chief Devery."

Mr. Shevlin said that Brooklyn Democrats were pleased with the return of Deputy Chief McLaughlin, but would make no statement as to whether the transfer of the Captains sent to Brooklyn by Chief Devery's orders would be accomplished through political power.

Hugh McLaughlin refused to be interviewed last evening on police matters. He said:

"My views are well known about Chief Devery. I have nothing further to say."

Mr. McLaughlin said that he was not aware that Mr. Shevlin called on Mayor Van Wyck and that he did not know the object of his call.

THE COMMITTEE OF FIFTEEN.

Holds Executive Session and Appoints Sub-Committees.

The Committee of Fifteen met yesterday afternoon in the Trustees' room of the United Charities Building. William H. Baldwin, Jr., presided, and the following members of the committee were present: Charles Stewart Smith, John T. Kennedy, Austen G. Fox, Charles Sprague Smith, Felix Adler, George Haven Putnam, George Foster Peabody, and Prof. Edwin R. A. Seligman.

The meeting was an executive one, and lasted for about two hours. When it was concluded Chairman Baldwin announced that the following sub-committees had been appointed.

Committee on Finance—Charles Stewart Smith, John S. Kennedy, George Foster Peabody, John Harsen Rhoades, and Jacob H. Schiff.

Committee on Investigation—William H. Baldwin, Jr., Felix Adler, George Haven Putnam, and Edwin R. A. Seligman.

Committee on Legislation—Austen G. Fox, Col. Joel B. Erhardt, and William J. O'Brien.

Committee on Co-operation—Charles Sprague Smith, Felix Adler, and A. J. Smith.

Whether or not the committees, as approved by the full committee, were the same as presented by the Sub-Committee on Plan and Scope, which was appointed to select sub-committees, was not made known, and Mr. Baldwin, when asked if the Committee on Plan and Scope had not included in the list submitted a sub-committee to wait on the city officials, said that "no statement to that effect had been made with authority."

"It is our intention," said Mr. Baldwin, "to establish a central headquarters immediately. We have not yet determined where it will be located, but we would like to have it down town for convenience sake. At this office we will have a general agent to collate all information that comes in, and he will have his assistants. We will also appoint investigators.

"How many?"

"That will depend on how many we find are needed. We will have all that are needed. You can say that we have plenty of money pledged to carry on this work permanently, if necessary."

Was the appointment of Mr. Philbin as District Attorney discussed in the meeting?

"We discussed a great many things in the meeting. As to Mr. Philbin, you can say that all of the members of the committee were well pleased with his appointment. We are assured now of all the aid the District Attorney's office can give us in our efforts to suppress vice, and this assistance will, of course, render our task much easier."

The full committee will meet again next Wednesday, and by that time the sub-committees announced yesterday, it is expected, will have something definite to report.

CAPT. THOMAS A SLEUTH.

Makes Tour of the Tenderloin and Pronounces It Clean.

Capt. Thomas of the West Thirtieth Street Station transformed himself into a Vice Committee of One yesterday. No one at the police station saw anything of the Captain yesterday until late in the evening, when he entered with a very important look on his face.

"Call all the reporters in," he said to the Sergeant; "get 'em all here in a bunch. I've got something to tell 'em that the public ought to know."

When the reporters had gathered around him the Captain made a little speech.

"I've spent all day in covering this precinct," he said, "and I want to make the result of my investigations public. The result is that I've found that this precinct is as clean as it has ever been in all its history. There isn't a disorderly house or a poolroom or a gambling house in it. I know, because I've been around myself, and I'm not talking from hearsay. I've heard people say that 'Paddy the Pig' was running a gambling joint at Thirty-sixth Street and Sixth Avenue.

"There's not a thing in that. I was there myself, and there's no more gambling joint or poolroom there than there is here. There may be a few handbooks made on the races and a few of the gents there may have a poker game once in a while. But there is no poolroom nor open game there. I've been to other places where I heard people say there were poolrooms and I found that everything was on the level. There are no poolrooms or gambling houses in the precinct, and I want that fact made public."

QUARRELED ON FIFTH AVENUE.

Woman Upbraids Her Husband for Attentions to a Chorus Girl.

A man, evidently about thirty years old, in evening clothes, with a paddock coat, and a fashionably gowned young woman came out of the Thirty-third Street entrance of the Waldorf-Astoria about 4 o'clock last evening, and stood for a moment in earnest conversation on the sidewalk. Then the woman drew away from the man and began to talk to him in a loud voice.

"I won't stand it any longer," she cried. "I won't go in there with you again. You have disgraced your own family and now you are trying to disgrace mine. I won't have anything more to do with you."

"Don't go on that way," said the man, looking nervously at the crowd of curious people who were gathering.

"Go on this way," said the woman in a louder voice. "I'll go on any way I please. To think that you would desert your wife for a chorus girl. It would not have been so bad if she had been good looking even, but that!"

The man took the woman by the arm and led her down Fifth Avenue. A moment later, however, they were back in front of the hotel again and the woman, now in an almost hysterical condition, was talking louder than ever.

"I won't stay with you a minute longer," she said; "I'll sue for divorce to-morrow."

This was all the crowd heard, for the man led her away again. Fifteen minutes later the same couple appeared on the sidewalk in front of Delmonico's, where the argument was resumed. The man was trying to persuade his companion to have dinner in the restaurant, but she refused with a loud voice, and tore herself away from his grasp again and again. The couple, after a long dispute, entered a cab and drove up town.

Manager Boldt of the Waldorf-Astoria declined to say whether the couple were guests there or not.

Big Colorado Smelter Fired Up.

PUEBLO, Col., Dec. 26.—The new Rocky Mountain Smelter at Florence, forty miles up the Arkansas River, was fired up and began operations to-day. With this addition the Arkansas Valley of Colorado becomes the greatest centre of metalliferous reduction works in America, there being a string of reduction plants extending from Leadville to Pueblo. The new smelter cost $750,000. Most of the capital came from the East. The works start with a capacity of 600 tons of ore a day, but this is to be doubled during the next year. The ores treated will come mostly from Cripple Creek, Leadville, and Silver Cliff.

O'Leary Clubhouse, Chicago, Burned.

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—A Stock Yards fire early to-day caused a panic among the guests of the Transit House and resulted in the destruction of the noted O'Leary Club house, entailing losses aggregating $60,000. Aside from the clubhouse, the building, of four stories, contained a white lead factory, gum factory, and store, the stock in nearly all of which was almost totally destroyed. The Transit House, which was across the street from the burned building, was at no time in danger.

Dr. T. C. Mendenhall Resigns.

WORCESTER, Mass., Dec. 26.—Thomas C. Mendenhall, President of Worcester Polytechnic Institute for seven years, has resigned to take effect July 1, 1901, and his resignation has been accepted by the Trustees in correspondence made public to-day. Poor health is given as the cause of his decision. Dr. Mendenhall, before coming to Worcester, was Superintendent of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey at Washington.

THREE HELD IN CONTEMPT

Lawyer, His Son, and Client Adjudged Guilty in One Case.

Their Application for a Receiver Set Aside on Their Motion Because the Martin Law Firm Was Not Employed.

Justice Leventritt, in the Supreme Court, yesterday adjudged Lawyer Joseph Martin, his son William J., and his client, Emmanuel Popper, in contempt of court. The Justice, on entering the order, made very severe comments on the practice of the Martins and said he would reserve punishment until after the parties had corrected what had been done in the proceedings, as the practice followed brought two other Justices into the case. The matter grew out of the appointment of a receiver for the assessment insurance society of the Order of Chosen Friends.

The wife of Mr. Popper died recently, leaving a certificate calling for $1,000 from the Order of Chosen Friends. Before it could be collected a receiver for the order was appointed in Indiana. Mr. Popper then retained Joseph Martin as his counsel, and on Friday last he applied to the Supreme Court of this county for the appointment of a receiver here. The application was made to Justice Leventritt, who named Jacques S. Herts, who at once gave bonds in $50,000. The same afternoon Popper, accompanied by his counsel, went to Brooklyn and appeared before Justice Maddox, in the Supreme Court in Kings County, and there presented affidavits asking for a discontinuance of the action brought before Justice Leventritt. Justice Maddox signed the order as requested. The next day William McClusky, a clerk in Mr. Martin's office, went to Patchogue, in Suffolk County, and there appeared before Justice Wilmot M. Smith, and, setting forth the same cause of action as presented in Popper's affidavit to Justice Leventritt, asked Justice Smith to appoint a receiver. William J. Martin, the young son of the lawyer, was suggested, and Justice Smith appointed him. He also gave bond for $50,000.

Meanwhile Myers, Goldsmith, and Brommer, the personal counsel for Mr. Herts, had heard of this running from one county to another, and on Monday last placed the matter before Justice Leventritt, who at once issued an order for the lawyer, his son, and his client to appear before him yesterday and show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court.

The Justice was angry when the hearing began, and said: "This thing of going behind the back of one Justice in proceedings of this kind and getting court orders nullified is, to say the least, discourteous. Even legal methods brought to obtain legal relief may result in a contempt of court. I propose to sift this matter carefully."

William J. Martin declared that he knew nothing about the case except that he had been named as received by Justice Smith.

"Did you tell the Justice," asked Justice Leventritt, "that the receiver suggested by you was not appointed by me and that I appointed another man?"

"We told him the facts," was Mr. Martin's reply. Mr. Martin said that Mr. Popper was dissatisfied with the appointment of Mr. Herts.

Mr. Herts said that after he had qualified as receiver he was called outside of the Justice's chamber and there met William J. Martin. "The young man said to me," continued Mr. Herts: 'Will you employ us as your counsel now that you have been named receiver? It is usually customary for the receiver to employ the counsel of the man who has asked the court to appoint a receiver.' I told him that I had my own personal counsel in other matters and would consult them before I did anything. Then the young man asked that his firm be employed as associate counsel. I declined to consent to this."

Justice Leventritt, in giving his decision said: "In this matter I desire that you make an application to Justice Smith to vacate his order in appointing a receiver. He will do so. You are to explain to him what transpired in this court, and you are also to make an application to Justice Maddox and have him vacate the orders entered by him. Copies of the proceedings here are to be given to each Justice.

"I am well satisfied that the proceedings taken were in contempt of court and were conducted by the lawyer because he did not get a receiver serviceable to him. I do not propose to countenance such practice."

The Justice ordered the record of his decision transcribed at once and the motions made in Kings and Suffolk Counties without delay.

MANY SHOOTINGS IN KENTUCKY.

Thirty Killings Said to be the Record for Christmas Day.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 26.—Christmas Day in Kentucky was marked by many shootings. Thirty killings is the record of the State, a total not reached in years. In the large number of instances the killings were the outcome of drunken rows. The most unusual shooting was that of Mrs. J. C. Bryant, who was fatally wounded by Thomas Kidd at Williamsburg. This shooting has incensed the community and Kidd is being guarded in jail. He claims that he was under the influence of liquor and did not know what he was doing.

E. T. Gerrard, while attending a dance, near Mancheater, was shot and killed by Dill Holland, and another outbreak of the famous Clay County feuds is expected. Gen. T. T. Garrard, father of E. T. Garrard, and leader of the Garrard faction, is now in a dying condition from an attack of pneumonia.

In Christian County, as the result of a feud of ten years' standing between two prominent families, Marion Henderson was shot to death by Robert Morris. Henderson came into the saloon waving his pistols, and Morris, thinking his life threatened, opened fire.

At Mayfield, Deputy Sheriff John Usher attempted to arrest some violators of the whisky law. He was killed in the battle that ensued, as was Charles Bowlin, who was resisting arrest. There were any number of shootings where no fatal results are recorded.

SMALLPOX FROM SICK COWS.

Five Persons Afflicted After Drinking the Milk.

Special to The New York Times.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Dec. 26.—An epidemic of smallpox is claiming the attention of the State authorities at Cecil, Ohio. The cows of the farmers are infected with smallpox. One family of five persons is afflicted from drinking the milk and several other families are sick. Dr. Chapman of the State Board of Health of this city investigated the case to-day and has ordered a rigid quarantine.

One of the daughters of the afflicted family has attended school and many of the children of the school district have been exposed. The matter has been brought to the attention of the State authorities and further attention will be given the matter.

MOTHER STEALS HER CHILD.

Son of Ex-Attorney General Miller in Hot Chase After His Wife Fails to Find Her.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 26.—A sensational abduction took place in this city this afternoon, when Mrs. Samuel D. Miller of New York, kidnapped her small child and fled from the city. A hot chase was made across the State to intercept the woman, but she could not be located. Seven years ago Samuel D. Miller, son of ex-Attorney General W. H. H. Miller, married a Miss Karcher of New York, the wedding taking place in Washington, D. C. The young couple came to this city, where Mr. Miller occupied a high social position, to reside. They lived here two years, when Mrs. Miller induced her husband to remove to New York. After two or three years there Mr. Miller returned to this city to practice law with his father, but Mrs. Miller preferred to remain in New York. While they had been separated for two years, no steps in the direction of a divorce had been taken.

Two or three days ago Mrs. Miller came to this city and went to the Denison Hotel. She sought an interview with her husband and desired to see her child, disclaiming any intention of attempting to take the boy back to New York. This afternoon the nurse took the child to the Denison to meet the mother by appointment. The nurse was sent out to get a check cashed, and when she returned Mrs. Miller was dressed for the street. She said she was going for a drive and the nurse insisted upon accompanying her charge.

They all entered the carriage, but the nurse soon became alarmed and jumped from the moving vehicle. She at once notified Mr. Miller, and he went to the Union Station to intercept the woman, but she could not be found. The cab driver, when located, said he had driven the woman and child to Brightwood, a suburb, where she intended to board a Big Four train. Mr. Miller then wired his attorneys at Muncie, Ind., to begin habeas corpus proceedings and search the train when it reached that point. This was done, but no trace of the woman and child could be found. Mr. Miller and his father went to Muncie on a later train, but returned to-night empty-handed. The abduction caused a sensation here because of the social position of the Millers.

Last Friday when Mrs. Miller suddenly appeared in the city with the announcement that she had come to get her son and take him home with her there were conferences between the father and mother, and Mrs. Miller employed ex-County Clerk Fesler to represent her. It was hoped a compromise would be effected by which the boy would spend a part of his time with each parent, and nothing be made public concerning the matter. This seemed to be nearly accomplished till the incident this afternoon, when Mrs. Miller started for the Union Station with the governess and boy in a closed carriage.

ACCUSED OF THEFT.

Prisoner Gave His Name as King, but Signed a Message for Aid "Dr. Louis C. Le Roy."

A man of refined bearing and well dressed was locked up in the West Thirtieth Street Police Station last night on the charge of stealing $6 worth of bric-a-brac from an auction house at 8 West Twenty-eighth Street. He was registered as Louis King, a musician, of 600 Lexington Avenue. The police say the name and address are fictitious.

Charles E. Smith, who caused the arrest, said the prisoner had entered his place and pocketed a small powder box and a china plate worth $6. He called in Policeman Conboy, who arrested the man. In the station a box and plate were found on the prisoner. Mr. Smith said they had been stolen from his place. The prisoner, who had a big roll of bills of large denomination, was reticent and nervous. In his pocket were a number of cards bearing the address of Dr. Louis C. Le Roy, Jr., D. D. S., 6 Lexington Avenue. He was given permission to send out a telegram to "his brother." It was signed, "Dr. Louis C. Le Roy, a dentist, 6 Lexington Avenue."

A reporter for THE NEW YORK TIMES called at 6 Lexington Avenue, and was admitted by a young man in livery. "Yes, Dr. Leroy, Jr., lives here," said the doorman. The young woman who saw the reporter said: "Dr. Leroy is not home. He has not been here all day. I have no idea where he might be found. He is not likely to return before midnight." The young woman said she was a sister-in-law of Dr. Louis C. Leroy, Jr., and the description she gave of him tallied with the appearance of the man locked up for shoplifting.

The reporter was followed from the house to the West Thirtieth Street station by a smooth-faced young man. He stepped up to the desk, and handing the Sergeant a card, asked to see Dr. King.

"We have no such man here," said the Sergeant. "Give us the right name, it's the same as yours, (glancing at the young man's card,) and maybe I'll let you see him." The young man took another card from his pocket and wrote something on the unprinted side.

"I thought so," said the Sergeant glancing at the card on which the name Leroy had been written. The Sergeant said later: "The cards found on the prisoner bore his rightful name." The caller later admitted that the prisoner was Dr. Leroy. "Louis must have been drinking," he said. "It is preposterous to think he could be in his right mind and do what he is accused of." Capt. Thomas agreed to accept $500 bail, which was offered by W. J. Campbell of 43 West Thirty-second Street and the prisoner was released.

PLAN TO IMPROVE ROADS.

Louis Bedell Has One on the Strength of Which Orange County Will Issue $200,000 in Bonds.

Special to The New York Times.

GOSHEN, N. Y., Dec. 26.—The Board of Supervisors of Orange County has authorized a $200,000 bond issue for the purpose of road improvements. The action was taken on the recommendation of Assemblyman Louis Bedell, who stated that his plan for road improvement would cost the county nothing. Briefly outlined it is as follows:

The Orange County Road Improvement Association, which Mr. Bedell represents, had indueed the State Engineer to make an estimate which would cost $2,000 per mile, to be operated under the Higbie-Armstrong law. Four per cent. bonds of this county to the amount of $200,000 could be sold at a premium of 8 per cent., which would give $16,000 to establish a sinking fund. The State will pay half the cost of construction, which will make $400,000.

The Road Improvement Association will give a bond to do the work at 10 per cent. profit. This amount, $40,000, will be added to the sinking fund. The railroads of the county have agreed to pay half the cost of abolishing grade crossings, about $7,000, which, also placed in the sinking fund, will bring the total to $63,000, and this amount in thirty years will pay off the bonds at maturity.

The board was not unanimous in its decision, and opponents of the plan are talking of the matter of interest on the bonds, which amounts to $8,000 yearly.

KENTUCKY PROFESSOR RESIGNS.

Quit Because College Faculty Refused to Expel Football Players.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 26.—The resignation of Prof. D. W. Batson, Dean of Kentucky Wesleyan College, at Winchester, was accepted by the board here today. His retirement is due to his opposition to the football teams playing on gridirons of other colleges. He asked the Faculty to expel the members of the team. It refused, and he resigned.

Gave $2,296 for Newsboys' Christmas.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—Col. John Lambert of the Illinois Steel Company contributed $2,296, his salary for one year as a member of the special Canal Inspection Commission, to be used to make newsboys happy Christmas time and later. So a big Christmas tree in the dining hall of the Newsboys' Home groaned under the weight of new shoes, stockings, mittens, fur caps, candies, and fruit, while the tables were weighed down with turkeys, cranberry sauce, and plum puddings.

Hawaiian Delegate's Big Mileage Bill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—To Robert H. Wilcox, Delegate in the House of Representatives from the Hawaiian Islands, has just been paid a claim of $1,000 for mileage. It was the largest claim of the kind ever made, but it was paid promptly by the Sergeant at Arms of the House. Every Congressman is entitled to mileage at the rate of 20 cents a mile "by the most direct and practicable route from his home to Washington and return." The distance between Honolulu and Washington is figured at 5,000 miles. Mr. Wilcox will draw $1,000 more for his return trip.

MR. BRYAN MAKES A PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Does Not Know If He Will Be a Candidate Again.

HE LIKES HIS EDITORSHIP

Although, He Adds, the Presidency Seemed Desirable—J. W. Kern Denounces Democratic Deserters.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 26.—The annual banquet of the Jefferson Club of Lincoln to-night at the Lincoln Hotel brought together nearly 300 representative men of the Democratic and Populist Parties of Nebraska, together with a number of leaders from other States. William Jennings Bryan made his first appearance at a public gathering since the election, and the greeting accorded him was never more hearty and spontaneous in his home city. His address received the closest attention and the applause was frequent.

Aside from the remarks of Mr. Bryan, the event of the evening was the speech of John W. Kern, defeated Democratic candidate for Governor of Indiana, who aroused the banqueters to a high pitch of enthusiasm, not only by his laudation of Mr. Bryan, but by his outspoken criticism of those Democrats whom he accused of contributing to his (Bryan's) defeat. His denunciations of Democrats who offered "gratuitous counsel to Democracy," though he mentioned no names, was accepted by the crowd as a reference to ex-President Cleveland.

It was after 10 o'clock when the dinner was finished and the speaking began.

MR. BRYAN'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Bryan, whose subject was "Principles Live," said, in part:

"At this banquet, surrounded by neighbors who have been my friends for ten years, I may be pardoned for saying a word of a personal nature. Five times you have voted for me for public office—twice for Congress, once for the United States Senate, and twice for the Presidency—and no candidate ever received more loyal support than you have given me.

"Whether I shall ever be a candidate for office again is a question which must be determined by events. No one can speak with certainty of the future, for one's destiny is not known until his life's work is complete. I shall be content if it is my lot to aid in the triumph of the principles while others enjoy the honors and bear the responsibility of office.

"The holding of public office should be an incident and not the extreme aim of the citizen. It should not be an end, but the means for the accomplishment of a purpose.

"The Presidency seemed desirable because it would have enabled me to give effective aid to certain reforms which I believe to be necessary to the public welfare, but defeat—even a second defeat—does not lessen my interest in this reform, and time may prove that my work is to advocate rather than to execute.

"The Commoner will give me an opportunity to participate in public discussions, and I am sure that an editorial pursuit will furnish as much intellectual enjoyment as I could have found in the White House, and, in addition thereto, will give me more time for home pleasures.

"The principles for which we contended in the last campaign still live, and we who believe in them must continue to fight for them. An election does not change principles; it only determines what principles shall be for the time being applied.

"The believers in tariff reform did not abandon their faith when the high-tariff doctrine was indorsed at the polls, neither did protectionists when their cause suffered loss. The advocates of the gold standard continued their fight for monometallism for twenty-five years, in spite of the platform declarations of all parties in favor of a double standard. Shall we who believe in bimetallism lose courage because our opponents have profited by an increased volume of money, thus admitting the economic principle for which we have been contending?

"The defenders of trusts did not lose heart when all parties denounced combinations in restraint of trade. Shall we give up the fight because monopoly has triumphed by stealth? Must we now advocate an imperial policy because our opponents have won a victory by denying that they are imperialists? A colonial system involves a surrender of our theory of government, and the people will understand this as soon as the system is put into operation.

"If we were to consult our immediate convenience and comfort, we would never oppose wrong of any kind, for all warfare involves a temporary sacrifice, but this is our Government, and must be transmitted unimpaired to posterity. We have no choice, therefore, but to stand steadfast, come what may.

"If we are successful in diverting present tendencies and in carrying the Government to its old foundations we shall rejoice in the victory and profit by the reforms secured. I am confident that we shall ultimately win, but if the trend toward plutocracy cannot be checked, it is still better that we should be defeated in a righteous undertaking than that we should join hands with those who are ignoring the inalienable rights of man."

JOHN W. KERN'S SPEECH.

John W. Kern of Indiana spoke to the toast, "The Rank and File." He said, in part:

"The Democracy of Hendricks was the Democracy of the Kansas City Convention. If living, his voice would have rung out in the last campaign in behalf of those principles always dear to his heart. But while the Democratic Party is still the conservative party, as it was in the days of Hendricks, it is as ready now as then to strive to find common ground upon which all Democrats who believe in Constitutional Government may stand in coming conflicts.

"It is to-day holding no parley with deserters. Its ears are closed against words of advice gratuitously offered by alleged Democrats who vote the Republican ticket, or by those in the great struggle of 1900 who withheld both vote and voice from the cause of the people, and could see in that mighty contest only a painful and distressing situation.

"There is no occasion for crimination and recrimination as between Democrats, but there should always be generous and patriotic rivalry as to who will render the most effective service in the work of building up the party organization and strengthen the party lines for the coming conflict."

Mr. Kern spoke in praise of Richard Olney, David B. Hill, Bourke Cockran, John De Witt Warner, Robert E. Pattison, Alexander K. McClure, Arthur P. Gorman, Henry Watterson, and other Gold Democrats, for their course in the late campaign and "their patriotic protests against the advance of the hosts of imperialism," and continued:

"It is in no spirit of bitterness, however, I add that there were a few men, once prominent in Democratic ranks, who in the midst of all the stormy scenes of this mighty contest remained unmoved and silent, except that now and then they took occasion to furnish aid and comfort to the enemy by making public denial that they were in sympathy with the cause of the people, or to express their regrets that such 'painful and distressing' issues were before the people.

"For the sake of the future welfare of the party I shall attempt no harsh criticism of the course of these gentlemen, but I will not forbear saying here and everywhere that they need not be surprised if any gratuitous counsel which they may seek to thrust upon the millions of loyal Democrats who fought the good fight and kept the faith shall fall upon reluctant ears."

The speaker asserted that the rank and file of the party in 1900 was the same rank and file voting for tariff reform in 1884, 1888, and 1892. "It is the rank and file," he continued; "which, tired of the domination of a few men in 1896, literally took possession of the Democratic Party and made it in every sense a party of the people."

In conclusion he said: "Speaking for the Democracy of Indiana, and I believe for the rank and file of the Democracy everywhere, I want to say to all men who are interesting themselves in party organization or reorganization, that any attempt in any quarter at any time to belittle the splendid and heroic service rendered by that magnificent leader and grand tribune of the people, William Jennings Bryan, in the campaigns of 1896 and 1900, to cast stigma or reproach upon him in any degree, however slight, will meet with quick and stern rebuke from the millions of Democrats who followed his banner in those memorable contests.

"While the rank and file of the great Democratic Party has honored other leaders, it loves William Jennings Bryan and will tolerate no action which contemplates his humiliation or looks to his retirement from the field of active politics."

Mr. Bryan will leave to-morrow for a tour in Kansas and Texas, combined with which will be a hunting trip on the Gulf of Mexico near Galveston. He will return in time to speak at Omaha Jan. 1 and Chicago Jan. 8.

A MURPHY-HILL FIGHT.

Democratic Factional Rivalry Over the Successor to F. B. Delehanty.

There is a three-cornered fight among Democrats over the selection of a successor to F. B. Delehanty as a member of the State Board of Mediation and Arbitration. Mr. Delehanty recently moved from Albany to New York, and through the influence of ex-Senator Edward Murphy, Jr., who is related to him by marriage, was nominated for Judge of the City Court and was elected.

Governor-elect Odell will name Mr. Delehanty's successor. Ex-Senator Murphy has a candidate in Bernard Stark, a millinery dealer in Albany, who has been active in fighting ex-Gov. Hill in that city. Mr. Hill is supporting Col. John S. McEwan of Albany, who was for many years connected with the Adjutant General's department.

The third candidate, who is said to have the backing of a majority of the Democratic State Committee, is Charles R. De Freest, also of Albany. Mr. De Freest has been Secretary of the State Committee, Clerk of the Assembly, and Secretary of the State Railroad Commission. The Hill people want Stark beaten in any event, and, while they are friendly to De Freest personally, they fear that his selection would be considered a Murphy victory.

GEN. GREENE'S SUCCESSOR.

Senator Platt announced last night that Robert C. Morris will be elected to succeed Gen. Francis V. Greene as President of the Republican County Committee at the meeting to be held at the Murray Hill Lyceum at 8 o'clock to-night. Mr. Morris was the Republican nominee for City Court Judge last month.

Robert Clark Morris is thirty-five years old, and has been active in Republican politics. He was born in Connecticut, was graduated from Yale College, where he is a special lecturer on the French codes. He is a lawyer by profession, with offices at No. 35 Nassau Street.

He was married in 1890 to Miss Alice A. Parmelee, and lives at the Hotel Savoy. He is a member of the Yale and Republican Clubs, the Society of the Cincinnati, and the Military Order of the Loyal Legion. He is reputed to be wealthy.

REPUBLICAN CITY COMMITTEE.

The Executive Committee of the Republican City Committee of Greater New York met in Parlor D R at the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday afternoon. Charles H. Murray presided in the absence of Lemuel E. Quigg, who sent word that he would not accept a re-election as Chairman of the Executive Committee.

This ticket was selected to be supported at the meeting of the entire committee of 1,049 members at the Murray Hill Lyceum, on East Thirty-fourth Street, at 8:30 o'clock to-night: For President—George H. Roberts of Brooklyn; Treasurer—Hugh McRoberts of Richmond; Secretary—George R. Manchester of Manhattan; Assistant Secretary—Philip W. Rheinhard, Jr., of Manhattan; Chairman of the Executive Committee—William H. Ten Eyck of Manhattan; Vice Presidents—Daniel Murray of Manhattan; John Deubert of Brooklyn, Edward H. Healy of the Bronx, George W. Bidgood of Queens, Jacob I. Hausman of Richmond; Sergeant at Arms—Sidney H. Goodacre of Manhattan.

SPRING ELECTIONS IN NEW JERSEY

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 26.—The Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee will hold a special meeting here tomorrow. Gen. Sewell, who is not a member of the committee, will be present. It is said that one of the matters to be considered is the proposed bill abolishing Spring elections in cities. The State Committee last year, by a close vote, favored such a bill, but the measure was not introduced in either house.

A well-informed Republican leader said to-night that he did not believe the Legislature would this Winter pass any bill abolishing Spring elections, and that certainly no affirmative action would be taken unless Senator McCarter of Essex County, should urge a bill of that kind.

FORMER RAILROAD MAN INSANE

Adam Hoffman, Mentally Wrecked, Under Restraint in Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—Adam Hoffman, formerly General Passenger and Ticket Agent and Traffic Manager of the Mexican Central Railroad, but now a mental wreck, stood for nearly two hours at the entrance to a store at 176 West Madison Street today exerting every muscle and straining every nerve in an attempt to force the doors. He believed that inside his wife and family were enjoying happiness and celebrating the opening of a large hotel, which, in his hallucination, he believed to have been opened to the public by himself. The man was accompanied by his brother, R. J. Hoffman, an attorney, and Dr. A. H. Miller. After much pleading on the part of his companions and police officers he was finally induced to enter a cab, and the party was taken to the Grand Pacific Hotel, where they will remain until arrangements for the accommodation of Mr. Hoffman at a Jacksonville sanitarium can be arranged. He became ill about two years ago when at work in his office.

DR. W. SEWARD WEBB'S CHRISTMAS

Special to The New York Times.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Dec. 26.—The employes of Dr. W. Seward Webb at Shelburne Farms are always generously remembered by their employer at the Christmas season, sometimes by exercises and a supper in the great ring barn, sometimes by a Christmas tree in the spacious house itself, and by gifts of a useful nature. Dr. and Mrs. Webb, with their children, are usually present at the merrymaking.

This year the celebration took the form of a supper at 6 o'clock, followed by the distribution of gifts from a large and handsome tree, and then a dance in one of the spacious rooms in the new wing, music being furnished by an orchestra from this city. Refreshments were served all night long, the celebration coming to an end only with the breaking of day.

Between 350 and 400 persons were present, and every one of the employes and every member of every family received something, the gifts including $10 to $25 to each employe besides jewelry and other articles of value and use.

Dr. and Mrs. Webb's guests from New York are Misses Catherine and Mary Lyman, Miss Winona Whitman, Mrs. H. Walter Webb, Mr. Louis Webb, Major Creighton Webb, and Mrs. Frank Webb.

Dr. and Mrs. Webb will leave Shelburne Farms Jan. 22 and will spend the remainder of the Winter in New York.

Gov. Roosevelt's Hunting Trip.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Col., Dec. 26.—Capt. J. B. Goff, a scout and hunter, who will have charge of Gov. Roosevelt's hunting expedition, has completed arrangements for the trip. Coyote Basin will be the scene of the operations. It is known to contain a greater number of mountain lions than any other section in the West, and bear also are said to be quite plentiful. The finest sport possible will be afforded, as Coyote Basin is not much frequented by hunters. The plans for the campaign include a trip of three weeks with a plentiful stock of guns, ammunition, supplies, &c., which will require a dozen pack horses to transport.

Boston Loan Bill of $290,000 Passed.

BOSTON, Dec. 26.—At a meeting of the Board of Aldermen to-night a loan bill amounting to $2,900,000 was passed and sent to the Common Council for concurrence. This bill includes the loan of $1,300,000 which passed the lower branch last week.

The first bill passed by the Aldermen about a month ago amounted to over four millions, but this bill failed to pass the lower branch, and there has been a disagreement ever since.

NORMAL TEACHERS RETIRED.

Four Instructors Relieved of Duty and Pensioned by the Board of Education.

The Board of Education held its last meeting of the year last evening at the Hall, Park Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street. President Miles M. O'Brien presiding. The session was a very brief one, and was chiefly confined to acting upon resolutions introduced at the last meeting of the board.

John Keleher was re-elected Deputy Treasurer of the Board of Education for the ensuing year.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee held just before the board meeting four teachers for the Normal School were appointed. Miss Clara Byrnes was appointed a teacher of history, with a salary of $1,000; Miss Marjorie Burr and Miss Renate Remy teachers of English, each with a salary of $1,000, and Miss Mary A. Knight, critic in the Training Department, with a salary of $600.

The board approved the retirement, with annuities, of four teachers for physical disability, one of whom has taught in the public schools forty-seven years. The retirement was asked for by the teachers themselves. They are:

Florence Ballou, appointed in October, 1869, salary $1,240, annuity $620; Josephine C. Cozans, appointed in January, 1861, salary $1,400, annuity $700; Juliette Hunter, appointed in October, 1865, salary $1,240, annuity $620; Elizabeth W. Ballantyne, appointed 1853, salary $1,853, annuity $930.

President O'Brien announced that the board had cleared its calendar, and would enter the new century with no held-over business to hamper its work.

Crew of the Electric Light Saved.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—The British steamer Ben Clune, Capt. Taylor, from New Orleans via Norfolk Dec. 7 for Rouen, passed the Lizard to-day, and signaled that she had on board the crew of the British brig Electric Light, Capt. Edwards, from New York Nov. 30 for Cape Coast, Africa.

That the Electric Light had been abandoned was reported by the Italian steamer Vincenzo Florio, upon her arrival at New York on Dec. 19, but it was not known that the crew had been rescued. The Florio signted the abandoned brig on Dec. 13 in latitude 37.06, longitude 55.55. The steamer drew near and sent a boat to the brig, but she was found deserted. The crew numbered eight men, including Capt. Edwards.

Unknown Steamer Ashore.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 26.—An unknown American steamer went ashore on the reefs a few miles south of Miami late yesterday. The sea has been running so high since that the wreckers have been unable to reach her. The ship is painted a lead color, with a yellow funnel and a red emblem on the smokestack.

Many Russian Students Arrested.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Three hundred students have been arrested in St. Petersburg, according to a dispatch from Berlin to The Daily Express, for propagating Socialist doctrines.

AT THE HOTELS.

WALDORF-ASTORIA.—Don Luis F. Corea, Nicaraguan Minister, Washington; Rutherford Trowbridge, New Haven; Lieut. H. H. Ward, Washington; Lieut. Commander A. C. Baker, United States Navy; Charles E. Yerkes, Chicago.

IMPERIAL.—Col. H. A. Campbell, Washington.

STURTEVANT.—C. E. Babcock, United States Army.

HOFFMAN.—Judge J. B. Lyon, Albany.

FIFTH AVENUE.—Sir Martin Conway, London; George W. Aldrich, Rochester; Col. T. C.

CITY STREETS NEGLECTED

Numerous Thoroughfares In Need of Cleaners' Attention.

EAST SIDE IN WORST STATE

Commissioner Nagle Denies Shirking by His Men, but Says Holidays Prevented Work.

Complaints from citizens that many streets in Manhattan are not properly cleaned were brought to the attention of Commissioner of Streets Nagle yesterday, and Mr. Nagle promptly refuted them as unfounded, with the statement that the streets of New York are as clean as they ever were. The complaints, several in number, reached the office of THE NEW YORK TIMES by mail, and, besides the statement that the streets, principally in the residence districts, were not cleaned often enough, the query was put as to what had become of a large number of the sweepers who go around with cans mounted on small carts, gathering up the débris on their respective blocks. A great many people state that they do not see as many sweepers on the streets as they did during Commissioner Waring's time.

With the complaints in mind, a reporter for THE NEW YORK TIMES made a tour of the city yesterday, taking in the principal streets as well as many of the cross streets on both the east and west sides as far north as One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street. The general result of observation is that while many of the streets seemed to bear evidence of not having been cleaned within two days, a number of those contiguous and connecting were in a satisfactory condition, with the exception of the lower east side tenement districts, where, as a matter of fact, the habits of the population cause the police and Street-Cleaning Department more trouble than any half dozen times the same area anywhere else in the entire borough. Yesterday some of the streets in this district were filthy, despite the attention Commissioner Nagle and Capt. Gibson, his deputy, say is paid to them, and if similar conditions should be allowed to prevail in hot weather the lower east side would be an offensive locality to pass through, let alone to live in, and in any case a menace to health.

Down on lower Cherry Street, where the observer began, the thoroughfare appeared to be fairly clean as to the street itself, but, ranged along the sidewalks, ash and garbage cans loomed up every few feet, full to the neck and frequently spilling over on the sidewalk. Roosevelt, Oliver, and New Chambers Streets, Rutgers and James Slip needed attention in spots. A spring bed or two and some old tin pans, a few dunned hats, and a dead dog not yet accorded the decency of burial on the city dump littered the streets here and there, with some other refuse which the street cleaners appeared to have missed the last time around. Quite a number of streets in this district, except as to the sidewalk refuse thrown out by careless tenants, may in all fairness be said to be decently clean, but when one strikes the crowded sections of Hester and Essex and other thoroughfares immediately adjoining he generally is disinclined to remain long. A cursory glance is enough to show that improvement is needed. Near the corner of Essex and Hester Streets the conditions yesterday were filthy. Piles of refuse stood under peddlers' carts and here and there in the middle of the streets. The conditions were perhaps worse than usual yesterday owing to the holiday of Sunday and Tuesday, with an intervening day of rain. The Street-Cleaning Department's force in this vicinity seems inadequate to remove the refuse often enough, and yesterday comparatively few sweepers were seen.

On the upper west side many streets demand attention, particularly Central Park South, which apparently was neglected yesterday. Between Fifty-ninth and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Streets quite a number of streets in the better residence districts failed to show that spick-and-span appearance whose absence brings quick and unfailing protest from the householders. Some of these streets are clean enough, but others undeniably look as if the street sweeper had failed in his duty. Below Fifty-ninth Street it was observed that a large number of streets down to Fourteenth were in better shape than the more pretentious east and west thoroughfares above Fifty-ninth.

What seemed to strike the observer as peculiar was, apparently, the few sweepers in the streets. From Grand Street and Third Avenue to Sixtieth Street but eleven were counted. On Central Park South none was seen at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Several persons living up town were encountered later in the day who, in reply to questions, said they do not see as many sweepers on the streets now as they did when Col. Waring was Street Commissioner. Between Twenty-third and Fifty-ninth Streets a pedestrian on Monday saw but two sweepers working with their tin ashcarts on the thoroughfares, and the apparent scarcity of men has been observed frequently of late in various parts of the city.

When the result of yesterday's tour was laid before Commissioner Nagle, late in the afternoon, Mr. Nagle said he didn't believe there is a dirty street in New York outside, perhaps, of the congested east side district.

"I was congratulating myself," said he, "that the streets are in unusually good shape, and it strikes me that they were never so clean as they are now. If you have been looking at the streets to-day, you must bear in mind that it is hardly a fair test. Sunday was a holiday, Monday was rainy, and yesterday was a half-holiday for the men, so that they haven't had time to catch up. By to-morrow there will be no cause for complaint. But if there is a chance for a dirty street, it is during the holiday period."

"It has been said, Mr. Nagle, that, anticipating a snowfall to cover up the streets, a large number of sweepers have been discharged. Is that true?"

"The only men who have been laid off," was the reply, "are a number of mechanics. It being the last month in the year, we had to figure on the appropriations lasting through. Not a man on the street-sweeping staff has been discharged, but, on account of having so little money until Jan. 1, during this month I have been compelled to lay off about 400 men one day a week, which is equivalent to laying off the whole staff for one day. After the first of the year we won't be compelled to lay off any one, and even the mechanics will be brought back.

"Now, as for the streets, they are swept every day. We have 1,800 sweepers and 900 or more carts. These men have all been out every day, and I do not see how any one can justly say that he sees fewer men at work than he did in Col. Waring's time. If you or any citizen will point out a dirty street to me, I'll have it cleaned. It's my sole desire to give the people clean streets, and I honestly believe I have succeeded."

THE DELAWARE SENATORSHIPS.

Democrats Considering How They May Prevent the Election of Addicks.

DOVER, Del., Dec. 26.—Democratic leaders from all parts of the State to the number of about 150, and including all Democratic Assemblymen-elect except three, held a conference here to-day to consider the situation relative to the election of two United States Senators by the Legislature, which will convene Jan. 1.

No definite plan of action was decided upon, but the prevailing sentiment of those who addressed the meeting and generally of those present was that the Democrats should use every endeavor to prevent the election of J. Edward Addicks as one of the Senators.

The Legislature will be composed of twenty-three Democrats and twenty-nine Republicans. Of the latter the Addicks faction is believed to contain eighteen, and eleven are expected to oppose Addicks for Senator. Should all Senators and Assemblymen be present and vote on the ballot for Senator twenty-seven votes will be necessary to elect.

State Chairman Willard Saulsbury presided at the conference to-day, and in calling the meeting to order urged that the Democrats in the Legislature should not enter into coalition with the Republicans unless the latter should agree to give the Democrats one pf the United States Senators

John Biggs, ex-Attorney General and ex-State Chairman, advocated voting for two anti-Addicks Republicans, as did also Attorney General White, if the plan for the election of one Democrat should fail.

Deputy Attorney General Cooper urged the Democrats to vote with the anti-Addicks Republicans in the organization of the Legislature and for two anti-Addicks Republicans for United States Senator, and thereby make certain the defeat of Addicks.

United States Senator Kenney proposed the holding of a caucus by the Democratic legislators, and that all should abide by the caucus majority decision.

A Democratic caucus will be held Monday evening next.

NICARAGUA COULD CEDE LAND.

Its Congress Can Resolve Itself into a Constitutional Convention to Take Necessary Action.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Dec. 4.—Cable messages from Washington, D. C., dated Dec. 1, were published in The Diario Oficial of the Government of Nicaragua, in its issue of Dec. 4, declaring that it had been reported to the Government of the United States: "That it is impossible for the United States to obtain absolute possession of either of the (canal) routes across the American isthmus because of diplomatic impediments and of the constitutions of Nicaragua and Costa Rica."

It is well known that the Congress of Nicaragua has resolved itself into a Constitutional Convention and at once proceeded to modify the Constitution, and then again resolved itself into a National Congress and enacted laws, the constitutionality of which have since that date never been questioned, in conformity with the Constitution as they had modified it. Consequently the Congress can, when it is called into extra session by President Zelaya, so modify the Constitution as to empower the Executive to concede to the United States a belt of land from ten to fifteen miles wide across Nicaragua having the canal route as its longitudinal axis.

The Government and people of Nicaragua appear anxious to do everything reasonable to enable the United States to acquire full control of the canal route across their country. This is true also in regard to the Government and people of Colombia in the matter of the Panama Canal route. In Colombia, however, the armed revolutionists are obstructing the peaceful assembling of the Colombian Congress for any purpose.

The German Minister to Central America, Baron Eyb, who is at present in this Republic, accepted an invitation to accompany some of the Nicaraguan Ministers on a railroad excursion to Diriamba. At Diriamba Baron Eyb telegraphed to President Zelaya a fulsomely-worded message of congratulations on his enterprise and progressive disposition as exhibited by the construction of the railroad. This line is only twenty-six miles long and is of narrow gauge. Whether the Baron's intention was to indirectly compliment the German subjects, who were the engineers of the railroad, or whether he was continuing his recently noted courtier style to President Zelaya for the accomplishment of some undeveloped purpose, is not known.

It is reported that Baron Eyb is endeavoring to persuade President Zelaya not to accept any offer by the Government of the United States to construct an interoceanic ship canal across Nicaragua.

NICARAGUA OWES ABOUT $4,000,000.

Government's Desire is to Get Out of Debt—Pays Interest Promptly.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Dec. 4.—The interior debt of Nicaragua Jan. 1, 1900, as published in the Diario Oficial of Dec. 2, amounted to, in round numbers, 8,000,000 pesos, (or about $2,666,000 gold.) Of this sum about 5,400,000 pesos (about $1,800,000 gold) depends solely on the Government's "promise to pay." The remainder is secured by the law requiring that a certain percentage of the Custom House duties on imports and exports be paid on these bonds.

The exterior debt is in railroad bonds, issued in 1886 and now amounting to about $1,390,000 gold, the semi-annual 6 per cent. interest on which sum is now being paid promptly, and 1 per cent., sometimes more, of the principal is being redeemed annually by an export tax of 1 cent gold per pound on all coffee exported. Therefore the total debt of Nicaragua is about $4,000,000 gold.

The evident desire of the present Government of the republic is to get out of debt. Nicaragua's exterior debt bonds are quoted now at $55 to $60, par $100, in London.

NICARAGUANS SENT TO PRISON.

President Zelaya Causes Arrest of Prominent Men Because He Fears a Revolution.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Dec. 4.—El Liberal, a Government daily newspaper published here, continues to refer to efforts which it declares Dr. Adam Cardenas, the former President of Nicaragua, and others expatriated from this country, have been making to organize a revolution against President Zelaya. Coincident with these references, some of the most honorable and well-educated business men of Managua, personal friends of Dr. Cardenas, have, during the last ten days, been imprisoned, incommunicado, in the penitentiary by the President's orders.

The friends of the prisoners declare they are not allowed the use of stools, chairs, bedsteads, cots, or tables, and are not permitted to use knives or spoons when eating. The severe conditions alleged to be imposed on these incommunicados indicate that reports of their connection with the threatened revolution have been made to President Zelaya.

Certain of the prisoners, such as Fredorico Solosoria, who is seventy-three years old, and feeble; Alcemedes Fuentes, Dr. M. E. Valasquez, and Adam Saenz, have established characters as quiet men and devoted to their business or profession, who, it is pointed out, know that President Zelaya has complete control of a large number of rifles, cannon, &c., and a quantity of munitions of war, and that he is too vigilant to permit the introduction of arms into Nicaragua by intending revolutionists; also that no revolution can succeed against him at present unless it is originated by the treachery of supposed friends, as were the very active but mismanaged revolutions organized against him by pretended friends in 1896 and 1898. With the backers of these revolutions the men now imprisoned would neither associate nor have confidential relations of any kind.

Nicaragua is quiet, except for the uneasiness among the people caused by the imprisonment under such severe conditions of the highly esteemed citizens already referred to. There is no visible sign of a revolution. The people are busy gathering the 1900 crop of coffee, which will occupy them fully until May or June, 1901.

SAYS BURNZ IS A DEGENERATE.

Insanity Expert Testifies that Boy Murderer Is Irresponsible Through Excessive Smoking.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 26.—The evidence introduced to-day by the defense in the trial of young Edgar C. Burnz for the murder of Herbert B. Fellows, the Scarsdale station agent and Postmaster, before Judge Keogh tended to show that the accused is a degenerate, whose moral weakness has been exaggerated by the excessive smoking of cigarettes.

Dr. Carlton Simon of New York, an insanity expert, testified that his examination of the youth disclosed physical and mental deficiencies. His heart is irregular, due to cigarette smoking. In fact, all his irregularities were found to be due to that habit, showing that it had extended over a long term of years. The physician had examined the prisoner's mental condition and found it poor in many respects. He did not remember the name of the witness after hearing it fifteen times, the make-up of his last meal, or the number of cigarettes he smoked. He was unconscious of the killing of Fellows. He remembered something about it, but had no appreciation of the atrocity of the act. He had no fear of the electric chair. He was not simulating, in the opinion of Dr. Simon, the prisoner always had a defective brain. In answer to a hypothetical question the witness said he considered Burnz irrational and irresponsible, and was convinced the boy did not know that the act he committed was wrong.

In cross-examination Dr. Simon said he had studied and experimented on the subject of excessive cigarette smoking. He could not say that he had ever had a case of insanity from simple cigarette smoking where there had been no outside influences. It had, however, a great effect upon a degenerate, and he believed that Burnz was a degenerate. He was of the opinion that Burnz smoked at least forty cigarettes a day.

Dr. H. S. V. De Hart of White Plains testified that he had been an examiner in lunacy. He was connected with Dr. Choate's sanitarium. He was sure the defendant was insane.

Miss Laura B. Bowler of 39 East Eighth Street, New York, a stenographer in the school of Mrs. Burnz, the grandmother of the accused boy, said that Burnz had called at the school in New York a few hours before his arrest. Detectives had already been there inquiring for him. When he arrived witness asked him why the detectives were inquiring about him. He replied in a careless way that he had not the slightest idea. Miss Ida Martin, also a stenographer in the school, said young Burnz came there once and asked her to give him a revolver, as he wanted to kill himself.

Mabel A. Burnz, sister of the defendant, said that her brother had for a long time acted in an irrational manner. He had got the idea that she and her mother were against him and he had avoided them. She had heard him several times threaten to kill himself. Once she had found a bottle of laudanum in his room, and at another time a revolver.

ELM STREET REFUND PLAN KILLED

City Will Not Repay $2,500,000 Expended by Citizens.

Controller's Opposition to Property Owners' Claims Indorsed by Board of Public Improvements.

The Board of Public Improvements yesterday voted against the plan to repay to property owners $2,500,000 collected for the Elm Street improvement. This is the end of a long fight which has been carried on by lawyers and property owners to induce the city to assume the whole cost of the widening of Elm Street.

Controller Coler at a previous meeting of the Board of Public Improvements attacked the plan and said that some lawyers would receive "fat fees" for the millions which would practically be taken out of the City Treasury. The matter came up for final action yesterday. Deputy Controller Levey was present with a document giving the history of the Elm Street matter and a protest from Controller Coler against repaying property owners their assessments.

Michael J. Mulqueen, attorney for a number of the Elm Street landlords, began a recital of the burdens which were put on property and how rents had decreased because of the improvement. He denied that his clients had ever agreed to pay half of the cost of improvement and said that the widening of the street was a public necessity and the city should pay the cost.

"It is not necessary to prove that there was an agreement between the property owners and the city," said Deputy Controller Levey.

"This is a grab on the part of the city to take $3,000,000 out of the pockets of citizens," yelled Lawyer Mulqueen.

Col. Franklin Bartlett stated that he represented the Mason property on Lafayette Place as trustee and other property as a lawyer. He said:

"I find that there will be a loss of rentals to my clients during the next seven or eight years. The people whom I represent are assessed $8,000. We have to make our leases at lower rates. I think it would be fair to assess the city 75 per cent. of the cost of the improvement and the property owners 25 per cent."

President Holahan then said that the Board had not the power to relieve individual property owners.

Lawyer Mulqueen made another appeal on behalf of his clients. He said that the property owners were suffering severe losses.

"Tenants are moving out and we have been compelled to lower the rentals. The existing state of affairs is nothing less than confiscation."

Then Lawyer Mulqueen told of clients who had lost $30,000 in rentals since the Elm Street improvement was begun.

After a long debate the board adopted a resolution refusing to agree to the repayment to the property owners of sums of money paid in assessments for this improvement or relieve them in any way from payments to be made.

The memoranda prepared by Controller Coler showed that the entire cost of the Elm Street improvement was $3,604,902.27. Under the law half of this expense was to be paid by the property owners in the area benefited and half by the city. The property owners whose land was taken have been receiving 6 per cent. interest on the awards for more than two years. Controller Coler writes that the attempt to saddle the city with the entire cost of the improvement should be defeated and united action taken by city officials to prevent legislation at Albany which would accomplish this purpose.

TROUT MAY BE SOLD NOW.

They Must, However, Be Caught in Waters Outside of This State.

A decision of interest to disciples of Izaak Walton and dealers in the succulent trout was handed down yesterday by Justice William J. Gaynor, in the suit of the people of the State of New York against Charles M. Cone, a South Street, Manhattan, fish dealer, to recover a penalty for alleged violation of the game laws.

The complaint of the State charged Cone with exposing trout for sale during the close season. Cone claimed that he had imported the fish from Massachusetts, and that the State game law did not apply to such a case, and that if it did it conflicted with the Federal law relating to inter-State commerce. Justice Gaynor decides in favor of the fish dealer. The Justice's decision is, in part, as follows:

That animals in ferae naturae, i. e., game, have always been owned by all, and subject to Government control in respect to protection and preservation, which embraces the time, place, and manner of their being killed or caught and reduced to individual ownership, is too familiar to need citation of authority. The subject has always belonged to the police power of the State everywhere from ancient times down to now, and that it belongs in this country to the several States, and not to the National Government, is a thing not to be disputed. It being thus within State legislative province, it follows that whatever the State Legislature neeessarily enacts in the way of such regulation for the protection and preservation of game ought not to be deemed regulation of inter-State and foreign commerce, and a trespass upon the said exclusive power of the National Legislature to regulate the same, and I believe it cannot be. It is a thing too well established by experience to be open to fair dispute, that the prohibition against selling game at all in the close season is necessary to such statutes in order to make them effective."

On reargument the following memorandum was written: "Since writing the foregoing, the decision in People vs. Buffalo Fish Company (164 N. Y. 93) has been rendered. The prevailing opinion is (1) that the prohibition against possessing trout relates only to trout caught in this State, and (2) that if such prohibition is to be understood to be against the possessing of trout imported from other States or countries it is in violation of the said constitutional provision against the regulation of commerce."

Police Sergeant Dies Suddenly.

Sergt. Frank Stacom of the Vernon Avenue Police Station, Brooklyn, died suddenly last night at his home, 108 Lewis Avenue. He had been suffering with neuralgia for a week, but was feeling better last night, and remarked that he hoped to be able to report for duty to-day. He had just finished a game of cards when he suddenly threw up his hands and dropped to the floor. His death was caused by neuralgia of the heart. He was fifty years old and had been on the police force for twenty-five years. He leaves a wife and two sons.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

UTICA, Dec. 26.—The Kirkland Canning Factory storehouse, about nine miles from this city, burned this afternoon. From 18,000 to 25,000 cases of canned vegetables and grain were burned. The fire caught from a stovepipe.

CALGARY, N. W. T., Dec. 26.—The most destructive fire in the history of Calgary occurred to-day. Several of the finest business structures were destroyed, notably the Clarence, Eau Claire, and New Norman blocks. Losses are estimated at $100,000.

TEXTILE MILL CONSTRUCTION.

Nearly Twice as Many Projected This Year as in 1899—Marked Increase in Southern States.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 26.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter, in its issue tomorrow, will devote considerable space to textile mill construction in the present year, saying that returns for the last six months do not show as well as in the first six months of the year. The depression that was felt in the manufacturing business during the Summer and Fall months acted as a damper to the rush to build mills, particularly cotton mills, that was noticed the first half of the year, when all records in mill building were broken. During the first half of the year the number of new mills entered upon was 307, and during the last six months the number was 224, a loss of more than 25 per cent. over the first half.

Of the 224 mills projected, 144 are devoted to the manufacture of cotton, 14 to wool, 51 to knit goods, 16 to miscellaneous purposes, such as silk and linen manufacturing and for bleaching and dyeing. During the year 531 mills have passed under the review of The Reporter, an increase of 232 over the 299 reported for the year 1899, and an increase of 269 over the 262 recorded for the year 1898.

This shows that the United States is becoming the largest producer of textile fabrics in the world. One thing should be noticed in particular, and that is the great increase in the number of mills making finer goods. This is especially noticeable in the cotton manufacturing business, partially caused by the situation in China, cutting out the demand from that country. Several of the New England mills were affected likewise.

The number of knitting mills constructed during the past six months is the largest on record. Nearly all of these mills are devoted to cotton hosiery and underwear. This industry has shown rapid growth during the past few years, and where this country was importing hosiery not more than five years ago, we are exporting goods now, competing with the manufacturers in other portions of the world.

Compilation of returns on new enterprises shows that Georgia leads with 43 mills, North Carolina comes second with 41, although the latter has always been in the lead in the construction of new mills, it being the largest cotton manufacturing State in the South; South Carolina reports 33; Alabama, 16; Virginia, 12; Pennsylvania, 11; Tennessee, 10; Mississippi and Texas, 9 each; Massachusetts, 7; New York, 6; New Jersey, 4; Louisiana, 3; California, Maine, and New Hampshire, 2 each, and Arkansas, Florida, Maryland, Missouri, Ohio, and Oregon, 1 each.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 26.—The State will print to-morrow statistics from the office of the Secretary of State showing that in 1900 31 new cotton mills were chartered in South Carolina, and 14 old ones increased their capital stock by reason of enlargements, the aggregate capital employed being $7,800,000, while during 1899-1900 the new mills numbered 42 and the enlargements 30, with an aggregate capital of $13,500,000. This does not include 12 mills commissioned in 1900, but not yet organized, whose proposed capital aggregated $1,500,000. This is a record unapproached in the South or in the country.

THE BOOZ INQUIRY RESUMED.

One Cadet Saw Breth Exhausted After Hazing—Another Describes a "Sammy Race."

WEST POINT, N. Y., Dec. 26.—After a Christmas recess of three days, the military court of inquiry resumed this afternoon its investigation of alleged brutal hazing at the West Point Military Academy.

Twelve witnesses were examined by Gens. Brooke, Bates, and Clous. They were all of the present first class and classmates of former Cadet Breth. One of them, Cadet Tidball of Virginia, swore that he had seen Breth exhausted after going through an exercising ordeal in camp in 1897.

All the witnesses were questioned as to whether they had held any conversation with other cadets as to the withholding of testimony at the investigation, and they all denied that such a thing occurred. They said that, on the contrary, all the cadets were anxious that everything should be told.

Horace Booz of Bristol, Penn., a brother of Oscar L. Booz, who died three weeks ago, will be here to-morrow, and it is understood that he is coming here to testify.

The first witness called to-day was Cadet B. F. Browne of Virginia, now of the first class. He described the ordeal of "skinning," "eagling," and other practices of the cadets. He said that the cadets generally did whatever they were told to do. Gen. Brooke asked:

How do you account for this implicit obedience?

The witness seemed to be puzzled for a moment, and then said:

Well, when I was a fourth-class man the idea of refusing to do all I was required never entered my head, Sir.

Was there any brutality?

No, Sir; there was no spirit of brutality in it. If there were brutality by word the fourth-class man would resent it.

Then he would have to fight and get beaten?

No; not always, Sir. The fourth-class men have won fights.

Do you know of any men being especially prepared or instructed in fighting?

No, Sir.

Was Cadet Keller prepared for his fight with Cadet Booz?

No, Sir; Keller was rather a poor boxer.

Did Keller ever have any other fight before he fought Booz?

No, Sir.

Then he was not known as a fighting man?

No, Sir.

The questions were evidently prompted by the receipt of a newspaper clipping sent to the court during the Christmas recess, which stated that unless a man was skilled in boxing he had no chance at West Point against cadets with bruising abilities.

Cadet Browne was exactly one hour on the stand, and his examination was the most thorough and exhaustive which has taken place since the court began its investigation.

Cadet Edward M. Shinkle of Ohio, another first class man, mentioned a form of hazing in vogue now, which he termed a "Sammy Race," and described as follows: "Two cadets were seated face to face with a table between them, each being supplied with a spoon, and they were instructed to feed each other."

Cadet Edward Canfield, Jr., of New York said that the Booz-Keller fight was the outcome of a retort Booz made to a cadet while he was on guard duty. Asked what the retort was, he replied: "I think it was 'Go to hell,' but I repeat that I cannot too severely condemn his action."

Cadet Prince A. Oliver of Illinois knew Cadet Breth. He said that Breth had told him that he (Breth) had undergone a painful operation before he came to the academy. The witness said that Breth was treated the same as the rest of the class. He thought that any fair-minded cadet would see that anything that was done to him was for his own good. "If a cadet were left severely alone it would be much more humiliating than if he got hazed." The witness went on to say that ostracism from the society of the cadet corps would become so unbearable that the men would have to resign. Cadet Booz was left very much alone after his fight with Keller. This was on account of his cowardice.

Kerr T. Riggs, a cadet from Kentucky, said he sat opposite Cadet Booz at table and Booz seemed to have a good appetite. The witness never heard Booz complain of his throat.

Cadet William Tidball of Virginia swore that on one occasion when in camp in 1897 Cadet Breth was exhausted from exercising, and he saw some cadets giving him whisky.

The court adjourned at 6 o'clock to reconvene at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Kipling's Motion Denied.

Justice Lacombe in the United States District Court yesterday denied the motion made by Rudyard Kipling's attorneys to restrain R. F. Fenno from publishing and selling editions of Kipling's works on which an elephant's head was used. The case was argued in November and attracted a great deal of attention in literary and publishing circles. Justice Lacombe in his decision states that an author whose productions have been given to the world without copyright cannot regulate the manner in which such reprinted matter shall be grouped and entitled.

Gov. Samford Says He Has Recovered.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 26.—W. J. Samford, who was elected Governor of Alabama in November, but has been too ill since to assume the duties of his office, reached here to-day from his home, in Opelika, and filed a declaration of recovery with the Secretary of State, required by a recently enacted law. During the Governor's illness President of the Senate Jelks filled the office.

ALDERMANIC ORATORY OF A PERSONAL NATURE

Mr. Bridges Declares Fellow-Member Has Paresis.

Park Scheme for Brooklyn Held Up Because a Member Bolted—New Century Resolution.

The Board of Aldermen held the last meeting of the year yesterday, and voted not to "stop the progress of the next century," as was threatened by Alderman Bridges. They did other things. Senator McCarren, one of the trusted lieutenants of Hugh McLaughlin, wanted a park scheme put through. To the surprise of all the politicians some of the Brooklyn members bolted and "defied" orders.

There was also an ordinance proposed to prevent the use or having "of a dangerous compound called gasoline" in any street, park, or dwelling. This ordinance emanated from a Tammany source. The Alderman who offered it said it was to protect the lives of servant girls and others.

Alderman Bridges charged the Dewey Celebration Committee with trying to get the members of the Board of Aldermen on a "leaky steamboat." One Alderman charged a fellow-member with having paresis. The charge was not denied.

The proposed park in the Fourteenth, Fifteenth and Seventeenth Wards of Brooklyn—in Senator Patrick H. McCarren's bailiwick—was brought up. A motion was made for immediate consideration. The park plan had been approved unanimously by the Council, and Senator McCarren was outside the Aldermanic Chamber urging members to vote for the park. Alderman Bridges bolted. He yelled at the top of his voice:

"This matter ought to go to committee. I got a park I want. Why don't you people push through my park scheme? Who is holding it up?"

Alderman Keeley pleaded that two hearings had been held on the plan, and it should be put through.

Alderman Bridges was escorted to the corridor, where Senator McCarren tried to persuade him that he should vote in favor of the resolution. He was defiant and said he would not "take orders," and that his park scheme would have to go through. The matter was referred to the Park Committee.

Alderman Goodman made a ringing speech of half an hour to induce the board to rescind a permit granted for a newspaper stand under an elevated stairway. The stand is at Eighth Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street. Mr. Goodman said:

"There is a petty political object in this matter. A resident of my district has been deprived of the right to make a living to give it to one who lives in another district."

The new century celebration plan was then considered. Alderman Muh wanted an appropriation of $4,000 passed. Then Alderman Bridges made a long speech. He said in part:

"What do we get? Look at the other celebrations that we vote the people's money to hold. Look at the way the committee in charge of the Dewey celebration treated the Aldermen. They had one steamboat left over. Some one said it was a leaky old tub, and was liable to sink at any minute. A member of the Dewey Committee said, 'Give it to the Board of Aldermen, and if it sinks the city won't lose much.'"

There was a roar of laughter. Alderman Bridges continued seriously:

"Is that the way to treat Aldermen? We sit here and vote money for celebrations, and they want to drown us in leaky old steamboats. Look at the celebration in City Hall Park when Mayor Van Wyck dug a hole, two by two, for the rapid transit tunnel. We walks down the steps of the City Hall and the policemen shoves us back. Is that the way to treat Aldermen?"

There was another roar of laughter.

"I don't need any century celebration in New York. I can have a celebration over in my district for $5. I'm fighting for the rights of youse members."

Alderman Goodman then denied that the Dewey Celebration Committee had not treated the Board of Aldermen with due courtesy. He said that a stand capable of holding 10,000 people was placed at their disposal.

"Yes, and our friends were fired out by the police," yelled Alderman Bridges. "There's a thing called paresis, and that's what's the matter with Alderman Goodman. When a man's got that he thinks he's right when he knows he's wrong."

Alderman Muh then asked that the appropriation for the celebration be fixed at $2,500, which was carried.

The Board of Aldermen then adjourned to meet on Jan. 8 in the new century.

GOODWIN ASSAILS PHILBIN.

Councilman Asks If the New District Attorney Wants the Earth.

District Attorney Philbin was harshly criticised by Councilman Goodwin, the Tammany leader of the Ninth Assembly District, at a meeting of the Municipal Council yesterday. The action of Councilman Goodwin was very much in the shape of a defiance of the District Attorney.

The matter came up in the Council when Stewart M. Brice asked President Guggenheimer whether the firm of Philbin, Beekman & Menken had served the members with a mandamus in the Hall of Records matter. Councilman Brice said the matter had been before the Council only four days, and there was undue haste in rushing into the courts for a mandamus. Councilman Goodwin became angry when the name of District Attorney Philbin was announced. He said in an angry and denunciatory tone:

"I cannot too strongly condemn the action of this law firm. Here is this new District Attorney, Mr. Philbin, acting as if he did not know his own name. He is a man who carries a history of his life around in his inside pocket all the time. We have had the report in this matter less than a week. What does this Philbin want the earth? I repeat that I cannot too severely condemn his action."

Then Councilman Goodwin turned to the reporters' table and said:

"You men know what I refer to, and you can make it as strong as you want."

The incident referred to by Councilman Goodwin was the fact that District Attorney Philbin stated at the Manhattan Club that his appointment as District Attorney came as a surprise, and then took from his pocket a sketch of his life and public record.

The Council then adjourned out of respect to the memory of Justice Beekman. The next meeting will be held on Monday, Jan. 7, 1901, at 2 o'clock.

THE DURYEA WILL CASE.

Application Made to Have the Document Probated—A Further Suit.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., Dec. 26.—Lawyer Honeyman, representing the estate of the late Edgar E. Duryea, the millionaire starch manufacturer, appeared in the Surrogate's Court to-day and submitted an application asking that the Duryea will be admitted to probate.

Counsel for the daughters of Mr. Duryea, who are the contestants, had previously served notice that the proceedings before the Surrogate, so far as the contestants were concerned, had been withdrawn. No one appeared to oppose the application made to-day, and the Surrogate said he would grant a decree admitting the will to probate, but said that he would postpone signing the decree until Saturday in order to give the contestant's attorney an opportunity to be heard on the matter of the costs of the recent contest before the Surrogate.

The contestants withdrew their opposition to the probating of the will in order to bring their suit in the Supreme Court.

MR. CLEVELAND'S VOTE.

He Says that He Did Not Cast Ballot for President McKinley.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 26.—A controversy having arisen between two Atlanta newspapers over the charge by one of them that ex-President Cleveland had voted for McKinley at the last election, The Atlanta Journal to-day received, in reply to a telegram, an autograph letter from Mr. Cleveland, in which he says he did not vote for President McKinley.

Commissioner of Charities Keller Prohibited Charges by Examiners in the Insane Pavilion.

There was a lengthy examination at the office of John W. Keller, Commissioner of Charities, yesterday afternoon in the various abuses alleged to have been practiced in Bellevue Hospital. Communications from inmates of the alcoholic and insane pavilions were put in shape, and this morning Dr. Fowler, Chairman of the Governing Committee of the Mills Training School for Trained Nurses) will have ready all the necessary evidence in regard to the charges against nurses of neglect and brutality to patients.

Commissioner Keller yesterday morning abolished the fee system at the insane pavilion at Bellevue. The system in question permitted the examiners in lunacy to charge a fee of $25 in the case of such patients as were sent to private institutions. He also spent some time yesterday in investigating the increased mortality among the foundlings sent from Randall's Island to North Brother Island. It was reported that eleven foundlings transferred all had died. Further investigation showed that of the twenty-four children other than foundlings sent to North Brother Island twelve died, eleven were returned to the Children's Hospital on Randall's Island, and one was unaccounted for, probably because discharged as cured.

Out of a total of 32 children transferred from the hospital suffering from contagious diseases 18 died and 13 were returned to the hospital. Mrs. Dunphy, Superintendent of all of the institutions on Randall's Island, has been requested to make a full report of the mortality to the Commissioner. She started to go over the books yesterday with a staff of clerks, under the direction of Commissioner Keller and Homer Folks. Mrs. Dunphy reported that the mortality for the year 1900, omitting the last three months, showed a percentage of 40.67. The year 1899 complete put the mortality figure at 45.05. Mrs. Dunphy attributed the increase to the epidemic of measles in February, March, and April.

In the discussion of the insane pavilion abuses, which followed a suggestion from Dr. A. E. McDonald of the Manhattan State Hospital that the indigent insane be sent direct to that institution without the "round about way" was offered. The idea was opposed by Commissioner Keller. The Commissioner stated that after examination of fifteen of the inmates of the alcoholic ward who were confined in that place at the time that Thomas Wright and Dr. Lent were inmates, he had dismissed the nurses because eight of the witnesses had claimed that they were treated with brutality and neglect. The statements of the eight patients will be handed to Dr. Fowler for action of the board after the inquest in the Hilliard case, which will be held to-day in the Coroner's office.

During the investigation Edward A. Dunn, who was seized with an epileptic fit on Monday and sent to the alcoholic ward in Bellevue, complained of the loss of $2.30 after his admission there. He said that one of the nurses had taken his money from him, and when he left the place he was handed three one-dollar bills. Investigation showed that that was the amount the man had when he entered. The nurse, Ira M. Chapman, however, had violated the rules in taking Dunn's money without another nurse being present, and was dismissed. The Commissioner concluded by stating that he had asked Dr. Alan McLane Hamilton to call on him. Dr. Hamilton did so, and told a story of alleged wrongs.

When seen last night Commissioner Keller said that he wanted it distinctly understood that he had no fault to find with the Health Department on account of the large mortality reported among foundlings. "The statement that the children were exposed during the transfer from Randall's to North Brother Island has no basis," he said. "I have found nothing to indicate any such thing in my investigations. Indeed, I am not sure that more would not have died if they had not been transferred."

When shown a statement that sane men are railroaded through the hospital by relatives who are interested in getting them out of the way, Commissioner Keller said:

"That is perfectly absurd. People who wanted to do that sort of thing wouldn't have to come to Bellevue. There are plenty of examiners who could pass on the cases.

"The State institution does not have to receive a patient who might be committed but who was not insane. Personally, however, I favor commitments for insanity in open court."

Dr. Wildman, the insanity expert, of 108 West Ninety-fourth Street, when questioned last night concerning the order to abolish the fee system, said the tr

All Around the Store

Marseilles Bureau Covers. We have received a new assortment of the scarce Marseilles Bureau covers, in handsome patterns and with patent fringe, which will not ravel out. Prices for 14x48 in., 35c, 50c and 75c; for 28x48 in., 50c, 75c, $1 and $1.25.

Royale Gloves. These are the new washable gloves, for women, 2-clasp pique, with point stitching; in mode, tan, pearl and white. A stylish and excellent glove. $1.50 a pair.

Glace Fruit. Our own importation. An especially fine quality. Sold only in 5-lb. boxes, assorted, at $1.50 a box.

$2.25 Women's Stockings at $1.50. They're an unusually fine quality of silk—black, of course; with dainty black silk clocks. Soles, heels and toes are made extra strong. A pair of them will make a welcome New Year's gift.

Warm Petticoats for the cold wave. These comfortable and timely garments are of knit zephyr; some in solid color—light blue, pink, red, gray or white, others with border of silk or zephyr in contrasting colors. 75c to $2.

Men's Underwear. This eager and nipping air is a pointed warning to those men who have hitherto neglected to replenish their supply of winter underclothing. Some excellent values at $1 a garment are heavy weight, natural colored merino shirts and drawers—the best we know of for the price.

The $15 Raglan Overcoats for Men are without doubt the swellest ready-made garments shown in New York. Full of style and wearing possibilities.

Blacking Cases for home use. Of oak and walnut, at $1.15 to $4.25. Also a good assortment of blacking and brushes to fit them out with.

Children's White Dresses, daintily trimmed with lace or embroidery, in long-waisted or Mother Hubbard effect, some with trimmed skirts, are here in unexampled variety. Sizes from 6 months to 4 years. Prices $1.25 to $50.

Hassocks. An attractive lot of them, in round, oval and elliptical shapes, of Wilton, Axminster, Velvet and Brussels, are 50c to $2 each.

Italian Silk Blankets, Otherwise called slumber-robes. In beautiful color combinations of true Italian richness, and of excellent decorative effect. Prices 80c, $1.50, $2, $2.50 and $5 each.

Foulard Silks. Already our collection of new styles for 1901 surpasses our efforts of previous years, even later in the season. Many of the designs are exclusively ours. Prices range from 65c to $1 a yard.

Venetian Lanterns. They add a warm glow to the Oriental room, the hall, or the cosy corner. The present gathering, with panels of ruby or amber glass, is lower-priced than usual. 85c to $6.

Men's Suits

Reduced. Stylish, conscientiously made, durable suits, at very substantial price reductions. But unfortunately not in all sizes. Sizes 35, 36, and 38 are all gone—maybe one or two of each left. Plenty of all the remaining sizes. The offering is one of small lots, gathered up from our best $12 to $16.50 suits—principally our splendid $15 grades.

Choose at $10 a suit

Mostly of the new fancy cheviots. The new popular military sack coat forms part of many of these suits. Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Boys' Clothing

Is the boy's storm ulster ready? Nice weather tempts parents to forget the warm coat till the storm is here; and many a youngster goes shivering to school because his need had not been anticipated before the storm came.

To-day's word is of two particularly worthy kinds.

Warm reefers of sturdy frieze, with high storm collar; well made throughout. Sizes for 6 to 16 years. Price, $5.

Ulsters for the boys of 3 to 12 years; with Russian hood and belt; made of blue or Oxford frieze, lined with wool. Price, $8.50.
Second floor, Ninth street.

Men's Underwear

Warm, honestly made, moderately priced underwear in unexcelled variety. Here are just a few samples from the collection—we think them exceptionally fine goods and excellent values. We're pretty well informed, too, as to the market.

$1 a garment—Shirts and drawers of heavy natural colored merino; seams covered throughout; pearl buttons; drawers in short or regular length inseam.

$1.50 a garment—Shirts and drawers, fashioned and regular made; natural colored merino; heavy or medium weight; drawers have extra strong reinforced seats; short or regular length inseams.

$2.50 a garment—English pure Llama wool shirts or drawers; fashioned and regular made; drawers have spliced fronts; seats are spliced and reinforced; inseams short or regular length.

TOYS Reduced

Odd lots of toys and games and animals that should be delighting youthful hearts elsewhere, instead of lingering here. They're given a hint that they might be better employed, by these price reductions—some one-third, others one-half less than regular:

Various breeds of dogs—some of the 50c canines are now 35c.
Some woolysheep that were $3 are now $2, and the $1.75 kind are reduced to $1.25.
Elephants—big fellows, made of papier mache, at $1, instead of $1.25.
Toy Store, Ninth street, south side.

Crokinole boards at 75c, instead of $1.
Bicycle races at 15c, instead of 25c.
Kriss Kringles are receiving shabby treatment, too—50c, instead of 75c.
Some imported pieces, doll's furniture, and so on at half prices.

Sewing Machines

This tells af no other kind excepting "The Wanamaker." It's the best we know—the lowest-priced, thoroughly good machine you know to-day. We named this machine—named it after seeing that it combined in itself all the excellent features of other machines, and possessed others besides.

The "Wanamaker Sewing machines," in various models, are sold here just as other merchandise—no canvassers are employed; nor instructors, outside of the store; nor are they sold on installments. The saving of these needless expenses will be readily noticed in the prices.

There's one style at $18. A perfect, thoroughly complete machine. Another is $19—it is fitted with special hemmers. A third at $20—with extra drawers. $22.50 for another model with additional attachments, and so on up to $35—the higher priced sorts representing fine elaborate cabinet work.

NOTIONS

Not nearly so much fun in buying these painfully practical little things as there is in seeking out pretty gifts to make others happy. But we simply must have notions—the every-day needfuls for dressing-table and sewing-room. Let's have them right—worthy goods like these—especially as they may be had for no more than the many inferior sorts.

The New Washable SHIRT WAISTS

The new styles for 1901 are here, and shown to-day. It is a refreshing and interesting display. The styles are decidedly new. There are radical departures from the effects in vogue last season. The box plaits, full sleeves, strap cuffs, are features; as are the sailor collars and bolero effects in the finer ones. There is all the broad diversity of styles that manufacturers will take the time to make now; but which will dwindle later on to the few styles that are made by thousands when hurry orders are coming. The most beautiful and exclusive styles can be selected now.

Side by side are the displays of Colored Waists and White Waists—fresh, crisp, dainty and tempting—a pretty picture and a study of style.

This brief indication of the sorts and prices:

Colored Shirt Waists—

At 50c—Waists in stripes and figures; full front, French back; shirt sleeves, with narrow cuffs.
At 75c—Waists in solid colors and stripes; plain, full fronts; shirt sleeves.
At 85c—Waists of percale, gingham and cambric; new sleeves and soft cuffs.
At $1—Waists of percale; box-plaited back and front; new sleeves; box-plaited cuffs.
At $1.50—Waists of prettily striped gingham; full front, plaited back; soft cuffs.
At $1.75—Waists of striped madras, in pretty shades; new style collar and cuffs.
At $2.25—Waists of chambray, with vest and revers of white pique; collar trimmed with white pique.
At $2.50—Waists of silk-finished chambray; plaited back and front with pocket; collar, cuffs and pocket trimmed with white lawn.
At $2.75—Waists of silk gingham, with sailor collar, vest and tie of solid color.
Other styles up to $4.75.

White Waists—

A beautiful array of dainty white lawn waists, plaited and hemstitched; some of lace and embroidery in most charming effects; made with the new sleeves and trimmed stocks.
Prices, 85c, $1, $2.25, and up to $9.
Second floor, Tenth street.

Women's Jackets Under-price

This tells of a group of about a hundred and twenty-five of our better jackets, mostly imported. They are the fine sorts that we kept in good variety until all Christmas wants were supplied. Now you expect less of us and we let down the price to a figure that should take them away in a hurry.

The collection includes three-quarter-length coats of mixtures and double-faced tweeds; and short jackets, mostly in black, though some are in tan and other colors; of kerseys, meltons, Ottoman and Oxford cheviot. Prices have been $20 to $28. To-day choose for fifteen dollars each

Good assortment of sizes; but the entire offering should be sold out quickly.
Second floor, Broadway.

News of SHOES

The holiday festivities and functions have their own requirements in the matter of footwear. These are provided here in most satisfying variety—the top-notch of grace and style, made and finished in most expert manner. These hints of Fancy Shoes and Slippers for women:

Dress Shoes for Men—This news from the Bargain Shoe Store: Men's patent leather shoes at $1.90 and $2.65. All the patent leather dress shoes in the bargain store are consolidated in two lots, and just now when dress shoes are needed most you can choose a pair and save nearly half the cost.
Sample shoes at $2.45. All sorts of styles and leathers, but only sizes 6½, 7 and 7½, B and C. But you get twice the worth of your money.

Women's Shoes—In the Basement Shoe Store:
At $1—About 600 pairs of all kinds—mainly small and large sizes; all grades from $2 to $5, but few of each sort.
At $1.80—Patent leather, lace and button; fine kidskin, lace and button; samples of $3 and $4 shoes, in all leathers. Rare chance for a little picking.

Interesting News of DINNER SETS

The most tremendous holiday selling of Chinaware that this store has ever known has left its odds and ends. Now good storekeeping demands that these small lots be sold out clean; hence these offerings to-day. Some of our best patterns are included—Dinner Sets that had no equals anywhere at their regular prices. They are splendid bargains as priced to-day; but the number of sets is naturally limited, and only prompt folks will share them.

The New Cottons

More of the new Cotton Dress Goods have arrived to be added to the collection to-day. A particularly interesting addition, for here are those lustrous fabrics that have silk mixed with the cotton—adding elegance to daintiness—and the patterns have the refined delicacy that sits so appropriately on the filmy textures. These two:

Printed Satin-striped Dimity, in some two score attractive new designs, with the satin stripes so spaced as to bring out the pattern most prominently. Price, 50c yard.

Corded Satin-striped Mousseline de Soie, woven of pure silk one way, and cotton the other; these come in self colorings, with prominent satin stripes, edged with clusters of fancy cords. Shown in these colorings:
Light Blue, Turquoise Blue, Pink, Cream, Heliotrope
Marine Blue, Royal Blue, Gray, Black
Price, 75c a yard.

Still plenty of the Printed Dimities at 12½c a yard

Had we ordered these goods from a Belfast maker, the retail price would be twenty-five cents a yard. But we bought them of a bright Yankee who risked his capital and took chances of disposing of his goods by making up a large quantity in excess of his orders taken. He accepted our offer for some forty thousand yards, the quality of which is just as fine as the Belfast goods. And the patterns are just what you would select from a thousand.

Foulard, monogram, floral, polka-dots, and figures in black on white grounds, divided by fancy stripes.

About FURS

These electric seal coats are wonderfully like the real seal in appearance. Experts are able to distinguish the difference. You couldn't tell, perhaps, nor the many others to whom the garments may be submitted. Handsome coats, made in the latest styles. And some of them are reduced in price to-day.

Here's one—a short coat—with blended mink collar and revers, at $37.50; was $45.
Eton jackets of electric seal, at $30 each; were $37.50 to $45.
And another good value: Some rich, bright electric seal coats at $65, that are fairly worth $25 more.
Many handsome styles of scarfs and collarettes, all at very reasonable prices.
Second floor, Broadway.

Women's Dresses

This word is of some stylish Tailor-made Suits that came in yesterday. They are made of black pebble cheviot, with fly-front jacket with revers faced with taffeta silk; entire suit lined with silk. The price—

$22.50 a suit

Then we have to-day a lot of Dress Skirts of black taffeta silk; the upper part of skirt being laid in tiny plaits; bottom made with flaring flounce; some trimmed with velvet ribbon, others with ruching of taffeta. Price $10. Worth much more. Second floor, Broadway.

Girls' Dresses

These are pretty imported dresses; beautifully made, of plain and striped materials, neatly trimmed. One and two-piece dresses—some have Russian blouse, others have box-plaited waist. Sizes for girls of 6 to 12 years. Values $12 to $17.50. To-day choose for

Paris Notes from the office of JOHN WANAMAKER

44, RUE DES PETITES-ECURIES,
PARIS, December 11, 1900.

The thoughts of the "mondaines" are turning to evening gowns, for this winter season is expected to be an exceptionally brilliant one in the "Ville Lumiere." Evening dress fashions, as viewed in the sacred precincts of the salons of the "Rois de la Mode" can be summed up in a few words,—the lightness of chiffon, tulle and crepe de Chine and lace for the "jeunes filles"—exquisite brocades and pannes for the "jeunes femmes"; a touch of gold invariably introduced if at all possible; a judicious use of flowers on the corsage, and frequently on the skirt also; the most exquisite laces and guipures introduced into the design of the gown in some way, nearly always in the shape of incrustations; and above all the style brought into favor by the Empress Josephine, under the First Empire.

The Empire gowns of to-day are, of course, belted under the bust by a broad band of some very handsome trimming, but the waistline is more fully indicated than it was, judging from the pictures, in the First Napoleon's days. In fact the Empire effect is arrived at by having a tight-fitting Princess robe of satin or gold cloth up to the bust, covered with a lace robe that is only slightly shaped in to the figure, then a belt under the bust and a short bodice above, with small puffed sleeves. The skirt portion of the gown is generally trimmed with trailing embroideries. Pain'ed satin is much used as Empire evening gown ornamentation, and trails of artificial flowers are in keeping.

We have verily returned to the Golden Age, but the wisest amongst the Paris couturiers are moderate in their enthusiasm and allow the gold trimmings only to accentuate the beauty of others. Gold modified by black is held to be in excellent taste. It is also seen to very great advantage on white, but is apt to be garish when presented in too great quantities alone. Large poppies and peonies made of gold tissue, are among the latest trimmings for evening dresses, and smaller ones are frequently used for headgear.

Talking of evening headgear, it is the fashion just now to add much decoration to the evening coiffure; small diamond side combs surrounding the upstanding coil on the summit of the head, are very fashionable; also those which support an aigrette in precious stones, a sort of miniature tiara, backed by a spreading osprey. The "coiffure" has not undergone the change which this winter season was to inaugurate, although a few coiffeurs are endeavoring to induce their fair customers to return to a chignon at the nape of the neck; but the hair done on the top of the head is most becoming to most of the Parisiennes, and is still worn almost exclusively in this manner.

A very lovely notion is to have a gown made with a lining of a network of gold or gold tissue, laid over a satin foundation and then covered with a drapery of Luxeuil lace. The gold shimmers through the delicate white lace with charming effect, and this notion is particularly effective when the gown is made in the Empire style. A gorgeous dress just finished for a Grande Duchesse is entirely composed of cloth of gold moire. This most exquisite glittering material has cut-out gold satin leaves, and flowers appliqued, edged with gold beads and chenille. The design is continued on to a lace flounce, which falls in a fullness over a gold mousseline de soie kilting. Such gown, of course, can only be worn on very special occasions, and, as an instance of what is called "French daring" it is certainly unique.

Costliness and luxury are not only displayed in evening gowns, but also in toilettes for day wear. Fur takes a most important place in these, and the Sunday race-meetings at Auteuil resolve themselves into an exhibition of all that is most elegant and beautiful in furs, among which blue fox, zibeline and astrakhan predominate. Last Sunday, the Viscomtesse Vigier was to be seen in the Pesage wearing a three-quarter coat of zibeline and a red velvet toque. Another lady, in a steel gray cloth gown, had on a beautiful sealskin coat with revers and gilet of chinchilla; her muff was of sealskin, lined with chinchilla. With a brown cloth dress was seen a sealskin coat, with brown velvet gilet, fastening with "pattes" of chinchilla and handsome gold and steel buttons. The collar of chinchilla was outlined with sealskin; the muff in chinchilla, striped with bands of sealskin, and a toque of sealskin, very broad and low in the crown, trimmed with Christmas roses.

This mixture of chinchilla and sealskin was most tastefully arranged, as only the Parisian furrier knows how. Harmonies in fur and material seem to be preferred by the smartest women, such as gray cloth with chinchilla, brown with sealskin, golden brown with zibeline, and black with astrakhan.

GARDINER OUT, PHILBIN IN

Deposed District Attorney Made Successor's Entry Easy.

New Official Took Up Business of the Department Aided by the Old Staff —Few Changes Expected.

Asa Bird Gardiner, deposed as District Attorney by Gov. Roosevelt, relinquished his office yesterday to his successor, Eugene A. Philbin; and then, once more a private citizen, walked out on Broadway to hunt for quarters for a new office. District Attorney Philbin yesterday occupied himself until five o'clock familiarizing himself with his new duties and becoming acquainted with his staff of assistants. Conferences were held by him with all those having in charge important cases, and particularly with Assistant District Attorneys Unger, Osborne, and McIntyre. These, it is believed, are certain to be retained in office.

The new District Attorney, accompanied by his law partner, S. S. Menken, filed the certificate of his appointment with Deputy County Clerk Fahrbach, a short time after nine o'clock, and half an hour later Mr. Philbin, with his secretary, Samuel Shortridge, appeared at the District Attorney's office in the Criminal Court Building. Col. Gardiner's personal attendant, Officer Palmer, showed his new chief into the office. All of the staff to the number of twenty-four, were present. Col. Gardiner stepped out of the elevator five minutes after Mr. Philbin entered, and introduced himself to his successor. The incoming and outgoing officers remained in conference half an hour, when the members of the District Attorney's staff were sent for. When all were assembled Col. Gardiner, turning to Mr. Philbin, said:

"Gentlemen, this is the new District Attorney, Mr. Philbin. I should like to make this statement before I go further—I would like it clearly understood that I do not surrender voluntarily, and that I protest against the action of the Governor as being without authority of law. I am anxious, while protesting against this act and reserving all my legal rights, that the public business shall not be injured or retarded, and, to that end, I will be pleased to cooperate with you for the public's interest in any way that you may think best."

"I thank you for your kind words," replied Mr. Philbin cordially. "It was hardly necessary to make the offer, because I felt assured that you would give me every assistance in your power. I shall not fail to call upon you."

That Col. Gardiner's protest against removal meant a determination to contest it in the courts Mr. McIntyre denied. "Col. Gardiner has no such intention," he said. "His statement was merely to guard against any possible contingency."

Turning to his former assistants again, Col. Gardiner, beginning with John F. McIntyre, presented each in turn, praising many and having kind words for all. Col. Gardiner presented last the law librarian, Brig. Gen. Bartlett, adding, "My friend and associate in the army for thirty years." At the recent election Gen. Bartlett was arrested by a McCullagh deputy. His discharge was asked for by Col. Gardiner personally, and immediately granted by Magistrate Deuel. This fact was incorporated in Deputy Attorney General Hammond's charges. District Attorney Philbin's greeting to his assistants was brief. "Gentlemen, I can only say I am glad to meet you," he said.

Col. Gardiner then accompanied District Attorney Philbin to the chambers of Judge Foster, sitting in Part 1., General Sessions. Mr. Philbin was also introduced to Judge Cowing. Recorder Goff entered his chambers at the time Col. Gardiner entered Judge Foster's room, but Col. Gardiner made no move to go into the Recorder's room. This action was regarded by the attaches of the office as an intentional slight. Relations between the two have been far from cordial for many months. Later, it was said, however, that Col. Gardiner did not know the Recorder was in the building.

Taking leave of Mr. Philbin, Col. Gardiner proceeded to the Law Library, where his entire professional staff had gathered, and there, the closest friends, he bade farewell to each. Tears flowed from his eyes when he concluded. As Col. Gardiner, departing, hurried to the elevator, Mr. McIntyre, in a last burst of feeling, threw his arms around his former chief, and kissed him on the cheek. "God bless you, John," responded Col. Gardiner brokenly. "I'll never forget you."

District Attorney Philbin busied himself with his accumulated mail for some time, and then summoned Assistant District Attorney Unger, with whom he conferred regarding urgent cases to be presented to the Grand Jury. His first official act was to sign the indictment papers of J. Fletcher Sherra, charged by Gen. Daniel Sickles with defrauding him of $40,000. District Attorney Philbin remained at his office until five o'clock, one hour after the official day ends. When asked for some statement to the public, he said:

"I do not care to say anything more than I have said until I have familiarized myself with the duties of the District Attorney's office. Regarding probable removals among the office employees, the assistants say that Mr. Philbin intends to look up the record of each before making any changes.

JANITOR HALED TO COURT.

Tenant Had the Little "Autocrat" Arrested, but His Big Wife Defends Him.

There were some widely different stories told yesterday in the Yorkville Police Court regarding the strained relations existing between Dr. Michael C. Carroll, who lives on the fourth floor of the apartment house at 186 Second Avenue, and Walter Framberg, the janitor of the premises. The janitor was the prisoner in the case. He is of diminutive stature, but the enraged tenant charged him with being an autocrat even among the autocratic tribe of janitors. Dr. Carroll charged Framberg with shouting derogatory remarks up the dumb waiter at him, making unseemly noises outside his door, and hurling uncomplimentary observations after him from various colgns of vantage. Michael Malley, an employe of the doctor, testified to substantially the same facts. The janitor, who had been arrested by Policeman Kraus, did not say much beyond denying the facts, and was held in $400 bail for good conduct in the future.

His wife, who was seen in the apartment house, and is about twice the size of her husband, told a story entirely different from Dr. Carroll's. She charged police brutality for one thing, and declared that Dr. Carroll was a crank.

"My husband is the best little man in the world," she said, "but he will drink once in a while, and yesterday, you know, was Christmas. He took just one drink too many. He never had any trouble with any of the tenants but Dr. Carroll, who is a great big man, while Walter is only a little fistful of bones.

"Well, yesterday evening he was outside the doctor's door when Mrs. Carroll, who don't like Swedes, told him to go away. My husband had been drinking, and he didn't go. Then Dr. Carroll came out and pushed him down stairs and shouted at him. Pretty soon along came a big policeman, twice as big as my little husband. He just looked at Walter and went away. Pretty soon he came back with another policeman. My husband asked them what they wanted, but they didn't say a word, but just kept walking around him. Then Walter ran into the flat, and they followed, both pounding him with their clubs. I tried to run in between them, but one of the policemen grabbed me and pushed me away. Finally they had my husband lying on the floor bleeding. Then they picked him up and took him away."

The other tenants said that Framberg, barring an occasional lapse by drinking, was a good janitor, and never gave any one any trouble.

Death of Capt. Aaron E. Atkins.

Aaron E. Atkins died at his home at 544 Union Street, Union Hill, Monday. He was sixty-eight years old. He was Captain of the tugboat Col. F. Young, which was sunk in the Hudson River near Irvington two years ago. Capt. Atkins floated about on a piece of timber until daylight, when he was rescued in an unconscious condition. He never recovered from the effects of the exposure.

DIAMONDS IN NEW MEXICO?

Stones Supposed to be the Gems Found by a Man Formerly With the De Beers Company.

Special to The New York Times.

ALAMOGORDO, N. M., Dec. 26.—A prominent railway official here to-day received a box of fifty gems closely resembling and alleged to be diamonds, found near Capitan, the coal camp of the El Paso and Northeastern Railway Company, eighty miles north of this place.

The stones were found by J. J. Blow, formerly associated with the De Beers Consolidated Company at Kimberley, South Africa, and a letter from him accompanying the shipment states that they are either diamonds or something so closely resembling the gems that they deceive him. They successfully stand every crude test known, and it is the consensus of opinion of those interested in the matter that they are real diamonds.

The formation of the Capitan diamond district is identical with that of the Kimberley South African region, and there is scarcely a doubt but what the find is bona fide.

Gardner Williams, Manager of the De Beers Consolidated Company, has been asked by cable to come at once, report on the find, and take charge of the operations.

The Linderman Company owns considerable ground in the supposed diamond belt, and it will doubtless arrange to have the holdings thoroughly prospected. Officials of the El Paso and Northeastern Railway have formed a company and instructed Mr. Blow to secure for them a tract of land in the belt.

MANY FILIPINO LEPERS.

Report of Major Edie Says It Is Estimated There Are 30,000 of Them.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—An appended report to Gen. MacArthur's review of the civil affairs of the Philippines for the past fiscal year gives some rather startling facts regarding the introduction and prevalence of leprosy in the islands.

According to the estimates of the Franciscan Fathers, says Major Guy L. Edie, the writer of the report, there are no less than 30,000 lepers in the archipelago, the major portion of these being in the Visayas. Leprosy was introduced in 1633, when the Emperor of Japan sent a ship with 150 lepers on board to the Philippines to be cared for by the Catholic priests. Thus the seed was planted, and as no practical methods were ever adopted to eradicate the disease or to prevent its spread it has taken firm root. A house-to-house inspection begun last January resulted in more than a hundred lepers concealed in dwellings being found. These were sent to San Lazaro Hospital, in Manila, but many others escaped into the surrounding country.

A commission is now engaged in the work of selecting a suitable island or islands for the purpose of isolating all the lepers in the archipelago.

THE NEW GOVERNOR OF BENGUET.

Mr. Root Does Not Know of Appointment of a British Subject.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—Secretary Root said to-day that he had not been informed of the appointment of H. T. Whitmarsh as Governor of Benguet, Province of Luzon, but, as all such appointments are subject to the approval of the War Department, he undoubtedly would get the information in due course of time. He was confident that if the Philippine Commission had appointed Whitmarsh Governor of Benguet it was a thoroughly proper appointment.

No protest against the appointment had been made, so far as he was aware, on the ground that Mr. Whitmarsh was a British subject or for any other reason. The cable is not used by the Philippine Commission in reporting such matters, the mails being regarded as sufficient for such purposes, and the Secretary said he supposed the usual course would be followed in the case of Mr. Whitmarsh.

THE UNITED SERVICE.

Army.

The resignation by Major James T. Kerr, Assistant Adjutant General, of his commission as Captain of infantry, only, has been accepted and took effect Dec. 11.

Capt. Erin B. Tillotson, Ordnance Department, will report in person for consultation on official business to the Chief of Ordnance.

Navy.

Capt. C. S. Sperry is ordered to duty as member of the naval examining board, Washington Yard, Dec. 26.

Lieut. A. B. Hoff is detached from the Massachusetts; he will proceed home; sick leave is granted him for one month.

Ensign I. T. Cooper, retired, is ordered to duty on the Saratoga, Dec. 26.

Ensign E. S. Hayden, retired, is ordered to duty in the Office of Naval Intelligence Dec. 26.

Commander John J. Hunker and Lieut. Commander D. H. Mahan have qualified for promotion to the next higher grade.

Movements of Government Vessels.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—The Kearsarge and Massachusetts touched at Key West this morning and proceeded to Pensacola.

The training ship Dixie has left Genoa for Gibraltar.

The Vicksburg sailed to-day from Aden for Colombo.

The Scindia arrived at Colombo yesterday.

The Atlanta has arrived at Montevideo.

The Solace and the Monadnock arrived at Hongkong to-day.

The Essex has arrived at the Norfolk Navy Yard.

The hospital ship Solace is expected to arrive at Yokohama Jan. 10.

The Hartford, which was ordered to watch American interests in Venezuela, and co-operate with United States Minister Loomis in their protection, has left Curacao for La Guayra. The Navy Department announces that she will visit Trinidad and Barbados after leaving La Guayra.

The transports Wyefield and Westminster have arrived at Nagasaki on their way to San Francisco from the Philippines.

The transport Sedgwick arrived at Havana yesterday from Matanzas.

The collier St. Mark arrived at Manila Dec. 20.

The transports Conemaugh, Fredrica, and Upack have arrived at Nagasaki on their way to San Francisco.

The Navy Department has directed that the gunboat Bennington be repaired in the Philippines instead of returning to this country for that purpose. The Bennington has been found to be one of the most serviceable craft in Asiatic waters, owing to her light draft, so that the department has not felt warranted in having her make the long trip home to undergo repairs.

May Recruit Sailors from Farms.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—A plan to recruit sailors for the United States Navy from the farms and country towns is now under consideration at the Navy Department. Recruiting now is carried on outside of the large cities, but it has not reached the interior sections remote from large centres.

STUPIDITY COST $4,000 FIRE.

Custodian of Alarm Box Key Would Not Give It Up.

Through the stupidity of a man who was intrusted with a fire alarm box key and who did not have intelligence enough to give it up when it was wanted, the two-story residence of Mordock S. Campbell, a carpenter, in Rockfield Street, near Valentine Avenue, in the Bronx, was destroyed by fire early yesterday morning. Mr. Campbell, his wife, and two-year-old daughter, sleeping on the second floor, were aroused at 3 o'clock by the smell of smoke. The hallways filled with flame so quickly that the tenants were forced to take refuge on the roof of the piazza, which extended beneath the bedroom windows.

They stood there clad only in their night clothes until rescued with great difficulty by Albert Boerl, who lives directly across the street, and Timothy O'Connor, who is stopping with him. Boerl then ran to the nearest fire alarm box, which was one of the old kind that must be opened with a key. A sign announced that the key was in Grammar School No. 88, in Briggs Avenue. Boerl ran to the school. His call was tardily answered by Assistant Janitor Gustav Steiger.

"I've got nothing to do with fires on the outside," answered Steiger to a demand for the key.

"Well, let me ring the school alarm," said Boerl.

"You'll have to go around and see Mr. Oliver, the janitor, who lives on Summit Avenue," came the reply.

Remonstrance was useless, and Boerl ran to find the janitor. He met a neighbor, and the two returned to the schoolhouse and again tried to get the key. Steiger grew angry and shut the door on them. After half an hour a key was obtained from another source, but by the time the alarm reached the firemen the house was doomed. Other buildings were in great danger. The total damage was $4,000. When Battalion Chief McCartney heard of Steiger's action he said he would make an investigation.

FINANCIER SAYRE SUED

Miss Kirtland Seeks to Recover $4,500 from the Speculator.

She Alleges that She Cannot Get an Accounting from Him—Said to Have Made Millions in Three Years.

If Adolph Monnell Sayre, who is reputed to have become a millionaire in the past three years through the rise in Boston copper stocks, and who up to last July lived at 683 Fifth Avenue, does not appear within the next six weeks to defend a suit for $4,500 brought against him by Miss Maude H. Kirtland of Washington, D. C., whatever property he has in this city will be attached to satisfy her claims.

Miss Kirtland alleges that she gave to Sayre $4,500 in May, 1899, on the understanding that he was to invest it for her in some dividend-paying stock, and that she has received no return for it, and has been unable to get it back. Her lawyer, Henry Wollman of 20 Broad Street, says that he has been searching for Sayre for months to serve on him a complaint in the suit. He is sure, he says, that he is neither in this city nor in Washington, where he also had a residence. Yesterday Justice Leventritt, in the Supreme Court, issued an attachment against whatever property he may have in the State and an order of publication covering six weeks. An announcement of the summons is to be published in THE NEW YORK TIMES and The New York Law Journal, and if Sayre does not appear within the six weeks the attachment will go into effect.

Sayre first came into prominence a little over a year ago, when it was said that by adroit speculation in Calumet and Hecla stock he had acquired a fortune exceeded by only ten in this country. His mother is a clerk in one of the departments in Washington, and his great-grandfather was Thomas T. Woodruff, the founder of the Chemical Bank.

After his graduation from Harvard he came to this city. He had a small amount of money, and began to speculate in Wall Street, where it was generally supposed that he was making money at a rapid rate. In two years he had a magnificently furnished residence at 683 Fifth Avenue and another in Washington, and was living in the style generally affected by millionaires.

Miss Kirtland, who is a resident of Washington, says in her complaint that she has known Sayre from boyhood. She heard of his fame as a financier and went to him for advice in regard to the investment of $4,500 which she had. She says that he took the money, giving her a receipt for it, and promised to invest it in a safe stock which would pay her a good interest on her money. She had implicit confidence in him, she says, and expected to get some return for her money. She says that she received no interest on her money and called on Sayre several times, but that he always made some excuse to put her off. Recently, when she learned that he had closed up his New York residence and was unable to find him in Washington, she became suspicious, and finally determined to bring a suit against him.

Mr. Wollman, who is acting as her attorney, says that he has been unable to find any trace of him, and believes that he is out of the State. "He closed up his house on Fifth Avenue last July," he said. "When I sent a man there he found that the house was empty and to let. I then instituted inquiries to find out what property he has in this State. I do not think it expedient to say just what his property is. I know, however, that he owns stock worth more than $4,500. I also know that he never made the large amounts of money he is said to have made."

Mr. Wollman appeared before Justice Leventritt in the Supreme Court yesterday and secured the orders of publication and attachment. In his affidavit he asserted that it was evident that there were good grounds for a suit against Sayre, and that it was also evident that the plaintiff was unable to find him.

MR. CHANLER MAY NOT RETURN.

S. B. Lyons of Bloomingdale Believes His Plan Was Prearranged.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Dec. 26.—There is every reason to believe now that John Armstrong Chanler, the millionaire, who escaped from Bloomingdale Asylum at White Plains on Nov. 28 last, never intends to return to that institution as he said he would. Samuel B. Lyons, Superintendent of Bloomingdale, said to-day that he firmly believes that Chanler has gone for good. "I believe," said he, "that Mr. Chanler is waiting for a month to expire so he will be a free man, and that he is hiding with friends. At the expiration of a month after the time a patient leaves an asylum, under the State lunacy law, he cannot be brought back."

It was learned to-day that Mr. Chanler always believed his relatives were his enemies, and for that reason the general opinion is that he has gone to West Virginia, where he owns a large stock farm. He often talked of going there and living a quiet life, as he was tired of society, clubs, and business.

DR. DIXON UNDECIDED.

Expects a Call from Boston Church, but Likes His Brooklyn Work.

The Rev. Dr. Amzi C. Dixon, pastor of the Hanson Place Baptist Church, Brooklyn, when seen last evening in regard to the call reported to have been extended to him to become the pastor of the Ruggles Street Baptist Church, Boston, said that he had not yet received such a call, but it was likely that he would receive one soon. Asked if he would accept the call, Dr. Dixon said that he would not decide until he had considered the matter from every point of view and talked it over with the officers of his church.

He liked Brooklyn, he said, but there was a great field in the work of the Boston church. The late R. S. Ford, proprietor of The Youth's Companion, had endowed the Ruggles Street Church with $20,000 a year to enable it to carry on its institutional work. He had also bequeathed the sum of $350,000 for a new church edifice. The church had departments for aiding people in obtaining employment and also industrial and other schools. Dr. Dixon said that if he went to Boston he would carry out there the roof garden scheme which he has advocated for the Hanson Place Church, so that in the Summer the Gospel could be preached in the open air.

THE LATE JACOB PENTZ.

A Well-Known Authority on Field Sports—He Had Many Friends.

The death of Jacob Pentz on Christmas Eve removed from the sportsman's world one of its best-known members. Mr. Pentz was born in this city about seventy years ago. He was connected with The Turf, Field and Farm during the later seventies, was a charter member and one of the founders of the Eastern Field Trials Club. In this he was associated with Charles H. Raymond. This club, which had its birth at Mr. Raymond's Fox Farm, at Morris Plains, N. J., held several successful field trials at Robbins Island before moving to the South.

For many years Mr. Pentz had charge of the trap shooting department of The American Field. As an authority on trap shooting he was second to no man in the country.

While good natured, he had his own firm ideas as to right and wrong, and his mind once made up he was immovable in his firmness.

For many years he occupied an old homestead on Bellevue Avenue, Newark, which was a Sunday rendezvous for prominent sportsmen. He was extremely fond of game chickens, of which at one time he owned many. Only last year he invited a number of close personal friends to a little luncheon, stating that at his time in life he could not expect to live many years longer, and requested their presence at the little gathering.

Although chiefly known as a writer, he was an accomplished amateur artist, and several of his paintings are to-day cherished as mementos by his friends.

CONTRACTS FOR $2,500,000.

Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Orders New Equipment.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 26.—In pursuance of its plan to re-equip its road, the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Company has let contracts which in the aggregate amount to over $2,500,000.

Two thousand and thirty new cars have been ordered, a large proportion of them of the pressed steel class that has lately come into use. One thousand of these will be made by the Pressed Steel Car Company of Pittsburg, to have a capacity of 100,000 pounds. To the Cambria Steel Company of Johnstown, Penn., goes the contract for 500 steel gondola cars of 100,000 pounds capacity, and to the American Car and Foundry Company an order for 500 box cars, with steel underframing, of 60,000 pounds capacity.

For the passenger service, the Harlan & Hollingsworth Company of Wilmington, Del., has a contract for twenty standard passenger coaches with open platforms, and the Jackson & Sharp Company, also of Wilmington, will build ten coaches of the broad vestibule type.

Forty-five locomotives are to be built by the Baldwin Locomotive Works, thirty-four of them being for freight traffic and ten for the passenger service.

CHANGES IN THE PENNSYLVANIA.

Many Transfers and Promotions Made at Meeting Yesterday.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 26. — Several changes were made in the organization of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to-day at a meeting of the Directors.

The position of General Agent at Erie was created, and J. W. Reynolds, now Superintendent of the Western Division of the Philadelphia and Erie Railroad, was appointed to the place.

The jurisdiction of Thomas A. Roberts, now Superintendent of the Middle Division and the Erie Railroad, was extended so as to cover the Western Division.

The Lewistown Division was detached from the Pennsylvania Railroad Division and W. B. McCaleb, now Superintendent of the Sunbury Division, was appointed Superintendent of the Lewistown Division.

The low-grade portion of the Allegheny Valley Railway was detached from the Philadelphia and Erie Railroad Division and placed in the Buffalo and Allegheny Valley Division, forming a new division, to be known as the Low Grade Division, and Charles B. Price, now Superintendent of the River Division, was appointed Superintendent of the new Low Grade Division. Prior to the operation of the Allegheny Valley Railway by the Pennsylvania Railroad in August last, Mr. Price was its General Superintendent. The territory now under his supervision consists of the River Division and the Low Grade Division of the Allegheny Valley Railway.

At a meeting of the Directors of the Pennsylvania Company, which controls the lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company west of Pittsburg, the office of Fourth Vice President, which was abolished in 1897, was re-established. L. F. Loree, the present General Manager, was elected to the office. G. L. Potter, General Superintendent of Motive Power, was appointed to succeed Mr. Loree.

The position of General Superintendent of Motive Power was not filled.

The engineer departments of the Pennsylvania Company and the Pan Handle were consolidated. Thomas H. Johnson of the Pan Handle was appointed consulting engineer of both companies. Thomas Rodd, Chief Engineer of the Pennsylvania Company, was made Chief Engineer of both companies. Robert Trimble, formerly principal assistant engineer of the Pennsylvania Company, was appointed principal assistant engineer of both companies.

R. F. Smith, present Superintendent of the voluntary relief department of the Pennsylvania Company, who will be retired on a pension Jan. 1, will be succeeded by Frank C. Thayer.

G. L. Peck was appointed General Superintendent of the Southwest System, to succeed John F. Miller, who will be retired on a pension. W. C. Cushing was appointed Superintendent of the Pittsburg Division, to succeed Mr. Peck. James McCrea, First Vice President of the Pennsylvania Company, will be in charge of the executive departments of both companies. Joseph Wood will have charge of the traffic department, and Mr. Loree will be in charge of transportation. J. T. Brook will have charge of the treasury, law, and real estate departments. This is a change in the executive department of the road, and is for the purpose of establishing a closer alliance between the two companies.

TO BANISH THE "TRAIN BOY."

Newspapers Will Not Be Sold on Erie Passenger Cars After Feb. 1.

Newsboys are to be banished from the trains of the Erie Railroad, according to an announcement just made by the passenger department of that system. The change will be made gradually and will begin at midnight of Dec. 31 on all trains of the Erie Railroad west of Salamanca. The newsboys on the lines of the Erie east of Buffalo and Salamanca will be allowed to enjoy a month's grace, the order for their banishment not going into effect until Jan. 31. While other roads, notably the Lehigh Valley and the Chicago and Alton, have already ousted the news and candy vendors from their trains, the Erie is the first of the great through lines to Chicago to follow in their footsteps, and it now seems as if the newsboy on trains would soon be a thing of the past.

Formerly the selling of papers, stationery, fruit, candies, &c., on railroad trains was a valuable privilege. It not only was a source of revenue to the railroads and of profit to the companies who owned the right to sell these things; but it was also profitable to the boys themselves, who got a commission of 20 per cent. on their sales, and who on good runs managed to make from $3 to $5 a day. The more general introduction of dining cars, the reduction in time, the introduction of special newspaper trains, and other causes made inroads on the profits, especially on those of Eastern lines. In place of the newsboys being carried on trains, the European system of having booths for the sale of various artisles at the larger stations along the railroads is being more generally introduced.

J. F. Barrett Will Go to the Alton.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—J. F. Barrett, General Superintendent of the Southern Railway, who tendered his resignation several weeks ago, will, after Jan. 1, be connected with the Chicago and Alton Railroad. Mr. Barrett declines to discuss his future course and in what capacity he will serve the Chicago and Alton is not known. He, however, states that he will not serve that road as General Superintendent.

Pan Handle Dividend Declared.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Dec. 26.—The Directors of the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad, otherwise known as the Pan Handle system, to-day declared a dividend of 2 per cent. on the preferred stock of the company, payable Jan. 15.

Brief Railroad Items.

At a meeting of the Board of Managers of the Delaware and Hudson Company yesterday, David Willcox, the general counsel of the company, was elected Vice President, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late James Roosevelt.

George F. McKay, it is announced, has resigned his position as general manager of the Erie Dispatch at Cleveland, and C. F. Lamprey has been appointed to succeed him.

The elevator men and hall attendants in the Grand Central Station received a Christmas present of $10 each from the railroad company. In addition to this, seven of them, who are fortunate enough to attend the elevators which Alfred Vanderbilt uses, received a special gift of $10 from him personally.

At the recent meeting of Western Presidents in this city, a resolution was adopted asking President Hughitt of the Chicago and Northwestern, President Felton of the Alton, President Burt of the Union Pacific, President Ripley of the Atchison, and two or three others to act on a committee to confer with the Inter-State Commerce Commission regarding legislation amendatory to the Inter-State Commerce act.

Columbia Professor Honored.

Dr. William Henry Carpenter, head of the department of Germanic languages and literatures at Columbia University, has received notice of his election as an honorary member of the Matschappij der Nederlandsche Letterkunde of Leyden, Holland. This honor has been shared by but few Americans, and is the third election of the kind received by Columbia professors during the past year.

MAKING NEW LAWS FOR PORTO RICANS

Members of the House Do Not Take the Work Seriously.

CONSIDER TRIVIAL MATTERS

One Man Offers Bills for Woman's Suffrage and to Legalize Cock Fighting.

SAN JUAN DE PORTO RICO, Dec. 19.—The Legislative Assembly of Porto Rico has been in joint session since Dec. 3, when the House of Delegates was duly organized. The predicted clashes and split-up of the Republican Party have not materialized. The House sessions are as harmoniously conducted as one could wish.

The House has been holding daily four-hour sessions, over forty-five bills have been introduced, and no end of motions and amendments. But one bill has been passed. By law the Assembly is allowed sixty days in which to complete each session. Fifteen days have passed, and next to nothing has been accomplished, and the local papers are suggesting that it is about time something had been done. The House is badly in need of a competent force of translators and clerks.

There seems to be no system. Bills are prepared and introduced covering most common matters, and in a manner most unlegislative. The members are entirely ignorant of any kind of procedure. Few of the bills are in proper form; many have been filed written in pencil on a sheet torn from a scratch-pad. It is incredible, almost, that the members should take so little pains in the preparation of their bills. Most of them are written during the session, and are more in the form of suggestions than of projected laws.

An inspiration may come to a member; he picks up a pad or draws an envelope or a scrap of paper from his pocket, jots down a few sentences, and presents the "document" as a bill, and it is duly filed. There are about forty such, and none is worthy of mention, excepting to illustrate to what trivial matters the members are devoting their (and the people's) time. Instead of getting down to the crying need of Porto Rico—a revision of the laws—bills to enact such laws as these are drawn up and introduced:

"To establish woman suffrage and to give women preference over men in public positions for which they are competent."

"Relating to salaries of school teachers."

"Relating to contracts made in provincial currency."

"Governing the profession of pharmacy."

A resolution was presented to "legalize the sport of cock fighting" by the same member who is the author of the Woman Suffrage bill.

At yesterday's session the Committee on Rules reported that bills relating to the following matters should have preference over all other business: Insular police, salaries, police courts, loans, telegraphs, and railroads. On motion, "mortgages" were added to the list, and the report was adopted.

The Council passed a bill introducing the jury system, but it was defeated in the House yesterday by a vote of 15 to 12. Several members claimed that the bill was not properly translated from the English original. The bill was ordered to be retranslated.

The Executive Council is daily holding "secret" executive sessions behind closed doors. These are for the purpose of considering franchises and other matters over which the House has exclusive jurisdiction. The public is not informed of the nature of these discussions. The only bill passed by the House to date is that "declaring the office of Delegate incompatible with other public offices."

At present it does not seem that the lower house is a success as a law-making body. But, perhaps, it is too early to judge.

The Chamber of Commerce of Porto Rico yesterday petitioned the House, asking for an appropriation for a Porto Rican exhibit at the coming Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo. The petition was referred to a special committee for report. A representative exhibit, by the insular Government, at Buffalo, would prove of immense benefit to the island. Capital is needed here to develop the island's unbounded resources, and in no way could Porto Rico's possibilities be better presented to the people.

DADY'S ANGER AROUSED.

Denies Charge of Attempted Bribery of Havana's Mayor—Will Fight to the Finish.

HAVANA, Dec. 26. — Charges reflecting upon Michael J. Dady having been made in the Mayor's office in connection with the sewering and paving contract, Mr. Dady today denounced as utterly false the statement that $50,000 had been offered to Mayor Rodriguez with a view of influencing his decision. At the same time he declared that if any one would make an affidavit fixing the responsibility for the slanderous accusation he would take steps to procure the arrest and prosecution of the instigator, even if it should prove to be the Mayor himself.

"This is not the only occasion," Mr. Dady asserted, "when an attempt has been made to blackmail me."

So far as the contract is concerned, Mr. Dady says he will fight to the finish. Señor Nunez, the civil Governor, is known to hold that Mr. Dady has not followed the requirements of the law, and that therefore the contract is illegal, void, and of no effect. It is understood that Gen. Wood will sustain the civil Governor and the Mayor, but he awaits a final judicial decision.

CUBA'S CONSTITUTION.

Convention Hopes to Submit a Draft of It to Congress Feb. 1.

HAVANA, Dec. 26.—The various sections into which the Cuban Constitutional Convention was divided some weeks ago for the purpose of preparing and submitting drafts of constitutions for the consideration of the convention as a whole, are gradually getting together on the basis of a unitary Government, with restricted suffrage. The convention leaders now hope to have this work completed by Jan. 15, so that the results may be submitted to the United States Congress Feb. 1.

The sectional discussions have been bitter and prolonged, and therefore there will be less debate in the open sessions, the hard fights having been made in the secret subsessions in order to save public wrangling.

Contract with Cuban Roads Illegal.

HAVANA, Dec. 26.—The Administrative Council has decided against the Pan-American Express Company's contract with the island railroads, declaring it to be illegal. There was one dissenting vote, and this makes it necessary for Gov. Gen. Wood to send the whole question before the Supreme Court for review and final decision.

Await the Second Coming of Christ.

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—Thirty-six persons from various parts of the United States who allege that by recent signs and events they have been led to believe that the second coming of Christ is at hand, are assembled in convention here watching, worshipping, and praying that they may be in readiness to receive the robes of immortality. They are to remain in session until Jan. 3, by which time a number claim that they expect to behold the object of their vigils.

The Pianola Yourself and Your Piano.

Have you a piano?

If you have spent your money for a piano, how much good do you realize from it?

Do you use it yourself?

Do half the members of your family use it?

Is it ever used?

How many selections are included in the aggregate repertory of all who use it—more than ten, fifteen or twenty-five?

Do they play well—well enough to entertain musical people?

Do You Know that With the Pianola

You and every member of your family can play the piano—

You can play anything you wish to hear—Liszt's Rhapsodies, Chopin's Nocturnes, Sousa's Marches, Coon Songs, etc—

You have complete control of the expression and can get an artistic, vivifying effect?

Paderewski has a Pianola—he has two Pianolas. After having one for several months in his home in Paris, he has just ordered another for his residence in Switzerland.

Nobody is getting the full value from his piano unless he has a Pianola. Many never expected to get much use from it. They bought it because they thought they had to have a piano. The Pianola has changed all this. The piano becomes a "live pleasure" and every member of the family a participant and thereby enjoys an intimate acquaintance with the great composers.

FIVE YEARS FOR DOODY.

Jurors' Petition for Clemency for the Contractor Results in a Reduced Sentence.

Contractor Daniel Doody, who was found guilty of perjury by a jury in the Kings County Court on Friday, yesterday was sentenced to five years at hard labor in State prison by Judge Hurd. Doody was indicted for perjury in connection with the second trial of Robert W. Fielding, charged with conniving to defraud the city while Deputy City Works Commissioner of Brooklyn. Doody's trial lasted ten days. His counsel attempted to prove that Doody was a paretic and not responsible. The extreme penalty for the offense is twenty years' imprisonment.

Lawyer Jere A. Wernberg, counsel for Doody, handed to Justice Hurd a written request from eight of the jurors that clemency be shown the contractor. The Court agreed that the prisoner's age and other circumstances should be taken into consideration, and only one-fourth of the maximum penalty was imposed upon Doody. An application for a stay of execution of sentence pending application for a certificate of reasonable doubt of guilt to the Appellate Court was denied by Justice Hurd.

There was an affecting scene just before court convened, when Mrs. Doody, the convicted man's wife, sought to gain an audience with Judge Hurd in his chambers to plead with him in behalf of her husband. The woman, however, was not admitted to the chambers, and, sobbing, she was led from the court by her son. Doody was taken to Sing Sing Prison yesterday afternoon.

TOM JOHNSON'S BIG SUIT.

Justice Blanchard heard argument yesterday on a motion made by ex-Congressman Tom L. Johnson to restrain R. T. Wilson & Co. from disposing of stock in the Detroit (Mich.) Street Railway system pending the trial of an action for the dissolution of the partnership existing between Mr. Johnson and R. T. Wilson & Co. A receiver is also asked for.

The origin of the suit was the purchase of the road by R. T. Wilson & Co. in 1894. Soon after the purchase Mr. Johnson became associated in the management. He was to have a one-fifth interest in the company, which was planned to consolidate all the street railroads of Detroit. The 3-cent fare agitation developed in Detroit and franchises were given to a new company. Eventually an agreement was entered into between R. T. Wilson & Co. and Pack & Everett, the holders of the franchise of the 3-cent fare system, by which there should be a consolidation of interests. This agreement has not yet been fully carried out. Mr. Johnson says in his affidavit that he has given notice that he wanted his share of the $12,000,000 capital stock of the company, and that he is ready to pay $1,000,000 cash, his proportion of the money expended in arranging for a consolidation of interests.

Counsel for R. T. Wilson & Co. contend that the agreement was not in the nature of a partnership, but was an agreement for the carrying out of a special enterprise for a special purpose.

Justice Blanchard reserved his decision on the motion.

AFTER THE CUDAHY SUSPECT.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 26.—It is now known that Pat Crowe was seen in South Omaha scarcely twenty hours before the abduction of Eddie Cudahy. On Monday night, Dec. 17, a well-known citizen of South Omaha conversed with him for nearly an hour. Just before they parted Crowe was questioned concerning his future plans, and laughingly replied: "Oh, I have something big on; you'll hear from me soon." At the time this was looked upon as an idle boast.

It is stated that until shortly before the Cudahy abduction Crowe was engaged in the dairy business with his brother-in-law at Albright, just below South Omaha. Mrs. Crowe has admitted to a reporter that her husband was in South Omaha on the Saturday preceding the abduction. Diligent search is now being made around Albright for a buggy answering the description of the vehicle used by the abductors.

OLD TRINITY CLOCK RUN DOWN.

The throng that crowds the financial district and that for years has been accustomed to glance up at the towering spire of Old Trinity to note the hour was nonplused yesterday when, as time sped, the hands on the old clock refused to move beyond the noon mark. Wall Street men, among whom there are many on whom superstition has taken hold, shook their heads ominously. It was a bad sign, they said, but just in what direction it would manifest itself even they were at sea.

The element that finds a joke in everything took the ground that the last Christmas of the century had been too much for the old clock, and that it had determined, in common with sundry others, to take a day off after the festivities of the Yuletide. The janitor of the church, however, refused to take the circumstance seriously. An excited individual who rushed into the church with the information that the clock had gone on strike was met with this rejoinder from the philosophic janitor:

"Gets a kink in it every once in a while," he said, referring to the clock. "I reckon that if you had been up there since 1846 you'd feel kind of run down yourself."

Cab Ran Down Peter J. Brennan.

Peter J. Brennan, an elderly, wealthy builder of 758 West End Avenue, was run down by a cab at the crossing at Thirty-fourth Street, Broadway, and Sixth Avenue, last night. One of his legs was broken and he sustained contusions of the body. An ambulance took him to the New York Hospital. The cab was driven by Edward Hamill of 663 Sixth Avenue, who was locked up in the West Thirtieth Street Station.

FOURTEEN PAGES.

OUR RESPONSIBILITY IN CHINA.

That seems to be a well-taken point that appears in the Associated Press dispatches from Washington, apparently from an authorized and official source. It is that, since we ceased to fight for the rescue of the besieged legationers, we have no military force in China, and shall not be bound to send any, whatever happens in consequence of the terms of peace delivered by the allies.

This point is simply a logical inference, which might be drawn by any unofficial person. It has no reference to the form of protest with which Mr. CONGER may have accompanied his signature. It simply sets forth that, while we find it necessary to maintain a guard of our legation, on account of disturbed conditions, we do not find it necessary to embark on a wild-goose chase into the remote parts of China in quest of the fugitive Government. In other words, we sign terms, which we in part disapprove, for the sake of peace, and, in the same interest, decline to enforce them by importing into China troops which have been definitely withdrawn from it.

The question of international law thus raised has no precedents that we know of in accordance with which it can be settled. But, in any case, our position will be no worse than that of other signatories, such as Austria, which have joined in demands without pretending to back them up by force. And we have the advantage of having shown in China, when there was a reason for fighting, that we could do our share of fighting. One thing is very clear. We were wise and fortunate in withdrawing our contingent in China from the orders of the "Commander in Chief of the Allied Forces."

CHINA AND THE ARMY BILL.

Several recent comments of disinterested and more or less competent observers on the comparative appearance and performance of the troops in China have interest for "the general reader," whoever he may be. They ought to have a particular interest for members of Congress, on account of their manifest bearing upon Secretary ROOT'S effort to "aerate" the staff of the United States Army by letting into it a certain proportion of officers from the line, and preventing its members from relapsing into the state of barnacles, clinging to a wreck and protected, by swathings of red tape, against outside assaults.

We all have a notion that the American line officer, whether he has come into his commission by way of West Point, or, like Gen. CHAFFEE, through the equally searching competitive examination that goes on in the army itself, is the most competent, and within the limits of his profession, which are not narrow, the most versatile and "all round" officer in any service. There is absolutely nothing in our recent experience to shake this patriotic faith. According to the testimony of disinterested foreign observers, and the even less mistakable testimony of statistics, we have done wonders in Cuba and Porto Rico, not only in our brief and brilliant campaign against Spain, but in the civil service which we have most fortunately been forced to intrust to our military servants for want of any similarly trained body of civil servants to which to intrust it. In the Philippines we have to own that we have not done so well. We have not so well succeeded in assuring the natives of our good intentions. And the causes of our comparative failure there are still in the dark to most of us, though we cannot help thinking that they are largely due to our lack in the East Indies of such agents as we have had in the West Indies in GUY V. HENRY and LEONARD WOOD.

But we are well served in China. There is no doubt about that. While the fighting lasted we were, according to all the testimony, "doing our share," and when the fighting stopped, we, unlike some of our esteemed allies, stopped fighting. We went to work to convince the natives that they could safely do business with us. The latest testimony to our success is that of Mr. H. J. WHIGHAM, an intelligent and experienced British war correspondent, whose report is transmitted by the cable. According to this witness, such is the reputation for fair dealing that our troops have established that the American quarter in Peking, like the Japanese, is crowded, while a German officer has to come to it in order to do his marketing, his procedures having failed to endear him to the Chinese marketmen, or to command their confidence.

This is a good hearing. But there is another side to the question. It is strongly stated by Mr. THOMAS F. MILLARD in the current number of Scribner's Magazine, in "A Comparison of the Armies in China." He does full justice to the gallantry and the physical superiority of the American troops, and to their efficiency when they are once brought on the fighting line. But he finds them behind, not only the Japanese, who by common consent have borne off the honors of the expeditionary force, but to any of the European forces engaged, in everything that pertains to the staff administration. This is precisely what we should have expected from the horrible muddle into which the barnacles plunged SHAFTER'S corps at the outset of the Cuban expedition, a muddle which made so many of us believe that the army had been blighted by "the cankers of a calm world and a long peace," until it was once got in sight and touch of the enemy. Then it was seen to be of as good stuff as ever. And we need not pay too much heed to the criticisms of European critics on its alleged "lack of discipline," when we remember the praises of these same critics of its "individual initiative," which is pretty plainly incompatible with the European notion of "discipline." But, although Mr. MILLARD finds our signal service inferior only to that of the Japanese, which was much better, whereas nobody else had any, he finds that our transport is inferior to that of any other service concerned, that our provision for camping and for the water supply of troops on the march is "nil," that our employment of auxiliaries is so inefficient that the American soldier is converted into a pack-mule, that our percentage of used-up men at the end of a day's march was greater than that of any other contingent, and, finally, that one-third of the Americans were on sick report after the entry into Peking, while the diminution in the Japanese effective was less than 5 per cent., although, by the consent of all, the Americans were physically the finest and most "fit" men in the whole force.

Such a competitive examination as that the American troops underwent on the Chinese expedition was worth all it cost, provided the lessons of the expedition are properly learned. Secretary ROOT'S bill for the reorganization of the army proposes that they shall be. All the barnacles of the staff departments, who are intent simply upon not being dislodged, are determined that they shall not be, and are pulling all the wires within their reach for that purpose. Every active-minded and zealous American officer with the Chinese expedition was in effect a "military attaché" acquiring information which is for the good of the service, or will be if he is allowed to utilize it. The Secretary's bill proposes that the army and the country shall have the benefit of his experience. The obvious way would be to detail him for services in one of the staff departments which have been shown to be weak, with power to point out weaknesses and to recommend improvements. This is just what the military politicians of Washington will bitterly oppose. But really the case is so plain that it seems that the wayfaring man, though a member of Congress, cannot err therein.

THERE IS ROOM FOR HOPE.

This is the season of the year when peace on earth, good-will toward man, reigns, but for the past two Christmases there has been a sad gloom hanging over this country. To-day the United States is standing forth as one of the worst of all nations, for she is expressing ill-will toward man; she is at war. In listening to this old story of peace and good-will to-night we should all make a resolution to try to change this state of affairs. We who are old should do what little we can yet do, and you who are young should now resolve that you will help our country back where she belongs.—Prof. CHARLES ELIOT NORTON in some cheerful Christmas remarks to Harvard students.

The high resolve to get this Republic back where she belongs was taken by some of the wisest and best during the late campaign, and there was a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull altogether. But the Republic did not budge.

Now it would seem to be true, either that the American people, who refused to be persuaded by the wisest and best, are right about the Philippines and the other matters, and are therefore pursuing the safe, honorable, and proper course; or that the wisest and best are right, and are therefore justified in keeping up the long, strong pull. In the first case there is nothing to fear. In the second case there is every reason to hope that the American people will presently heed the wisest and best and turn back.

It all depends on having confidence in the American people. A man who has it not will always be moping in the gloom and miseries of pessimism. A man who has it will always feel sure that the Republic will not be or stay far from where she belongs.

THE BIG TRUST NEWSPAPER.

Mr. HARMSWORTH'S idea of a great consolidated newspaper, continental, dominant, combining all the cash and all the talents, is not new to us in this country. That iridescent dream has troubled the slumbers of many an editor and many a publisher, but it has never come to fulfillment, or anywhere near it. We have leagues of newspapers now that have the same economic basis—the lower cost due to concentration of control and management. But they are mundane and modest compared to the celestial aspirations of Mr. HARMSWORTH. There are foundries in this city, too, that send out editorial pages to country newspapers, cast to order in a Democratic, Republican, Populist, or Prohibition matrix. But this is not at all Mr. HARMSWORTH'S idea. The vision that enraptures him is thus described in his own words:

> Let us suppose one of the great American newspapers under the control of a man of the journalistic ability of DELANE, the greatest of the former editors of The London Times, certainly the greatest political editor in the history of journalism, backed by an organization as perfect as that of the Standard Oil Company, and issued simultaneously each morning in (say) New York, Boston, Chicago, Pittsburg, St. Louis, Philadelphia, and other points in America; or at London, Liverpool, Manchester, Bristol, Edinburgh, Belfast, and Newcastle, in Great Britain. Is it not obvious that the power of such a paper might become such as we have not yet seen in the history of the press?

The first thing needful would be to find your editor. No mere Delane would come up to the requirements of an editorship that was to make public opinion for 70,000,000 people. The hand of transcendent genius should grasp that pen. Such an editor would be cheap at $10,000 a week, say half a million dollars a year. The trust managers would be very mean if they did not pay him that salary. He would be chicken-hearted if he did not make them pay it. There are men in this town whose annual income is two or three times that modest honorarium who, mentally and morally, in respect to judgment and in respect to capacity, are simply unfit to be office boys to an editor of such amplitude. But a want advertisement offering two million dollars a year for such an editor would fail to evoke him from his holy cell. There would be answers to the "ad," shiploads of them, but subpoenas would not reach nor search warrants discover the man for that place.

The attempt to impose upon the American public with a trust newspaper, edited and conducted by an editor falling short of the vast requirement, a common, finite editor, would fail miserably. An editor who had compassed all knowledge today as BACON compassed it in his day, who had the energy of ALEXANDER the Great, the astuteness of CAESAR, the philosophy of DANTE, the deep understanding of SHAKESPEARE, the efficiency of NAPOLEON, the intellectual sweep of WEBSTER, and the assimilative powers of MACAULAY, would catch every ear and hold the respect of all. The American people simply would not stand any man who fell far short of that somewhat elevated ideal. If Massachusetts worshipped him and had his leading articles framed every day, Arkansas would flout him in language that would at once hurt his feelings and enlarge his vocabulary. If he pleased the taste of Chicago, New York would turn from him in contempt.

Public opinion cannot be made in this country at any one place or by any one man. Nor is there any general plan on which a newspaper could be made that would be accepted all over the country, not even with the local news gathered and reported to suit the local requirement. The people would not only resent the impertinence of the trust; they would not tolerate its monopoly of the means of gathering and transmitting news. Legions of men would be seen wearing a button inscribed "We do not read the trust paper." The courts would impede and Legislatures harass a corporation carrying on such a business. But the public would know how to protect itself by neglecting the monopoly sheet and buying with eagerness its multitudinous rivals. For nothing could more inflame competition than the attempt to bestride the journalistic world with this Colossus.

The plan of co-operation in the gathering and distribution of news has already been carried to a high development in press associations and by agreements among newspapers in different cities. As the most that any newspaper needs is an adequate and truthful report of the occurrences it thinks worth reporting, a dispatch that is received in Boston or New York is equally available for Chicago or San Francisco. And that is all there is "in" the co-operation idea for newspapers.

Mr. HARMSWORTH seems to have become possessed with the belief that somewhere in the past there has been a golden age of American newspapers. There are others among us who share that opinion. It is a delusion which would be dispelled in the mind of any candid man who would take the trouble seriously to compare the press of to-day with that of any past time. The foremost newspapers of the past were, in every respect save that of the honest intention to do the best that could be done, visibly below the standards that prevail to-day. Their inferiority is impressive. They seem, when measured by the test of value to the reader and to the community, poor, narrow, and feeble. The art of making a newspaper is progressive, like the art of building steamships or running railroads. The great editors of the past, the men who gave to their newspapers that tone that goes by the name of personal journalism, have become legendary heroes. But when the nimbus and the halos are pushed aside and we examine the men themselves by their work, by the articles they wrote, we find that they were often wrong, needlessly, willfully wrong, and ignorant of many things, just like other folks. They had the faults of common humanity, and among others the lack of capacity to make newspapers far in advance of the standards of their day and generation. The boundaries of their knowledge, even of the best of them, would be too narrow for the requirements of continuous high-class work in a modern newspaper office. And in the capacity to manufacture and issue a great newspaper they would be hopelessly surpassed by hundreds of modest craftsmen of the present day.

A PARABLE OF THE AGGRESSIVE NEIGHBOR.

The situation in parts of the Eastern Hemisphere, and antecedent events having relation thereto, can be made clear by a simple parable drawn, as all instructive parables should be, from a contemporaneous incident.

Last Summer two New Jersey farmers, who may be designated as A and B, had an altercation. It originated in the persistent and flagitious trespass of A's cows and chickens upon B's land, and their indiscriminating assimilation of everything that grew thereon, except weeds and thistles. B at first drove them ont, with such temperate expressions as "Hi, there!" and "Shoo!" Then he clubbed them out. Finally he threw rocks, with some damage to their ambulatory organs. He might, had he been wise in the law, have brought a trespass quare clausum fregit against A's stock, but he deemed stones more likely to discourage the animus revertendi of which their reluctant withdrawal gave evidence. At last B's dog, an energetic but indiscreet bull terrier, with a short temper and a somewhat exaggerated sense of duty, convinced that his innocuous bark lacked efficacy, bit the cows, killed a number of chickens, and treed A's hired man when he caught him on B's land. As might be expected, these incidents led to strained relations. The situation becoming "intolerable," A submitted to B an ultimatum in the shape of a peremptory demand for apologies, reparations, and concessions as guarantees of future good behavior. B having declined to comply with these demands, A invaded his domain and proceeded to administer severe corporal chastisement. Being much the stronger, he finally got B down, with himself on top, and proceeded to do him up. B knew when he had had enough, and at once appointed himself a commissioner to conduct peace negotiations. After some parleying, punctuated with jabs and gouges, A agreed to let B up and not to knock him down again immediately if he would engage to perform certain stipulated undertakings. These were that he should accord A's cows and chickens free access to every part of his farm, with liberty to do as they pleased therein; deed A five acres of land fronting on the turnpike, kill his dog, and pay him forthwith $1,000 as a war indemnity. In addition A, with such of his neighbors as might elect to act with him, should in future direct the general management of B's farm and family matters, sell him what he did not need and buy from him what he did not care to part with. B was to leave his house door and barn door unlocked at all times, and if he erected any fences he must omit to put up the bars. The alternative of agreeing to these terms being broken bones, B assented—not, perhaps, without mental reservation—pledging himself by the solemn oath of "Send I may never" well and truly to perform the prescribed covenants and agreements as soon as his countenance and torso had received the repairs which were conditions precedent to the resumption of his customary vocations. Thereupon A withdrew to his own house, taking with him B's eight-day clock and some other trifles of personal property which he had use for.

The more B thought of his promises the less clear appeared his obligation, legal or moral, to keep them. He had always been a peaceable man, minding his own business and not at all inclined to neighborly intercourse. He had managed to get along very well, and raised a large family of children, without advice or assistance. Moreover, he valued his property, real, personal, and mixed, and was much attached to his dog. A's cows and chickens had for years been so great an annoyance that, like CLIVE, he was "amazed at his own moderation." He had done all in his power to discourage their visiting propensity. While he did not wholly justify his dog, he could but admit that, in the dog's place, he should probably have done the same. His assent to A's demands had been in some sense constrained by duress. On the whole, he concluded he would not do as he had promised. Learning that it was A's intention to enforce the terms of the agreement, B went before the local Magistrate of competent jurisdiction, with a motion for an injunction to restrain A from resuming hostilities where they had left off.

The eminent counsel retained by A made a memorable plea in opposition to this motion. He recited that B had promised and agreed to perform certain acts, to wit, deed to A five acres of designated land, kill his dog, hand over $1,000 lawful money of the United States or its bankable equivalent, &c., in consideration of A's agreement to save B's life when in a position of great bodily peril; that A had rendered said service in good faith, and that if B failed to perform his contractual obligations A had a perfect right to restore B to a condition alterum alterius auxilio eget. B's counsel alleged duress, and showed that A, having put B in the position of great bodily peril from which he needed to be rescued, could not claim the right to repeat this operation because of B's failure to perform engagements entered into by him to avert the imminent calamity of evisceration. This seemed reasonable; but A's counsel proceeded to show that the position of his client and his demands were sanctioned and justified by the usages of nations. He quoted many historical precedents to prove that international differences which pass the diplomatic stage are invariably settled by the granting of such concessions and the payment of such indemnity as may be demanded by the power voluntarily according a peace, irrespective of the equities of the original dispute, and contended that anything so sanctioned by international usage must be right in principle and applicable to individual differences.

The court held that, as a general principle, a rule was proved by its exceptions, and that as regards the rule cited by plaintiff's counsel, one exception, however notable, would not warrant the court overruling the precedents cited. He accordingly refused the injunction, and B took to the woods until a more satisfactory adjustment could be reached than A proposed.

The only moral this parable teaches is that what seem to be just and equitable between nations in a large way, does not, to the average lay mind, seem to be quite so just or equitable between individuals in a small way, or vice versa, as the reader prefers.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—People who complain about the manners of women in public places—as did with particular vivacity, the other day, one of our readers who had strayed into a department store filled with holiday shoppers—make a mistake when they ascribe the behavior which shocks them to anything except the very natural limitations of feminine courtesy. Some who acquit the dear ones of intentional brutality ascribe to mere thoughtlessness the objectionable lack of consideration for strangers which they so often show. Thus we find in a Philadelphia paper this anecdote: "Walking down the south side of Chestnut Street this morning, I noticed two of the fair but frivolous creatures meet two others of their kind in the timber tunnel in front of the new theatre. The streets were crowded, and the narrow way in front of the new building was packed. Yet those four women deliberately stood there for over five minutes and discussed the Lord knows what, while an anxious crowd pushed and pawed to get around them. Would you say that those women built that dam intentionally? Not at all. They simply did not think." The episode is typical, but the excuse, though kindly, is only in that respect better than the savage charges of our recent correspondent. Those women who blocked the way, and inconvenienced scores or hundreds of their fellow-citizens, were thoughtless, indeed, but not because of any mental lack or even any mental peculiarity. They simply didn't care for the trouble to which they put people for whose feelings toward themselves they were indifferent. Men meeting in such a place would have stepped aside instinctively, but not out of instinctive courtesy. The motion would have been due to a subconscious realization, transmitted through innumerable generations, that for them there would be a measure of danger in such an annoyance of their fellow-men. Somebody would have made a row and an unpleasant scene, with possible blows, would have followed. In the sub-consciousness of the women, on the other hand, was the knowledge of absolute safety from anything worse than sour looks. Manners are a result of responsibility, and equality of responsibility would give to both sexes the same manners in all places. Nothing else will, and equality of responsibility is out of the question.

—At a dinner to be given in Chicago early next month, Mr. W. J. BRYAN is to speak on "Democracy." The manager of the dinner is evidently a man of kindly wisdom, for by assigning this subject to Mr. BRYAN he made it necessary for that gentleman to enter upon a course of study that cannot fail to have beneficial effects. The almost superhuman breadth and accuracy of information possessed by editors are due entirely to the daily compulsion under which they live to look up matters about which they have hitherto known nothing whatever, and thus prepare themselves for instantly and fully enlightening the world in regard to those topics. A measure of the personal benefit which the editors thus receive will be attained by Mr. BRYAN from the investigation the Chicago dinner committee has imposed upon him. Up to this time he has never had any occasion to find out what the word "Democracy" means, what its associations are, or the principles on which it is founded. He is an industrious man and can easily obtain access to well-equipped reference libraries. Before the evening of the dinner arrives he is almost sure to learn a large number of things the existence of which he has not yet even heard of. The consequences of this broadening of his information may be momentous —to Mr. BRYAN.

The Effect of Dynamite.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It seems strange to me, a lifelong reader of your paper, to see you admit to your ordinarily educational columns an article by a contributor stating that dynamite explodes downward. I have seen a similar blunder published before.

As this (coming from you) may lead to misconception by the layman, I am impelled to correct it. All explosives or expansions of volatile gases take place in the line of the least resistance. In other words, the expansion force is felt in every direction. In case of an obstruction the evidence is apparent only in the obstruction.

Thus, any one examining the effect of an obstruction after explosion will find only evidence of its force in its effect. To look for said effect, he cannot find it in the air!

The address on the letter he saw,
And the name of it was somewhat familiar—
It was that of his mother-in-law.

And then a grim fact he remembered,
That his wife had threatened to send
And invite her to make a long visit—
What else could this letter portend?

A look of profound resolution
Did ever his features prevail;
For a week it reposed in his pocket—
The letter he did not mail.

Then one evening, when home returning,
He met his dear wife at the door,
Who asked if he'd mailed that letter
She gave him the week before.

He told her, of course he had mailed it;
"Then it's very peculiar," said she,
"For I'd written before to mother
To ask her to visit me.

"And that letter was to inform her
I'd rather she'd wait till next Fall;
But here she arrived this morning—
She never received it at all!"

Until he was alone he waited,
Then kicked himself like a flail,
And tore into utterniost atoms
The letter he did not mail.

PUCCINI'S "LA BOHEME"

The Opera Performed at Last at the Metropolitan.

MME. MELBA AS LITTLE MIMI

Work of the Modern Realistic School with Reminders of Mascagni and Verdi in its Tuneful Score.

Puccini's "La Bohème" was produced at the Metropolitan Opera House last night by the Maurice Grau Opera Company. The introduction of this modern lyric creation to the stage of the representative Opera House of the Western World would call for considerable comment were it not for the fact that the work was long ago made known to New Yorkers, not to those who will not touch with the hem of their garments operas not performed in the holy shrine of fashion, but to all those who go to hear operas for their own sake. In early May, 1897, THE TIMES, in noticing the production of this work by the Carl Rosa company at Manchester, England, said: "American boxholders need not be alarmed. They will not soon be confronted with these tunes they do not know." Yet in a little more than three years here it is. "La Bohème" was first performed in the Royal Theatre, Turin, in February, 1896. It reached London the following year, which was exceedingly quick time, and New York on May 16, 1898, when it was produced at Wallack's Theatre by the Royal Italian Opera Company, "from La Scala Theatre." It was sung again at the Casino by the same company on Oct. 10 of the same year, and on Nov. 28 was brought forward in English by the Castle Square Opera Company at the American Theatre, where it was performed during the week.

The book of "La Bohème" was made by Giuseppe Giacosa and Luigi Illica from Henry Murger's novel, "La Vie de Bohème." It deals with life among the poverty-stricken poets and art students of Paris in the early thirties. It is a tolerably good opera book, but there was little new suggestion to be found in last night's performance. What was said in this paper after the first hearing of the work at Wallack's Theatre might now be reprinted without the change of a single word. The opera belongs to the realistic school. The theory of the members of this school is that they are bringing the opera nearer to the true life of the people. They show us the peasants of Sicily in love and jealousy, a company of mountebanks in the throes of human passion, or a band of Italian cutthroats watching the endeavors of their leader to ruin the daughter of a working woman with a past. These stories are supposed to be much more convincing than those of royalties and nobilities, stories in which every soprano wears diamonds and every bass is a King, or at least a high priest.

But when one is able to free his mind from the impressions of the picture in most of these dramas, he finds that he is looking at and listening to the old, old story. In "La Bohème," for example, it is easy to fall under the illusion of Rodolfo and Mimi, till the soprano shows signs of dying of consumption; and then one perceives that after all she is only Violetta Valery robbed of her good clothes, her jewels, and her champagne song. As for Rodolfo, he is none other than Alfredo, only now his costume is ridiculous for a different reason. Gaston and Ninichi are still with us in this new preachment of Parisian morality, but they are disguised in music of the new Italian school, and so may escape detection except on the part of those who are habitually skeptical. And, as we said before, one "can fancy that he sees Verdi smiling through his beard. Sardonic old man!" But they manage these things better now. No one will deny for an instant that the death of Mimi is infinitely more artistic, more affecting, than the death of Violetta. These modern fellows do know something of the art of stripping opera of its artificialities. But who taught them their business? First of all, Wagner, but in their own Italian vein the grand old man of Italy, Verdi, who repented him of the sins of his youth and in his old age said unto himself, "The play's the thing."

What is it that touches us so deeply at times in this opera? Pity, bless your heart, nothing but pity. These poor devils are all so much in earnest, they are so ill-fed, they are so sickly, and they are so helplessly poor. You cannot pity Violetta Valery half so much when you see her at the bank in all her jewels as you pity Mimi when you hear hungry Marcel in the last scene tell hungry Rodolph that he has seen her riding in her carriage. And then the poor little Mimi, with frozen fingers, comes back to her Rodolph to die, just as she came to him with frozen fingers in the first scene. That is a much more cunning touch of human nature than the "Camille" way of sending Armand to her in both scenes. Yes, these later fellows, these Italian realists, manage these things better than their forebears; but they are the same old things. There's nothing new on the Metropolitan Opera House stage, so be not afraid, ye who draw aside in timidity when they tell you that a new work is to be produced.

And the music? That, too, is clever, but it is less so than the book. In the score we find ourselves on very familiar ground. There is an abundance of melody, and there are many twistings of rhythm and harmonic disjointings. But we have heard them all before. Mascagni and Leoncavallo have not labored for naught. The melody of Puccini is fluent and at times he sings the note of human passion. But for the most part he is too fond of making a pretty sound to speak in the convincing accent. The song is too polished, the speech too polite, for the full exposition of the characters of these Bohemians. They wear their hearts upon their sleeves, these people, and they are undisciplined hearts. They should revel in their own passions. But they are always singing themselves out to us in pretty tunes. What will you have? We are writing a grand opera. If at the end of the second act the dramatic situation, entirely comic, suggests a finale of Offenbachanalian music, shall we yield and be dramatically honest at the expense of our dignity? No; let us rather write a genuine grand opera finale, as if we were in the third act of "Aïda." The public will cry "Bravo," and the critics will not discern the trickery of it. And "Bravo" the public does cry, in spite of the obvious incongruity of the thing. For the public does not study the text.

The best music of "La Boheme" is to be found in the first and last acts. There the composer has opportunities to write flowing love music, and his melodious measures fit the sentiment of the scenes. But in the other acts his music is episodic, fragmentary, and disjointed. The attempt to set the scattered and fleeting exclamations of a dozen or more personages cannot be successful, and the second act is full of this sort of work, while the third, which is excellent in melody, is unfortunate in its disconnection of much of the dialogue from the inner emotions of the character in whom the interest centres. The duet, however, is fine. It is pretty music, sweetly melodious, and will please the ears of many. Nevertheless, we cannot believe that there is permanent success for an opera constructed as this one is.

The performance was admirable, and the production in its general features a decided credit to the house. In the first place the principal personages were well suited to their parts. The chief success of the evening was that of Mr. Saleza, whose Rodolph will assuredly add to the large favor which he already enjoys. His singing is not and never has been satisfactory in respect of voice-production, and his tones are too often pinched and strangulated, but he delivers his measures with grace, warmth, sincerity of feeling, and a fine breadth of style. His Rodolph last night was impassioned, and his singing at times reached the level of his ardent and moving Romeo. No doubt the ladies did not find him quite so picturesque as he is in some of his other costumes, but to those who admire the new realism his dress was interesting.

Mme. Melba was a very competent representative of the light-minded, fragile Mimi, the new Camille who has less heart than the old one. Her cold, silvery voice suited the music perfectly, and as there was no great acting, she succeeded well enough, save in the last scene, where she was not able to convey the pathos of the situation. But the general public is always happy when it can hear the flutelike tones of this beautiful voice floating out in sweet melodies, and of opportunities for saccharine song Mimi has enough. Miss Occhiolini, who is not a regular member of the company, but a remnant of the Royal Italian Opera Company of former "Boheme" days, sang the music of Musetta in a thin and tremulous voice, but she acted the part with skill and made a fairly good impression.

Mr. Campanari made his first appearance this season as Marcel, the painter, Musetta's much troubled lover. He was in excellent voice and sang his music well. Messrs. Journet and Gilibert were capable representatives of the other Bohemians. The scenery was new and excellent, a feature not always found at the Metropolitan Opera House. The chorus had been carefully rehearsed and the lively action of the second act was carried out with pictorial effect. The orchestra played well, and Signor Mancinelli conducted with skill and enthusiasm.

VARIOUS DRAMATIC TOPICS.

Two Scenes in the New French "Hamlet" at the Garden Theatre.

The graveyard in which Ophelia is buried, in the French "Hamlet" at the Garden Theatre, is laid out on a hillside overlooking the fair City of Elsinore, which is seen in the background under the light of declining day, its buildings all dominated by a towering cathedral which looks Norman rather than Danish. The burial ground, however, is on lower ground than the royal palace, and the funeral procession comes down a sloping path, spearmen and halberdiers first, then men of the Court, then priests bearing the fair Ophelia, laid out on her bier, followed by weeping women, the King and Queen, and Laertes. Hamlet, noting the approach of the procession, retires into a mortuary chapel, approached by a flight of stone steps at the right.

After the brother's vain expostulation with the priest, the body of the girl, uncoffined, of course, is lifted from her flower-decked bier and laid in the shallow grave. Then ensues the interruption by Hamlet and the rumpus. At the close of the scene Laertes is led away by the men who have prevented him from choking the slayer of his sife, while the Prince kneels at the grave, moaning "Oh, Ophélie, Ophélie!"

The mimic play before the King and Queen is acted in a large hall, with floors on three several levels and an opening at the back which suggests that Denmark was, after all, a tropical country. The stage is a small platform on the right side, backed by tapestry curtains representing a conventional landscape, while conventionalized poplars, of a sort of pre-Raphaelite appearance, like the new Hamlet himself, serve as "set pieces." In front of the stage a row of large candles serve as footlights. These are lit by the player who speaks the prologue, and gravely blown out by him after the Player King has gone to sleep and is about to be murdered. Claudius and Gertrude have seats on a balcony, facing the mimic stage. Ophelia sits, in state, as it seems, directly in front of their balcony, while Hamlet lies with his head in her lap, peeping up at the murderer of his father. When Lucianus enters to pour the poison in Gonzago's ear, Hamlet crawls to the front of the balcony and slowly climbs over it, his face rising suddenly before stricken Claudius just as the Prince takes the argument of the play out of the mouth of Lucianus. The Court, excepting a few men and women, are all awkwardly grouped at the back during this scene.

After the interruption of the play the crowd of actors are seen going away, carrying their costumes and properties and musical instruments. One of the instruments, a recorder, Hamlet rushes back and seizes, just in time to use it for the bewilderment of Rosencranz and Guildenstern.

Jamieson Lee Finney, who has made something of a hit as the delirium tremens gentleman (another assault on the British peerage) in "Lady Huntworth's Experiment" at Daly's, has had many years of experience on the stage and has had some good parts. He was the miserable blackguard who tried to ruin Glory Quayle and John Storm in "The Christian" when that play was first acted at the Knickerbocker Theatre. He had a good part a few years ago in a farce called "Joseph," in which George Giddens acted the title rôle. He was the foolish Captain in "Under the Red Robe" at the Empire Theatre. He has had more than his share of dull-witted, rather groggy sporting gentlemen to act. One of these he portrayed recently in "The Man of Forty" at Daly's.

Mr. Finney's apprenticeship was served in Lawrence Barrett's company. He used to do a great deal of standing about in graceful attitudes in Boker's "Francesca da Rimini" and the Shakespeare plays of Mr. Barrett's repertory, and he always wore singularly rich clothes for a "young gentleman of the theatre," which is presumably what he was in those days. There is good capacity in Mr. Finney's present performance.

American plays have been rather stupid lately. A new crop is in sight and will be harvested early in the new year, and some of them may turn out better. But, aside from "Arizona," the two most noteworthy of recent American plays, leaving stage versions of current fiction out of the question, have been "The House That Jack Built" and "The Sprightly Romance of Marsac." Mr. Broadhurst's piece is sprightlier, to tell the truth, than Miss Seawell's, but it is not quite so coherent.

It is strange that both should puff old man Plato so gratuitously. What has Plato been doing for the American dramatists that they should take him up? There is a great deal of silly talk about Plato's idea of love in "The Sprightly Romance," and there is some presumably comic talk about Plato's "Symposium" in the Broadhurst farce. The coincidence is worth noting, but none of the talk is worth quoting.

"The House That Jack Built" has its scene of pictorial realism. Paper hangers are at work in one room of a mansion. Scaffolds are erected for their convenience. A lover, who is also a paper hanger, is working on one of these, and his lass climbs up the ladder and joins him. The climax of the act in which this scene occurs represents the finishing of the work of decoration in three minutes. Pasted slips of paper are put in place, screens and curtains removed, and the lights turned on. It is an easy trick, but it seems to serve. When the curtain is raised again, in response to delighted applause, two scrubwomen are revealed at work.

The new stage manager of Daniel Frohman's permanent company is Victor Mapes, who has been appointed to succeed the late Frederick Williams. Mr. Mapes is a Yale man who has been an enthusiastic and persevering student of the stage. Some years ago he put in a season as assistant stage manager under Mr. Frohman at the Lyceum in order to study the stage close at hand. He has since been a dramatic critic, signing his sensible reviews of plays "Sidney Sharp." He has written plays for Richard Mansfield and other stars which have secured all the distinction most American plays can secure, that of being announced in the Spring for production in the Autumn. One of his plays, "The Tory's Guest," was lately performed by Mr. Sargent's pupils and seemed to be marketable stuff.

A stage manager needs more qualities than love for the stage, and a merely dilettante feeling for theatrical art, of course, and Mr. Mapes is surely in a position to show his possession of practical knowledge and skill. But Mr. Frohman always personally directs many of the rehearsals of plays produced by him at Daly's.

Many actresses of talent and repute who have not been seen in New York in a long while, will emerge into metropolitan view on the last night of the nineteenth century. One of them will be Ada Rehan, who has not acted in this city since the Spring of 1899. Another will be Viola Allen, who has not been here since the first long run of "The Christian." Jessie Millward and Margaret Anglin will share the leading rôles in "Mrs. Dane's Defense" and divide the honors with a new and lovely leading man, Charles Richman, at the Empire Theatre.

They are actually agitating the question in London of beginning the night theatrical performances at an earlier hour. One of the new sensational newspapers has found some managers willing to say plays ought to begin at 7 o'clock and be finished at 10—in the Winter months, anyhow. They say late dinners are giving way in London nowadays to high teas at 5 or thereabout and substantial suppers at 10. Suburbanites and folks who want to eat supper after the play, but are compelled to stop eating by the licensed victuallers' law, at 1 o'clock, are actually agitating for an earlier theatre hour.

In this town this season's experience alone shows that 8 o'clock is an altogether too early hour for plays to begin. Not nearly half the audience is seated by that hour. Eight-thirty is as early as it is safe to raise the curtain. But, of course, if fashionable London sets the example, fashionable New York will give up its late dinner. One thing is certain, the cause of dramatic art will never advance a step so long as it must be intimately associated with the idea of victuals and drink.

SHENG A PEACE ENVOY?

Report that He Is to Assist in the Negotiations.

AN ENEMY OF LI-HUNG-CHANG

The Appointment, in View of Sheng's Reputation, May Raise a Storm of Protest.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—It is asserted in Shanghai, according to a dispatch to The Times, that Sheng, the Taotai, is going to Peking, having been appointed to assist in the negotiations.

Judging from what the envoys at Peking have recently said about Sheng, and his reputation as one of the most crafty and unscrupulous of all the high Chinese officials, his reported appointment as one of the Chinese plenipotentiaries will be received with a storm of protest, and is by no means an indication of the alleged amenable attitude of the Imperial Court.

Sheng is Taotai of Shanghai and Director General of Railways and Telegraphs for all China. He is a Chinaman, but in great favor with the Manchus. He first came into notice ten years ago, when, as Imperial Commissioner of and Resident in Thibet, he gained a reputation for the most accomplished a rascality and scorruption, which has clung to him ever since.

Afterward he became Customs Taotai at Tien-Tsin, and amassed a great fortune in that profitable office. He founded the Chinese Imperial Bank, from which his countrymen can borrow at interest ranging from 25 to 50 per cent.

Aside from his evil reputation among foreigners, the appointment of Sheng would seem to show that Li-Hung-Chang has again fallen into disfavor, as Sheng is one of his bitterest enemies.

It was Sheng who gave out nearly all the lying reports about the safety of the foreign Ministers when they were besieged in Peking.

FIRST IN THE FORBIDDEN CITY.

Capt. Lang Reports that the Honor Belongs to the American Marines.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—Brig. Gen. Heywood, commandant of the Marine Corps, has forwarded to the Navy Department a letter from Capt. Charles G. Long, serving with the marines in China, stating that the American marines were the first to enter the Forbidden City at Peking. There has been much controversy as to whether the Russians, British, Germans, or Americans were first inside the sacred precincts, and this letter is regarded as establishing the claims of the Americans. Capt. Long gives the following account of the duties performed by Company D at Peking on Aug. 16:

"Up to that time (Aug. 16) the Forbidden City had not been entered by any of the allied forces. Three of the four gates between the Chien-Men gate and the Forbidden City had been forced the previous day by the Americans, but then they halted and finally withdrew to the first gate, which was held. Receiving an order from the commanding officer of marines to enter the Forbidden City and seize such buildings and quarters as might be most advantageous for us to hold and occupy, I moved immediately with my company, forced the fourth gate, and entered the city. Japanese sentries objected to our entering, but I did not consider their claim to any control at that point. On entering there was no opposition, the Chinese having departed, leaving their tents and banners standing. I put guards on the best of the buildings, and the regimental colors were hoisted on one of the administration buildings.

"To the best of my belief this was the first and only occupation of the Forbidden City by any of the allied forces, and the only time that any force hoisted its colors there. We remained there from about 3:30 P. M. to 5:30 P. M., when I received an order to withdraw and to leave a guard at the fourth gate. Capt. Matthews and Lieut. Little, United States Marines, were the officers in Company D with me."

PRAISES THE AMERICANS.

British Correspondent Says Their Quarter of Peking Is Well Governed.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—In the course of a careful review, published in The Morning Post to-day, of the conditions existing at Peking, H. J. Whigham, the well-known newspaper correspondent and golf player, says there are now a quarter of a million inhabitants pursuing their ordinary avocations in the American quarter. He adds that the American and Japanese quarters are in all respects the best managed, "showing ability on the part of the Americans to handle a subject people which they have not developed elsewhere to proper advantage." Continuing, Mr. Whigham says:

"This enormous portion of the city is policed by exactly one company of infantry and a few mounted men under a Provost Marshal. If only these hardheaded soldiers of the Provost Marshal's type had been given a free hand in the Philippines the task of subjugating the unfortunate islanders would have been much more simple. If the Japanese have come out of the muddle with flying colors they at least have the Americans close behind. It was worth sending an expedition to China if only to get a few hints on transport from the Americans. Their scheme of municipal government could not be bettered by the British, who have learned the business by experience in every quarter of the globe.

"To point to a contrast it is only necessary to walk down the avenue of the Chinese city dividing the United States and German quarters. The American side of the street is simply Peking in its ordinary garb of peace, minus its variegated smells. The opposite side is almost deserted. The Germans have to go to the American side for meat and vegetables, and it is whispered that the country people are sometimes robbed as they bring in the produce, except where the gate sentries are British, American, or Japanese. That is why the markets in the quarters controlled by these nations are the best."

FRENCH CLAIM A BIG VICTORY.

PARIS, Dec. 26.—A dispatch to the Havas Agency from Peking, dated Dec. 25, says the detachment of French troops commanded by Gen. Bailloud was recently attacked by Chinese regulars and Boxers at Thi-Tcheou, south of Pao-ting-Foo. The punitive expedition took the village after a lively combat. Many cannon and a quantity of provisions and ammunition were secured. On account of the hostile attitude of the population Gen. Bailloud burned the village and also the other villages in the neighborhood.

The Chinese loss was 1,000 (?) men. Gen. Bailloud's force sustained no loss.

Christian Chinese families have been maltreated by the Chinese regulars.

BERLIN, Dec. 26.—Field Marshal Count von Waldersee, in a dispatch from Peking, dated Dec. 24, says:

"The French troops encountered, Dec. 22, east of Chochan, between Peking and Pao-ting-Foo, a Chinese force numbering 2,500 men, with artillery. The Chinese fled in the direction of Kuan-Hsien. They suffered losses, and left behind them five standards and four cannon. The Chinese probably consisted of the reunited remnants of a body already dispersed."

BOXERS BURN CHRISTIANS.

Mr. Conger Receives Word of a Massacre Near Peking—Villages Combine to Exterminate Converts.

PEKING, Dec. 26.—The Rev. Mr. Kelly, a Presbyterian missionary, has reported to Minister Conger the burning by Boxers of twenty-one Roman Catholics thirty miles north of here, and he adds that thousands of armed Chinese have been seen in the San-Ho country.

Mr. Conger has sent a copy of the communication to Field Marshal Count von Waldersee, and Japanese and German troops have been sent to investigate the reports.

The troops of the various nations celebrated Christmas in their own fashion, each force being interested in the doings of the others.

The Germans were to-day reviewed, on the occasion of the presentation of flags to two regiments. The event was made practically international. All the Generals and their Staffs and detachments of their troops were present, with the result that a great military spectacle was witnessed.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—The Peking correspondent of The Morning Post says:

"It is rumored that numerous villages east of Peking are combining to exterminate native Christians, several of whom have been burned in a local temple."

THE "EXPLANATORY STATEMENT"

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—The reservation which Minister Conger made in giving his assent to the Peking ultimatum was not made of his own volition. He was ordered to make it by the State Department. This was the only way in which the department could protect itself from the consequences of Mr. Conger's interpretation of the dispatch directing him to sign.

As has already been explained, when Mr. Conger committed the State Department to a reversal of its policy it was considered necessary to yield the point in order to avoid reopening the whole subject and imperiling the negotiations. In order that the consequences of the blunder might be minimized, so far as possible, the State Department directed Mr. Conger to sign, but to make certain reservations which would preserve as much as possible of the original American position.

The reason why the State Department has not made public the reservation which Mr. Conger signed by its orders is that as Mr. Conger has not forwarded the text of his reservation it is not known in what language he has couched it. It is hoped that he has managed to make clear the American position and that there are no errors.

In addition to making it plain that the United States does not hold itself bound to back up the terms of the note by force of arms, the explanatory paper is designed to show that the United States has nothing to do with the provision about the retention of garrisons in Peking and the Province of Pechi-Li. There are further reservations, but the State Department is not yet ready to make them public.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—"Mr. Conger takes a hopeful view of the situation," says the Peking correspondent of The Morning Post, wiring Monday, "and thinks that a settlement will be effected, but he declares that no one of the envoys will recognize the Empress Dowager officially, although all are aware that she has long exercised the supreme power. He believes the crisis will result in the initiation of reforms in China.

"Señor de Cologan, the Spanish Minister, fears that the discussion of the joint note after general acceptance will extend for a year or more.

"Li Hung Chang is a trifle better."

PEKING, Dec. 26.—No answer has yet been received to the joint note of the powers.

GERMANS ANGER THE BRITISH.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—A dispatch to The Pall Mall Gazette from Peking, dated Dec. 24, says much irritation has been caused by the activity of the German troops in the districts under British protection.

So acute has been the feeling, the dispatch adds, that there has been a question of the British seceding from the allied command.

The Foreign Office states, however, that there is no truth in the latter assertion.

CASTELLANES' BRIC-A-BRAC.

Arguments in the Suit of Mr. Wertheimer Concluded—Judgment to be Rendered Jan. 9.

PARIS, Dec. 26.—Before the First Civil Tribunal of the Seine to-day Maitre Bonnat resumed his speech, begun on Dec. 20, when the case was adjourned for a week, on behalf of the Count and Countess Boniface de Castellane in the suit of Charles Wertheimer, a London bric-a-brac dealer, to recover payment for art objects sold to the defendants, the transaction taken as a test case involving the sum of 12,946f.

In elaborate arguments counsel set forth the counter-claim of the Castellanes, who demand a reduction of the debt, provisionally estimated to be at least 2,000,000f.; the restitution of objects taken in exchange by Wertheimer, under the penalty of 1,000f. for each day's delay in the restitution from the day of judgment, and finally damages to the amount of 300,600f. Counsel suggested that experts be appointed to appraise the articles involved, and suggested that these experts be chosen from an ordinary list or from among the Presidents of the exposition juries. He explained that George J. Gould of New York, in aiding the Castellanes in this suit, desired to accomplish a duty which the Court had previously confided to him, while the Castellanes, after throwing off Wertheimer's yoke, brought the case in court because they thought the publicity of the hearing was better than the mystery of suspicious pacts and equivocal arrangements. In so doing, counsel asserted, they did an act of dignity and courage.

Maitre Foucauld, counsel for Mr. Wertheimer, replied, saying that the authenticity of only five articles, of the value of 500,000f., could possibly be questioned, and while Mr. Wertheimer affirmed their genuineness he would consent to another expert examination, on the understanding that if the articles were declared spurious the 500,000f. was to be struck out of his bill, but if they were declared genuine the Castellanes were to pay the full price, no revaluation being admitted. Mr. Wertheimer, counsel added, opposed the restitution of the art works which Count Boni gave as his pledge for payment of the total of the bill on the eve of his departure for America.

Maitre Bonnat again spoke, affirming that the Castellanes only secured delays in payment and the withdrawal of Wertheimer's suit by fresh purchases of articles for 250,000f., which were barely worth 15,000f. This, counsel claimed, was selling delays at usurious rates.

The Castellanes, counsel continued, demanded an expert valuation of all the purchases, and not of a few objects only.

The case was adjourned until Jan. 9, when judgment will be delivered.

AMERICA'S GROWING POWER.

The Frankfurter Zeitung Follows Other European Newspapers in Commenting on It.

BERLIN, Dec. 26.—In its yearly financial review, the Frankfurter Zeitung points out that one of the most important facts of the last twelve months has been the growing influence of the United States upon the economic situation of Europe.

"In the first months of the year," says the writer, "when German industries had not the remotest fear of reaction, it was the report from America regarding the iron market and the fear of flooding the German market with American manufactures that terrified our markets and agitated our Boerses. This was the case even when there were no important changes in the business situation in the United States. In short, all the incidents indicating, however remotely, competition were discussed in their bearings upon our business situation; and they thus became very important records in determining the attitude of the German Boersen and the quotations of securities.

"Wall Street quotations frequently became the standard for all other exchanges. The entrance of the United States into the ranks of creditor nations signifies a change in the times.

"Ever since the war with Spain, the United States Government has pursued undeviatingly a world policy of world conquest. European States must familiarize themselves with the thought that the United States will have a very weighty word in determining the new political constellations among the leading nations. American action in undertaking the Nicaragua Canal also proves that the military, and still more diplomatic, participation of the United States in the chief troubles shall bear fruit."

BALDWIN-ZIEGLER EXPEDITION.

Mr. Baldwin Secures the Esquimaux, a Big and Stanch Whaling Ship.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—Evelyn B. Baldwin, the Arctic explorer, who is arranging for the Baldwin-Ziegler expedition, has purchased the Esquimaux, the largest and stanchest of the whaling fleet. He will fit her with modern appliances and name her the America.

The rival bidder was the British Antarctic expedition, the organizers of which desired to secure the Esquimaux as a substitute ship.

Sentence on Mock Cardinal Confirmed.

PARIS, Dec. 26.—The Appeal Court has confirmed the sentence of five years' imprisonment imposed on an ingenious swindler named Goffray, who posed in clerical circles here in April last as the "Cardinal-Bishop of Washington," soliciting funds to convert the young Indians of New Mexico. Several times Goffray succeeded in celebrating mass, and once was nearly arrested on the point of celebrating mass at Strassburg. Finally he appeared at Montelimar, where he lectured to the Trappist monks on his terrible adventures in the Rocky Mountains, where, he said, he was scalped by Indians to whom he was preaching the Gospel. The fraud was discovered by Goffray saying that the Indians of the Rocky Mountains are Eskimos.

Protection for Soudanese Promised.

KHARTOUM, Egyptian Soudan, Dec. 26.—Lord Cromer, the British Diplomatic Agent, reviewed the Egyptian troops of the Soudan, under the Sirdar, Major Gen. Sir Francis R. Wingate, to-day. He assured a deputation from the great Dinka tribe, which formerly suffered severely from slave raids, that the British and Egyptian flags guaranteed them against a recurrence of such raids and insured respect for their ancient customs. The chiefs departed expressing gratitude.

The Czar Quite Well Again.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 26.—The Russian Minister of the Interior, M. Sipiaguine, who arrived here to-day from Livadia, asserts that the Czar is now completely restored to health, being able to take long walks and drives daily. M. Sipiaguine has had three audiences with the Emperor since the latter's illness.

New President of Liberia.

SIERRA LEONE, West Coast of Africa, Dec. 26.—The President of Liberia, W. D. Coleman, resigned on Dec. 11, owing to the disapproval of the Legislature of his interior policy. G. W. Gibson, the Secretary of State, was elected President by the Legislature.

Lord William Beresford Worse.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—It is announced that Lord William Leslie de la Poer Beresford, who has been suffering from peritonitis, but whose condition on Christmas Day was somewhat improved, has had a rather serious relapse.

Andree's Brother Gives Up Hope.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—A dispatch from Copenhagen to The Daily Mail says that the brother of Andrée, the missing aeronaut, despairing of the latter's return from arctic regions, has finally opened his will.

DELLA FOX MARRIED.

Weds Jacob D. Levy of This City at Baltimore—Intends to Return to Comic Opera.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 26.—Della Fox, the actress, was married to-day to Jacob D. Levy of New York, in the office of the Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas. The Rev. William W. Wray, pastor of Immanuel Reformed Church, performed the ceremony in the presence of the bride's maid and a few of the court officials.

It is announced that after the completion of her engagement this week in this city, Mrs. Levy will retire from the vaudeville stage, with the intention of shortly returning to comic opera.

The marriage license, which was issued to-day, gives the age of Miss Fox at twenty-five years, and describes her as single, and a resident of New York, while Mr. Levy said he was thirty-five years old, lived in New York, and had no relatives.

Jacob David Levy is better known as "Jack" Levy. He began his theatrical career nearly twenty years ago, when he was a programme boy at Niblo's Garden. He remained with that theatre for a number of years. In 1880 he secured the position of Assistant Treasurer of the Fourteenth Street Theatre, and at the end of the long engagement of Rice's "Evangeline" at that house he went on tour with the company as its Treasurer. After that he became associated with the Irish comedian, Mark Murphy, when the latter produced "O'Dowd's Neighbors." He was Treasurer for the "Cinderella" performances given several years ago at the Metropolitan Opera House.

Since then Mr. Levy has dealt in diamonds and jewelry, which he disposed of to members of the theatrical profession. He has been married before, his wife having secured a divorce from him.

It is said that Mr. Levy contemplates taking Miss Fox on a tour through the country in a new musical comedy which is being written for her.

Miss Fox has not previously been married.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Charles Frohman has engaged Otis Harlan and has made him a member of his musical comedy company which is presenting "The Girl from Up There."

Amelia Bingham and her company will begin their season at the Bijou Theatre the second week in January, instead of the first. The rehearsals have progressed so satisfactorily that the organization has been given a vacation over Christmas week.

Rudolph Aronson announces that the competition for the name of Johann Strauss's Viennese opera, "Wiener Blut," has been an unexpected success. The number of suggestions sent in amount to over 800, and from the many received it has been decided to call the new opera "Vienna Life." The fortunate winner of the fifty-dollar prize is Miss Elsa Martens of this city.

The recent changeable weather has had its bad effect upon some of the principal members of the "Florodora" company, now playing at the Casino. After the performance Christmas Eve Miss Fannie Johnston, who plays the part of Dolores, complained of severe pains in her chest, and felt that her cold required attention, and therefore informed the management she would be unable to appear at the Christmas matinée and evening performances. Her understudy was told to prepare herself to fill the rôle, but at the last moment she discovered the task too difficult, and therefore asked to be excused. Miss Guetma L. Baker, who played the part of Vallenda, was then asked to study the part, and with hours' time filled the rôle in a clever and competent manner. Miss Johnston, it is expected, will be well enough to appear again on Saturday evening. Cyril Scott, another member of the company, is suffering from a severe cold, and at last evening's performance was compelled to omit several of his songs.

OFFICE FOR MRS. PHELPS STOKES.

Mayor Van Wyck Appoints Her School Inspector, With No Salary.

Mayor Van Wyck yesterday appointed Mrs. I. N. Phelps Stokes of 118 East Twenty-second Street, a school Inspector for the Twelfth District.

Mrs. Stokes is a daughter-in-law of Anson Phelps Stokes, and before her marriage was Miss Edith Minturn. Mrs. Stokes refused to discuss her appointment last evening. There is no salary attached to the position.

WOMAN FATALLY BURNED.

Was Preparing a Mixture Containing Sulphur Which Exploded.

While attempting to prepare a solution containing sulphur for a pet cat May Sutherland, a woman of twenty-four, was burned to death yesterday in the apartments of Miss Emma Brown at 317 Broadway, Brooklyn, by whom she was employed with her sister, as saleswoman in Miss Brown's fancy goods store.

The mixture exploded and, although Miss Brown and Mrs. Weinreich, who lived in the same house, attempted to put out the flames she was badly burned and died before an ambulance could be called. Mrs. Weinreich was also burned about the hands.

Miss Sutherland came from Red Bank, N. J., where her parents are said to live.

WEDDINGS OF A DAY.

Wilcox—Saxton.

CLYDE, N. Y., Dec. 26.—Ida Louise Saxton, daughter of Judge Charles T. Saxton of the State Board of Claims, and Prof. Arthur Henry Wilcox of Rochester, were married at the home of the bride's father this evening. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Alexander Bramley of New Hartford before one hundred invited guests. Arthur Saxton of Albany was the best man and Helen Saxton the bridesmaid. The groom is principal of the Rochester High School. Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox left for the West on their wedding trip. Their future home will be Rochester.

Negro Pastor Fatally Burned.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Dec. 26.—Fire to-day, caused by the explosion of an air-tight stove, partially destroyed the Providence Methodist Episcopal Church, (colored.) The Rev. J. L. Leonard, the pastor, was fatally burned.

Will Advance Window Glass Prices.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Dec. 26.—The independent glass combine, recently organized, will on Jan. 1 advance the price on all window glass 15 per cent.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

It is evident that the modish world of New York has not yet recovered from the influence of the virtual three days' holiday which the falling of Christmas on Tuesday brought this year. This reaction, with the absence of a majority of the men and women who influence society doings, and who are still in the country, combines to make the week somewhat dull in town. The young set, however, are thoroughly enjoying the holidays, and, although there are not so many parties for the very young people and the children as there were last year, there is enough going on in the way of luncheons, theatre parties, dinners, and dances for the young people to keep them and their parents and guardians busy.

***

The chief incidents on to-day's social calendar are the wedding of Stuyvesant Fish Morris, Jr., and Miss Elizabeth Hillis Wynkoop; a party for children by Mrs. Frederic Gallatin at her residence; a dinner in honor of Miss Elisa Strong and her fiancé, William V. B. Kip, given by Mr. and Mrs. Philip Rhinelander, and the Christmas dance of Mrs. Pratt's class for girls who are not yet out, at Sherry's. Mrs. William H. Davidge and Miss Davidge will give the last of their December days "at home," Mrs. William A. Fraser will give the second of two receptions, and among the dinner givers of the evening will be Mrs. Edward Lyman Short. Mme. Bernhardt will appear at the fourth Musical Morning at the Waldorf, and will recite two poems written by her son, Maurice Bernhardt, and also a poem by François Coppée.

***

The engagement is announced of Marshall Clyde, son of William Clyde of Philadelphia, and Miss Marjorie Bucklin, a daughter of Mrs. N. Sartell Prentice of 2,207 Lexington Avenue, this city. Miss Bucklin is a cousin of William Lanman Bull and a niece of Mrs. Jeremiah Robinson.

***

Among the dinners that have been arranged to be given in honor of Dr. Andrew S. Clarke of Paris and Mrs. William F. Burden is one by Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs. This will be given at Mrs. Oelrichs's residence on Sunday evening next. Dr. Clarke and Mrs. Burden are to be much entertained before their wedding.

***

The wedding of Stuyvesant Fish Morris, Jr., and Miss Elizabeth Hillis Wynkoop will be celebrated this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in Calvary Church, Fourth Avenue and Twenty-first Street. The Rev. Dr. J. Lewis Parks will officiate. Miss Wynkoop will have neither maid of honor nor bridesmaids. Richard Lewis Morris will be his brother's best man, and the ushers are to be James Nicholson Gallatin, Thomas Wilkinson Satterthwaite, James Duane Pell, John Hill Prentice, James Ripley Bartholomew, and Daniel Woodbury Wynkoop, a brother of the bride. The bride will be given away by her father, Dr. Gerardus H. Wynkoop, and the wedding will be followed by a small reception at the residence of Dr. Wynkoop, 128 Madison Avenue. This reception will be for relatives and intimate friends only.

***

Mrs. Morgan Grinnell (Miss Sarah J. Stone) of 36 East Fiftieth Street will give on the evening of Tuesday, Jan. 1, a dance for her young daughter, Miss Catherine Grinnell, who is not yet out, but who will be introduced next Winter. The dance will, of course, be for the younger set. Mrs. Lenox Banks will entertain a number of young people at Cedarhurst, her country residence at New Hamburg, on Jan. 1. The young guests are to leave on the 10 A. M. train and will return at 5 P. M.

***

Mrs. John Jay White (Miss Grace Heffman) is to give a small dance for boys and girls at her residence on Saturday evening next. The guests are to be dressed to represent popular songs and books.

***

Still another of the dances scheduled for the very young set in the near future is that of Mrs. David Morrison (Miss Abby Putnam) for her daughters, Miss Nathalie and Miss Lillian Morrison.

***

Mr. and Mrs. J. Pierrepont Edwards are to give a small theatre party for Miss Dorothy Edwards, who made her début on Dec. 14, on the evening of the 31st. It will be followed by a supper at the Edwards residence, 12 East Forty-sixth Street, and the young people will see the New Year in.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, who have decided to sell their beautiful country place, Shadowbrook, at Lenox, will take a party of twenty-five guests there from this city to-morrow, who will remain over New Year's. As this may be the last party to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Stokes at Shadowbrook, the young people who have been invited are much envied by their fellows.

***

There has been, and from all indications there will be, more entertaining in Philadelphia, Washington, and Baltimore during the holidays than in New York. A number of people from this city went on to Washington yesterday for the ball given there last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Levi Z. Leiter for their daughters, the Misses Nannie and Daisy Leiter. It is reported in Washington that Mr. Leiter and Miss Nannie Leiter will sail for Europe early in January, and will spend the rest of the Winter in Egypt. Senator Depew will give a dinner dance early next month in Washington for his niece, Miss Anna Paulding, whose engagement to Lieut. Edie, United States Navy, was recently announced. The largest and most important private ball at the National capital will be given this evening by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Townsend for their daughter, Miss Matilde Townsend. The new Townsend house, which is one of the most spacious and beautiful in Washington, will be opened to-night for the first time. Mr. and Mrs. George W. Childs Drexel will give a large ball in Philadelphia on the evening of New Year's Day.

***

The New Year's festivities at Tuxedo are to be on a larger scale this year than ever before, and every room in the clubhouse has been taken for the three days' holiday. The regular New Year's Eve dance will probably not be given this year, but in its place will be a bal masqué on the evening of New Year's Day. The customary ceremonies over a bowl of eggnog in the clubhouse on New Year's Eve will, however, take place as usual.

***

Cards for the dance to be given by Mrs. John Jacob Astor have not yet been received, and it is now a mooted question as to whether this dance will be given on Jan. 14, as originally intended. The Vanderbilt wedding at Newport, which, it was at first thought, would be a small affair, will take a large proportion of the dancing set out of town, and it will be impossible for those who go out to the wedding and remain for the reception to reach New York in time for the Astor ball—if given on the same evening.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Henry O. Havemeyer gave a dance for their daughter, Miss Adeline Havemeyer, at their residence, 1 East Sixty-sixth Street, last evening. Miss Havemeyer is not yet out, but will be formally presented next year, and the guests of last evening were principally the younger set, although a few débutantes were present. The guests, who began arriving about 8:30, were received by Mrs. Havemeyer, who was gowned in filmy black spangled with silver, and Miss Adeline Havemeyer, who wore a simple, fluffy white frock. The dancing was done in the beautiful picture gallery, and the cotillon, which was started at an early hour, was led by Harry Peters, who danced with his cousin, Miss Adeline Havemeyer. There were four favor figures, one being a Christmas tree favor, in which pretty trifles and amusing gifts appropriate to the holiday season were distributed. There was a candy figure in which boxes of bonbons were given the girls, and canes were presented to the boys; a silver figure, in which silver articles of various kinds were given to both, and another in which jeweled orders, pipes, &c., were distributed. After the cotillion supper was served at twenty or more small tables in the large hall and the adjoining dining room. The house was charmingly decorated with masses of holly and Christmas greens and cut flowers. Among the guests were the Misses Lulu Peters, Mary Parke, Constance Pratt, Nellie Hard, Lily Oelrichs, Sadie Belloni, Anita Boulton, Molly Lefferts, Dorothy Edwards, Louise Jackson, Helen W. Stevens, Kate Richardson, Williams, Pratt, Grinnell, Morrison, Hinckley, Robert Belloni, Olyphant, Prime, Fanshawe, Smith, Cresby, and Oscar Stevens, Richard Williams, Harry Alexandre, Seymour Johnson, Stephenson Towle, the Messrs. Hitchcock, Charles F. H. Jackson, Gallatin, Schieffelin, Charles Oelrichs, Robinson, Morris, Kountze, Benjamin, Oakley, Morris, and David and Alfred Wagstaff.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson Seligman gave a dinner last evening at their residence, 11 East Sixty-ninth Street, for Mme. Sembrich and Herr Andreas Dippel and Frau Dippel.

***

The first production of Puccini's opera "La Bohème" attracted a notable audience from the social standpoint to the Metropolitan Opera House last evening. Some remarkably handsome costumes were worn. Mrs. Ogden Goelet was in white lace, with a remarkable collar of large pearls. Mrs. Astor senior, who had with her Mrs. Orme Wilson, wore purple, embroidered with silver, and her ermine collar and diamonds. Mrs. Charles Astor Bristed, who was with Mrs. E. J. Berwind, wore an effective gown of red silk pailletted. Mrs. Francis Burrell Hoffman, who had in her box Mme. Nordica and Miss Louise Ward McAllister, was in black velvet. Mme. Nordica wore a remarkably effective gown of gray silk, with steel pailletted. Lady Cunard and Mrs. Edmund Baylies were in the W. K. Vanderbilt box; Mrs. Baylies wore a becoming gown of pink panne, and Lady Cunard was in white silk with lace. Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish was in pink. Mrs. William D. Sloane were white satin. Her daughter, Miss Lila Sloane, was in pink.

***

Mrs. William F. Burden and her fiancé, Dr. Andrew S. Clarke of Paris, received many congratulations. They were in a parterre box. Mrs. Burden was in black velvet and a white boa. With Miss Annie Leary were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Peters and Mrs. Frederick Pearson. Mrs. Storrs Wells, Mrs. Lawrence, Mrs. Lorillard Spencer, and Mrs. Leo Everett, Mrs. Albert Bierstadt, Mrs. William Jay, Mrs. Bradish Johnson, and the Countess de Langier Villars. Mrs. S. N. Phelps Stokes, Mrs. John Vinton Dahlgren, Mrs. Edward Reeve-Merritt, and Mrs. A. T. Ashmore, Mrs. Charles T. Barney and Miss Barney, Mrs. Jules Reynal and her daughter, Mrs. Thebaud; Mrs. J. F. De Lanier, Mrs. Joseph Stickney, and Mrs. Henry Clews and her daughter, Mrs. Parsons, were among the women in the parterre boxes whose gowns attracted attention. Owing to the fact that so many prominent families are spending the week out of town several boxes were vacant and the house was not a large one.

SOCIETY IN WASHINGTON.

Mr. and Mrs. Levi Z. Leiter Give a Large Reception After a Three Years' Absence.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—Mr. and Mrs. Levi Z. Leiter last evening signalized their return to Washington after three years' absence by a large reception, which brought to their Dupont Circle home several hundred guests. The elaborate floral decoration usual on such occasions was dispensed with almost entirely.

Contrary to many reports, Mr. and Mrs. Leiter have never visited India. Their daughters, the Misses Nancy and Daisy Leiter, alone enjoyed that experience. To them belongs the credit of selecting the Eastern souvenirs now adorning their home and recalling their sojourn with their sister, Lady Curzon, wife of the Viceroy of India, before whose portrait Mr. and Mrs. Leiter stood to welcome their guests.

Mrs. Leiter wore a French gown of white satin, with long train and elaborate garniture of point lace. A tiara of diamonds and several diamond corsage ornaments added great brilliancy to her toilet. Miss Leiter wore light-blue satin and a necklace of pearls. Miss Daisy Leiter, looking more like Lady Curzon than ever, wore a beautiful gown of pink satin, but no jewels.

A band played a varied programme from 10 o'clock until midnight, when supper was served, after which the dancing was taken up by the younger portion of the company and the programme changed to dance music. Dancing continued until the small hours of this morning, when a supper at small tables closed the entertainment.

Less than 500 names were included in the list of invitations, among those present being the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Gage, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Root and Miss Root, the Postmaster General and Mrs. Smith, the Secretary of Agriculture and Miss Wilson, the British Ambassador and Lady Pauncefote, the Ambassador from Mexico and Mme. Azpiroz, the Chinese Minister and Mme. Wu, the Japanese Minister, the Chief Justice and Mrs. Fuller, Justice and Mrs. White, Justice and Mrs. Harlan, Justice and Mrs. Gray, Justice and Mrs. Brewer, Justice and Mrs. Brewer and Miss Brewer, the Speaker of the House and Mrs. Henderson, Senator and Mrs. Fairbanks, Senator and Mrs. Hoar, Senator and Mrs. Lodge, Senator and Mrs. Wetmore, Senator Hale, Senator Kean, Senator Wolcott, Bishop and Mrs. Satterlee, Bishop Hurst, the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Mackay Smith, the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. McKim, the Rev. and Mrs. Teunis Hamlin, Representative and Mrs. Hitt, Representative and Mrs. Wadsworth, Representative and Mrs. Sprague, Mrs. Hearst, Mrs. James G. Blaine, Mrs. Truxton Beale, Mrs. and Miss Tuckerman, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Thoron, Miss Patten, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Riggs, and Mrs. Hobson.

The British Ambassador and Lady Pauncefote, Dr. and Mrs. Gallaudet, Representative and Mrs. Hitt, and Mr. and Mrs. Fairfax Harrison entertained dinner companies last evening, those present later going to the reception of Mr. and Mrs. Leiter.

Mrs. Gage, Mrs. Root, Mrs. Griggs, Mrs. Charles Emory Smith, and Miss Wilson all held informal receptions yesterday afternoon.

BUSY DAYS FOR FENCERS

West Point Cadets to Try for Intercollegiate Honors.

SEASON OPENS NEXT MONTH

Juniors Will Start the Sport and the National Championships Will Close the Events.

Eight competitions of interest to fencers have just been arranged by the Amateur Fencers' League of America for the coming year. These National events, which always attract considerable attention among the coterie of sportsmen who find their chief amusement for exercise in the thrust and parry of the foil and duelling sword, will begin on Tuesday, Jan. 15, in the New York Athletic Club, and conclude on April 26 and 27 with the National championships in the Fencers' Club, 37 West Twenty-second Street.

In addition to these events, the different athletic clubs where fencing has secured a hold will give individual championships and team contests, so the season for this sport seems to open with indications of greater activity than was the case a year ago.

Evidences in this direction are seen in the fact that the West Point cadets now have a flourishing fencing club in existance and they will make their first entry in the coming intercollegiate fencing championship, which will be held at a date yet to be fixed in March. The naval cadets at Annapolis have usually been represented in these intercollegiate events, but owing to the Spanish war they did not show their skill in fencing during the past two years.

With West Point and Annapolis, and teams from Harvard, Columbia, Yale, and Cornell, the intercollegiate contest for 1901 is expected to be the best ever held. This event is held under the auspices of the Fencers' League of America, and the committee appointed to take charge of the arrangements consists of Dr. Graeme M. Hammond and Charles E. Goodhue.

The intercollegiate championship will be held this coming season in the New York Athletic Club, instead of the Racquet and Tennis Club, as has always been the case in the past.

The full list of events arranged by the Fencers' League, with the exception of the intercollegiate contest, is:

Jan. 15, New York Athletic Club—Junior foils; Charles E. Goodhue, committee. Jan. 26, Boston Athletic Association—Open competition, foils; Atherton Brownell, U. A. A., committee. Feb. 12, Fencers' Club—Club team of three, each man to fence with a different weapon, foils, sabres, dueling swords, for the Fencers' Club Cup; Van Zo Post, committee; Feb. 23, Boston Athletic Association Team competition, foils, for the Interclub Trophy presented by the Boston Athletic Association; Atherton Brownell, committee. March 9, Fencers' Club—Junior team competition, foils, for the Morris Medals; Van Zo Post, committee. April 9—Qualifying Preliminaries for the National Championships, held for the New England Division at the Boston Athletic Association, and New York in the New York Athletic Club; foils, dueling swords, sabres, and single sticks; Charles Tatham, committee. April 16, Fencers' Club—Team competition for the New York Athletic Club Cup; Charles Tatham, committee; April 26 and 27, Fencers' Club—National Championships, final bouts held in conjunction with the Amateur Athletic Union; Willis O. Parker, N. Y. A. C.; Charles Tatham, Fencers' Club; Charles Bothner, N. Y. T. V., and Atherton Brownell, B. A. A., committee.

The Boston Athletic Association has shown more activity in fencing this year than ever before, and other fifty members there are new diligent students of the foils. The junior competition, which will open the season on Jan. 15, will bring out considerable new material from all the clubs having fencing departments. A junior is a fencer who has never won a first prize in an open competition, except in a novice class, nor secured a place in a National championship. The new fencers of ambition, therefore, look forward to the junior contest as an opportunity to win their spurs, and some well-fought bouts are usually seen. The victors last year, who are now, of course, in the senior ranks, were Carroll Clapp of the Boston Athletic Association, first; J. J. Manning, New York Athletic Club, second; John P. Mitchell, Fencers' Club, third.

One of the interesting events last year was the first competition for the silver cup given by the Fencers' Club. The competing clubs entered teams of three, each man fencing with a different weapon, foils, sabres, and dueling swords being used. The Fencers' Club team, consisting of Fitzhugh Townsend with the foil, John Langdon Erving with the sabre, and W. Scott O'Connor with the dueling sword, won the trophy. The cup is to be competed for annually, and the second match will be held on Feb. 12 in the Fencers' Club.

One of the most important changes in the fencing rules this year is in regard to dueling swords. One touch will hereafter constitute a bout, instead of the best out of three, as was the previous method. This brings the bout to the regular dueling standpoint, for when a man is cut in a duel that is supposed to be satisfactory to his opponent unless it is agreed to continue.

BREWER DEFEATED DICKSON.

Newburg Trap Shooter Withdrew After Killing Fifty-three Live Birds.

Capt. John L. Brewer, who in his prime was the champion trap shooter of the world, won a splendid victory yesterday at Dexter Park, Jamaica Avenue and Enfield Street, Brooklyn, over his challenger, A. K. Dickson of Newburg, N. Y.

The man from Newburg was in the hardest kind of luck imaginable. Each man started out to shoot a few practice birds, and just as he had brought down his third bird Dickson's gun broke, and he had to shoot the match after that in a borrowed gun.

Brewer was in excellent form yesterday. In the first string of twenty-five birds he killed straight up to his eighth bird, then he dropped all but his twenty-third pigeon, which fell dead just over the boundary flags, leaving him with a tally of 23 killed and 2 missed for the quarter century.

The tally at the half-way mark stood: Brewer, 47 killed; 3 missed; Dickson, 39 killed, 11 missed. In the next twenty-five Brewer, shooting with all his old-time vim and enthusiasm, killed straight in the cleanest manner possible, and then dropped two more, making a total for the match of 74 killed out of a possible 77. Dickson shot but fourteen in his last tally out of the twenty-five, then missed his next two, and withdrew from the match, with a total of 53 killed. This gave the match to Brewer amid cheers by the final tally of 21 birds. The scores:

Challenge match, one hundred live birds per man, $200 a side, loser to pay the cost of the birds and expenses of the match; 30 yards rise: Capt. John L. Brewer, New York City—

Cycle Show at the Garden.

Beginning on Saturday, Jan. 12, and ending on Saturday, Jan. 19, Madison Square Garden will be occupied by the sixth National show given by the National Cycle Exhibition Company. Interest in the event each year increases, and the showing of cycles, motor cycles, and automobiles in the coming exhibition will give some entirely new improvements, which every rider of a wheel and every admirer of an auto will desire to see.

The automobile takes its place in the exhibition by popular demand, and the motor tricycle will be a novelty worth seeing. A hydro-car and an autoette will also be novelties.

Norwegian Skater Defeated.

Arthur Yale Sarony of the New York Athletic Club and Ward Claflin, Pawnee Athletic Club, defeated Peter Sinnturd, the Norwegian skater from Christiania, last night in a one-mile handicap skating contest at the Clermont Avenue Ice Skating Rink, Brooklyn. Summary:

One-Mile Handicap Skating Race.—Won by Ward Claflin, Pawnee Athletic Club, Brooklyn, 90 yards; Arthur Yale Sarony, New York Athletic Club, scratch, second; E. J. Mulligan, Brooklyn, 100 yards, third; Peter Sinnlurd, Christiana, Norway, 20 yards, fourth. Time—3:16.

CLOSE BILLIARD MATCH.

Norris Defeats Miller in the Opening Game at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club.

A remarkable game of billiards characterized the opening of the contest for the Knickerbocker Athletic Club championship last night in the club rooms, Madison Avenue and Forty-fifth Street. Charles A. Norris, a Class A player, and Dr. A. B. Miller, a Class B player, were the contestants, and their match over the fourteen-inch balk-line table was watched with intense interest by a large delegation of club members. Each game in the series will be for 300 points.

Norris won the match by the close margin of eight points, scoring 300 to 292 for Miller. The latter, however, broke the record for the present season for a single run. In the fifty-fifth inning he ran up the magnificent score of sixty-one points. The best previous record this year was fifty-six, made by A. D. Ferguson in the recent Class B, Amateur Athletic Union, tournament. Just before Miller's big run he was twenty-eight points behind Norris, the figures being 183 for Miller to 216 for Norris. The big run, however, changed the outlook, putting Miller thirty-three points in the lead, and as he followed it up with a ten and soon after with a run of twenty, his prospects for victory were decidedly rosy.

Unexpected success made him nervous, while Norris, who is a veteran with the cue, having held the championship of the Chicago Athletic Association for five years previous to his recent removal to this city, played with absolute coolness. This imperturbable steadiness gave him the game, for after the fifty-eighth inning Miller's skill deteriorated suddenly, and for the concluding eight innings he only made eight points. Norris made 16 in the sixtieth inning, 12 in the next, 18 in the sixty-fifth inning, closing, in the following inning one of the most exciting billiard contests ever seen in the Knickerbocker Clubhouse by a grand run of 9.

Norris is a more finished player than Miller, and he plays a more open game. The latter kept the balls well in a corner during the greater part of his long run, although he made some very clever gather shots. Dr. A. B. Bracken was the referee. The billiard committee of the club, which has general charge of the championship tournament, consists of Dr. W. Duff Bullard, Wilson P. Foss, and F. N. Drake.

Besides Norris and Miller, the other entries for the present contest are John A. Hendrick, Albro Akin, and Dr. Leonidas L. Mial. Norris, Mial, and Hendrick will play in the coming Class A championship tournament, which will begin during the first week in February.

The scores follow:

Charles S. Norris—1-1 24 8 0 0 4 0 5 3 1 13 2 6 3 6 1 0 1 5 3 1 2 9 3 3 15 0 1 1 0 0 0 6 3 1 2 11 2 0 11 1 0 0 4 4 1 0 0 2 3 1 0 2 1 2 5 3 16. 0 0 16 12 0 5 0 18 9. Total, 300; average, 4 26-56.

The game to-night will be between Charles S. Norris and John A. Hendrick.

AMIE WILKES IN THE LEAD.

The Little Pacer Was the Star Performer on the Speedway Yesterday.

The handsome little pacer Amie Wilkes, driven by James Murphy of Chicago, was the star performer on the Speedway yesterday afternoon. She met all comers, and won about every brush in which she was started. Her first encounter was with the gray mare Girlie, driven by M. Wilder. For the first quarter Girlie paced close to her opponent and made an excellent showing, but was not equal to one of Amie Wilkes's bursts of speed and was lost in the stretch. Girlie next fell a victim to the speed of John Timmons's new horse, Harry Davis, who won an easy victory.

About this time Nathan Straus appeared in the stretch behind the spotted trotter Malacca, (2:18½,) and a brush was at once proposed between Amie Wilkes and Malacca. Both drivers were agreeable, and the animals were turned to a good start. Amie Wilkes took the lead and held it to the finish, Malacca making a desperate fight. Mr. Straus then took the reins behind the famous trotter Alves, (2:09¾,) and three exceedingly interesting heats followed, Amie Wilkes winning each one. It was evident, however, that Alves was not in condition, for he broke on several occasions, and only seemed to reach his gait once in the last heat, when he made a desperate spurt that showed some of his usual speed, but too late to be of any service to him, and he was beaten out by a couple of lengths.

Upton, (2:19½,) driven by J. Jarvis, did some fast work, and beat a four-year old driver by Charles Weiland several times. A. H. Gwatheney's team, composed of Louise Mac (2:09¾) and the bay gelding Tiverton, (2:23¼,) covered several very fast halves without breaking once. They were in as fine form and condition as they had ever been seen in on the road, and won several very easy victories over single horses with fast marks.

The bay gelding Esprit, (2:12¼,) driven by Charles Reilly, did some good work, as did Thomas Daly, driving Bessie Benton, (2:26¾.) John F. Cockerill had Swift and Honor Bright, (2:24¼,) to the pole, but did not speed them.

Neumeister Race Track Sold.

LA CROSSE, Wis., Dec. 26.—Attorney C. L. Hood of this city to-day purchased the celebrated Neumeister mile race track and farm adjoining for $7,348 at Sheriff's sale. This track is considered one of the best in America. A gathering of the world's famous horses was held here in 1895. The sale of the track settles a legal battle which has been in the courts several years.

Indoor Athletic Carnival.

The Athletic Committee of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club has prepared an elaborate programme for its Winter Carnival of Sports, which will be held in Madison Square Garden on Feb. 4.

Two team races have been placed on the programme—a one-mile interscholastic and a one-mile intercollegiate run. The one-mile interscholastic team race will be open to the schools of New York and New Jersey. For the one-mile intercollegiate team race of four men each, each man to run a quarter mile, invitations have been extended to Yale, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Columbia, and the New York University.

The other handicap events, open to all registered athletes, are as follows: 60-yard-run, 880-yard run, one-mile run, 300-yard run, putting the 12-pound shot, and three-mile run. There will also be a 50-yard novice run.

Gold, silver, and bronze die medals will be given to the first, second, and third in each event. In the team races, gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded to the members of the team finishing first, second, and third respectively. The rules of the A. A. U. will govern all the contests. Entries will close with J. E. Sullivan, 16 and 18 Park Place, Jan. 25.

Boxing and Wrestling Championships.

The Olympic Club of San Francisco will hold another boxing and wrestling tournament in San Francisco after the holding of the Amateur Athletic Union boxing and wrestling championships in Pittsburg Jan. 17, 18, and 19. It is the intention of the Athletic Committee of the Olympic Club to again invite all the winners of the National championships to compete in its tournament, the entire expenses to be borne by the California organization. They did the same thing after the National bouts last year, and all those who journeyed to the Coast were used royally.

The classes in the National championships are the same as last year, namely, 105, 115, 125, 135, 145, 158, and over 158 pounds, boxing, and 105, 115, 125, 135, 145, and 158 pounds, wrestling. Entry blanks can now be secured by addressing T. H. Laidley, Jr., 507 Wood Street, Pittsburg, Penn., with whom the entries will close Jan. 12, 1901.

ON LOCAL BOWLING ALLEYS.

Spartans Lose Three Games to Roseville Bowlers in National League Series.

The scheduled games in the American National tournament were postponed last night, their place being taken by a series of match games for $50 a side between F. Clinch of the Corinthian Bowling Club of Manhattan and A. Jackson of the Palace Bowling Club of Brooklyn.

The conditions called for the winning of five out of nine games. Jackson won the first three with good margins, but lost the next three to Clinch by differences of one, one, and four pins, respectively. He then braced up and won out on the next two, making the excellent score of 245 in the last game. The scores:

F. Clinch, Corinthian B. C., Manhattan—

The ties in the Long Island League tournament were rolled on the Elephant Club Alleys, Brooklyn, last night. The Reinecke team won two of a series of three games with the Kings County Wheelmen, scoring 848 in the first game, 827 in the second, and 927 in the third. The wheelmen scored 846, 856, and 819. This gives the Reineckes fifth prize and the wheelmen sixth.

The tie for seventh place between the Echo, Pin Knight Monarch, and South Paw teams also was decided, and was won by the Echoes. The scores were: Echo, 915; Pin Knights, 855; Monarch, 811; South Paw, 875.

The final match for the championship of Manhattan, between the Harlem League team, winners of the East Side championship, and the National League five, winners of the West Side championship, will be rolled next Wednesday evening at Thum & Kahlsdorf's Harlem Palace alleys, One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street and Third Avenue, and the games in the Harlem League tournament scheduled to be rolled on those alleys that evening will be postponed.

A match—best six of eleven games—between F. Clinch of the Corinthian Bowling Club of New York and T. Green of Hackensack, N. J., for $50 a side was rolled on the Germania alleys last night, immediately following Clinch's match with Jackson of the Palace Bowling Club. The entire eleven games were necessary to decide the match, Clinch winning in the eleventh game by a score of 6 to 5.

TRAP SHOOTING MATCHES.

Van Allen Scores in the Second Inter-State Park Handicap.

As two of the four winners in the first series of the Inter-State Park Handicap were absent, the final match of that series was not decided at the Inter-State Park traps yesterday afternoon. The second match of the second series resulted in a tie between T. W. Morfey of Queens and S. M. Van Allen of Jamaica, who made straight kills of twenty-five each. As Morfey won the first match of the present series last week, he waived his rights yesterday in favor of Van Allen. Several sweepstakes also were shot. The scores:

The Inter-State Park Handicap; 25 live birds; $10 entrance, birds extra; handicap rises.

Vardon Will Return Here.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Harry Vardon, who was a passenger from New York on the White Star steamer Majestic, in the course of an interview at Liverpool yesterday said the American people had treated him most hospitably, but that the American golfers had still much to learn.

He intimated that he intended to return to the United States soon, but that he had not decided whether he would settle there.

YACHT'S KEEL LAID BARE.

Removing of the Mould Shows the Operation Has Been Successful.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 26.—The greater part of the surface of the lead keel of the new cup defender was laid bare to-day on account of the removal of the red clay banked about it and the ripping off of the boards that were used in the lining of the mould. That the lead keel of the syndicate racing sloop was molded to a high state of perfection as to lines and balancing powen was evidenced by the appearance of the now chilled lead when the designer ran his fingers over its surface this afternoon. Few words were expressed, but it was apparent that the Bristol designer was well pleased with the job.

The forward end of the keel, now laid bare by the removal of the material that surrounded it, something after the fashion of opening an ordinary casting, shows characteristics that are interesting and in more than one way important in the way of improvements over the lines of the keel of the champion of 1899.

The lead is carried out further forward at the fore foot, the curve upward turns a shade quicker, and the face of the fore foot is broader by three inches than is the Columbia's fore foot. Powerful and massive as the keel appears at the point of the fore foot, it is not as wide there as it is fifteen inches further aft. At this point and down close to the heel is the widest part of the lead—thirty-two inches.

RECEPTIONS OF N. Y. Y. C.

Formal Opening Exercises of the Club's New Home Next Month.

The members of the New York Yacht Club will not celebrate New Year's Day in their new clubhouse, on West Forty-fourth Street, as had been hoped might be the case. The club's fine new home is at present in the hands of the decorators and painters, who will not finish their labors before the end of the present week. The furnishing of the house will require a week for its completion, and several additional days will be required to install and drill the increased staff of servitors, so that it is improbable that the Building Committee will turn over the building to the House Committee before Jan. 10, and it is likely that the actual date will be nearer Jan. 15.

The furniture and furnishings of the new house will be new throughout, none of the furnishings of the old house being removed. Of course, the models, books, pictures, and trophies of the club will be transferred to the Forty-fourth Street quarters. The models and books have already been moved.

It is planned to give a series of three receptions to celebrate the formal opening of the club's new home. The first entertainment will be the largest, as invitations will be sent to members of other yacht clubs and to many prominent persons not strictly identified with yachting. On this occasion a silver cup will be presented to ex-Commodore J. Pierpont Morgan in recognition of his liberality in giving the club the ground upon which the new clubhouse has been built. The second reception will be for the members and their families, while the third will be for the members only.

Plans Ready for Centreboard Yacht.

QUINCY, Mass., Dec. 26.—C. C. Hanley, who will build a ninety-foot centreboard yacht to compete in the trial races to decide upon the America's Cup defender, to-day declared that his plans were complete and that work could be begun on the boat at once.

A new marine railway was launched to-day at the Hanley Works in a large storage basin connected with the workshops, which will hold twenty-eight feet of water at high tide.

Mr. Hanley denied that Thomas W. Lawson, head of the syndicate which is building a keel boat to compete for the place of cup defender, is in any way connected with the centreboard boat project.

Capt. Haff Visits Lawson.

BOSTON, Dec. 26.—Capt. Henry C. Haff, the veteran sailing master of four cup defenders, arrived here to-day and made a friendly visit to George Lawley. Afterward the Captain reluctantly admitted that he visited Boston on invitation of Thomas W. Lawson and Designer Crowninshield for a conference on private matters.

Asked what he thought of the design of the Lawson boat, he said that he had not seen it, but from what he had heard, he thought she would be a very good boat.

The Captain spoke highly of the merits of a 90-foot centreboarder.

Royalty for the Cup Races.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—"The New York Yacht Club," says The Daily Express, "will invite Emperor William and the Prince of Wales to witness the cup races, and President McKinley will also send notes expressing the pleasure their visits would give."

Sir Thomas Lipton, who has been interviewed on the subject for The Daily Express, said he thought it within the range of possibility that the Prince of Wales would accept such an invitation.

Yale Won at Basketball.

CATSKILL, N. Y., Dec. 26.—A basketball game was played on the armory floor here to-night between Yale University and the Sixteenth Separate National Guard teams. It was won by Yale by a score of 18 to 12. Lincoln of Yale was umpire. It was the home team's first game under the rules of 1901. The Sixteenth Separate Company team on Monday night defeated the University of Pennsylvania 54 to 4 under the rules of 1900.

Bank Wrecker Valentine's Unpaid Loan

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 26.—At the hearing before Vice Chancellor Pitney to-day in the action to establish the responsibility of the Directors of the Middlesex County Bank, which was wrecked by George M. Valentine, President Ehrich B. Watson admitted that a loan of $11,000 made to Valentine in 1897, which was secured by railroad bonds to the value of $14,000, had never been paid. Valentine sent the bonds to Broker Chapman of New York, who has never accounted for them. Suit for the recovery of the money is now pending. President Watson was not at the meeting of the Directors in 1895 at which a communication from the State Banking Commissioner was read which contained a warning that Valentine was overdrawing his account. That portion of the communication was skipped by Valentine, who read the communication for the board.

Shock Kills An Aged Woman.

CAMDEN, N. J., Dec. 26.—A fire in the house of Dr. E. A. Street of this place early this morning caused the death of Mrs. Syckler, the aged mother of Mrs. Street, from shock. The Rev. M. E. Snyder, a guest of the Street family, carried Mrs. Syckler to the street. The shock killed her. She was the wife of the Rev. Charles Syckler. The damage by fire was $1,000.

Schooner Marcus Lucas Wrecked.

GREENPORT, L. I., Dec. 26.—The schooner Marcus Lucas of Philadelphia, which sprang a leak in Long Island Sound on Saturday, capsized and drifted to within a mile and a half of the shore at this point. The vessel was first seen by the lookout man at the Rocky Point Life Saving Station. There was no one on board. Two tugs from New London took the wreck in tow at noon and started in the direction of that port.

Arrested for Prizefighting.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Dec. 26.—Thomas Dwyer was arrested here to-day on a charge of prizefighting. Dwyer fought Thomas Dempsey before the Woodbridge Social Club several weeks ago. The principals were indicted by the Middlesex County Grand Jury, but it was not known until Dwyer was arrested.

Mexico's Financial Condition.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 26.—The reports telegraphed to the United States implying that Mexico is on the verge of a financial panic are exaggerated. Money, it is true, continues light, yet business and contracting houses are continuing to receive large orders from the interior for merchandise, machinery, &c., and excellent contracts in electrical lines are being made by firms in this city. Generally speaking, merchants here are not overstocked, and business has been good throughout the month.

Cut in Rubber Prices.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 26.—The United States Rubber Company has announced to the thirteen outside companies a 25 per cent. cut in prices, to take effect during the first week in January.

LONG SENTENCE MERCIFUL.

Woman's Prison Association Recommends New Ideas for Criminals.

The fifty-sixth annual report of the Woman's Prison Association and the Isaac T. Hopper Home, 110 Second Avenue, showed a total of 169 inmates. The report recommends strongly the advisability of the "accumulative sentence law." On this the report says in part: "The majority of women sent to our correctional institutions are so-called 'rounders'—women who have spent years alternating between prisons and liquor saloons. Such women will not enter homes or make any attempt at reformation.

"Probably not 10 per cent. are in a normal condition physically or mentally. They are suffering from alcoholism in its worst form, with the result that they are mental and moral degenerates utterly incapable of caring for themselves, of performing useful labor, or of withstanding the temptation of passing the side entrance of a liquor saloon. It is mistaken kindness to give a woman who is mentally and morally irresponsible a sentence of three days and then turn her adrift in the street. The only merciful sentence for habitual rounders is a long sentence in an institution where they can receive medical treatment, recover from the effects of dissipation, and have industrial training which will enable them to secure a livelihood when their sentences expire."

The report suggests that the sole means of occupation of the inmates of workhouses, sewing, laundry work, and scrubbing, is not sufficient to employ them. It recommends outdoor labor such as cultivating idle land about the institutions, thereby serving not only the purpose of raising fresh vegetables for the institutions themselves, but by adding to the physical and moral condition of the inmates under the influence of the exercise and the outdoor air. The system, the report said, is practiced at the Auburn State Prison, where it has been thoroughly tried out.

The visits made to Raymond Street Jail, where 90 women prisoners were confined, showed a deplorable condition of affairs, the report says. There are no means of separating prisoners, and old and young, first offenders and hardened criminals, are closely associated. No employment beyond the household duties and laundry work is provided, and the majority of women sit in idleness.

On the subject of the suppression of vice the report says:

"Over 341,000 immigrants have landed at this port during the year, and two-thirds of these have settled in this vicinity. Vigilance committees may drive immoral persons to other cities for a time, but when the wave of popular indignation subsides they are sure to return. To segregate vice is a proposition from which any civilized nation should recoil with horror. Chief Devery's proposition that prostitution be made a felony is the only reasonable means of cleansing our city, and even that would be ineffective unless made applicable to both sexes.

"The voluntary probation" subject, as it is practiced in Boston, is approved.

"The effect of this law upon family life is excellent," the report says. "Men arrested for intoxication are placed on probation, with the understanding that they must find employment and remain sober or be sent to the Island. The officer stated that in a large number of instances the wives of men arrested for intoxication appeal to the Magistrate to have the time of probation extended before it expires, saying that when, where their homes had been made a hell through drink, they were now experiencing the first happiness of their married lives.

"During the year the total number of prisoners placed on probation in Boston was 1,142. The cost of support of a prisoner at Deer Island is $2.18 a week. Allowing the cost of the entire Probation Office of the city to be $12,000, which is a high estimate, the City of Boston saved $20,000 through its Probation Office."

PUNISHMENT FOR DEER KILLER.

Fine or Jail for Man Who Slaughtered Out of Season.

EASTHAMPTON, L. I., Dec. 26.—John E. Overton, State Game Protector, has secured the conviction of Warren Hendrickson of Springs for killing a deer that swam across from Gardiner's Island to Long Island. Hendrickson claims that the deer was about dead when he came ashore, and so he really did not kill him; but he was informed that even so he had no right to take possession. The Justice before whom Hendrickson was arraigned gave him the alternative of $15 fine or fifteen days' imprisonment.

It is said that deer come across the bay every Winter, and are promptly killed by the people living on what is known as the Point. It is even believed that the deer are sometimes frightened across when the larders are low.

WOMAN SUES CHARLES PETER.

Frieda Lippert Asks $30,000 for Breach of Promise of Marriage.

Frieda Lippert of 919 Park Avenue, Hoboken, has begun suit against Charles Peter, son of the well-known brewer of that town, for $30,000 damages for breach of promise. Miss Lippert in her complaint says she met Peter at Busch's Hotel, in Hoboken, on July 8 last when she returned from Germany, where she had been on a visit to relatives. She was on her way to her home in Chicago, where she lived with her sister.

They fell in love with one another, but Peter told her, she says, that if he married without his father's consent he would be disinherited. Relying upon his promise to marry her as soon as his father's consent was obtained, she lived with him at 919 Park Avenue, where they were known as Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lippert. He accompanied her to many public places, and introduced her to his friends as his wife.

She alleges Peter deserted her on Dec. 5, and on Dec. 6 was married by Justice Frank O'Keefe to Alma Deppe, a widow residing in New York, but who gave her maiden name, Alma Schumann.

Peter has given bail in $1,000 for a hearing.

ASKS FOR SEPARATE TRIAL.

Kerr Says He Was Away When Drug Was Given to Jennie Bosschieter.

William Harding, counsel for George Kerr, indicted at Paterson for the murder of Jennie Bosschieter, yesterday made application to Supreme Court Justice Jonathan Dixon for a separate trial for his client.

Mr. Harding alleged that Kerr was not present when the knock-out drops were given to the girl and has made no confession. He said that the confession made by the other accused persons might injure his client if they were tried together.

Prosecutor Emery held that the Court could protect Kerr from any injury likely to result from the confession. Justice Dixon reserved decision.

CITY TO GREET NEW CENTURY.

Municipal Assembly Plans a Welcome, Subject to Mayor's Approval.

New York is to welcome officially the new century, unless Mayor Van Wyck puts his veto to the plan to hold a celebration in front of the City Hall on New Year's eve.

Councilman Sulzer, Chairman of the joint committee of the Municipal Assembly having the matter in charge, said yesterday that arrangements would be made to have the front of the City Hall festooned with electric lights. Sousa's Band is to be hired, and a quiet announcement is made that just eighteen cases of champagne will be bought for the use of specially invited guests to drink out the old century and welcome the new.

Outside on the City Hall steps Damrosch's Choral Union and more than 1,000 members of the United German Singing Societies will be stationed. The plan now is to have the City Hall comparatively dark just before midnight, and at the exact second of the new century's bow electric lights are to flash all over the front of the building, and the singers and musicians are to unite in singing the National anthem. The sum of $2,500 will be spent on the celebration.

OPEN-AIR CHRISTMAS DINNER.

Mr. Hughes, Laying Sidewalks, Dined with His Family Under the Trees.

The people of the Highwood section of Weehawken saw a turkey dinner served on Tuesday in the open air under an oak tree. William E. Hughes, a property owner with a comfortable home in Manhattan, his wife, and little boy were the diners.

Mr. Hughes was notified by the Township Committee to lay sidewalks in front of his two lots on Duer Place, and he delayed until the work was ordered done at public expense, which would place a lien on the property.

Mr. Hughes and two men set about laying the sidewalks on Christmas morning. The work did not progress rapidly. Mr. Hughes took off his coat and went to work himself. He had no time to go home, but did not want to miss eating his dinner with his family. He telephoned his wife, and at 2 o'clock a two-seated buckboard, in which were Mrs. Hughes and her little son, drove up to Duer Place.

The dinner had been brought along in baskets, and a makeshift table was spread. The weather was mild enough to allow of a comfortable open-air meal by the husband, wife, and child.

After the little family feasted Mr. Hughes resumed his work and finished it shortly after dusk.

EARNING POWER AUGMENTED.

How the net earning capability of the great railway systems of the South has been increased by modern methods of management was shown in tabulated statistics in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday; and the exhibit was in many ways remarkable. Better financial income results are produced by reason of increased efficiency in operating methods, the improvement of equipment, the better maintenance of way and improvement in other departments affecting the physical condition and transportation facilities of the railroads.

What is shown in the South is similarly shown in other conspicuous quarters, for this new departure is general. What it represents for important properties of the Northwest and Southwest is signified in the following analysis covering operations for the last three fiscal years of Northern Pacific, Great Northern, and Atchison:

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

In most parts of the list the outside market yesterday showed some increase in activity over the closing days of last week. Largely in sympathy with the active and strong market on the Stock Exchange, prices advanced considerably, and here and there were issues that showed fairly large totals.

***

DISTILLING OF AMERICA preferred was traded in to the extent of about 5,000 shares, which was the largest of the day's totals. These transactions were accompanied by an advance of 2 points. The bid at the close was 32½, the top price for the day. The common stock on smaller transactions advanced to 7¼ and closed at 7 bid, a net gain of about 1 point.

***

INTER-STATE OIL.—An event that attracted considerable attention was the decline of over 30 points in the stock of the Inter-State Oil Company. On Saturday, and again at the opening yesterday, transactions in the stock were made in the neighborhood of 81. The latter, however, were later in the day canceled. Subsequently 100 shares of the stock were offered from 80 down to 50 without eliciting a single bid better than 5, and this bid was made by a trader. It was stated by those closely connected with the company that the only reason for the decline was that the death of T. B. Williams, who, it is said, was the manager of the pool operating in the stock, caused the funds of the pool to be tied up temporarily, and it was thus prevented from protecting its stock.

***

SHEET STEEL preferred and several other steel stocks showed much strength, and several of the issues in this group were fairly active. Sheet Steel preferred advanced to 75 and closed there, showing a net gain of 1½ points.

***

CRUCIBLE STEEL advanced about 2 points and made a net gain of five-eighths of a point, closing at 21⅞ bid. The preferred was dull, but fractionally higher.

***

AMERICAN BRIDGE also showed improvement. The common closed at 45½ bid and the preferred at 95¼ bid.

***

INTERNATIONAL CRUDE RUBBER subscriptions were quoted at 110 bid, but no transactions were reported.

***

RUBBER GOODS common was traded in to the extent of about 800 shares. It advanced to 31 bid, and closed at that price. The preferred stock was quoted slightly higher, but no transactions were reported.

***

UNITED RAILWAYS OF ST. LOUIS preferred, which on Saturday closed weak after a somewhat sharp drop, recovered the decline and closed at 83¾ bid, a net gain of 2½ points. St. Louis Transit shared the strength of the preferred stock, selling up to 19½ and closing at 19¼ bid, a net gain of 2¼ points.

***

BANK STOCKS were fairly active, but more irregular than at the close of last week.

***

TEXAS AND PACIFIC COAL was bid up to 90 without any stock being offered for sale. At the close of last week the bid for this stock was advanced from 75 to 87½.

***

UNION COPPER and the other copper shares were not very active, but they showed slight net gains.

***

ELECTRIC VEHICLE developed considerable strength, and on light transactions advanced about 4 points. It closed at 20⅜ bid.

***

STOREY GENERAL ELECTRIC, which was traded in for the first time last week, was quoted yesterday at 10½, bid, with stock offered at 10¾.

***

Motor Vehicle Victim Is Dead.

Miss Rose McCue, the nurse who was run over on Tuesday afternoon by a motor vehicle at Broadway and Forty-fifth Street, died at 1 o'clock yesterday in Roosevelt Hospital as a result of her injuries. The driver of the vehicle, Joseph Cavanaugh of 125 West Forty-ninth Street, who was arrested after the accident, was arraigned yesterday afternoon before Magistrate Mayo, in the West Side Police Court, on a charge of homicide, and was held to await the action of the Coroner. Coroner Hart later admitted Cavanaugh to $1,500 bail pending the inquest.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Flake & Dowling Buy Broadway and Sixty-second Street Corner.

Hotel Virginia and a Lower Sixth Avenue Parcel Also Prominent in the Day's Dealings.

Flake & Dowling have bought from James L. Barclay the plot at the northwest corner of Broadway and Sixty-second Street, adjoining the Hotel Empire. Its dimensions are 116 feet on Broadway, 145 feet on the street, 100.5 on the westerly line, and 86.6 feet on the northerly line. The sale was negotiated by Broker Wright Barclay.

John N. Golding has sold for Annie E. Thomson of Paris, France, the six-story building 28 Wall Street, 21.6 by 96.4. The price is said to be about $230,000. This property is on the north side of Wall Street adjoining the building of the Bank of the Manhattan Company.

Schrag & Kichtberg have sold for Mary A. T. Balaine to Townsend Underhill the five-story building 448 Sixth Avenue, adjoining the corner of Twenty-seventh Street 25 by 100.

The Central Realty Bond and Trust Company has bought, through L. J. Phillips & Co., from Eugene F. O'Connor, the Hyde Virginia property, covering the block bounded by Broadway, Eighth Avenue, Fifty-eighth Street, and the Grand Circle, 75.11 by 97.1 by 40.8 by 75.3.

It is reported that Charles T. Barney has sold the plot, 75 by 100, on the east side of Seventh Avenue, 50 feet north of Fifty-fifth Street, together with an adjoining lot on the north side of Fifty-fifth Street.

The Frank L. Fisher Company has sold for N. Sondheim, for about $100,000, the two five-story double flats, 102 and 104 West Ninetieth Street, on a plot 70 by 100.8.

Shawson & Hobbs have sold for John C. Cuberfield to a client, for occupancy, the new five-story American basement dwelling, 314 West One Hundred and Fifth Street, 20 by 63 by 100.

Lansdale Boardman has sold to Edward H. Holbrook the plot 30 by 100.5 on the south side of Fifty-second Street, 150 feet east of Fifth Avenue. Mr. Holbrook already owned two, adjoining lots and now controls a frontage of 80 feet.

Abram Bachrach has bought, for improvement, 227 to 231 East Fiftieth Street, a plot 80 by 100.5, now occupied by three-story dwellings.

H. Sokolski & Son have sold the six-story tenement at the northwest corner of Orchard and Stanton Streets, 43.6 by 52.

L. Randolph Jacobs & Co. have sold to Ruth & Hoffman the five-story flat 65 East Ninety-sixth Street, 25 by 100.11.

The same brokers have also sold to George Schuster the property 75 Christopher Street, 25 by 106.2.

A seven-story apartment house, costing $250,000, will be erected by Ada E. and Mary A. Bingham on the plot 83.3 by 146, at the southeast corner of Broadway and Ninety-fourth Street. The plans for the structure were filed yesterday by Architects Neville & Bagge.

Schindler & Liebler were the brokers in the recently reported sale of 231 East Seventy-seventh Street, to Louis Lese.

Deeds were recorded yesterday in the exchange between J. Pierpont Morgan and Frank N. Gill, affecting the Gill Building, 9 to 13 Maiden Lane, and the Hotel Earlington, formerly the Gerlach, at 49 to 55 West Twenty-seventh Street. Mr. Morgan takes title to the Gill Building in the name of Horn for a consideration of $100,000 over a mortgage of $900,000, while the hotel property is transferred to Mr. Gill for $700,000. The brokers in the transaction were H. H. Cammann & Co. and Maclay & Davies.

The Auction Room.

Considerable difficulty arose yesterday in the auction rooom in connection with the sale of the property 312 Sixth Street. From the legal notice of sale, it appears that the property in question was mortgaged on Jan. 5, 1895, by Charles Litzinger to Philip Maisenhelder for $3,400, the mortgage falling due on Jan. 1, 1903. Both mortgagor and mortgagee are now deceased, and under a clause in the mortgage providing for the sale of the property, Philippina Maisenhelder as executrix of the estate of the mortgagee ordered that the property be sold yesterday by Auctioneer Ingraham.

The advertisement of the sale, which has appeared in The Law Journal for several weeks, has stated that the "land with the building thereon erected" would be sold. Operators who had come to bid for the parcel were somewhat surprised, therefore, by the reading of a clause in the terms of sale which showed that the property was leasehold, the lot belonging to the Whitney estate. To add to the complications, Lawyer Theodore Sattler, who said that he represented Philippina Maisenhelder, mounted a stand adjoining that of Auctioneer Ingraham, and announced that the property had been withdrawn from sale.

Mr. Ingraham paid no attention to this, and said that he would proceed with the offering strictly in accordance with the legal notice and the terms of sale, and allow the court to settle any difficulties arising therefrom. The property was struck down on a single bid of $3,400 to E. H. Brenen. He, too, said that he acted as attorney for the mortgagee, Philippina Maisenhelder, but beyond this would not discuss the complicated state of affairs which the sale seemed to disclose.

The only other offering at auction yesterday resulted as follows:

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg" stands for mortgage and "R S" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stampe shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 50 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus 1,000 times the value of the revenue stamps on the conveyances should therefore show the true consideration:

CITY BONDS BRING 112 11-77.

Highest Price Ever Paid for Municipal Securities Bid by Investors.

Controller Coler will make the last bond sale of this century at the highest price ever paid for bonds of the City of New York. Bids for issues amounting to $3,555,000, bearing 3½ per cent. interest, were opened yesterday. Of the issue $1,700,000 is to be used by the Department of Docks and Ferries, $1,610,000 for the new Hall of Records, and $145,000 for high schools and high school sites. There was public interest in the sale because the city officials and the members of the banking houses were anxious to know whether a higher price than that previously paid for bonds would be paid by the bidders.

Twelve bids were opened. The highest was a joint bid of Vermilye & co., with Harvey Fisk & Co. for the whole or any part of the issue at 112 11-77. This high bid when read surprised the city officials.

The Western National Bank bid 110¾ for the whole issue. J. W. Seligman & Co. bid 110.35 for the issue, and the Peoples' Trust Company want $1,000,000 of bonds at 110.31. E. D. Shepard & Co. wanted $1,000,000 of the bonds at 110.07, and Blake Bros. & Co. and R. L. Day & Co. made a joint bid for the first $1,500,000 at 111.32, and the same bid for the second million and a half, and 111.89 for the balance of the bonds. Farson, Leach & Co. and Kuehn, Loeb & Co. made a joint bid at varying prices in lots of $100,000 to $300,000.

Controller Coler announced that the bonds would be awarded to Vermilye & Co. jointly with Harvey Fisk & Co. Controller Coler said that the new century would start with a higher figure for New York City bonds than at any time in the history of the municipality, which showed that the city's finances were in splendid condition.

Trolley Victim Was Mrs. Lazarius.

The woman who was killed on Monday night in a collision between two trolley cars at the foot of Broadway, Williamsburg, was identified yesterday at the Brooklyn Morgue as Mrs. Yetta Lazarius of 7 Rutgers Place, Manhattan, by Max Rosshowitz, her brother. Rosshowitz said his sister was employed in a tailor's shop, and while killed was on her way to visit friends at Broadway and Moore Street, Williamsburg. Her husband disappeared seven years ago and was believed to be dead.

Royal Baking Powder is an absolutely pure cream of tartar powder, analyzed and recommended by the Health Officers of London, New York, Boston, Chicago, etc., who praise it highly for its marvelous purity and leavening strength. Its use is a safeguard against the alum baking powders of which the market is full and which are known to make dangerously unwholesome food. Royal Baking Powder makes finest flavored, lightest, sweetest and most delicious food, and imparts to it positively anti-dyspeptic qualities.

Illustration Not Egyptian, but Nearest We Had.

Beirut, Syria, December 2, 1900.
Please tell me how much it would cost to send some shoes out here to Ahmend Khaled, a Bey of Egypt, who like all Orientals, being vastly attracted by the sheen of Rogers, Peet & Company's patent leather shoes, wishes to send for some.
If you could send a catalogue, adding price of expressage, you would probably get a number more orders from rich Egyptians. The people out here think an enormous amount of style.
Yours truly,

And yet we're modest.

Our best patent leather shoe is no better than the best shoe made by the best shoe-man in New York, which costs $14.

Our shoe is made by the same people, and we sell it for $9.

At $5 we can sell a good form patent leather shoe, as good as most men want.

At $3.50 we have one upon which you can rely.

More than that we have a pump which is a beauty; a really good pump ready-made is a rare bird.

Waterproof shoes and all other good shoes.

WILLIAM MOSES TEBO DEAD.

Proprietor of the Well-Known Yacht Depot Expires at His Home.

William Moses Tebo, a wealthy and well-known citizen of Brooklyn, died at his home, Crooke Avenue and St. Paul's Place, Flatbush, on Christmas morning of a complication of diseases. Mr. Tebo was born in the Province of Quebec on May 14, 1828. He moved to this State in early life and began work as a civil engineer and dredger. His first work as a dredger was the dredging of the Black River, at Carthage, N. Y. In 1851 Mr. Tebo came to Brooklyn, continuing in the dredging business. One of the most important contracts which he completed was the dredging under the East River for the abutments of the present bridge.

In 1885 he established a ship yard and yacht depot at the foot of Twenty-third Street, Brooklyn, which as Tebo's Basin is known to yachtsmen and seafaring men all over the world. Many famous craft have been docked, laid up, or repaired there. To the yacht depot Mr. Tebo added coal barges and a fleet of tugs for sea and harbor towing. Seven years ago Mr. Tebo suffered a stroke of paralysis, and since that time Andrew T. Sullivan, ex-Postmaster of Brooklyn, has had the active management of affairs at the basin. Mr. Tebo took a deep interest in charitable institutions and contributed generously toward the support of a number. He is survived by four grandchildren and a sister. The funeral will take place this morning.

ANTHONY COMSTOCK'S DENIAL.

Says Mr. Strong Has Either Forgotten or Has Misstated Facts.

Anthony Comstock, Secretary of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, in a communication sent out yesterday, replying to a recent letter from Theron G. Strong, printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES, says in part:

"Mr. Strong's memory is at fault, else under strong temptation he misstates facts. Just why he now publicly assails me I cannot understand. I will give $100 to any charity he may name if he will prove by legal evidence that what I did at Albany, in reference to the amending of the laws was not fully justified by the facts and circumstances.

"When it is known that most of the legislation by Congress and the legislation of this State upon obscene matters, lotteries, and swindling devices, has originated in our office, and that for more than 28 years I have been engaged in enforcing these laws, the people can judge whether I am competent to act in the premises. When either Mr. Strong or Mr. Goddard insinuates that I broke faith with them, or that I acted in the interest of the criminal class, they state that which is absolutely

LEGAL NOTES.

MOTHER AND GRANDMOTHER.—Harry C. Van Zandt, eight years old, was living with his grandmother when his father died, on Nov. 9, 1891. Soon afterward his mother, Kate Van Zandt, who had lived separate from her husband, and some weeks after his death had married Donald Grant, began habeas corpus proceedings to recover her child's custody. On June 13, 1892, the mother secured an order transferring the child to her possession. She was then appointed his general guardian. She died on April 13, 1895, and Donald Grant, her husband, having been appointed her administrator, was cited by the grandmother to render an account of the moneys received and paid out by her as her child's guardian. Mrs. Grant, in the course of the habeas corpus proceedings to get the custody of her child, had incurred debts, mainly for counsel fees, amounting to $1,700, and upon the accounting, Donald Grant asked an allowance of this sum to him. The decision of the Surrogate refusing it has been sustained by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in this city. Justice Rumsey, who gives the opinion, holds that no allowance was authorized for services rendered or expenses incurred previous to Mrs. Grant's appointment as general guardian. The infant was given to the mother on the habeas corpus proceedings simply because of the relationship between them, the Court says, and because, too, although the grandmother was a proper person, Mrs. Van Zandt was also a proper person, and the prior right was in her. This afforded no reason why the estate of the infant should be charged with the cost of the recovery of the boy, because it was purely for the satisfaction of the mother, and not for the benefit or welfare of the infant. In the accounting Donald Grant claimed that because the boy lived in the family of his stepfather, the estate of his mother should be made good for any amount for maintenance which she might probably have paid if she had been compelled to do so, but which it was conceded she did not pay, and which it did not appear she ever became liable for. The amount of the claim was for 247 weeks at $6 a week. The Court sustains the disallowance of this claim, saying as there was no claim that there was any agreement on the part of Mrs. Grant to pay board for her son, and as it appeared that the mother and son lived together with the stepfather as part of his family, there was a serious question whether Mr. Grant, even individually, could enforce any claim for board of the boy.

HUSBAND AND WIFE.—Mari A. Cuming, thirteen years ago, made a separation agreement with his wife, Maud A. Cuming—to whom he had been married ten years—which provided for certain payments by him to Mary L. Chamberlain, as trustee, at regular intervals for the wife's support, the trustee agreeing to indemnify the husband against the debts of the wife. Upon Mrs. Cuming's petition in March, 1891, the Supreme Court, in Brooklyn, made an order upon notice, after hearing, removing Mrs. Chamberlain, the trustee, and appointing William Hughes in her place upon his giving $250 security. Mrs. Cuming in her petition alleged that Mrs. Chamberlain was an unfit and unsuitable person to execute the trust. Mr. Cuming appeared and opposed the motion, but Mrs. Chamberlain did not appear, and although the notice of motion was addressed to her, it did not appear that it was ever served upon either. Mr. Hughes, who had executed the prescribed bond, brought an action in the Supreme Court to recover from Mr. Cuming an instalment amounting to $969, alleged to be due upon the separation agreement. The trial court directed a verdict for the plaintiff, and that decision was unanimously affirmed two years ago by the Appellate Division in Brooklyn. The Court of Appeals has now unanimously ordered a reversal, holding, in an opinion by Judge Vann, that the Supreme Court had no jurisdiction of the subject matter of the application, and that the order removing Mrs. Chamberlain as trustee was void. The covenant of indemnity by Mrs. Chamberlain was held to be property belonging to the husband, of which he could not be deprived without his consent. While the court had jurisdiction of the subject of trusts, it had no power to make a new contract for the parties. The compulsory removal of Mrs. Chamberlain impaired the obligation of the contract and was void.

TITLE TO REALTY.—After Joseph Paolio had contracted to purchase real estate in this city from Charles Faber and had paid $200, he refused to accept the title tendered, as not being a marketable one. Faber, however, refused to return the $200, and Paolio sued him for that sum, together with the expenses incurred in searching the title. Judgment given on the trial in plaintiff's favor has been affirmed by the Appellate Division on Faber's appeal. The property had been purchased by Faber from Joseph A. Thompson, the deed being signed by one Kohler as Thompson's attorney in fact. The Appellate Division, in an opinion by Justice McLaughlin, holds that the acknowledgment to the power of attorney executed by Thompson was defective, in that the notary taking it only said that Thompson was to him "personally known and acknowledged the above letter of attorney to be his act and deed," and did not state that the person who appeared before him was known to him to be the person described in and who executed the power of attorney. It was argued on behalf of the appellant that the real property law, in defining a conveyance, excludes a power of attorney, and for that reason the rule relating to the acknowledgment of a deed of conveyance did not apply. "This is not so," the Court says, "for the real property law expressly declares that to entitle a power of attorney to be recorded it must be acknowledged or proved and certified in the manner to entitle a conveyance to be recorded."

John Proctor Clarke Now a Justice.

John Proctor Clarke, the newly appointed Justice of the Supreme Court, took the oath of office yesterday. It was administered by Justice F. M. Scott in his private chamber at the County Court House. The new Justice was appointed by Gov. Roosevelt to succeed the late Justice Henry R. Beekman. The term of the newly appointed Justice will expire Jan. 1, 1902.

TUNNEL UNDER THE HUDSON.

English Capitalists May Invest $1,000,000 to Continue the Work.

At a dinner by Andrew J. Corcoran at Jersey City on Christmas Eve, Alderman William Barr, who has been superintending the removal of the débris from the Jersey City terminus of the Hudson River tunnel, made a speech in which he said that a party of English capitalists will arrive in this country about the middle of January to inspect the tunnel.

"I am not at liberty to give details," said the Alderman, "but you may depend on this. If these capitalists are satisfied with the condition of affairs as they exist a million dollars will be forthcoming and work on the tunnel will be resumed at once. The preliminary work I am doing is directed by a New York engineer employed by the English syndicate."

Pat Crowe Seen There, It Is Said, Disguised as a Woman.

Police Go After Him, but He Escapes—Other Reports from Boston and St. Joseph, Mo.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—Disguised as a woman, Pat Crowe, who is being sought by the police all over the United States on the charge of kidnapping Eddie Cudahy at Omaha, has been seen in Chicago within the last few days, and may still be hiding here, according to statements made to-night by Detective Sergt. James Storen, a Chicago police officer, who has arrested Crowe a number of times in the past.

With a view to discovering the fugitive's hiding place, a search of several houses in Sixty-third Street, near Stewart Avenue, has been made by Storen, acting on information that Crowe had been recognized on that street Christmas day. In pursuing his quest the Sergeant stumbled upon evidence which he says convinced him that Crowe has been in Chicago recently and that in the guise of a woman, clothed in a black robe and heavily veiled, the suspect went abroad with impunity in the streets of Englewood, the suburb where he once was a resident and is well known to many people.

Storen claims to have traced Crowe to a room where he was masquerading as a young widow in mourning, but that Crowe received warning from his friends that the police were on his trail, and escaped before a capture could be effected.

"I found ample evidence in the room that its occupant was none other than Crowe," said Sergt. Storen to-night. "Whether he is now in Chicago I cannot say. In Englewood, however, he has influential friends, who in all probability have found him a hiding place, so I think the searchers for Crowe would do well to be on the outlook in this city for some time to come."

It would be easy for Crowe to make up as a woman, as his face is almost beardless and his height is not too great.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Dec. 27.—Patrick Carson says he saw "Pat" Crowe, suspected of kidnapping young Cudahy, enter a saloon here this afternoon. He says he is sure of the man, as he knows him well. Chief of Detectives Shea placed a posse at the disposal of Carson and a search is being made in Crowe's haunts in South St. Joseph to-night.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 27.—The Boston police have evidence to indicate, they think, that "Pat" Crowe and the other Omaha kidnappers who stole young Cudahy and returned him to his father for $25,000 are on the Warren liner Michigan, bound for Liverpool, and a cable containing that information has been sent to the Scotland Yard detectives, who will be on the Liverpool docks when the steamer arrives there.

Just before the Michigan sailed from the Hoosac Tunnel docks last Saturday, two men, who acted so suspiciously as to attract attention, and who answered to the descriptions of Crowe and a kidnapper, boarded the steamer with a large amount of baggage. The steamer sailed in a very short time, but not before word of the presence of the strangers had been sent to Police Headquarters.

A Nantasket Beach watchman has reported to the police that he saw at the bench a big stranger, dressed like a Western cattleman and carrying a big old carpet bag. He asked for a boatman to row him out to an outgoing vessel, and said he would pay almost any price for the service, for he was anxious to board some vessel going to a foreign port, he did not care where, as long as it was a foreign port. He answered the description in every detail of "Pat Crowe," as it has been sent out by the Omaha police. The watchman went to notify the police, and when he returned the man was gone.

OMAHA, Dec. 27.—In Omaha no credence is placed in the story that Crowe was seen in Boston or any point in the East. All hope of capturing Crowe in this vicinity has been abandoned, and the police and special detectives on the case have now settled down to a systematic search for evidence from the clues now in their possession. These clues are few, but may lead to important discoveries.

A development in the case is the fact that the man who rented the cottage on Grover Street gave the name of J. L. Connor. Crowe has a brother-in-law named J. F. Connor, and those working on the matter are more inclined to believe, in view of this fact, that Crowe rented the house.

An additional clue was found to-day in searching in the vicinity of the place where the father of the abducted boy placed the $25,000 in gold, which was to ransom his son. A few rods west and a little to the south of the place an ordinary new gunny sack, with no marks or brands upon it, was found by an oak tree on the southward side. It is presumed that the abductors of young Cudahy placed the gunny sack behind the tree, meaning to use it in carrying the gold away in case the money was not brought to the place in a sack.

A CORNER IN BEANS.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 27.—The corner on the white bean market being manipulated by the Dickinsons in Chicago is having a bullish effect on prices here. Within two weeks the price on white beans has gone up from $1.84 per bushel to $2.20, and to-day at one part of the market the price reached $2.25. It is the opinion of St. Louis merchants that the price may go up as high as $2.50 before the corner eases.

According to local merchants the Dickinsons have got the market at their mercy and there are only 300 cars in Chicago and 50 in St. Louis now owned by individuals independent of the corner. The shortage of the crop in Michigan and other points has played directly into the hands of the manipulators, and the great demand for the food coming from England and the United States for their armies in Africa and the Philippines has tended to bring on unusual hardness in prices.

MILLER CHILD RECOVERED.

Mother Gave Him Up When Run Down by the Police—She Makes a Statement.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 27.—Sidney Miller, the seven-year-old son of Samuel D. Miller, and grandson of ex-United States Attorney General W. H. H. Miller, who was kidnapped by his mother last evening, was recovered early to-day by his father, Mrs. Miller and the child were found at Lawrence, six miles east of the city, asleep in the home of a man named Marshall, where they had obtained lodging for the night. The police arrived at the place at daylight. Mrs. Miller gave up the child, and was not placed under arrest.

The finding of Mrs. Miller and the child was the culmination of one of the longest chases in the history of the Police Department. When the Chief was notified of the case measures were at once taken to find the hackman who drove Mrs. Miller, the boy, and his governess from the Denison Hotel, where the child had been taken to visit his mother. The driver was located finally at his home. He denied any knowledge of Mrs. Miller's intentions, and explained fully where he had taken the party. He said that when the governess jumped from the carriage Mrs. Miller ordered him to drive to Brightwood, where it is thought she intended to catch the Union City accommodation train, which left this city at 4:30 o'clock.

He did not reach Brightwood in time for the train, and, forming new plans, Mrs. Miller hired another outfit, and was taken to Lawrence. The cabman, whose name is Senour, left her at Twenty-fifth Street, contracting with a liveryman to take her to Lawrence. Senour said he did not suspect for a moment that the child was being kidnapped. After hearing Senour's story the police started on the right track, and had but little difficulty in finding the mother and child.

ANDERSON, Ind., Dec. 27.—Mrs. Helen Karcher Miller, daughter-in-law of William H. H. Miller, Attorney General in the Cabinet of President Harrison, who yesterday abducted her son, alighted from a train in this city to-day after the child had again been taken from her, at Lawrence, where they spent the night. Late this afternoon Mrs. Miller boarded a through train for New York. While waiting for her train in Anderson Mrs. Miller said:

"I have been defeated in this attempt to get my child, but I am not discouraged. The proverb says we are wiser after we are defeated. I have the consolation that comes from that and also the consolation that comes from the fact that I was engaged in a thoroughly righteous case."

When shown a morning paper, Mrs. Miller was astounded at the display made and the statements of her husband and his father.

"Is it kidnapping when I take my own child?" she asked. "Have I not an equal right to him with my husband?"

"Mr. Miller and I separated seventeen months ago. It was with the understanding then that the boy was to be with me half the time and with him half the time. I kept him three months. The father has had him fourteen months, and before I came to Indianapolis had assurances that I could take him back with me.

"I was amazed when Mr. Miller told me that I could not have him any more. I then telegraphed my attorneys, and I received a telegram from them to take him, as a last resort, without the knowledge of the Millers. This I tried to do. I failed, and I will consult my attorneys as to the next step."

DETECTIVES CHASE A DEAD MAN.

Searched for Escaped Prisoner Three Years After He Was Buried.

Special to The New York Times.

DANBURY, Conn., Dec. 27.—For three years United States Secret Service officers have been searching for William H. Post, an escaped prisoner from Ludlow Street Jail, New York City. It has just been learned that Post has been buried in the Danbury Cemetery for over three years. He was buried under the name of Charles Mason.

In March, 1897, the man who was buried as Mason was brought here from Brewster, having received mortal injuries in being thrown from a wagon. At the time of the accident the man was working for a farmer in Patterson, N. Y., and his employer knew nothing of him more than that he had given his name as Mason.

When an ex-convict named James Shriver was arrested in Newburg, N. Y., a few days ago, the police found on his person a paper bearing the address of a Danbury undertaking firm and a memorandum of the cost of removing a body from the cemetery in this city. The piece of paper was immediately forwarded to the police in this city and an investigation was made.

It was learned from the undertakers that a stranger had called at their office a few years ago and inquired about the body of Charles Mason, obtaining an estimate of the cost of removing the body to West Hurley, N. Y. A letter had also been received by the undertakers from Mrs. Anna Kelly of Newburg, N. Y., who described herself as a sister of Mason. It was learned that Mrs. Kells had visited the farmer who employed the man known as Mason and had made inquiries about him.

This information was forwarded to the police in Newburg, and yesterday a description of George H. Post, son of Mrs. Kells and half brother of James Shriver, was received by the Danbury police. The description fitted the man who had been buried here, even to the detail of two missing fingers.

Post, who had been arrested for robbing the United States mails, was confined in Ludlow Street Jail in 1896. It is thought that he went to Patterson, N. Y., immediately after escaping. How his relatives learned of his burial here is unknown.

J. R. Dos Passos Gives a Barbecue.

Special to The New York Times.

WARSAW, Va., Dec. 27.—John R. Dos Passos, the New York lawyer, gave an entertainment to-day at his plantation at Sandy Point, on the Potomac River. Five hundred guests, mostly residents of this State, were present. A barbecue was a feature of the affair. The repast was served in one of the large buildings on the estate, and at its conclusion speeches were made by Representative De Armond of Missouri, W. A. Jones, and the host. Mr. Dos Passos came from Washington on his steam yacht, accompanied by his son and several New York friends. He is the largest landowner in this section of Virginia.

A Curious New Salamander Found.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—Naturalists of the Central and Western States met at the University of Chicago to-day. Prof. C. C. Nutting of Iowa was elected Chairman and C. B. Davenport Secretary. One of the most interesting of the papers read was that of Prof. C. H. Eigenmann on cave salamanders. He has discovered a new type of cave salamander, an active creature, about four inches long, with protruding eyes and a tail longer than its body. It is speckled brown and yellow, and has such peculiar feet that it can climb vertical walls of glass and even move like a fly across a ceiling.

New Yorkers Want a Western Estate.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—An attempt was made in the Probate Court to-day to make proof of heirship in the matter of the estate of Charles W. Fullerton. Miss Martha S. Hill, who was recently made the grantee of a number of quit-claim deeds in which the heirs-at-law of the decedent surrender their interests in the estate, was present in court. Evidence was taken to show that Silas P. Hubbell and Sidney B. Hubbell of New York were uncles of the decedent, and his only heirs-at-law and next of kin.

J. P. MORGAN'S NEW DEAL

He Secures Control of the North American Company.

Will Be Used by Him to Further the Coal Trust as Joint Selling Agent.

The North American Company, which has been one of the conspicuous financiering companies of Wall Street, has passed into the control of J. P. Morgan, and is to be used by him to further the great coal deal known to the Street as the Coal Trust, of which the acquiring of the Pennsylvania Coal Company was the initial step. George R. Sheldon of 2 Wall Street, a Director in the company, stated that a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co.—Robert Bacon—would be elected to the board at the January meeting, and that two other new Directors not yet agreed upon but who are supposed to also be representatives of Mr. Morgan's interests, will be elected.

The plan is to make the North American Company the joint selling agent, which will take over, or to which will be consigned, the entire output of all the coal properties controlled by the trust. The great drawback in the past to the success of making profits out of the coal business has been the almost impossible task of making the producers stand to any agreement that they had previously entered into. It was apparently easy enough to make them parties to an agreement, but almost immediately after it was signed, price-cutting and profit destroying began.

In establishing the North American Company as the joint selling agency of the combined interests a uniform rate must of necessity be maintained, and the railroads carrying the anthracite output will be relieved many a burden, the principal among which is the large amounts which they have been forced to pay the middle men. It is said that this item alone will result in economies running up into the millions every year.

One of the matters that work in consonance with Mr. Morgan's plan to control through the North American Company the anthracite coal trade of the country is the extraordinary charter under which the company operates. Henry Villard, who was, at one time, its controlling force, used to declare that no charter in existence was so comprehensive. Under these circumstances its use to Mr. Morgan in the new coal deal is readily perceived by those in the Street.

The death of Henry Villard made a change of control of the company possible. It is the successor of the Oregon Transcontinental Company that was the financiering company used by Mr. Villard in his Northern Pacific development. The original company's shares were for a long time among the most prominent features of speculation in Wall Street. Once they sold at low figures, and at another time fifty points above par.

With Mr. Villard's retirement, and the change of the company's title, its scope became limited to the operation of the electric lighting and municipal transportation companies. It now owns an electric lighting company in Cincinnati, and the street railway and lighting systems in Milwaukee. Mr. Villard was once credited with plans for using the company as a developer of rich gold properties in Colorado and Arizona, which plans were changed with his death.

BELIEVES BURNZ IS RATIONAL.

Teacher Who Knows Boy Murderer Opposes Testimony of Experts.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 27.—The testimony to-day in the trial of Edgar C. Burnz, for the murder of Herbert B. Fellows, the Scarsdale Station Agent and Postmaster, consisted almost entirely of expert medical opinions tending to show that young Burnz is a degenerate, and was not responsible for the murder. Dr. George C. Weiss, President of the Board of Health of Mount Vernon; Dr. A. T. Danning of Mount Vernon, Dr. J. A. Booth of New York, and Dr. G. M. Hammond of New York all testified to the irresponsibility, which they agreed was due to cigarette smoking, epilepsy, and other causes which had combined to impair the boy's intelligence.

Miss Frances Parrish, a teacher of stenography in the school of the boy's grandmother in New York, testified to having known Burnz since his babyhood. She spoke of his visits to his grandmother and of her conversations with him. From these conversations and his manner she was impressed with his being entirely rational. She had never seen him smoking or known of his having epilepsy. The trial will continue to-morrow.

SHIRTS FOR SHOW, NOT COMFORT

Rafia Fibre Garments of Madagascar as Vice Consul Hunt Sees Them.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—Vice Consul William H. Hunt, at Tamatova, Madagascar, in his last letter to the State Department, discusses the staple article of commerce of the island, rafia fibre. The Hovas, he says, use the under part of the leaf split very fine as a warp with a weft of white silk, producing an article called silk lamba, which brings fancy prices in Europe and America.

"The coast tribes," Mr. Hunt continues, "use it for clothing, but of mediocre fineness, with dyed stripes of indigo, saffron, black, and a dirty green. It is a cold, comfortless looking material and refuses to adapt itself to any folds that a sculptor would care to copy, and when two natives come down the street clad in brand-new rafia shirts, they produce a noise similar to that of two wire meat covers rubbing together."

ROGER WOLCOTT'S WILL.

Harvard Gets $20,000—Several Bequests to Other Institutions.

BOSTON, Dec. 27.—By the will of ex-Gov. Wolcott, which was filed this afternoon, at the Suffolk Probate Court, it is learned that Harvard College is to receive $20,000. There are several other bequests to public institutions; the Massachusetts General Hospital gets $5,000, Boston Museum of Fine Arts, $5,000; Hampton Normal and Agricultural Institute, $1,000; Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, $1,000; Trustees of the Wolcott Library of Litchfield, Conn., $1,000; Trustees of the Public Library of Milton, $2,000.

The will, which is dated March 3, 1900, appoints Francis C. Welch, Philip Dexter, and Roger Wolcott, the eldest son of the testator, as trustees.

DUPLEX TELEPHONY.

System Introduced in Chicago After Successful Tests.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—A practical system of duplex telephoning, by which, using an auxiliary telephone, conversations with two persons may be held simultaneously on the same wire, has been adopted by the Chicago Telephone Company, and instruments for its operation will be put in immediately at many of the big wholesale stores and in offices where the use of the telephone is heavy. The auxiliary telephones will as a rule be used for incoming messages, but they are so arranged that out calls may be made at the same time that the main telephone is in use.

Superintendent Hibbard said to-day that the plan had been thoroughly tested and proved a success. By its use a heavy saving in the running of wires will be made besides more than doubling the capacity of the telephone service to firms using it heavily.

INSURANCE MEN ARRESTED.

Technical Charge Is Larceny, and Theft of Secrets Alleged.

Trouble which has been brewing between the Provident Savings Life Assurance Society and some of its men came to a climax yesterday, when two of the employes were locked up in the West Thirtieth Street Station on a technical charge of the larceny of $500.

The men arrested are Morton S. Mortimer, thirty-nine years old, of 24 West Thirty-second Street, and John M. Van Kleck, thirty-one years old, of 401 West One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Street. While the technical charge is larceny, the men are really accused with keeping back reports and purloining documents of the company which contain information of a confidential nature.

It is believed that these men abused their confidential relations with the company and furnished to a rival insurance company, for which, it is said, they acted as spies, the information which came to them through their access to those documents.

De Lancey Nicoll, counsel to the company, drew up the complaints against the men. Frederick Stimson, a lawyer of 55 Liberty Street, is counsel for the men. He appeared at the station house about 10 o'clock last night, in company with Magistrate Meade and William H. Browning of 18 West Fifty-fourth Street, who gave bail for both men in the sum of $1,000 each.

Mr. Stimson said that Mortimer was actuary of the Provident Life Assurance Company, and Van Kleck was assistant actuary.

"The men only did what they should have done in protecting themselves," said Mr. Stimson. "They made copies of the records so that if they were called upon and shown certain records, they could refer to their own copies and learn whether the ones shown were correct. The company wanted information the two men had, and they refused to give up that information as a matter of self-protection. The company then made this charge."

Edward W. Scott, the President of the Assurance Society, when seen at his residence, 145 Riverside Avenue, refused to make any statement. Secretary Hubbard was communicated with by telephone, at his home in Pelham, N. Y. He said he had anticipated the arrest, but would make no statement until he had consulted with De Lancey Nicoll, the company's attorney, to-day.

The Provident Savings Life Assurance Society is a New York corporation with $100,000 capital. Its offices are in the New York Life Building, at 346 Broadway. The officers and Directors are: Edward W. Scott, President; Thomas H. Stevens, Treasurer; Directors, E. W. Scott, A. M. Hyatt, M. T. Herrick, W. E. Stevens, W. T. Gilbert, John W. Vrooman, F. S. Grant, Phineas C. Rounsbury, Timothy L. Woodruff, Thomas J. Shryock, C. W. Drake, John A. Horan, E. W. Scott, Jr., and H. J. Swift.

TO REPORT ON BARGE CANAL.

State Engineer Bond Will Recommend One to Cost $62,000,000.

ALBANY, Dec. 27.—A barge canal to cost $62,000,000, following very closely the present lines of the Erie Canal, except that, while touching the large cities, it may not bisect them, is what State Engineer Bond will recommend to the Legislature on or about Feb. 12. The most minute details will be given in the report, with maps, and even the character of the soil through which the excavations would be made will be described. It is probable that electricity will be recommended for motive power.

Lieut. Gov. Timothy L. Wobdruff, who is in the city to-night, is positive that the recommendations will be agreed to by the Legislature, for he asserts that already twenty-five members of the Senate are in favor of it. If the Legislature passes it the measure will go before the people next Fall. Mr. Woodruff believes this is the most important question of the year and is of the opinion that the Legislature should sit until the question is decided.

MR. BUCKI AND HIS VALET.

Former Arrested on a Charge of False Imprisonment and Discharged—Valet Begins Suit for Damages.

Special to The New York Times.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 27.—Charles L. Bucki, the New York lumberman, was arrested and tried to-day on a charge of false imprisonment, his valet, Philip Brown of New York, being the complainant. Mr. Bucki caused Brown to be arrested last Saturday on a charge of larceny of champagne, but before the time set for the hearing yesterday Mr. Bucki dropped the proceedings. The arrest for false imprisonment followed.

Justice Wright discharged Mr. Bucki after taking the testimony. Brown immediately afterward instituted suit in the Circuit Court for damages in the sum of $10,000, setting forth in his bill that he was arrested and imprisoned on a humiliating criminal charge that could not be substantiated.

The case will be heard at the next term of the Circuit Court. Several prominent society people will, it is said, be summoned as witnesses, as the valet claims that the wines alleged to have been stolen were consumed at a social function given in this city.

SHOOT A CHIEF OF POLICE.

Italian Anarchists in Barre, Vt., Probably Fatally Wound Their Victim—Six Under Arrest.

BARRE, Vt., Dec. 27.—Chief of Police Patrick Brown is in a critical condition, with small hopes for recovery, on account of three bullet wounds inflicted by Italians early to-day. The Chief had been called to a hall in which an Italian Socialist society was holding a ball, to quell a row. Several persons were driven from the hall. The Chief was shot from ambush on his way back to the station. Arcura Bernaccio Luigi Sassi, P. Bernaccio, C. Giuseppini, Andrea Frociani and Bapalio Promo have been arrested and identified by the Chief as being connected with the attempted assassination.

The row at the ball occurred at about midnight, when several persons who were known to be Anarchists appeared at the hall. Almost immediately there was trouble. The row increased until fists, clubs, and even revolvers were used, and the police were summoned to put a stop to the disturbance.

Chief Brown responded with his men, and after considerable difficulty the combatants were separated and disarmed, and the Anarchists were expelled. This seemed to settle the difficulty and the police withdrew. As Chief Brown was making his way along a lonely street he heard a shot as a bullet whistled by his head. This seemed a signal for a fusillade from different directions, and the Chief started to run, at the same time trying to open his coat to get his own revolver. Then two bullets struck him and as he fell a third found lodgment in his body. In their excitement after the first shot three men had appeared, and the Chief recognized them all. When they saw him fall, the men ran away.

The Chief was taken to his home and, under the care of physicians, he recovered consciousness and was able to tell who his assailants were. After some search in the Italian quarter the police found Otto Bernaccio and Luigi Sassi and, in spite of some resistance, placed them under arrest. Chief Brown identified the men as two of those whom he had seen at the time he was shot.

The physicians who tooks charge of the case of Mr. Brown found two bullets had entered the abdomen and the third had lodged in one foot. The doctors express doubt as to the outcome of the case.

TAMMANY DENOUNCES GOV. ROOSEVELT

Col. Gardiner's Removal Called "Infamous" and "Cowardly."

EX-DISTRICT ATTORNEY WEEPS

The General Committee Organizes for the Next Campaign by Electing Permanent Officers.

Denunciation of Gov. Roosevelt for the removal of Col. Asa Bird Gardiner from the office of District Attorney of this County was the feature of the meeting of the General Committee of Tammany Hall last night.

The gathering was one of the largest in the history of the organization, and it was called to organize for the campaign of 1901. Senator B. F. Martin presided, and while Secretary Thomas F. Smith was calling the roll Col. Gardiner entered the room, and he was accorded a most enthusiastic reception. He made no remarks, but bowed frequently.

Charles H. Knox was chosen temporary Chairman, and was escorted to the chair by Col. Gardiner and Senator Thomas F. Grady. Mr. Knox praised the City Government and lauded Col. Gardiner for his excellent management of the District Attorney's office. He declared the signs were bright for Democratic success next year. He denounced the removal of Col. Gardiner by Gov. Roosevelt.

The following permanent officers were then chosen:

President, George M. Van Hoesen.
First Vice President, Thaddeus Moriarty.
Second Vice President, William F. Grell.
Treasurer, John McQuade.
Reading Clerk, Thomas F. Smith.

In acknowledging his re-election, Mr. Van Hoesen said the signs of the times augured well for a great Democratic victory next year. The handsome premiums paid by investors for city securities proved the confidence of the public in the City Government. Those men who denounced Tammany the most were those who struggled to get the city's bonds.

Referring to the vice crusade, he alluded to a Republican Police Captain, an appointee of Roosevelt, as bringing it about by insulting an Episcopalian minister. There had been no looting of the city treasury, he declared, since Tammany was returned to power. The record of the organization was clean, and no man should doubt the outcome of the coming campaign.

Senator Grady then took the floor and, waving a sheet of paper, exclaimed: "I desire to offer the following."

Then the Senator paused and profound silence reigned. Next he read this resolution:

Resolved, The General Committee representative of the Democratic Party of the County of New York, avails itself of this, its first opportunity, to denounce the infamous conspiracy through which Asa Bird Gardiner, the elected District Attorney of this County, was robbed of his office by Gov. Roosevelt.

Enthusiastic applause followed, and when quiet was restored Senator Grady said:

"The proudest moment in all my life was when, in October, 1897, I stood on this same platform and placed in nomination Asa Bird Gardiner for the office of District Attorney of this county. I then said that it was to the credit of the city to have so good a man as Col. Gardiner as a candidate.

"The wisdom of the choice was shown as the people ratified it by a plurality of more than 80,000. The people had confidence in Col. Gardiner, and he still enjoys that confidence, for they recognize his ability and his clean-handedness, and this Democracy has never been forfeited.

"Two years ago the spectacular Rough Rider of the Spanish-American War [hisses] submitted his character and his record to the very same people, and the citizens of New York County repudiated Teddy Roosevelt by more than 60,000 plurality. Never has Teddy Roosevelt submitted himself to the citizens of New York but what they have repudiated him, and they will never get another chance at him. He is dead politically.

"The Governor has had the audacity to remove the efficient District Attorney on the ground that he regarded Asa Bird Gardiner's usefulness to the county to be at an end. No official act of Col. Gardiner deserved his removal, and the merits of the case against him did not in any manner require it, and in my opinion the usefulness of Col. Gardiner is not at an end. After the next election Teddy Roosevelt will believe in the usefulness of Asa Bird Gardiner and his name will be the rallying cry for the Democracy of New York.

"It is a pity that we cannot remove the Governor who has been so many times repudiated at the polls, for he had no usefulness with which to begin at any time. With the power of removal there comes a great responsibility, and Teddy Roosevelt has used that power to wreak his personal revenge upon a distinguished public officer. It was a cowardly act, as cowardly as shooting a flying soldier in the back. [Applause.]

"It was cowardly to exercise this power of removal against a political opponent, when one has no fear of the responsibility of impeachment and especially in the closing days of a career which evokes a tirade from the people everywhere."

Then Senator Grady reviewed the history of the cases growing out of the charges against Col. Gardiner by the City Club and by Deputy Attorney General Hammond, and said:

"The Hammond charges were a fake, and no Governor of ordinary intelligence would have accepted them. He did not even read the answer. In all my experience I have never seen such blackguardly and scoundrelly proceedings as were enacted at the farcical hearing conducted by those who acted in the removal of Col. Gardiner. Get a brigand in touch with the City Club and he would be as bold as any pirate who ever scuttled a ship at sea or robbed a peasant on shore."

Then Senator Grady paid his respects to District Attorney Philbin, and said that, while he expressed surprise at his appointment when notified at the Manhattan Club, he at the same time drew from an inside pocket typewritten biographies of himself. Referring to the reception accorded Col. Gardiner, Senator Grady concluded:

"We will never, I fear, this side of the judgment seat of God have a chance at Teddy Roosevelt. This robber of the office of District Attorney, who seeks to put the administration of our affairs in other than Democratic hands is bound to end in obloquy.

"To you (pointing to Col. Gardiner, who sat in the front row, facing the speaker,) I pledge the fidelity, loyalty and unswerving devotion of Tammany Hall. Be assured of that."

Col. Gardiner was in tears when Senator Grady closed his speech. He declined to speak, but warmly grasped the hands of the many who crowded about him.

Daniel F. McMahon was chosen Chairman of the Executive Committee, which is composed as follows:

District.	District.
1—Michael C. Murphy.	20—James P. Keating.
2—Patrick Divver.	21—M. F. Donohue.
3—P. J. Ryder.	22—F. J. Lantry.
4—E. T. Fitzpatrick.	23—T. F. McAvoy.
5—B. F. Martin.	24—M. F. Holahan.
6—T. D. Sullivan.	25—C. F. Scannell.
7—P. H. Keahon.	26—Thomas J. Dunn.
8—Martin Engel.	27—J. J. Martin.
9—F. J. Goodwin.	28—W. Featherson.
10—Julius Harburger.	29—John F. Carroll.
11—William Dalton.	30—Harry C. Hart.
12—P. J. Scully.	31—Isaac A. Hopper.
13—P. J. Dooling.	32—John J. Ryan.
14—John T. Oakley.	33—N. J. Hayes.
15—George W. Plunkitt.	34—P. E. Nagle,
16—Patrick Keenan.	August Moebus.
17—D. F. McMahon.	35—Louis F. Haffen.
18—Charles F. Murphy.	Annexed—T. H. O'Neill.
19—John B. Sexton.

When seen after the meeting, Col. Gardiner intimated that he had not decided what he would do in the matter of a legal contest, but that he might have something to say shortly.

Gold Find in Samoa Reported.

VICTORIA, B. C., Dec. 27.—The report comes from Samoa that gold has been discovered near Apia. Another Samoan report says that Mataafa is becoming restless, and on Dec. 6 called a meeting of native chiefs.

FORTY-NINE CHILDREN PERISH?

Unconfirmed Report That They Were Drowned While Skating Near Foster, Iowa.

Special to The New York Times.

BURLINGTON, Iowa, Dec. 27.—A telephone message received here to-night says fifty-one school children were skating on the river near Foster, Iowa, when the ice gave way and forty-nine were drowned. Only two escaped to tell the tale.

Foster is near Whatcheer, on the Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad. No confirmation of the rumor or details can be obtained yet.

CROKER'S BRITISH TAXES.

Returns to Wantage from the Continent and Gets Summons to Answer Inquiry as to His Income.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Richard Croker, who had been rusticating for several weeks in Carlsbad and Nice, returned to Wantage two days before Christmas, where he received a summons to appear Jan. 3 to reply to inquiries respecting his income in connection with the income tax.

He left Wantage yesterday, presumably for the Continent. His house to-day was absolutely closed, and there is no expectation of his return before next week.

SUICIDE AFTER EXPLOSION.

Halm Took His Life When Air Compressor Wrecked Factory.

The explosion of an air compressor yesterday morning injured several men and nearly wrecked part of the works of the Gas Engine and Power Company, and of Charles L. Seabury & Co., Consolidated, motor and ship builders, at Morris Heights. The accident did not, directly, cause any loss of life, but it is believed that it was indirectly responsible for the death by his own hand of George R. Halm, who up to yesterday morning had been in charge of the air compressor.

It was a short time after 8 o'clock, and the 200 men who are employed by the company had just begun their day's work, when they were almost deafened by a tremendous report. The thin iron walls of the buildings swayed and trembled like a house of cards about to fall. The violence of the explosion threw all the workmen within and in the immediate neighborhood of the shed to the ground. When they recovered sufficiently to pick themselves up, they found that many of them had been badly bruised, while some were so shaken up that they had to be taken home. The most seriously injured was Thomas Johnson of Yonkers, a helper, who was badly cut about the head and body by a piece of flying sheet iron. He and two other men were attended by a surgeon from Fordham Hospital, and were sent home.

A section of the north wall of the shed, made of galvanized iron, twenty-five by thirty feet square, was blown out and fragments of it were sent sailing through the air for a great distance. Out in the yards stood the partially completed hulls of two torpedo boats and a torpedo boat destroyer, very much like the Bailey, which was built at these yards. The boats were in process of construction, and the destroyer came very near being destroyed before its time, for the cylinder head of the air compressor, after it had gone through the sheet iron wall, went on with almost the velocity of a cannon ball directly at the torpedo boat destroyer. The workmen ducked when they saw it come, but the destroyer stood its ground, because it had to, and the cylinder head skimmed over it, barely grazing the upper works as it passed, and burying itself in the ground not far away.

The accident was caused by the loosening of the cylinder head of the air compressor, until its fastenings no longer could withstand the pressure from within. Then they gave way to the air force with destructive results.

Half an hour after the accident had happened the body of George R. Halm, who had been in charge of the compressor, was found under a tree not a mile from the works. He had committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid. Halm, who was twenty-eight years old, and lived with his mother at 203 West Twenty-fifth Street, New York, had been in charge of the machine for over eight months. On Wednesday he had worked on the machine all day. Yesterday morning he did not appear for duty. Another man was placed in charge and five minutes later the compressor exploded. It is believed by some that Haim knew of the weakening of the cylinder, but did not dare tell his superiors, perhaps, because he might have been held responsible and charged with some carelessness. He had not been dead long when he was found. It is thought that he killed himself when he heard the explosion. A purse of $50 was made up for his mother.

At Halm's home last night his mother, who was greatly shocked at her son's death, said she did not believe that he had taken his life. She declared he had been in ill health, and at best was never robust.

THREE ASPHYXIATED BY GAS.

George Frey, seventy-nine years old, with his two grandchildren, Madeline and George Reichenbach, four and two years old respectively, were found last evening unconscious from illuminating gas on a lounge in the home of his married daughter at 176 Suydam Street, Williamsburg. The old man had the little ones tightly clasped in his arms. The three would have died even after being discovered but for the indefatigable work in reviving them of Policeman Patterson of the Hamburg Avenue Station and Dr. Allen of St. Catharine's Hospital, who had been summoned.

Mrs. Reichenbach, mother of the children, left the little ones in charge of her father and went shopping early in the afternoon. About dark the old man set the children on a lounge while he started to light the kitchen gas. A stopcock connects with a gas stove, and on the same fixture is a burner for the kitchen light. By mistake the old man turned on the kitchen stove cock and then applied a match to the other burner. Failing to get a light he thought that the fixture was out of order, and took a seat on the lounge with the little ones on his lap. The escaping gas rapidly filled the room, and Frey and the children overcome. When Mrs. Reichenbach returned to her apartments, about 6 o'clock, she found the hallway filled with gas. She aroused the other tenants in the house, who ran to the apartments and opened all the windows. Frey and his two grandchildren were carried into the yard, and Policeman Patterson was called in. The officer sent for an ambulance, then hurried back to the house and resorted to artificial respiration to keep the three alive until a physician arrived. When Dr. Allen got to the house the two worked for more than an hour before the patients revived. The shock to the mother was such that she, too, required medical attention. When the grandfather was able to talk he told how the accident happened.

Record Trip Around Cape Horn.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 27.—The new steamer Sonoma, built for the Oceanic Steamship Company, has arrived here after a record-breaking trip from Philadelphia. She came around Cape Horn in 38 days 9 hours, making no stops. The best previous time was that made by the Sierra, 43 days 6 hours. She stopped at Coronel, however. The Sonoma is a sister ship of the Sierra. She is to be placed in the run to Honolulu and Australia.

SIXTEEN NEW POLICE CAPTAINS APPOINTED

Sergeants Promoted by the Board Promptly Assigned to Duty.

Commissioner Abell Declares Devery Should Have Been Consulted—Rumors About Chief's Retirement.

The Police Board held a meeting yesterday afternoon to advance sixteen Sergeants to Captaincies in as many vacant places. The appointees were chosen from a list of twenty-five eligibles which had been sent to the board the day before. The vote of the Commissioners on the candidates was unanimous. Commissioner Abell, however, insisted on qualifying his vote, declaring that Chief Devery should have been asked to recommend the candidates for promotion. He made a further qualification, saying:

"I want to say that in the selection of veterans for promotion such preference as is required by the Constitution and the law in with regard to the rating, and that no preference shall be made in such cases unless he shall stand upon the eligible list above any other officer in percentage. And upon these points I request the opinion of the Corporation Counsel before any action is taken by this board to determine the promotion of any officer certified to the board by the Civil Service Commission."

A list of the new Captains with the stations in which they were located is as follows:

John Mara of Fulton Street, Brooklyn.
Michael Gorman of the Harbor Squad.
Edward Walsh of Church Street.
Edward J. Kenney of Prospect Park, Brooklyn.
Jefferson Devry of East Fifty-first Street.
Edward T. Toole of Adams Street, Brooklyn.
Lawrence S. Murphy of Herbert Avenue, Brooklyn.
John Buchanan of Liberty Avenue, Brooklyn.
John Cooney of West Thirty-seventh Street.
John F. Flood of Police Headquarters.
Michael E. Froodey of the Jefferson Market Court.
Edward A. Claus of Hamburg Avenue, Brooklyn.
John J. Lantry of East Fifty-first Street.
Francis S. Kear of West Forty-eighth Street.
James Gannon of High Bridge.
J. E. Colgan of Liberty Avenue, Brooklyn.

The promotion of the Captains set headquarters astir with excitement. All the men were notified and began to arrive within half an hour of the announcement of the action of the board, some of the more ones having come to headquarters in advance. They were called to Chief Clerk Sripps office and notified of their promotions. Chief Clerk Kipp gave each a certificate and a gold badge was handed to each as he passed out of the office to go down to the Chief's office and be sworn.

The Chief assigned them to duty, and after 8 o'clock this morning there will not be a so-called Acting Captain in New York City. The assignments and the transfers occasioned by them were announced as follows:

Capt. Michael Gorman, to the command of the Bronx Park Station.

Acting Captain Hammond, remanded to Sergeant's duty at the same precinct.

Capt. Edward Walsh, to the Central Office for Headquarters night duty.

Capt. J. M. Devery, to Richmond Hill, Queens.

Capt. James Gannon to regular command at High Bridge.

Capt. John Cooney, to regular command at Thirty-seventh Street Station.

Capt. Michael E. Foodey, to the City Hall Station.

Acting Captain Burfiend of City Hall, remanded to Sergeant's duty in the Westchester Precinct.

Capt. Francis J. Kear, to regular command in the West Forty-eighth Street Station.

Capt. J. J. Lantry, to regular command in the East Fifty-first Street Station.

Capt. John F. Flood, to day command at the Central Office.

Capt. John Mara, to regular command in the Fulton Street Station, Brooklyn.

Capt. E. J. Kenney, to Parkville, Brooklyn.

Sergt. Coe, in command at Parkville, remanded to Sergeant's duty.

Capt. E. S. Toole, to Lee Avenue, Brooklyn.

Sergt. E. J. Hayes, in command, to Sergeant's duty, in Lee Avenue.

Capt. J. E. Colgan, to regular duty in the Liberty Avenue Station.

Capt. L. S. Murphy, to regular duty in the Herbert Avenue Station, Brooklyn.

Capt. John Buchanan, to the Gates Avenue Station, Brooklyn.

Sergt. Bernard Gallagher, remanded to regular Sergeant's duty in the Gates Avenue Station.

Capt. E. A. Claus, to regular duty in the Hamburg Avenue Station, Brooklyn.

It has been stated that President York wanted a Captain put in charge of the Detective Bureau in Brooklyn, and that the sixteenth promotion was made for this purpose. Chief Devery assigned a Captain, instead, to night duty at Police Headquarters. For years the precinct commanders have taken turn doing night duty at Headquarters. The Chief's assignment puts a regular night Captain on duty.

Rumors about the resignation or removal of Chief Devery from office continued flying thick and fast yesterday, but up to a late hour last night it was impossible to obtain confirmation of any of them. The chief himself persists in silence. He refuses even to deny that he may resign, and declines to discuss the attitude of the Police Board toward his official position. Nothing definite could be gained from the members of the Board as to their attitude in the matter. The general opinion about Headquarters is that matters have not yet come to a sufficient head to enable either Devery or the board to decide how to act.

In close contact with the rumor about the Chief's resignation is another as to the possible successor to the office. The name of Capt. Titus is most frequently mentioned in this connection, but it was impossible to learn from an authoritative source whether that officer or any one of a half a dozen other candidates for the place would be likely to succeed the present incumbent.

WOULD DENY PENSION TO DEVERY.

Joel B. Erhardt Says Conditions Which Permit It Need Reforming.

Joel B. Erhardt, a member of the Committee of Fifteen's sub-committee on legislation, when asked yesterday regarding the work of that sub-committee, replied:

"I was not present at the meeting yesterday and therefore cannot speak about the future work of the Committee of Fifteen as regards legislative remedies for evils. But I wish to draw your attention to one of the practices that seems to obtain and which seems to permit a public official like Devery, who has tarred himself with inefficiency and worse, to retire on $3,000 a year. If this be not a premium on inefficiency and criminality I would like to know what is.

"If such an official, after, through his criminality and neglect, the city has been corrupted, can be retired upon $3,000 a year of the money of those citizens whose interests he has criminally neglected, simply because there is no other way of getting rid of him, then I think I have shown you a promising field for legislative reform."

COMMITTEE OF FIFTEEN WORK.

Office Will Be Opened in Park Row Building—Abundance of Funds.

The Committee of Fifteen decided yesterday to open an office in the Park Row Building, and appointed George W. Morgan to take charge of it, with the title of Assistant Secretary. Mr. Morgan's duty will be to receive all information which comes to the committee and properly collate it for the committee's use. He will have as many assistants as he needs for the work.

The Committee of Fifteen will not depend entirely upon information sent in. It will hire investigators to obtain evidence. These investigators will be men of a higher grade than the ordinary detective. The work of investigation and gathering of evidence will proceed under the direction of the Sub-Committee on Investigation, of which William H. Baldwin, Jr., is Chairman. In discussing the prospective work of his committee yesterday, Mr. Baldwin said:

"The sub-committee now has on hand a great deal of evidence about resorts of vice. This is the evidence which has been gathered by the Committee on Public Morality, which initiated the present movement for reform by its agitation of existing conditions. The evidence inherited by our committee from that source represents a year's work, and no doubt contains information which will be of great value to us. But we shall not content ourselves with that supply. We will make our own investigations and they will be extensive and thorough. The committee will from time to time give to the press such statements of result or fact as it deems proper, and we may also issue regular bulletins on our work. But we will not undertake the issuance of a regular journal.

"We hope to do the public duty intrusted to us in such a manner that the usefulness of such a body as ours will be fully demonstrated to the community. We look forward to existence for just as long a period as there is necessity for such work as we have been called upon to do, and we continue to enjoy the confidence of the community that we are the men best fitted to perform it."

Charles Stewart Smith, Chairman of the Sub-Committee on Finance, said yesterday that the committee would have abundant funds with which to carry on its work. He says that more than a score of men who are able to contribute liberally have stopped him on the street and told him to call on them for money whenever the committee needed funds.

BILLS AFFECTING THE CITY.

Measures to be Introduced at Albany by the Merchants' Association.

The Merchants' Association of New York will introduce at the opening of the Legislature the following bills:

1. To Repeal Ramapo act, Chapter 955, Laws of 1895.
2. To grant the City of New York all powers needed to acquire, construct, and maintain its own water works.
3. To so limit the rights of private water companies and restrict their powers of contract thereunder as to make those rights subject to condemnation whenever desirable for the public welfare.
4. To provide for municipal ownership of all docks within the City of New York.
5. To provide that the City of New York may incur indebtedness to the extent of 10 per cent. of its assessed valuation, and in addition thereto may incur such further indebtedness as may be necessary for the purposes of providing a public water supply, which further indebtedness shall not be included in ascertaining the power of the city to become otherwise indebted.
6. To provide that current market prices shall be the lawful rates of payment for all supplies and materials purchased for the use of the city, and that all contracts or orders therefor shall be made subject to the right and duty of the Controller summarily to reduce the stipulated prices, if they exceed the lawful rates, viz., the current market prices at which such supplies or materials can be purchased in the open market.
7. To provide for a State commission to examine into the systems of accounting and of public reports in the principal cities of the State; to report plans for a uniform system of bookkeeping for all municipalities according to class, and for the publication of reports in a prescribed form and at prescribed intervals, and for the periodic publication by the State of comparative reports of the affairs of all municipalities.

OLD TRICK FOOLS JERSEYMAN.

Arrested with a $100 Counterfeit Bill Which He Bought for $10.

William Weiss, a painter of Roselle, N. J., came to New York last Monday to have a good time. Strolling along Baxter Street he was surprised to see a man just ahead of him pick up a bill from the pavement.

The man who found the bill turned and, observing him, offered to divide with him.

"You seen it about the same time I did, and I'm willing to be square," said this paragon.

The two went into a saloon to change the bill, which proved to be of the one-hundred-dollar denomination. The proprietor could not change it. The stranger, who said he needed money quickly, offered to sell his share in the bill for $10. Weiss jumped at the bargain.

Weiss was yesterday arraigned in the First Criminal Court of Jersey City on a charge of attempting to pass a one-hundred-dollar counterfeit note.

AMERICAN PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Officers for the Year Chosen at a Business Meeting.

About thirty members of the American Physical Society gathered in Fayerweather Hall, Columbia University, yesterday at the second quarterly meeting of the organization. The society embraces in its membership nearly all the Professors of Physics in the leading universities of the country and other scientific men. At the morning business meeting the following names of officers for the ensuing year were chosen to be balloted for by the members, the results to be announced at the next meeting:

President—Henry A. Rowland of Johns Hopkins University; Vice President—A. Michelson of Chicago University; Secretary—Ernest Merritt of Cornell University, and Treasurer—William Hallock of Columbia University. The Councillors are Henry Crew of the Northwestern University, and Edward B. Rosa of Wesleyan University.

After the business meeting six papers bearing on problems in physics were read by as many university professors.

The Rev. Nicholas M. Reinhart Dead.

The Rev. Nicholas M. Reinhart, rector of the Church of the Ascension, in West One Hundred and Seventh Street, died at the rectory of the church, 221 West One Hundred and Seventh Street, early yesterday morning of pneumonia. The Rev. Father Reinhart was born Sept. 14, 1861. He entered St. Lawrence College, Wisconsin, at the age of fourteen and later went to the Troy Seminary. He was ordained to the priesthood June 10, 1886. He was first assigned to the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, 135 East Seventeenth Street, where he was first assistant for five years and temporary pastor for eight months.

His next charge was at St. Mary's Church, Stapleton, and from there he went to the Church of St. Elizabeth of Hungary, in East Fourth Street and to the Church of the Holy Trinity, Yonkers. On Oct. 17, 1895, he started the Church of the Ascension in a building next to the Lion Brewery Park, saying the first mass on that day with eight persons present. There are now 8,000 members of the church. He was a member of the Royal Arcanum, Catholic Benevolent Legion, and Knights of Columbus.

The funeral will take place to-morrow morning, with a solemn requiem mass at 10 o'clock, which will be attended by Archbishop Corrigan, Bishop Farley, and a number of priests. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Father Caslmir. Interment will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Lieut. Commander Hall's Recovery.

Lieutenant Commander Hall, assistant to Chief J. A. B. Smith of the Steam Engineering Department of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, who was almost killed several weeks ago by a falling beam, is now able to be up and walk about. His recovery has been so rapid that it has astonished the doctors at the Naval Hospital, where he is under treatment.

The fracture of the skull which he sustained was at the base of the skull behind the ear in such a place that it was impossible for the doctors to get at it. For the first five days it was expected that he would die. The Lieutenant's good physique, however, stood him in good stead, and he began to recover slowly at the end of the first week. At present he is able to get up and walk about the hospital. He expects to be dismissed in a short time.

E. H. Sothern Able to Appear.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 27.—By constant spraying E. H. Sothern's throat was greatly improved in his day's rest, and to-night he was able to appear in "Hamlet," though his voice was not as strong as it appeared to be before he overtaxed it with two performances on Christmas Day. When seen to-night Mr. Sothern said that the strain of two appearances in one day after he had been laid up for eight weeks rendered him subject to the attack of cold which he contracted. He believes now that he will be able to keep the rest of his engagements for the season.

Miss Marriott, the Actress, Dead.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Miss Marriott, (Mrs. Alice Edgar,) the actress, is dead. She made an American tour about 1870.

Rapid Transit for the Bronx.

About 200 property owners and residents of the Bronx met last night in the Fordham Clubhouse, Morris Avenue and High Bridge Road, to discuss plans for securing better transportation facilities for the residents of that borough. The idea generally approved is for a branch of the rapid transit route on Jerome Avenue, north of the Harlem River. This plan, set forth in a resolution, will be urged at a meeting of the Rapid Transit Commission. The commission will be asked to name a date for a hearing on the matter. It is supposed that if the point should be gained an elevated road will be constructed.

In Aid of the Haganey Family.

Dr. W. A. Boyd of 362 Willis Avenue, who has been giving his professional services to the destitute Hagsney family, all of whose children, eight in number, are down with diphtheria, said last night that he had received, up to date, $65 from charitable persons, which amount had been turned over to the family. The contributors are Mrs. Mooney, $10; M. Ahl, $10; "Brooklyn," $5; "C. A. L.," $5; A. A. Levy, $5; "Cash," $5; "Harlem," $4, and through THE NEW YORK TIMES, $21. The father of the children is an invalid, and the mother is worn out from nursing them.

ROBERT C. MORRIS SUCCEEDS GEN. GREENE

Elected President of the Republican County Committee.

Says He Has Made No Pledges—Other Officers and the Executive Committee Chosen.

The Republican County Committee at its adjourned annual meeting last night elected Robert C. Morris President and Chairman, and made three changes in the membership of the Executive Committee. To make Mr. Morris eligible for the Chairmanship he was chosen a representative from the Twenty-ninth District in place of the late William L. Strong.

James W. Perry of the Twenty-seventh District presided with George R. Manchester as Secretary. After the calling of the roll Mr. Perry announced that nominations for the Presidency of the body were in order, whereupon Alexander T. Mason of the Twenty-ninth District proposed Mr. Morris.

"He has been a consistent Republican who has always shown great executive ability, rare tact, and good judgment," he said. "He has the full confidence of all who have been associated with him in political work. He is able, fair-minded, and farseeing, and the Republicans of the Twenty-ninth are confident he will fill the position of President with credit to himself and to the whole party."

Gen. F. V. Greene was heartily cheered when he arose to second the nomination. He said:

"On behalf of the delegates from the Twenty-fifth District, I take great pleasure in seconding this nomination. As your President last Fall I know of Mr. Morris's effective work in the last campaign. He was always bright and alert, and gave up his time and his money. The efforts of no man in the interest of Republican success are more deserving of appreciation. As a candidate for City Judge he received 2,500 more votes than any other candidate on the Republican ticket in the County of New York. The people have confidence in him. He organized the effective work that was done on the east side, and that is where we must look for votes to win in the coming campaign. None could get them better than he. Members of his family have been connected with the affairs of the State for 150 years. Robert Morris was the financier of the Revolutionary Party; Gouverneur Morris was Minister to France. With Mr. Morris as Chairman and William H. Ten Eyck at the head of the Executive Committee, we start out in splendid condition for the next campaign."

Abraham Gruber was next recognized. He said:

"I second the nomination of Mr. Morris because he comes from the rank and file. A distinguished Democrat who has served as President recently said: 'Give the rank and file a chance.' But I notice he did not make the remark until after he was out of office." [Laughter.]

Charles H. Murray of the Eighth also seconded the nomination.

Mr. Morris was elected by a viva voce vote and Messrs. Mason and Murray were appointed to escort him to the chair. They shook his right hand so heartily that ex-Alderman Fred Ware exclaimed, "Why, they are gripmen as well as conductors."

Mr. Morris, in returning thanks for the honor, said:

"In assuming the duties of this important position, I can say that I do so without making any pledges, or being asked to make a pledge. It will be my endeavor to do all that I can to promote the best interests of good government. It is the duty of the members of this committee, as a body and as individuals, to co-operate with me. We are about to enter on a hard campaign. I take to hard work, and will work hard, but to secure success I must have your hearty co-operation."

The following officers were then elected by acclamation:

First Vice President—Edward H. Healy.
Second Vice President—William Halpin.
Secretary—George R. Manchester.
Treasurer—George R. Sheldon.
Sergeant at Arms—Edmund Bodine.

The Executive Committee selected is as follows:

Dist.		Dist.
1	Martin H. Healey.	19	George R. Bidwell.
2	Dennis Shea.	20	F. Norton Goddard.
3	Frederick Haldy.	21	Abraham Gruber.
4	William H. Guy.	22	Charles K. Lexow.
5	Cornelius Van Cott.	23	M. M. McKea.
6	James E. March.	24	Smith Pine.
7	F. D. Miller.	25	McDougall Hawkes.
8	C. H. Murray.	26	Jastrow Alexander.
9	F. S. Gibbs.	27	James W. Perry.
10	Ferd. Eidman.	28	John H. Gunner.
11	J. P. Windolph.	29	Alexander T. Mason
12	John Stiehling.	30	Ambrose O'Neil.
13	Herman Joveshof.	31	Silas C. Croft.
14	J. F. Pegram.	32	Isaac Newman.
15	G. W. Wanmaker.	33	Frank Raymond.
16	George Hilliard.	34	W. H. Ten Eyck.
17	John Reisenweber.	35	E. H. Healy.
18	William Henkel.		Annexed—R. N. Arnoux.

Mr. Guy, who supersedes P. J. O'Brien in the Fourth District, is an employe of the Custom House. There has been much dissension in the district, and two local Republican tickets were run last Fall. O'Brien is a Deputy Factory Inspector.

McDougall Hawkes succeeds Charles A. Hess, who refused a re-election in the Twenty-fifth. Mr. Hess presented the name of Mr. Hawkes.

In the Twenty-ninth, Alexander T. Mason takes the place of John W. Jacobus.

CITY CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

Borough Republicans Elect Officers—G. H. Roberts, Chairman.

A meeting of the Republican City Central Committee was held in the large hall of the Murray Hill Lyceum last night. This body is composed of 1,049 members, representing the five boroughs of the city.

George H. Roberts of Brooklyn was re-elected Chairman, and made a brief speech, in which he predicted Republican success in the coming municipal campaign. The Vice Presidents chosen are: Manhattan, Charles H. Murray; Brooklyn, John G. Deubert; Bronx, Edward H. Healy; Queens, Felix Fritchle; Richmond, George W. Cromwell. George R. Manchester was elected Secretary; Philip W. Rheinhard, Jr., Assistant Secretary; Hugh McRoberts, Treasurer; William H. Ten Eyck, Chairman of the Executive Committee, and Sidney H. Goodacre, Sergeant at Arms.

A REPUBLICAN CLUB ABSORBED.

Adopts Resolutions Transferring Allegiance to Citizens' Union.

The James G. Blaine Club, a Republican organization of the Fourteenth Assembly District, has adopted resolutions approving of the Citizens' Union and transferring its allegiance to that body. The President of the club was recently elected President of the Citizens' Union in his district. The resolutions read as follows:

Resolved, That we, the members of the J. G. Blaine Club, Fourteenth District, do hereby declare it to be our wish and intent to join in a body the Citizens' Union of this district, and do pledge ourselves to assist and support our worthy President from now until the day of election in the Mayoralty campaign against Tammany Hall.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the Hon. William Brookfield.

WIFE MURDER AND SUICIDE.

J. W. Tinsley Kills the Woman and Himself in Los Angeles, Cal.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 27.—John W. Tinsley shot and killed his wife, Anna P. Tinsley, in the street to-day, and then fired a bullet into his own head, dying instantly. The couple were married at Van Buren, Ark., Jan. 2, 1900. Tinsley represented himself as possessed of property in Helena, Mon., to the value of $75,000. His wife had $400 cash and a house and lot in Jackson, Tenn., valued at $2,500.

Tinsley pursuaded his wife to dispose of her property, and later he induced her to give him the money. Then he left her and came here. She followed and asked that he return the money. He gave her a draft for $325, which was returned dishonored. Then she filed suit to recover her money. Bitterness over this suit and troubles leading up to it evidently caused the tragedy to-day.

MAY ABSORB ANOTHER BANK.

The National City Understood to be Negotiating for the Acquisition of the Columbia.

Negotiations are understood to be pending for the acquisition of the Columbia Bank, a State institution located at Forty-second Street and Fifth Avenue, by the National City Bank. Rumors to this effect were current in Wall Street yesterday. It was said that President Stillman of the National City Bank, and William Rockefeller would soon be elected Directors of the Columbia Bank. An officer of the National City Bank said last night that the report was premature. Julius Fox, President of the Columbia Bank, said he knew nothing of such a plan.

The Columbia Bank is capitalized at $300,000. Among its Directors are W. L. Skidmore, John S. Foster, Myer S. Isaacs, Charles Reed, Thomas P. Fiske, David H. Rowland, and other well-known business men.

FOR SLAPPING AN ACTRESS.

Trouble Accumulates for Manager Stamford of Queens of the Orient Company.

Tony Stamford, one of the proprietors and the stage manager of the burlesque company which is playing an engagement under the title of "Queens of the Orient," at the Theatre Comique, on Broadway, near Twenty-ninth Street, got into difficulties yesterday because he slapped the face of Miss Eloise Mortimer, his leading lady, who plays the part of Maximillo, a young nobleman.

Miss Mortimer had not appeared with the company for a few days because, as she claims, she was ill with influenza. The stage manager did not believe her and, it is said he abused her with violent language, and when she called him a cowardly cur he gave her a nasty blow in the face. When he was locked up he sent for Manager Weil of the theatre to go his bail. Weil refused, but Stamford's partner came to the rescue and Stamford went back to the theatre.

Here he was surprised to find a notice on the call board from the house management fining him $25 for ungentlemanly conduct, and also a notice that the company's engagement would be closed on Saturday, because of his conduct.

SHOT IN DISPUTE OVER POKER.

Man Wounded in an Affray in the Onawa Cafe.

Miles McDonald, a traveling salesman, living at 1,976 Lexington Avenue, was locked up in the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Station last night on a charge of felonious assault, having shot Edward Courtney of 592 East One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Street. The shooting was the result of a quarrel in the Onawa Café, at Park Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, between the prisoner and a man named Thomas Kennedy.

McDonald got into a quarrel with Kennedy in a dispute over a game of poker. The men were about to come to blows when bystanders tried to interfere. Before any one could prevent it, McDonald had drawn a revolver and began to fire. The inmates of the room tried to run out, but in the scramble Courtney was left in the rear and fell, crying, "I am shot." McDonald was then over, wered, but not before he had emptied the other five chambers of his revolver.

When the prisoner was taken to the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Station and searched only the empty revolver was found on his person. When questioned as to why he shot Courtney, he said, simply, "If that fellow is shot, he is simply an outsider." Courtney was taken to the Harlem Hospital.

FIRE PANIC IN WORK SHOPS.

Fire in the building at 358 Canal Street, occupied by Philip Levy, a manufacturer of furniture polish, caused a loss of $1,000. The buildings at 356 and 358 Canal Street, and the adjoining structure at 23 Lispenard, are all of three stories, and used as dwelling houses in the second and third stories. Many women were at work on these floors making cloaks, clothing, and pocketbooks.

The smoke from the fire blinded the women and caused a panic. The firemen succeeded in taking all the tenants of the three houses down the ladders without accident. Michael Glogaus's bakeshop in the basement of 356 Canal Street was damaged $200 by fire and water.

At Broome and Varick Streets the tender horse of Engine 30, returning from the fire, struck a truck, which the firemen say was badly driven, and received a gash to the bone several inches long on the right flank. In the collision Fireman Thomas Murray, who fell from the "L" structure on Greenwich Street, at the Tarrant fire, was thrown, and again injured his right leg and right hand. He went to the Hudson Street Hospital for treatment.

WOULD PUNISH EAVESDROPPER.

A well-dressed, heavily veiled young woman entered the Tenderloin Police Station last night and asked the Sergeant in charge to be referred to a detective. The Sergeant ordered one of the Wardmen to see the woman, and the two disappeared into the Captain's room, where they remained closeted for some time.

After the woman had gone, the detective stated that she said she was engaged to a wealthy down-town broker, and that she wanted advice how to proceed against a certain well-known married woman who was pursuing extraordinary methods in the hope of breaking off the engagement. According to her story, the young woman has a telephone in her home and is in the habit of talking frequently to her fiancé. Knowing this, the complainant says, the married woman had a telephone put into her own home and by some means had made arrangements with a telephone central to be connected on the same wire when the two engaged people are talking.

The listener was first suspected when it became known that she knew of two private conversations which the complainant had with her intended husband over a wire. The young woman asked advice how to proceed against the eavesdropper and was referred to a lawyer. The woman refused to tell her name or address.

Dump Cargo to Float Steamer.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 27.—The steamer reported ashore south of Miami in last night's dispatches is the Homerick of Baltimore, laden with coal for Mexico. The heavy seas prevented the wreckers from approaching her until this afternoon. They now have her in charge, and the entire cargo is being dumped into the sea. They hope to float the vessel by to-morrow noon. The wreckers contracted to float the Homerick for $7,000. She is on the reefs, near Caesar's Creek, twenty miles south of Miami.

Jewish Historical Society Officers.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 27.—At the ninth annual meeting of the American-Jewish Historical Society held here last night these officers were elected: President—Dr. Cyrus Adler of Washington; Vice Presidents—Simon W. Rosendale of Albany; Mendes Cohen of Baltimore, and the Rev. Dr. B. Felsonthal; Corresponding Secretary—Dr. Herbert Friedenwald; Recording Secretary—Max J. Kohler; Treasurer—Prof. Richard Gottheil.

Society of St. Johnland.

The annual meeting of the Society of St. Johnland was held yesterday. The following officers were elected: President—The Rev. Dr. Henry Mottet; Vice President—William Alexander Smith; Secretary—Frederick E. Hyde; Treasurer—Francis M. Bacon; Superintendent and Assistant Treasurer—The Rev. N. O. Falsted. During 1900 the society cared for 193 old men, boys, and girls. The average for the year was 130, which is an increase of nine over the average for 1899. The total of expenditures for the year was $24,970.18.

CHINA IS SHOWING FIGHT

Emperor Strongly Objects to Two of the Powers' Demands.

WAR MEASURES AT WU-SUNG

Junks Laden with Stone Ready to Block the Channel—Chinese Papers' Comment.

PEKING, Dec. 27.—Li-Hung-Chang and Prince Ching, the Chinese Peace Commissioners, have heard from Emperor Kwang-Su. Prince Ching called on Earl Li for consultation, remaining over an hour.

The Court objects strenuously to reducing the forts, and also to allowing permanent legation guards, which, it seems to think, could be made sufficiently large, at any time desired, to menace the Court itself.

After the conference it was decided to hold further communication with the Court before seeing the Ministers.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 27.—Many Chinese war junks, laden with stone, have been anchored off Wu-Sung, presumably to block the channel in case of an emergency.

The Chinese newspapers here object to the proposed peace terms. The Universal Gazette considers that the Princes and officials who are to be punished should be named.

It is questionable whether Gen. Tung-Fu-Siang is included among those punishable; and so far as Prince Tuan is concerned, it is well-known that the Chinese Peace Commissioners have been instructed not to consent to any punishment exceeding imprisonment of any person of royal blood.

Some of the native journals hold that the presence of permanent legation guards will render the Emperor's return impossible, because the guards would be a menace to the Court. "China," says one of them, "would be powerless to suppress risings because prohibited from increasing her military strength; and the powers, therefore, would renew hostilities again, and the people would be mowed down like hemp."

LONDON, Dec. 28.—"It is announced from Sian-Foo," says the Shanghai correspondent of The Standard, "that Emperor Kwang-Su has selected Gen. Ma-Yu-Kun to command the advance bodyguard when the Court proceeds to Peking."

BOSTON, Dec. 27.—Speaking to-day of the Chinese situation, Secretary of the Navy Long said:

"Minister Conger did not sign the agreement with the other powers before obtaining the full approval of our Government. I think he may have signified his intention of doing so, but he had not signed it. It was merely a misunderstanding on his part. He did not fully understand when he signified his agreement to sign. But the mistake was quickly rectified."

AN AMERICAN EXPEDITION.

PEKING, Dec. 27.—A detachment of the Sixth United States Cavalry, Ninth Infantry, and Fifth Artillery will leave here to-morrow to investigate the alleged burning of native Christians by Boxers, as reported by the Rev. Mr. Kelly, the Presbyterian missionary.

The expedition will be commanded by Lieut. Col. Wint of the Sixth Cavalry.

ACCUSES THE FRENCH TROOPS.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day Marcel Sembat, (Radical Socialist,) called attention to the reports of cruelties upon the part of European troops in China. He said the French soldiers were no freer from reproach than the Germans and Russians. They had committed similar atrocities. He also protested against pillage, which, he asserted, had been carried out systematically, and accused the missionaries of participating therein.

The Minister of Marine, M. de Lanessan, replied that the Government had ordered an inquiry, and would severely punish all the guilty parties. But, as a consolation, he was able to say that the French soldiers had been much less barbarous than those of other nations.

The Government, the Minister continued, had ordered all the articles sent by Gen. Frey to be returned to China and restored to the Chinese Government.

M. de Lanessan concluded with expressing the hope that the reprehensible acts committed would not be renewed.

Russia and the Manchuria Railways.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 27.—The Novoe Vremya's Vladivostok correspondent stands by the story that the Russian Government is about to take over the Manchuria Railways. He says Commander Keller has left Vladivostok to formally deliver the roads to the Government's representatives. The correspondent also says the Chinese caused losses amounting to only 4,000,000 rubles.

British Soldiers Murdered in Peking.

PEKING, Dec. 27.—British soldiers have been found dead outside the Temple of Heaven with bullets in their heads. The murders are believed to have been committed by Chinese.

Elizabeth A. Blake Sent to an Asylum.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Elizabeth Alma Blake of New York City, who was arrested here early in the week and committed to St. George's Workhouse, charged with insanity, after having appeared on Dec. 21 at Osborne House, Isle of Wight, where she claimed to be a daughter of Princess Henry of Battenberg, was subjected to a medical examination yesterday and sent to a lunatic asylum.

THE WEATHER.

LOCAL FORECAST.—Rain, fresh southerly winds.

There will be rain to-day from the Ohio Valley southward, and to-night and to-morrow in the Middle and South Atlantic States, and rain or snow in New England. It will be warmer in the Atlantic States, followed by colder weather. It will be much colder in the Mississippi and Lower Ohio Valleys, the Western Gulf States, and the Southwest, with high northerly winds over the two latter districts. It will continue cold in the Northwest and central West. On the Atlantic Coast the winds will be fresh and mostly southerly.

The record of temperature for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from THE NEW YORK TIMES's thermometer and from the thermometer of the Weather Bureau, is as follows:

DRUNK, IN FULL UNIFORM.

National Guardsman, in Disgrace, Has His Regimentals Taken from Him.

In the line of prisoners that filed before Magistrate Pool, in the West Side Police Court, yesterday morning was one man with disheveled hair and a watery eye who was clad in the full uniform of a member of the Twelfth Regiment.

He gave his name as John Towey, twenty-one years old, of 505 West Forty-eighth Street. A policeman of the West Forty-seventh Street Station told the Magistrate that Towey, who was intoxicated, had refused to move from the corner of Forty-eighth Street and Tenth Avenue. When urged to go, Towey attacked the officer and was subdued with difficulty. The policeman further said that his prisoner had left the Island but a few days ago, where he had been sent for stealing from his mother.

Magistrate Pool, looking at Towey's uniform, had an officer to call out and inquire if there was a member of the Twelfth Regiment in the courtroom. A young man who said he was George Rodenback responded, and the Magistrate asked him what he knew about Towey.

"This man's a bum," said Rodenback. "He's always drunk, and he's always standing on the corners. He has no right to wear that uniform."

The Magistrate adjourned the case until the afternoon, by which time Rodenback was on hand in company with Capt. Pellott of Company H, Twelfth Regiment and Quartermaster Sergt. Traugott, also of the Twelfth. Capt. Pellott told the Magistrate that he could say nothing in defense of Towey. He had heard once before of the man being intoxicated on the street in his

HILLIARD INQUEST BEGINS

Witness Minnock Testifies Against Bellevue Nurses.

SAYS PATIENT WAS ASSAULTED

Mrs. Hilliard and Others Declare He Was Physically Sound When He Went to the Hospital.

The inquest into the cause of Louis H. Hilliard's death was begun yesterday morning at 11 o'clock, by Coroner Fitzpatrick and a jury in the Criminal Court Building. Hilliard died in the pavilion for the insane at Bellevue Hospital Dec. 12, and his death was followed by the arrest of three nurses, who are charged with assaulting him.

When an autopsy was made, it was discovered that Hilliard's death was due to asphyxia and fracture of the ribs. The arrest of J. R. Davis, Edward A. Dean, and Clinton L. Marshall, the three nurses, followed. Ogden Mills, son of D. O. Mills, founder of the Training School for Nurses, furnished bail for them in the sum of $1,000 each. Mr. Mills also engaged Henry B. Anderson to defend the accused nurses, who, with Mr. Mills, were present at the inquest.

The most important witness examined was Thomas J. Minnock of 63 Fourth Avenue. It was mainly due to Minnock's affidavit that the men were arrested.

On the stand he told how he had feigned insanity in order to get into the pavilion. It is said he intended to write a series of articles for a newspaper.

"When Hilliard was brought in," the witness said, "Nurse Dean shouted, 'Hello, here comes another bum.' This was the usual greeting to a new arrival.

"Hilliard was given a pair of slippers and began to walk up and down the corridors, and Nurse Marshall grabbed him by the shoulders and kicked him." At supper time, the witness said, Hilliard refused to eat, and asked for his coat that he might go home.

"At that," said the witness, "Dean ran out and said, 'I'll make you eat,' and grabbed him by the throat and jumped on him, throwing him to the floor. Marshall and Donnelly held his hands. Dean was choking him. Donnelly said after a while, 'Let up, fellows, he's getting black.'"

The witness said that Hilliard was senseless, but soon recovered.

"Then Dean said, 'Eat.' Hilliard said, 'No, never.' Then they kicked and smashed him till he became unconscious."

Afterward, according to the witness, they put Hilliard in a shower bath, took off his clothes, and beat him on the stomach with their fists. Dean cried, "I'll fix you—you can't do as you please in here!"

The witness was awakened in the night by hearing Hilliard ask for water, which the night nurse gave him. He heard one of the nurses say: "What a beating that fellow must have had." When he saw Hilliard the next day, after dinner, his head was a mass of bruises and there were blue marks on his throat.

"About this time," said the witness, "Superintendent O'Rourke came in and said, 'You got a pretty good beating, eh?'

"'No,' replied Hilliard, 'I have been scratched.'

"Davis, before Superintendent O'Rourke called, said, 'We have the power of life or death here. The man that opens his head about this beating will be killed.' Afterward Dr. Wildman came in and told Davis to give Hilliard a good beating. Davis said: 'I did, but it didn't do any good.' Then Dr. Moore came and said: 'You know what to do with him.'"

The witness said that on Wednesday night at supper Hilliard again refused to eat. Dean and Marshall held him while Davis kicked him. Then some one got a sheet, tied it around his neck, and twisted it. After putting him under the shower bath they dragged him along the corridor, his head bumping on the floor.

"Afterward I heard Davis say, 'I think the fellow is dying. Next day I heard him telephone at least a dozen times to ask if the autopsy had been performed yet."

Minnock then identified the accused nurses.

Minnock was the last witness of the day, the first to give testimony being Mrs. Hilliard, widow of the dead man. She testified through an interpreter, saying that she saw her husband last before he went to the hospital, on Dec. 11, in the morning, immediately after his return from Boston. She afterward saw him at the hospital. He seemed much excited and his condition alarmed her. Her husband had had no fight that she knew of.

It became evident while the widow was being questioned that the defense will hold that Hilliard may have received his injuries before being admitted to the hospital.

Casimir Verger, an attaché of the French Consulate, said that Hilliard called at the Consulate Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 11. Mrs. Hilliard had previously called and informed the Consul that her husband was acting strangely.

"Hilliard spoke in a rambling manner," said Mr. Verger, adding that he had then notified the police at the Old Slip Station.

John H. Hauser, a policeman, who took Hilliard from the Consulate to the station, said that Hilliard had at no time complained of feeling hurt or bruised.

Joseph Eaton, a policeman, who assisted in taking Hilliard from the French Consulate, also testified that there were no marks of violence on the man's chest or throat at that time.

Sergeant William H. Wilbur, who was on duty at the desk of the First Precinct Station on Dec. 11, said that Hilliard talked freely, without any impediments or indications of injury to his throat.

Dr. William Rosensohn, the ambulance surgeon from Gouverneur Hospital, said that when he arrived at the station Hilliard was walking up and down talking to himself. "The man appeared to be sound. He could not have walked and talked incessantly if he had a broken rib." The witness then said that after leaving the station he went to Gouverneur Hospital to take a woman patient in the ambulance. "Hilliard objected to going into the ambulance with the woman," said Dr. Rosensohn. "We had to put a restraining belt around his waist. His hands were also fastened."

"Was there a scuffle?"

"No. No violence was used, but the assistance of the driver and policeman was required to put on the belt."

"Did you have to throw him down?"

"No, Sir."

"Are there handcuffs on the belt?"

"Yes."

Coroner Fitzpatrick questioned him sharply as to whether Hilliard's left side struck against the stanchions of the ambulance. The witness said he saw nothing of the kind.

"When I delivered Hilliard at Bellevue he was as sound as when I got him at the station house," said Dr. Rosensohn.

After a recess, Mrs. Hilliard testified that she visited her husband at Bellevue the afternoon of the day he died.

"He was all red and blue about the forehead," she said. "He told me had been kicked by a small man. He pointed toward that man." She pointed at the nurse, Marshall.

Dr. Allen Fitch, the examiner in lunacy for the Department of Public Charities, said he saw Hilliard in the pavilion for the insane at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when Davis, the nurse, brought him in for examination. "Hilliard was in an excited state," he said, "and had many hallucinations. He was a thin man, and was in an enfeebled condition."

"Did you see any bruises on Hilliard's face?"

"I don't remember that I did."

In reply to another question, Dr. Fitch said that a physical injury, such as a broken rib, might not cause acute pain at once.

"Would twenty-four hours be sufficient time?"

"I think it would."

FAVOR NEW CHILDREN'S WARD.

Health Board Appoints Committee to Confer with Commissioner Keller.

At a meeting of the Health Board yesterday Dr. Jenkins offered a resolution that a new children's ward be established on Randall's Island, to be used solely for children afflicted with contagious diseases. The resolution was approved, and Drs. Jenkins, Cosby, and Roberts were appointed a committee to call on Commissioner Keller and confer with him concerning the new ward.

Commissioner Keller said yesterday afternoon that he had already considered the advisability of such a step, and had addressed a letter to President Murphy on the subject. In his letter, the Commissioner asks the Health Board for the results of its observations as regards the effect of the transfer of infants from Randall's Island to North Brother Island and Willard Parker Hospital.

The Commissioner also seeks to get definite information as to the actual disposition of children marked "discharged" on the books of the Infants' Hospital.

Commissioner Keller also sent a letter yesterday to Dr. Charles L. Dana, President of the Bellevue Medical Board, in which he said that Dr. Robert Hill, visitor of the State Board of Charities, had stated to him that the interests of the patients in Bellevue Hospital have been sacrificed to the interest of the medical college. He reviews the charges made that members of the Medical Board receive fees for services in the insane pavilion, and asks for full reports on the exact limitations of bedside instructions.

Commissioner Keller also asks if the abolition of the fee system affects the Medical Board or any member of it, and what precautions are taken, if any, to make the doctor, rather than the nurse, responsible for the use of the hypodermic syringe in the alcoholic wards and the pavilion for the insane.

Dr. Fitch and Dr. Wildman both denied a rumor current yesterday that they had resigned. Commissioner Keller said that he had no indication that they intended to do so.

BARTENDER SHOOTS CUSTOMER

Upshot of a Quarrel Over a Plate of Free Lunch May Be Murder.

Because he insisted upon having another plate of free lunch when the bartender insisted that he had had enough, Thomas Tucker, twenty-one years old, of 2,391 First Avenue, is in the Harlem Hospital with a bullet wound in the abdomen which will probably cause his death. Terrence Boylan, the bartender in the saloon at 2,398 First Avenue, where Tucker went to appease his hunger, did the shooting and was held without bail in the Harlem Police Court to await the result of Tucker's injuries.

Tucker, with a number of fellow-laborers from a brick yard near by, went into the saloon to get some beer at noon. On the counter was a supply of free lunch. Tucker and another man had a plate of the lunch with their beer and then asked for another. Boylan ordered the waiter not to give it to them. Tucker insisted without avail, and then retorted that he would go somewhere else to get his beer and lunch in the future.

"You'll go and go quick," Boylan is alleged to have said, and then, according to the story of a witness, the bartender ran out from behind the bar and, placing a revolver within a foot of Tucker's abdomen, fired. Tucker fell to the floor, and the others ran out of the place. Arthur McKeon, one of the laborers, was the last to leave, and as he ran out of the place Boylan fired at him, the bullet going wide of its mark and crashing through a plate-glass window.

LEGAL AID SOCIETY MEETING.

Steam Launch to be Purchased in Interests of Seamen—New Patrons.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Legal Aid Society held yesterday afternoon at the office of the President, Arthur Von Briesen, 229 Broadway, Jacob H. Schiff, Isaac N. Seligman, Julien T. Davies, Edwin Gould, and Andrew Carnegie, and Mrs. M. Kennedy Tod, Mrs. Anna Wearhoffer, and Mrs. Edith Carpenter Macy were elected patrons, and Mrs. Lucie L. Schroeder, who made a donation of $2,500, was elected a life member.

The resignation of Anson Phelps Stokes as a member of the Board of Directors was received and accepted and Miss Rosalie Loew was elected to the vacancy.

It was decided to appoint President Von Briesen and J. Augustus Johnson a committee to act with similar committees from the American Seamen's Friends' Society and other organizations of a like nature in the matter of purchasing a steam launch for the purpose of preventing, if possible, the robbing of seamen by a gang which now circulates among them. The launch is expected to cost $800.

President Von Briesen appointed Andrew Carnegie, Carl Schurz, Louis Windmüller, Charles Wiebusch, and W. G. Jones a committee to extend the work of the Seamen's Branch.

WOMAN CHECKED CRUEL DRIVER.

Mrs. Bannister Caused Expressman's Arrest for Beating His Horse.

William H. Moore, thirty-five years old, colored, a driver of an express wagon, living at 504 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, was locked up in the West One Hundredth Street Station last night charged by Mrs. Elizabeth M. Bannister of 21 Manhattan Avenue, with cruelty to animals.

Mrs. Bannister followed the prisoner to the station house, where she told Sergt. Gallagher that Moore was driving an emaciated horse attached to a wagon filled with trunks, and was beating the animal with a large whip. She promised to be in the West Side Court this morning.

Patrolman Buettner, and Detective McMahus saw a crowd surrounding the wagon at One Hundred and Sixth Street and Central Park West and found that the woman was remonstrating with Moore. The horse was taken to a near-by livery stable, where a veterinary surgeon administered stimulants. Moore was bailed out by his employer, James Moore, of 23 Lawrence Street.

PRISONERS BOLT WHILE ON A CAR

Are Subdued and Handcuffed After Several Women Faint.

George Johnson and William James, supposedly two Western thieves, were arrested yesterday afternoon in a Sixth Avenue department store for stealing an overcoat. The men were seen acting suspiciously by a special detective, who followed them and saw them steal the coat. He called a uniformed watchman to his assistance, and together the men laid hold of the thieves. The latter seemed to submit quietly enough until they were seated in a Sixth Avenue car on the way to the West Thirtieth Street Police Station.

A number of women were in the car at the time, and the two officers took seats, each with their prisoners between them. Suddenly the two prisoners jumped to their feet and made a dash for the door. In the scramble that followed a number of women were knocked down and several fainted. The detective and his assistant held on to their men and subdued them and handcuffed them to each other. Both will be held.

HAS "BLIND" BOY ARRESTED.

Woman, Convinced That He Was an Impostor, Called Policeman.

The sight of a very small and thinly clad boy standing at Fourteenth Street and Sixth Avenue yesterday afternoon wearing a card about his neck bearing the inscription, "Please Help a Poor Blind Boy," elicited the sympathy of many of the shoppers. One woman became convinced that the boy's blindness was feigned, and, calling a policeman, she had him arrested.

He was taken to the Jefferson Market Court. The boy is said to have admitted to the Gerry agent that he could see, and that his mother had sent him out. When he was brought before the Magistrate, however, he again feigned blindness. He was turned over to the society for a further investigation of his case.

ILL FROM HAVING TEETH PULLED.

Coroner Delap Suffers from Hemorrhages After Visiting Dentist.

Coroner George W. Delap of Brooklyn has been confined to his home, 63 Herbert Street, for two weeks suffering with hemorrhages as a result of having several teeth extracted. Dr. Delap was treated by a Fulton Street dentist, and after the molars had been removed he bled so freely that he had to be taken to his home. The hemorrhages weakened him to such an extent that he was compelled to take to his bed for several days.

It was with difficulty that the flow of blood was stopped. The Coroner is slowly recovering, and expects to be able to attend to his official duties in a few days.

Injured Woman Still Unidentified.

The woman who, on Wednesday night, was thrown from a south bound car of the Sixth Avenue surface line at Forty-eighth Street, and was taken to Roosevelt Hospital, is still unconscious. She received a fracture of the skull. She is still unidentified. In her purse was found a card bearing the inscription, "To Lena, Christmas." There was $2 in money in the purse.

SIX-MASTED SAILING VESSEL IN PORT

The Schooner George W. Wells Arrives from the South.

Is the First of Her Type to Receive American Register—Fast Time on Latest Trip.

For the first time since the days of the Great Eastern a craft of the six-masted type arrived in the harbor of New York yesterday morning. The vessel in question is the schooner George W. Wells, which was recently finished at the Bean Shipyards, in Camden, Me. She is the first six-masted sailing vessel to receive a registry in this or any other country.

When she was towed up North River to her berth, at Erie pier, Weehawken, yesterday she attracted much attention, her spick and span appearance making her the most attractive of the many picturesque craft that during recent years have arrived at this port. At first, when her launching was effected and the time of her commissioning drew near, it was reported on apparently good authority that her masts, instead of being named according to the nomenclature of the sea, were to be numbered and the old designations dropped. When this report reached the ears of her skipper, Capt. Jack Crowley, he lost no time in announcing that, like the Great Eastern, the masts of the Wells would be known as follows: Foremast, mainmast, mizzenmast, spankermast, jiggermast, and drivermast.

Her arrival yesterday was an event that will for many days form a topic of conversation on the part of longshoremen, fore-the-mast men of other sailing craft, and persons of marine bent generally. When her proposed construction was announced there were many conjectures as to her probable success. Old skippers who for years had been sailing the seas and knew, they thought, everything, from stem to stern, connected with craft of all kinds, declared that the failure of the new vessel was a foregone conclusion. She was too big for a sailing vessel, they said, besides, such a thing as the construction of a six-masted schooner had never, up to that time, been seriously thought of. But all the prophecies have proved untrue, and not only does the Wells carry the cargo of a steam propelled vessel of large dimensions, but she also transports it from port to port with a speed that would be a credit to many a steamship now trading on the Atlantic.

Take her maiden passage from Philadelphia to Havana as an instance. Laden with the largest cargo of coal ever taken into the Cuban capital, she sailed from the Pennsylvania city on the 14th of November, and, allowing a day for the clearing of the Breakwater, headed south, reaching her destination on the 21st, practically making the ocean voyage in the remarkable time of six days, a distance in excess of a thousand miles. Returning from Havana, the Wells touched at Brunswick and took aboard a cargo of 460,000 yellow pine railroad ties for the Erie Railroad. Thus laden, she once more set sail and headed for New York. When she arrived off the Hook yesterday she had consumed three days and twenty-three hours in making the run from port to port.

When it is remembered that a coastwise steamship consumes generally three days in making the passage, the splendid sailing qualities of the big schooner can be appreciated.

The vessel is unusually well fitted for a vessel of her type, every arrangement aboard ship being on an improved plan. The quarters of officers are models of neatness and comfort, while in the case of the crew extra provision for their comfort has also been made. The hoisting machinery of the Wells is operated by steam, while the other arrangements connected with the steering and other apparatus are also managed according to modernized methods. The managing owner of the vessel is John G. Crowley, who is also her captain. The cost of her construction is said to have been more than a quarter of a million dollars.

Her dimensions are 302 feet and 11 inches on the keel and 345 over all. Her beam is 48 feet and 6 inches, and she draws 23 feet. She has two full decks, with a poop 4 feet deep, and a set of beams in the lower hold forward, braced with hanging, and fore and aft knees. Her frame is white oak throughout, and all her planking and ceiling hard pine. The garboards are 8 inches thick and the other planking 6 inches.

PAIGE'S DEBTS ALL PAID.

Aqueduct Contractor Who Failed and Fled in 1893 Has, So It Is Said, Settled Claims.

AKRON, Ohio, Dec. 27.—Word was received here to-day that David R. Paige of New York has paid the last dollar of his indebtedness. The report was verified by City Commissioner A. T. Paige of this city, a brother of David R. Paige, who said:

"It is true that my brother has succeeded in freeing himself from debt. The remaining four notes of Paige, Carey & Co. were lifted Monday, and I assure you that it was a pleasant time for my brother. All except five of the notes were lifted a year ago, but the entire task was completed Monday. It was a gigantic undertaking to wipe out a debt of $720,000, but Mr. Paige accomplished it, and now he proposes to take a short rest.

"I received a letter from him the other day, and he expressed much joy in accomplishing what he has. He is now in the best of health and will spend three or four months in the South before he returns to New York, where he again intends to enter business."

David R. Paige was the senior member of Paige, Carey & Co., aqueduct contractors of this city. In 1893 the firm failed, with large liabilities. Notes for over $500,000 bearing the alleged indorsements of John Huntington, a capitalist of Cleveland, Ohio, brother-in-law of Paige, were found among the assets.

When Mr. Huntington, upon the discovery of these notes, declared the indorsements a forgery, Paige fled to Europe to avoid trouble. In 1894 word was received from Cleveland that Paige was in Brazil, and that an offer had been made through L. Laflin Kellogg, a New York attorney, to settle Paige's indebtedness for 20 per cent. in cash and 80 per cent. in claims against the City of New York on account of the aqueduct contract. At that time one bank located at Warren, Ohio, accepted the offer.

Paige, Carey & Co., it was charged, were mainly responsible for the failure of the North River Savings Bank in 1890. At the time of its suspension the bank held about $600,000 worth of the firm's paper.

BABY BURNED TO DEATH.

Clothing Caught Fire While Parents Were Out of the Room.

Elizabeth and Samuel, the children of John Thomas, janitor of the flat house at 584 Eagle Street, were playing with their Christmas presents in the kitchen of the janitor's flat yesterday afternoon. Their father and mother were both at work in different parts of the house. Elizabeth dangled her new dolly before the delighted eyes of her young baby brother, who crowed with pleasure and stretched out his arms for the toy.

Just then the doll's dress caught fire, and in an instant the clothes of the infant boy were ablaze. His older sister shrieked with terror, and her cry brought the father into the room. He snatched the cloth from the table, sweeping the dishes to the floor, and succeeded in wrapping it around the boy and extinguishing the flames. But it was too late. When the doctor came he found the child unconscious, and, although the ambulance made record time to the Fordham Hospital, the boy's life could not be saved.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

BUFFALO, Dec. 27.—Fire, smoke, and water caused a damage of $25,000 to $30,000 to the stock of Arthur O. Chartier, importer of ladies' cloaks, suits, &c., at 151 Tremont Street. Chartier occupied the basement and the first floor, and the fire was confined to his premises.

LOST CLOTHES HE SAVED.

Ladeley Threw Them Out of Window After Alarm of Fire—Shirt Had Diamond Stud in It.

Fire which started in the grocery store at 2,061 Eighth Avenue last night caused much confusion among the tenants of the five-story apartment house of which the grocery occupied the ground floor.

William Ladeley, who lives on the fourth floor, was so overcome with excitement that he took his clothing, piece by piece, and threw it out of the window, as he thought to safety. Among the various articles of apparel was a shirt with a $90 diamond stud in the bosom. Having saved his clothes from the fire, Ladeley started down stairs to save himself. When he reached the spot on the sidewalk where his clothes should have been, they were not to be seen. Everything, even to the shirt with the $90 diamond stud, had disappeared.

The cold and his light apparel soon forced Ladeley to desist from his search, and he went back to his rooms, the fire having been extinguished. Up to a late hour last night he was still waiting for somebody to bring his clothes back.

OFFICE FOR GEN. MACDOUGALL.

It Has Been Decided to Appoint Him United States Marshal.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—The appointment of Gen. Clinton D. MacDougall of Auburn, N. Y., has been decided upon as Marshal for the Northern District of New York, to succeed Theodore S. Poole, deceased.

Gen. MacDougall, who is a manufacturer of agricultural implements, was born in Scotland June 14, 1839, and was educated in Canada. He served in the civil war first as Captain in the Seventy-fifth New York Volunteers, then Colonel of the One Hundred and Eleventh New York Volunteers, and was brevetted Brigadier General of Volunteers in February, 1865, for gallantry. From 1869 to 1873 he was Postmaster at Auburn, served in Congress from 1873 to 1877, and as United States Marshal of the same district to which it has been decided to appoint him from 1877 to 1885.

In 1876 Gen. MacDougall declined the United States Treasurership and the positions of Commissioner of Internal Revenue and Commissioner of Patents.

A Notable New Year Sale of Men's SHIRTS and COLLARS

CHRISTMAS turns a man's attention everywhere but to himself and his own needs; but having remembered all his friends he should now remember himself, and give himself as good as he gave to others. To-day's store news tells how a supply of the best of Shirts can be bought for the price of the cheapest. This is supplemented by news of excellent Collars at an absurdly low price. It will be gratifying to men who have had such heavy demands made upon their pocket-books to find it so easy to buy Shirts and Collars of this character for such a small outlay. Read on:

$1 and $1.50 WHITE DRESS SHIRTS at Sixty Cents Each

The manufacturer retired from business—couldn't make money manufacturing shirts of the high standard he produced, and he quit, rather than sacrifice his ideals. His shirts are above reproach—splendidly made, of best materials, with every detail of comfort and good shirt-making. All are hand-laundered. We took his entire stock.

White Dress Shirts, long or short bosoms, in various styles and all sizes. 60c each.

From the same worthy maker came these

$1 and $1.25 PERCALE SHIRTS at Sixty Cents Each

In a large variety of patterns; stiff bosoms, separate cuffs—good-looking, handsomely hand-laundered shirts, in all regular sizes.

Men's LINEN COLLARS at 55c a half-dozen

High turn-down Collars in various heights, straight standing collars and wide-wings—the best of the present shapes, because these collars are not "a job," but made up to our order. The immense quantity purchased allowed the factory economy that made the price.

So far as we know there are no high LINEN turn-down collars to be bought outside of Wanamaker's for less than 25c

Our own two-for-a-quarter collar is the only one made that, to our knowledge, can regularly be bought for less than 25c—and only one manufacturer can produce it. That man makes this special lot. We guarantee the linen. The styles are correct, and the sizes accurate.

Put up in boxes of a half-dozen of a size, and sold only by the box. 55c a half-dozen.

Fancy Flannels

At about half or two-thirds their actual value. Fine, fancy eiderdown flannels are these. Certain manufacturers overestimated the demand, and over-produced. There's still a lively demand for goods such as these, but most retailers have enough, they think, to carry them through. So we bought 5,000 yards more at our price—which was low enough to enable us to say 25c for this 37½c grade, and 28c for this 50c quality.

Over fifty handsome patterns to choose from—good, desirable, handsome patterns. And don't think that any time will do to come for them. Be prompt. 5,000 yards can be passed out here in a remarkably little time. Fourth avenue.

Sale of SILKS

Sample ends of black silks—imported taffetas. Here are 2,100 yards to sell at a very little price. But all of it is in 4 to 10-yard lengths. The values are 55c to 85c a yard—mostly of the higher-priced qualities. This should be a very brief sale to-day, for there's a uniform price of forty-five cents a yard

Rotunda.

Bargains in FURS

Maybe you were wise to delay your purchases—you certainly were if any of these handsome pieces strike your fancy. They're all furs of a high order of excellence, and though they were originally low-priced, now the prices are made ever so much lower.

Take this dyed opossum collarette as an example. It is 9 in. deep, and has high storm collar. The price is $9—was $12.50.

Or these dyed blue fox scarfs at $25, instead of $35.

Or these natural lynx collarettes with long fronts and high storm collars, at $25, instead of $50.

Some Persian lamb collarettes with border and tabs of black lynx, are now $75; were $100. Second floor, Broadway.

Flannel Waists

Many handsome styles of the warm waists, but this brief word of a single kind that's worthy of particular mention. The front of this waist is attractively plaited, the back plain; dress sleeves, also without any attempt at elaboration; in blue, violet, red and black.

Very good value at $1.50 each. Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Black Petticoats

Some of sateen, durable and far from unattractive, are but $1 each. Various other grades up to $2.25, but that latter price buys a petticoat of mercerized sateen—closely resembling fine satin and made exactly like the very expensive skirts.

Black mohair petticoats, in various new styles, at $2 to $5.50. Some of these are made with silk flounces; others with neatly hemstitched ruffles.

Petticoats of black moreen—handsome styles, at $2.25 and up to $6.50. Some with taffeta silk flounce, accordion plaited and prettily pinked. Second floor, Fourth avenue

CORSETS

The straight-front styles. There's a most varied assortment of them shown here. All lengths, all colors, all excellent brands. Good values, too, in every instance.

Some excellent styles at $1—the Nemo and P. N., in medium and low bust, and long over hips. The J. B. is $1.75 and $2, in white and drab, and $2.50 for those in black. The I. C. Corsets in various grades from $3.50 to $6.50 for the white coutil, and $3.75 to $7 for those in black.

Then the Lillian—the best of all. These are fine imported corsets. Made of fine white coutil and real whalebone, in various lengths, and run from $10 to $14. In black at $11 and $12. Second floor, Tenth street.

Gas Stoves

Cylinder-shaped heaters, very popular for heating sitting-rooms and bed-chambers. Forty-five perfect little stoves are offered this morning at a third below regular.

Eight styles: $1.25 instead of $1.90, some at $1.50 instead of $2.25, $1.65 instead of $2.35, and up to $3 for the $4.50 grade. Basement.

Fine Water Colors

Not many, but very beautiful and high-class. And they're reduced in price. What they are and how much are told of here:

An Italian scene, in heavy gold frame, by S. Simoni, was $275 yesterday. Now $187.50

An Italian Girl, by P. Gabrini. An exquisite specimen of water color. Was $175. Now $112.50.

Mulholland is represented by two splendid landscapes—were $67.50. Now $45 each.

Two pictures of sheep in pasture, by W. R. Derrick, were $90 Now $65 each.

Two landscapes by Northcote, were $27.50 yesterday. To-day $20 each. Two others that were $20 are now $15 each. Picture Store, Fifth floor.

Women's JACKETS
Handsome Styles Reduced a Third

One lot comprises elegant velour jackets in newest styles. These are all beautifully trimmed, and satin lined. Some are edged with Persian lamb. Prices are now $20 to $45. Add a half to those figures for actual value. This is by far the best offering of the season.

Then there are two other groups of cloth jackets: In these are latest style garments of kersey, cheviot, melton and frieze, in tan, castor and black. The majority are lined with excellent, durable satin.

The values are $13.50 to $26.

Choice at $10 and $15

Second floor, Broadway.

HANDKERCHIEFS
A Clearance

We've gone through the handkerchief stock-room to see what was left after the storm of our tremendous holiday selling, and we've gathered up the fragmentary lots as well as some that were neglected in the hurry, and brought them out for the clean-up sale that this word announces.

They are clean and perfect goods—the boxes never opened now put on sale. No reason for the reduction except good storekeeping. These sorts and prices:

Men's Handkerchiefs—Pure linen and hemstitched—
At $1.50 a dozen, from $1.92
At $2.50 a dozen, from $4.80
At $3.50 a dozen, from $6
At $4.50 a dozen, from $9, $12

Women's Handkerchiefs—Pure linen and hemstitched—
At 75c a dozen, from $1.20
At $1 a dozen, from $1.50
At $1.50 a dozen, from $2.40
At $2 a dozen, from $3.
At $2.50 a dozen, from $4.20.

Main aisle, Broadway.

Children's Guimpes

They are of lawn, with square yoke of plaits in clusters, the neck and sleeves finished with hemstitched ruffles; 4 to 12-year sizes. Price 45c. Value, 65c. In the Under-price Store, Basement.

Dressing Sacques

Some of elderdown, mostly in solid red, a few in other colors, however; prettily made; at 50c, though regularly 75c.

Flannelette sacques, light grounds with fancy stripes, trimmed with solid color ruffle, at 50c each, though fairly priced at 85c. Both of these on counters in the Under-price Store.

Imported CORSETS

Greatly under-priced. They are the "P. D." brand, well known and well-liked. Of coutil, in white and drab; medium waist. The price of these is $1 each. They sell regularly at $1.75. In the Under-price Store, Basement.

UMBRELLAS

These are for women. In 26-in. size only. Made of union taffeta. A fine assortment of fancy handles—ivory, horn, Dresden and natural wood. Price $1.25. A good $2 value. In the Under-price Store, Basement.

Men's Overcoats

The rush for the Raglans still keeps up. We think our assortment of kinds in this popular cut is a little better than any other store's. We know it is much better than many of them. And it is known widely among men that this is a good overcoat store at all times.

Here's a Raglan at $15. You'll not find its equal anywhere at that price. Broad-shouldered, loose back; of rough-faced cheviots and friezes, in Oxford mixtures.

Another kind at $20 that other good tailors would call reasonable at $25, or even more. Various sorts at $22.50 and on up to $32.50. Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Boys' Clothing

Here are some very fine suits at an exceptionally little price. It's a closing out of certain vestee and sailor suits. About 150 of the former, in 3 and 4-year sizes; the sailor suits in 3 and 4 and 11 and 12-year sizes. There are values in the group up to $8. Choice at $3 each.

Also a lot of high-class reefers. Of fine meltoo, stylishly cut and trimmed. These only for 3 to 9-year-old boys. Values up to $10. Choice at $7 Each.

LUNCH CLOTHS
And Sets

These imported lunch cloths and doilies contribute materially toward the attractive appearance of the table by their effective, though simple design and coloring. They are of pure linen, in late patterns, at their moderate price will undoubtedly appeal to the housewife anxious to beautify her home or the seeker after a sure-to-be-appreciated New Year's gift.

At $7.50—Brocbe lunch-cloths, of heavy momie-cloth, 67 in. square, plain hemstitched on four sides; with striking floral designs in rich color combinations covering entire centre of cloth. Same, 67x90 in., with fancy drawn-work, at $10 each.

At $3.50 set—White fringed damask lunch or tea sets, consisting of cloth 2x2½ yds., in exclusive patterns, with one dozen doilies to match.

At $5 set—New damask lunch sets, with colored border and knotted fringes; consisting of cloth 2x2½ yds., with one dozen doilies to match; colors are two shades of blue, red, pink and gold. Same, cloth 2x3 yds., at $5.75 set.

Linen Store, Fourth avenue.

Bargains in Bed-Coverings

Blankets—three kinds. All perfect, all high-grade, all wonderfully low-priced. They were bargains when first placed on sale. Now that quantities are greatly reduced prices are likewise lowered, like this:

Flannel Waists, stylish and well made, in black, blue, red and old rose, with full front, cluster of braid down front, plaited back, and dress sleeves, are $1.75 each—though fully worth $2.50.

Lillian Corsets at Reduced Prices. In re-adjusting stock, even the Lillian must submit to price-cutting. Corsets of black or white sateen, with low bust and medium waist, or of black sateen, medium waist with short hips, regularly $2.75, are now $1.75. Regular $4 kinds, of coutil, real whalebone, bias cut, medium bust, long over hips and abdomen, in white or drab, now $2.50.

Candy always tastes best around the holiday season. Five-pound boxes of excellent mixed candies are sold at $1 a box.

Vienna and Paris Bronzes are shown in delightful array in the Stationery Store. There are statuettes, inkstands and other desk ornaments, from $5 to $45; portfolios with bronze trimmings, $9 to $12. There is also a good assortment of onyx paper weights, 75c and $1, penholders and paper cutters at 25c.

Women's Stockings. Though worth 38c a pair, they're priced at 25c. Of fast black cotton, with double soles and high spliced heels; also fast black lisle thread, plain or ribbed.

Roller Skates. Boys or girls who are fitted out with them are independent of the weather prophets. We have a full assortment of roller skates, beginning at 50c for the usual kind, and running up to $6.50 for "cycle" skates, clamp or half clamp, with full ball-bearings and rubber wheels.

Embroidered Collars. They were formerly worth 25c and 30c, but we bought a quantity of them, and have priced them at 10c each. These very popular collars can only be obtained here.

Men's Winter Overcoats. Protection against cold is better than subsequent doctor's bills for a cold. Prudence suggests a warm overcoat, like this one at $8.50. It is of all-wool Oxford-mixed frieze, plaid lined throughout; and at the price is a very cheap health-insurance.

Handsome Neck Scarfs of Alaska sable, trimmed with tails, are $5 each.

Warm Dresses for Children Reduced. They're for the little ones of from 2 to 4 years. At $3.50, of cashmere, in several colors, or wool plaid; made with waist. Formerly priced at $6. At $6, of red, navy blue or tan whipcord; plaited skirt, waist with 3 box plaits in back and front; white turn-over collar and cuffs. Formerly $10.

TESTIMONY IN BOOZ CASE

Two Outside Witnesses Before the Military Court.

Booz's Brother Puts in Evidence a Letter from the Cadet—Had Destroyed Most of Those He Received.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Dec. 27.—There was an unusually large attendance of spectators at both the morning and afternoon sessions of the military court of inquiry at the Military Academy to-day. The fact that two witnesses from distant points would be called upon to testify was the cause of the increased interest. These were Horace C. Booz, a civil engineer, of Buffalo, and P. O. Phillips of East Cleveland, who was heralded as a Congressman, but he told the press representatives that he was never elected to Congress.

The testimony given by the former was principally a refutation of the statement made about his brother, Oscar L. Booz of Bristol, Penn., who died recently, it is alleged, from the effects of severe hazing which he received while at the West Point Academy two years ago. Several of the cadet witnesses during the progress of the investigation accused Oscar of having shown cowardice in his fight with Cadet Keller in August, 1898, and they also accused him of untruthfulness.

Cadet Allen C. Kaye of Minnesota said that he had seen Cadet Breth the night before he left the academy. Breth seemed very much cast down at being found deficient, and the witness sympathized with him. Breth did not complain of illness nor did he say anything of his treatment by the other cadets while here.

Cadet John A. Pearson of Tennessee, in describing several forms of exercising, said: "Choo-chooing is the most exhausting. The man is required to get down and use his hands and legs as rapidly as possible in propelling himself over the ground."

The next witness was H. C. Booz, civil engineer at Buffalo, N. Y. When sworn he stated that he was a brother of the late Cadet Oscar L. Booz of Bristol, Penn. He had not seen his brother during the time that he was in the West Point Academy in 1898. He continued as follows:

"I received a letter from him shortly after he went to the academy. In it he said he felt strange at the place, as it was his first experience away from home. In the second letter, which I got about the beginning of August, he told me that he would be called out to fight in about a week. He complained of having had to take tabasco sauce, and suffered from a sore throat in consequence. He claimed that it was forced down his throat and he had to swallow it or choke."

"Have you got those letters?"

"I have not; I destroyed all the letters which I got from him while here.

"In other letters which I got from him he complained of being hazed, and said that he was being treated more severely than others. Later in the year, about October, I think, he wrote to me and suggested that my father allow him to send in his resignation. Oscar was not fresh, and was not the kind of boy that would be hazed."

"Did he ever mention any names of the men who hazed him?"

"No, he did not. I objected to Oscar's leaving the academy. I saw him after he left, but did not speak to him of his treatment."

Mr. Booz then said that he wished to vindicate his brother's character in view of published reports of what had been said by Lieut. Coe as to his dullness and deficiency in studies. He said that Oscar had completed his preliminary studies in such a manner as to prove that he was not dull. Statements had been made as to his brother's untruthfulness and cowardice. "He was neither," said the witness sternly. In reply to Superintendent Mills the witness said:

"I spoke to Oscar some time in 1899 about his treatment at the academy, and he told me that the tabasco sauce was forced down his throat."

"Did you ask him who were the parties who forced him to do this?"

"No, not at that time. Later in the year I wrote to him, but he could not write to me then. My sister asked him."

Later he said that Oscar did not tell his sister any names and he supposed the reason was the same as any college boy would have, a false sense of honor. Gen. Bates asked:

"When you say your brother was forced to swallow the tabasco sauce, do you mean that physical force was used?"

"Yes, Sir."

"When did you see your brother? Within six months after his leaving the academy?"

"I saw him in October and December. He then complained of a sore throat and dizziness."

"Was he being treated by physicians at the time?"

"I think he was being treated by a physician in Bristol, Penn.—either by Dr. J. D. B. Abbott or Dr. E. J. Grooms, I can't say which."

The witness then handed a portion of a letter to the Recorder. He had received the letter from his brother, in which Oscar said that he would soon go home, as he could not stand the treatment any longer. This was after the fight, and Oscar had said that his heart was troubling him. The letter itself was destroyed last September. Col. Mills asked:

"Why did not you or some member of your family notify the War Department or the Military Academy when it became apparent that your brother was dying from alleged cruelties?"

"I suppose we did not feel like doing so. We were all very much overcome at the thought of Oscar's approaching death."

"I thought your brother died a lingering death?"

"I don't know that we realized that the end was so near until a fortnight before he died."

Here Col. Mills asked several questions as to the part of letter, and why the rest of it was destroyed. The witness said it was an extra sheet, and had been overlooked by him when he was destroying other papers.

Following is a copy of the paper. It is written on one side of a half sheet of ordinary note paper:

"I expect I will be home some time in the near future, for I have stood the treatment about long enough.

"I have had trouble with my heart the last two or three days, the result of several severe blows I received in the fight. I also received a cut about an inch long under my left eye, and I think it will leave a scar. I was pretty badly bruised, but feel all right, with the exception of my heart. I am going to try and get permission from papa to resign, and if I have my way I will be home inside a week."

Cadet Henry A. Meyer, Jr., of Arkansas, testified that many cadets had used tobacco in violation of the regulations, but he did not know whether Cadet Breth did so. He himself used it in 1897, but he was punished for it and stopped. He said the present fourth class had not been exercised at all by upper class men.

The next witness was P. O. Phillips of East Cleveland, who said that on Aug. 11 he came here and remained about ten days, during which he lived at Highland Falls. He came for the purpose of visiting his son, who was then and is now a cadet at the academy here. He read a statement in the papers of the 20th inst. that Mr. Booz of Bristol, Penn., had said that he came here at that time for the purpose of protecting his boy from being hazed. Mr. Booz was at the Highland Falls Hotel, where both were staying. Mrs. Booz was also there. He continued:

"I never heard a word from young Booz, whom I met, as to his treatment at the academy, and if his parents were displeased with the treatment of their son at the military post they did not say anything in my hearing to such effect.

"Young Booz seemed to me to be a nice young man, but, if I may say so, I think there was not much good material in him out of which to make a good army officer."

"When you were here, did it appear to you that the authorities were making strong efforts to protect the new cadets?"

"Yes, Sir; for instance, a sentinel was in the company streets of the camp. They were put there for the purpose of protecting the new cadets, I understood."

"You believe, then, that the corrective treatment of fourth-class men by upper class men should be better regulated than abolished?"

"Yes, I do."

Cadet A. L. Lynch of New York, in telling of the fourth class men being told to make speeches, said that they could criticise any upper class man at the mess-hall table, and in the matter of language they were allowed to say things which at other times would not be tolerated. He did not think fighting was as bad as football. There were many men knocked out on the football field, and very few in fights.

Cadet Edmund K. Sterling of Michigan said that after the fight with Keller, Booz was very much left alone. One night the witness and Cadet Larkin, since dismissed for deficiency, were told that Cadet Breth was lying in a tent near-by. They went there and brought him to his own tent. He was in a very nervous condition, and every muscle in his body seemed to be twitching. He was rubbed with alcohol or witch hazel, and he went to sleep. The witness did not know whether Breth went to the hospital in consequence, but he did not go that night. He never heard of a straitjacket being used in the academy.

The witness considered that the "exercising" of fourth class men was beneficial to them.

Cadet Frank P. Lahm of Ohio testified that he was a classmate of Cadet Breth. The latter was hazed in camp one night, and the witness saw him with men rubbing his hands. Breth was trembling all over his body. He had never heard Breth complain, except that he said he had been ill before he came to the academy. The witness had been hazed himself, but he could not say that he was cruelly or brutally treated. He said "hazing" or "bracing" gave the cadets an erect carriage.

Cadet Raymond S. Pratt of Minnesota was the last cadet examined, but he added nothing new to the previous testimony. There being no more available witnesses, the court adjourned until 9:30 to-morrow morning.

$4,000 FOR HUSBAND'S LIFE.

Bondsmen of Sheriff of County Where Chicago Woman's Husband Was Lynched Will Pay the Money.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—Mrs. Lulu C. Jenkins, now of Chicago, will receive $4,000 for the lynching of her husband in Ripley County, Ind., three years ago. The money will be paid over by the eight bondsmen of ex-Sheriff Henry Bushing, and is the result of a private settlement of the indemnity suit instituted by the widow three months after the murder. This puts an end to a case that has aroused attention all over the United States.

William Jenkins was one of five men lynched in September, 1897, for alleged complicity in the stealing of a horse from Lisle Levi of Osgood, Ind. Levi also was a victim of the mob. The men killed were Robert Andrews, Heine Schuter, William Jenkins, Clifford Gordon, a seventeen-year-old boy, and Lisle Levi, an aged soldier.

There was a fight, in which shots were fired at a Deputy Sheriff. Jenkins, with the others, was arrested and taken to jail at Versailles, Ind. Mrs. Jenkins, suspecting that mob violence was brewing, walked from Osgood to Versailles that night and paced the streets till dawn, armed with a revolver. For several hours she waited under the window of her husband's cell, ready to challenge any who came to do him harm.

Her fears being finally allayed, Mrs. Jenkins started home. No sooner was she out of sight than a mob gathered, dragged out the five men, and killed them in succession by crushing their skulls with a musket stock.

Mrs. Jenkins was compelled to flee to save her own life, coming to Chicago. Here she brought suit for $5,000 damages against Sheriff Bushing's bondsmen. The suit dragged along for three years and finally the bondsmen decided to settle out of court.

Mrs. Jenkins, when compelled several months since to go to Ripley County to attend the trial of the case, was protected by a body guard of Government detectives. She will go to Versailles next week to get the $4,000.

NO LEGAL ADVISER TO MR. ODELL.

Likely to Call on Attorney General When He Needs Advice.

ALBANY, Dec. 27.—On the best of authority it is said here to-day that Governor-elect Odell will not avail himself of the services of a legal adviser at the salary of $5,000 a year, with probable expenses of $5,000 more for clerk and stenographic hire.

The Statutory Revision Commission, which expires Dec. 31, has completed arrangements to leave office, and Commissioner Lincoln, who it was believed would be the new legal adviser to the Governor-elect, has received no intimation that his services are required in that capacity.

It is asserted that Mr. Odell will call upon the Attorney General's office for all opinions and ask the same office for an assignment of counsel to examine legislative measures. This plan will save the State at least $9,000 per year.

RABIES RAGING IN ROCHESTER.

Health Officer Says the Situation Is Becoming Alarming.

ROCHESTER, Dec. 27.—Health Officer Goler has made the statement that an epidemic of rabies is now raging in Rochester. "I do not think the situation," says Mr. Goler, "can be described otherwise than as alarming. Its violence, I am persuaded, will equal that which marked the epidemic in Buffalo last year. It behooves every one to exert the utmost precaution toward guarding against infection and the further spread of the disease."

Dr. Goler says experiments have recently been made on carcasses of dogs sent to Cornell, the University of Pennsylvania, and other places, and their results have substantiated his suspicions that rabies is raging here. Dr. Goler adds that the reports of mad dogs in Rochester for the past two months have averaged one a day, and that there are so many on the hands of the health authorities at the present time that it is impossible to make autopsies on all of the dogs.

This afternoon Dr. Goler reports three new cases of persons who were bitten by dogs. Each case will be thoroughly investigated. He refuses to give the names of the new cases, saying it might deter others from giving important information. In each case the wounded person was sent at once to a physician, who cauterized the torn flesh.

Edward Herrion, aged thirty years, was removed to the Homeopathic Hospital early this morning. He frothed at the mouth and writhed much like a victim of hydrophobia. However, the hospital physicians think he may be suffering from epilepsy.

SAILORS' CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL.

Picturesque Entertainment Given in an East Side Mission.

No more picturesque scene has been viewed by the cosmopolitan East Side in many a long day than was the annual Christmas Festival of the jolly Jack Tars held last night in the old Mariners' Church at Catharine and Madison Streets.

Able seamen from every quarter of the globe gathered in the little square mission and participated in what was a veritable international carnival of song, to which "Grand op'ry," swore an ancient mariner with a long white beard, was but a mighty squall compared to a balmy breeze.

Darkening the auditorium to permit views of the sailormen's native lands to be thrown on a screen, songs in native tongues carried Jack back to distant homes and brought moisture to many a roughened cheek. A Spanish sailor sang a love song in which half a dozen of his mates, away off in the dark joined musically. Just to show there was no ill-feeling, the bluejackets from Brooklyn vociferously demanded many repetitions. One of the most striking features of the entertainment, however, was the presence of a group of dusky, dark-haired Hawaiians, who sang their favorite "Lei Lokei" beneath the bright folds of their flag—the Stars and Stripes.

By far the most picturesque feature of the evening was Minnie Matteson, a fair-haired young Norwegian girl, dressed in the quaint costume of her country, whose singing of an old Norse carol thrilled every person present. Refreshments ended the evening's festivities.

Killed in a Runaway Accident.

FLINT, Mich., Dec. 27.—In a runaway accident at noon to-day Dr. George W. Howland was killed and G. H. Quigley, a prominent business man, fatally injured. The men were driving home to dinner when the horse took fright and ran away, overturning the buggy. The occupants were thrown out, Dr. Howland falling on a large rock. Quigley struck on his head on a stone walk, fracturing his skull. Dr. Howland, whose side was terribly crushed, died in less than half an hour.

Marshall Field's Partner to Retire.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—Harlew N. Higinbotham, who has been for many years associated with Marshall Field of this city as a special partner, will retire from business Jan. 1. Mr. Higinbotham will shortly afterward join his family abroad, where he will remain for some time. The announcement was made by Mr. Field at a dinner given in Mr. Higinbotham's honor last night. Mr. Higinbotham was President of the World's Columbian Exposition in 1893.

Temperance Crusade in Honolulu.

HONOLULU, Dec. 19.—Honolulu is about to have a temperance crusade led by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the Ministers' Union. Two representatives of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Miss Jessie McKerman and Miss Ada Nurcutt, are expected here on the steamer Coptic Dec. 29. It is part of the plan of the crusade to diffuse sentiment in favor of the bill of Congressman Littlefield of Maine introduced in the House, to absolutely prohibit the sale of intoxicants to the aborigines of the Pacific Islands over which the United States exercises control.

TIRED OF HER BOY HUSBAND

Mrs. Hutchinson, Over 70, Sues Spouse of 24.

She Is Said to be Wealthy and Has Been Three Times Divorced—Defendant an Actor.

Mrs Louisa C. Hutchinson, who admits that she is "over seventy years old," and has been divorced from three husbands, has once more come into prominence in the courts. This time she wants a trust which she created in favor of husband No. 4 set aside. The setting aside of this trust is only the preliminary to another action to be legally separated from the man to whom she was last married. This man is Willard H. Hutchinson, an actor, twenty-four years old.

In her complaint in the action which was started in the Supreme Court yesterday, Mrs. Hutchinson says that she had the greatest affection for Hutchinson prior to their marriage on Feb. 14 last, and that "the principal ground or reason for such affection and confidence was plaintiff's earnest belief in the statement made by the said Hutchinson that her deceased son Willie, who died many years ago, was in communication with said Hutchinson, and was advising and guiding said Hutchinson in the matter of his marriage with the plaintiff, and of his subsequent life and dealings with her.

"That before and at the time said statements were made to the plaintiff the plaintiff believed that communication between the dead and living was possible, as said Hutchinson then well knew."

Mrs. Hutchinson says that she met Hutchinson about two years ago. She was about seventy-six years old and Hutchinson was twenty-two. For one year prior to their marriage she paid all of the young actor's expenses when he traveled about with her. They were married at Richmond, Va.

The couple came to New York City and were at the Hoffman House in April last. On the 10th of the month, Mrs. Hutchinson alleges that her husband came to her room and told her that her relatives were arranging to place her in an asylum, as they believed that she was insane, and that something would have to be done at once. He suggested that she transfer all her property to him. Mr. Hutchinson later in the day brought Lawyer Paul Sheldon to the hotel and before him she executed certain papers transferring all her property to Hutchinson. On June 19 she tried to have the papers revoked. She says that on July 18 she succeeded in getting Hutchinson to agree to a deed of trust by which Lawyer Sheldon was to become Trustee of all her property and divide the income equally between herself and husband. This deed provided that in the event of the death of one, the other should take all of the property absolutely.

Throughout her complaint she speaks of "the fraud that had been practiced on her by the defendants, Sheldon and Hutchinson," and asks the court to set aside the deed of trust as she was "weak and ill and not herself" when it was executed.

Hutchinson is now with a theatrical company in New Orleans, playing in "When We Were Twenty-one," and the court authorized service on him by publication.

Mr. Sheldon has retained ex-Justice Roger A. Pryor as his counsel in the case. Ex-Justice Pryor, in speaking of the case yesterday, said that Mr. Sheldon had no financial interest in the matter and only appeared as a trustee.

Mr. Sheldon, when seen later, corroborated this, and said that the reference to insanity and Spiritualism was news to him.

Stickney, Spencer & Ordway represent Mrs. Hutchinson. They declined to say anything about the value of the property except that it was worth considerable. They said Mrs. Hutchinson was in the city, but declined to give her address.

Mrs. Hutchinson's maiden name was Louisa Chamberlain. When she was sixteen years old she married Dr. Frederick Augustus Caldwell of Boston, Mass. She obtained a divorce from him a few years later and then married Col. William Tompkins, with whom she lived only a few years. She then obtained another divorce. It was not until 1894 that she again married. This time the wedding was celebrated at the old Hotel Brunswick, in this city, Supreme Court Justice McAdam performing the ceremony. The bridegroom was Cornelius B. Marco.

The bridegroom had just reached his twenty-first birthday at the time of the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Marco lived together until June, 1899, when they separated. Mrs. Marco bringing her third action for divorce, which was in due time granted.

Meanwhile she had met Hutchinson, who is a son of Capt. Allen Hutchinson of Montpelier, Vt. The secret wedding at Richmond, Va., followed.

Mrs. Hutchinson's only near relative is a niece, the Countess George Cadieux de Conville. Mr. Hutchinson shortly after his marriage announced that his wife was worth $5,000,000.

SMASHES MIRRORS IN SALOONS.

Mrs. Nation, Temperance Advocate, Raids Wichita Barroom.

WICHITA, Kan., Dec. 27.—Mrs. Carrie Nation, President of Barber County W. C. T. U., entered the Carey Hotel barroom to-day and with a stone smashed a $300 painting and a mirror valued at $100.

Mrs. Nation broke mirrors in two saloons at Kiowa, Kan., some months ago and declared there is no law under which she can be prosecuted. She was lodged in the county jail this afternoon, charged with malicious destruction of property.

After being incarcerated Mrs. Nation sent two demands to the sick bed of Gov. Stanley, asking him, as Governor of the State, to come to the county jail and take charge of her defense. After the Governor's refusal she telegraphed for ex-Congressman Jerry Simpson, her neighbor at Medicine Lodge.

Mrs. Nation is about sixty years of age. Her husband is a lawyer at Medicine Lodge, an intimate friend of Jerry Simpson, and a politician. Mrs. Nation practices osteopathy and was on her way to Missouri to visit an osteopathic school. Before she left home, however, she stated that she intended to raid every saloon in Kansas and rid the State of the joints, claiming that the anti-saloon laws were not enforced by the authorities, and that she had a perfect right to take their enforcement into her own hands.

PLAN FOR MOTOR STAGE LINES.

W. P. Miller's Scheme for Village Travel on Long Island.

FREEPORT, L. I., Dec. 27.—William P. Miller of this village, who is President of the W. P. Miller Manufacturing Company of Greenport, proposes to organize a company to operate automobile stages between the neighboring villages in this part of Long Island. The company will be known as the Long Island Traction Company. Applications for franchises now are being considered by the Boards of Trustees of various villages.

Mr. Miller says the route of the proposed line will probably extend as far as Jamaica. Freeport will be the eastern terminal. The stages will resemble short trolley cars, and each will carry twenty-five persons. The wheels will be fitted with pneumatic tires, and the steam boiler and gasolene will be placed on the front platform, near the operator.

All the vehicles are to be operated by steam and heated by electricity. Mr. Miller expects to have the stages running by next Spring.

MAN FALLS INTO VAT OF ACID.

Both Eyes Destroyed and His Body Burned from Head to Foot.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Dec. 27.—While mixing sulphuric acid in the Grasselli Chemical Works, on the Staten Island Sound, last night, Philip Burger, twenty-two years old, fell into the vat of the acid. His cries for help were heard by other employes, who dragged him out.

Both of his eyes were burned out and he was horribly burned about the body from head to foot. An ambulance was summoned, and he was hurried to the Alexian Hospital. The physicians at the hospital say the man cannot live.

Burger was married only a year ago. He resided with his wife on Maple Avenue.

Woman Who Planned a Murder Insane.

CONCORD, N. H., Dec. 27.—Mrs. Carrie Sinclair Huntoon, the former society belle, who was arrested last night on a charge of conspiracy to kill her divorced husband, Walter C. Huntoon, was to-day pronounced insane. When arraigned in the District Court here this morning she was held in $3,000 bonds. She will be taken to an asylum for the insane.

SCHOOL SYSTEM ERRORS

Mr. Coler's Views, as Given to New Jersey Teachers' Association.

Tendency to Force Fads and Fancy Training on Children—Dr. Schurman on Chinese Examinations.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 27.—The New Jersey State Teachers' Association met in the auditorium of the High School this afternoon. President Edward Shepperd called the meeting to order. Among the speakers were Gov. Voorhees, President Schurman of Cornell University, Controller Coler of New York, and Bishop Potter of New York.

Controller Coler in his address observed that the proper education and training of the rising generation is the first and most important duty of civilized government.

"Municipalities, States, and nations throughout the civilized world have in recent years made great strides in general recognition of the importance of public education," he said. "In our own country we have advanced so rapidly in our acceptance and support of the principle that we have rushed headlong into grave errors in working out the details.

"It is no exaggeration to say that in the City of New York, and possibly in other large cities in this country, there has been in recent years a well-defined movement in the direction of providing free schools that will enable parents to force, or attempt to force, an education of fads and fancy training upon their children, without regard to the mental qualifications of the pupils thus foisted upon the taxpayers as burdens of false pretense, and held in place by maudlin public opinion, based upon misinformation.

"High schools have been increased in number and scope at the expense of the primary and grammar schools, until the system of public education is becoming top-heavy. A well-dressed graduating class reading Latin compositions and essays on abstract problems in a high school is much more showy than a score of plainly clad boys and girls marching soberly out of a grammar school at the age of fifteen to take up the burdens of every-day life, but a vast majority of the men and women of the next generation are of the plain-clothes classes from the grammar schools.

"The high schools and free schools of the City of New York are to-day crowded with pupils, who are kept at study by their parents, not because they have developed ability to acquire higher education, but to keep them from work and business until they are older. It is a system of forced education at public expense in the department of free instruction where the per capita cost is highest. The parents of very many, if not the majority, of these pupils are well able to pay for their higher education, and the present system, wherever it prevails, is a grave and costly abuse of a valuable privilege.

"In the City of New York the direct cost of public instruction in the free schools of all grades has in ten years increased from $2.40 to more than $5 per annum per capita of population, or, to put it in another form, the public school course cost in 1890 was $25.03 for each pupil, while the cost to-day is $43.40 per annum for each pupil. In some of the sub-divisions of the present city the cost per pupil has increased more than three-fold in ten years. I do not believe the most optimistic advocate of present methods would contend that the general efficiency of the common schools has been doubled in any part of the City of New York in that time.

"There is no argument on the proposition that the schools must be kept out of politics, and it is just as essential to their success that they be kept out of business. In the purchase of text books the schools should control the whole field of publication. No publishing enterprise or business venture of any description should be permitted to stand one moment in the way of public education obtaining the best of all kinds of supplies at the lowest market rate."

Dr. Schurman's address was on "American Versus Chinese Education." Referring to the third clause in the powers' joint note to China, stipulating that the examinations in those provinces in which outrages had been committed upon foreigners should be suspended, he pointed out how important these examinations are and what a hold the system has upon the people.

The examinations for civil service, he said, were necessary in the case of every office in China. No one could hold civil office until he had passed them, and it was this that made China a literary country and its aristocracy a literary aristocracy. The examinations are all on literary subjects. It is as if our own civil service examinations were conducted on such subjects as the Bible and Shakespeare. With all the Chinese officials, men who have passed these examinations, with the many who have passed and cannot be appointed to offices, and with the thousands who have studied for them and are able to pass, it will be seen what effect they have upon the nation, he said.

Bishop Potter of New York gave an amusing comparison of the teachers of the old style school and those of to-day. He told many funny incidents of the school life of the days when he was a boy. He urged the teachers to always keep in touch with the sympathies of the scholars, and predicted the success of any teacher who was successful in this.

MR. ROOT DECIDES CUBAN CASE

Holds Against Claimants to the Havana Shrievalty in the "Slaughter House Case."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—The Secretary of War has sustained the action of the military authorities in Cuba in what is familiarly known as the "slaughter-house case," without prejudice, however, to the full legal rights of the claimants, which are left to the future determination of the courts of Cuba. This case involves many important legal questions and bids fair to be a subject of litigation for years to come.

The claim had its inception in a grant by the Spanish Crown in 1783 to Don Castro Puerta of the privilege of holding in his family, in perpetuity, the office of Sheriff of Havana. The male line of the family having become extinct, the office, by permission of the Spanish Crown, passed to Count O'Reilly, then husband of the daughter of the recently deceased High Sheriff. The last incumbent is the present Countess O'Reilly and Buena Vista, who is joined in the issue by Dr. Don Gustavo Gallet Dupiessis of Havana, who purchased an interest in the emoluments of the office at a public auction in Havana in 1895.

The principal emolument was a right to receive about $1 in gold for each head of large cattle killed in Havana slaughter-houses. The Military Governor of Havana vacated this order in May, 1899, and this was affirmed on appeal by Gen. Brooke in August. The case came up on appeal to the Secretary of War, and after several months' consideration has just been decided against the claimants so far as the United States is concerned.

SAYS ARMY BILL WILL PASS.

Mr. Hull Declares Differences Will Be Quickly Adjusted.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—Representative Hull, (Rep., Iowa,) Chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs, apparently does not share the fear expressed in some quarters that the Army Reorganization bill will fail at this session of Congress, and that a makeshift, temporarily continuing the present provisional army, will have to be resorted to. He was at the White House to-day in conference with the President and Senator Allison (Rep., Iowa,) regarding some Iowa appointments, and stated his perfect confidence in the speedy enactment of the Army bill.

"I have canvassed the situation in the Senate," said he, "and I believe that the differences between the two houses upon the measure will be adjusted within a week after the bill goes to conference."

New "Division of Insular Affairs."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—In accordance with an order issued by the War Department to-day, the Division of Customs and Insular Affairs of the office of the Secretary of War, created in December, 1898, hereafter will be known as the "Division of Insular Affairs," and will have charge of matters pertaining to the civil affairs connected with the government of Cuba and the Philippine Islands as distinguished from matters of a purely military character.

PHILIPPINE TARIFF READY.

Conflict of Government and Church Over Property Ownership.

MANILA, Dec. 27.—The Philippine Commission has completed the Tariff bill and mailed it to Washington for approval. Its report is being prepared, and will be made public Monday.

The first question dealt with by the commission affecting an issue between the Church and the United States Government, is whether the control of the San José Medical College is vested in the Government or the Church. The college was established, by bequest, in the seventeenth century, and the Jesuit Order was given its control. When the authority of the Jesuits in the Philippines ceased the Spanish Government assumed direction of the college, and, later, permitted the Dominican Order to conduct San José College as part of the University of Santo Tomas.

Following the American occupation, a representative of the people insisted that the college, under the Treaty of Paris, came into the control of the United States, and ought not to be controlled by the Church. The Church authorities claimed the Church had full legal possession. Gen. Otis finally closed the institution. The first hearing took place shortly after the commission arrived. Archbishops Chapelle and Nozaleda made the presentations of the Church's position.

If the commission decides that the control is vested in the Government, ligitation is considered probable.

TO PROMOTE SOLDIERS' WELFARE.

United States Soldiers' Christian Aid Association Incorporated.

ALBANY, Dec. 27.—The United States Soldiers' Christian Aid Association, with principal offices in New York City, was incorporated to-day. It proposes to work to advance the social, moral, and religious condition of the enlisted men of the United States Army and unite the efforts of benevolent and philanthropic persons throughout the country on their behalf; to aid in the establishment of post chapels at all of the United States military posts and stations; to aid in the free distribution of proper reading matter and to co-operate with each and every effort to promote the virtue and good morals of the army.

Among the Directors are Gen. Charles O. Miller, Major John P. Ketcham, Prof. Daniel S. Martin, Capt. Howard Patterson, J. N. Bookstaver, and the Rev. Joseph H. Young.

Lieut. Walter T. Slack Dead.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—A cablegram from Gen. MacArthur at Manila, received at the War Department to-day, announces the death of First Lieut. Walter T. Slack, Forty-seventh Volunteer Infantry, from dysentery on Christmas night. Lieut. Slack was a native of Kentucky, and was born July 10, 1875. He was appointed a Second Lieutenant of the Second Kentucky Volunteer Infantry at the outbreak of the war with Spain, and was honorably mustered out in October of 1898. In August, 1899, he was commissioned a Second Lieutenant in the Forty-seventh Volunteer Infantry, and in November of that year he embarked with his regiment for the Philippines. He was promoted to be a First Lieutenant Aug. 26 last.

Buys Ship to Bring Home Soldiers.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—The Secretary of War to-day purchased the large freight steamer Samoa, at Hongkong, for use in the transportation to San Francisco of the Volunteer Army in the Philippines. The Samoa will have to be altered for the purpose, and the work will be done at Hongkong. The officials refuse to state the price paid for the vessel or the names of her former owners.

ALEXIS E. FRYE'S WEDDING.

Superintendent of Cuban Schools Prefers a Civil Ceremony.

HAVANA, Dec. 27.—The marriage of Alexis E. Frye, Superintendent of Cuban Schools, and Señorita Maria Teresa Arruebarrena will be a civil ceremony, taking place on the evening of Jan. 1 at the palace formerly occupied by Gen. Lee at Quemados. Mr. Frye declined a Cathedral wedding because of the promises demanded by the Church.

Mgr. Sbarretti, Bishop of Havana, urges a Church wedding, contending that the example set by a civil marriage will have a bad effect on Cuban teachers generally, and he offers a dispensation from Rome to remove the limitations to which objection is made. Señorita Arruebarrena, however, is not disposed to acquiesce in such an arrangement.

PROSPERITY IN CUBA.

Governor of Porto Principe Says Cubans Are Becoming Satisfied.

HAVANA, Dec. 27.—José Miguel Gomez, Civil Governor of the Province of Puerto Principe, who is in Havana on business connected with the development of the industries of that section of the island, reports that peace and prosperity prevail under the American administration. He says the cane crop is heavy and that wages are high, owing to the shortage of men.

In his judgment, the people of Cuba are gradually becoming satisfied and wish no radical action by the Constitutional Convention. The rural guards, he asserts, are doing good service, and there is no brigandage to speak of. He flatly contradicts the sensational reports on the subject of outlawry that have appeared in some of the Cuban papers during the last few weeks.

Dady Contract Pronounced Illegal.

HAVANA, Dec. 27.—Señor Nunez, Civil Governor of Havana, has pronounced against the legality of the Dady sewering and paving contract.

Porto Ricans Leave for Hawaii.

SAN JUAN DE PORTO RICO, Dec. 27.—The New York and Porto Rico Steamship Company's steamer Arkadia, Capt. Sargent, sailed from Ponce yesterday for New Orleans, having on board 400 Porto Ricans, 65 per cent. of whom were women and children, destined for Hawaii.

No Warship Contracts Yet Awarded.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 27.—Secretary Long of the Navy Department, who is in the city to attend the Commercial Club banquet to-morrow, in an interview, to-day, explained that, as yet, no award of battleship contracts had been awarded. He said that the statement that two contracts had gone to the Fore River Engine Company was not quite correct. He had no doubt that the Fore River Company would get the contracts, but it is stipulated that the company is to be incorporated first. This will be done soon.

Lieut. C. A. E. King Dies at Sea.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—Word has been received at the Navy Department that Lieut. Charles A. E. King died on board the hospital ship Solace on the 25th inst., while on his way to join the fleet under Admiral Remey at Manila. Lieut. King was a native of Maryland, and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1880. He leaves a widow, the daughter of the late James Broumel of Maryland, a resident of Baltimore. The body of the officer will be brought to the United States for interment.

THE UNITED SERVICE.

Army.

The resignation of Major Henry P. McCain, Assistant Adjutant General, of his commission as Captain of Infantry (Fourteenth Regiment) only, has been accepted, to take effect Dec. 11.

First Lieut. Meriwether L. Walker, Corps of Engineers, is relieved from duty under the immediate orders of Major John Millis, Corps of Engineers, and will proceed to Mobile and report to Major William T. Rossell, Corps of Engineers, for duty under his immediate orders.

The resignation by Major John L. Chamberlain, Inspector General, of his commission as Captain of Artillery (First Regiment) only, has been accepted, to take effect Dec. 11.

Second Lieut. William H. Waldron, Ninth Infantry, will proceed to Columbus Barracks, Ohio, and report to the commanding officer for recruiting duty.

Navy.

WHAT WILL CHINA DO?

The word is now with China. The Sun has an interesting and not at all incredible dispatch from Peking, setting forth that the Chinese plenipotentiaries are warmly in favor of the acceptance of the terms of peace. Harsh as these are, and were purposely made, and objectionable as denying the sovereignty of China, and her right to govern herself, the outside world has scarcely appreciated the humiliating position the Chinese Government must now occupy in China itself. It is questionable whether the acceptance of any terms that would permit it to return to Peking would not be less humiliating than its continued banishment.

The dispatch in question sets forth that the imperial palaces and halls and ancestral tombs of the Chinese Dynasty are now in the hands of foreigners. That means much more than would mean the enforced absence from its capital of any European or American Government. And yet that would mean a good deal. To dictate a peace in the enemy's capital is, according to an almost proverbial expression, the greatest indignity you can inflict upon him. The persons who compose the present Chinese Government are entitled to no sympathy whatever. In some cases through wickedness, in others through weakness, they have richly earned all they will receive in the way of humiliation. It is not on their account, but on our own, that we should refrain from pushing them to the last extremity, and, thereby disabling them, from guaranteeing to foreign traders and travelers and missionaries the preservation of order. And this is the consideration by which our Government has been actuated.

The objections reported by The Associated Press of the Chinese Government to the allied terms do not proceed from this point of view. They seem, however, to be directed to the single object of "saving face." The Chinese Court objects strenuously, it seems, to the proposal to dismantle the forts from Peking to the sea, which is comprehensible enough. But it also objects to the proposal to maintain legation guards. And this objection is not tenable. It is true that, under pretense of maintaining legation guards, the Powers could assemble in Peking an overwhelming force, which might be diverted to other purposes. This danger could be obviated by some stipulation about the numerical force of the guards, which should insure that they would not constitute an invading army. But, on the other hand, it has been clearly proved that the Chinese Government is unable or unwilling to afford protection to the foreign representatives in Peking. It has devolved upon them the necessity of protecting themselves. If the European troops in China will kindly refrain, for the next few days, from massacring and robbing helpless and noncombatant Chinamen, and from describing as "battles" what are in evident fact only "battues," there seems reason to hope that a modus vivendi may be arranged upon the basis of the terms of the Powers, injudicious and even unjust as some of those terms are.

NEW YORK CITY TAXATION.

The Chamber of Commerce, in apparent despair of securing a real reform in taxation from the Legislature, has again taken up its movement to induce the Legislature to adopt the principle of local option in the levying of taxes. We do not know how far that can be carried with the consent of the out-of-town members of the Legislature, but we have no doubt whatever that it is a just and expedient policy.

There are two sources of unfairness and mischief in the present system. One is that the cities are made, under the authority of the State officials, influenced by their constituents in the rural districts, to pay much more than their due share of the taxation for the State. This, however, is not a matter of supreme importance, and the movement of the Chamber of Commerce is not directed primarily to its reform. The other difficulty is far more serious. It is the almost complete escape of personal property from taxation, and the consequent uneven distribution of the burden, while so far as personal property is taxed the attempt simply results in the double taxation of mortgaged property. Efforts have been made for many years to induce the Legislature to change this system and adopt a tax on rental values, which would distribute the burden with substantial fairness. It is now some thirty years since the advantages of this method were fully demonstrated, after careful investigation, by the Welles Commission. During that long period the discussion has been often renewed, and intelligent public opinion has become stronger and stronger in its favor. But it has been impracticable to persuade the average rural member that a tax on real estate or its rental value would not fall on the lands of the farmers and let the money of the dwellers in cities escape. To that he cannot consent.

What the bill proposed by the Chamber of Commerce seeks to do is to secure for the city, and for each tax district in which the State is to be divided, the right to select such objects of taxation as may commend themselves to the representatives of the district. This would undoubtedly result in this city in the adoption substantially of the tax on real estate. It would also give to this city and to other districts the right to correct any inequality such as now exists in the taxation of banks. In general, it would allow each district to shape its taxes according to its own needs and interests, and so as to promote its own prosperity, without inflicting any damage on other communities.

The most plausible objection to this plan is that the local legislative body might corruptly or ignorantly grant favors to powerful interests. The answer is, that this is, to some extent, already done under the present system, and that the loose responsibility created by that system prevents any adequate remedy. Under the system of local regulation, it would be far easier to detect and to defeat such favoritism, for those indulging in it and those benefiting by it would be within knowledge and within reach. Protection against this sort of thing at Albany has been found entirely worthless. Give us a chance at the authors of our own evils, and the prospect of dealing with them thoroughly will be much brighter. Then, if we fail, at least it will be our own fault, and the penalty will fall where it is deserved.

IN THE LINE OF BUSINESS.

The editor and proprietor of The Commoner, Lincoln, Neb., announced on Wednesday evening to a company of his fellow-townsmen that the periodical of which he is the head would have a monopoly for the next four years of contributions from the possible and even probable candidate of the Populist-Democratic Party for the Presidency. This is not the form in which the announcement was made, but it is the substance.

What Mr. BRYAN said exactly was as follows:

> At this banquet, surrounded by neighbors who have been my friends for ten years, I may be pardoned for saying a word of a personal nature. Five times you have voted for me for public office—twice for Congress, once for the United States Senate, and twice for the Presidency—and no candidate ever received more loyal support than you have given me.
>
> Whether I shall ever be a candidate for office again is a question which must be determined by events. No one can speak with certainty of the future, for one's destiny is not known until his life's work is complete.

As a postscript to the prospectus of The Commoner, this is obviously discreet and shrewd. The fact that the editor had been twice defeated for the Presidency would not be sufficient of itself to sustain the lively public interest in his expressed opinions that is desirable from the point of view of the publication office. Indeed, if the paper were forced to rely on this alone for its prestige, it might be found rather depressing instead of stimulating. The general reader might reason that in the course of two Presidential campaigns of incessant speaking the editor's ideas had lost the charm of novelty; had, in fact, become stale. And the popular vote after these campaigns might be taken to indicate that his ideas were no more attractive than they were fresh.

It will be entirely different with an editor who can, with so much plausible ground, announce the possible renewal of his candidacy. People, especially politicians, will be under a sort of moral duress to keep track of his utterances. He will become, in a sense, an oracle from whose outgivings the future may at least be guessed at. His paper will not suffer the sad fate of being a "back number" from the first issue. Then, again, the lecture engagements, which it is announced that he will have time for, will probably be much more profitable than they otherwise would have been. Clearly, Mr. BRYAN has not, in his defeats, lost that appreciation of his own personal interest which has been so marked in his conduct in the past.

BRITISH ARMY REFORM.

It seems to be assumed on all hands in Great Britain that the "blank check" with which the electors have presented the Conservative Government does not exclude the possibility or the necessity of army reform. On the one hand there is no doubt about the justice of the British boast that no other nation could have managed the transport of so many men, animals, and military stores as were sent from the British Islands and their colonies with so much dispatch. But to say that is to pay a tribute, not to the British Army organization, but to the British mercantile marine. What was done with the troops after they had been transported is the question which concerns the army organization. And the manner in which it has been answered does not reflect credit on that organization. Considering the disparity between the two combatants, it is almost absurd that the great empire should have been put to the utmost strain by the two little republics.

This is the reproach that the British War Office seems to have determined to wipe out. It has made a beginning which is at least sensational in calling for the resignation of Gen. COLVILE, who last year commanded a division in South Africa, and did not cover himself, or it, with any particular glory. The General thus inculpated declines to resign. His declining puts the authorities "in a hole." For, in the first place, the very same disaster upon account of which his resignation is asked for has already been investigated officially, and, as a result of the investigation, he was restored to duty without a stain upon his character or his professional reputation.

In the second and more important place, he is very much like most of the other British officers who have been advanced to high places, and, when the actual test came, found incompetent to their places. We might say as much of most of them who were conspicuous at the beginning of the South African war. The British civil service is one of the best in the world. The British military service is still an institution in which promotion notoriously goes by favor and not by merit. The belief that "an English gentleman" is necessarily and ex officio fit for any work which he may be called upon to assume has survived a great deal of disillusioning evidence in British official quarters. The shade of the Duke of WELLINGTON is responsible for a great deal of mischief, among it for this belief, which appears in so amusingly naïve a form in KINGLAKE's history of the Crimean war. It was only because the South African war became so much more formidable than any official Englishman expected that Lord ROBERTS, who was not in the aristocratic ring, was called upon to retrieve the blunders of his predecessors, who were, and who were expected to gather the cheap laurels which they found not so cheap as they expected. The plain truth is that the British officer of to-day has been shown to be very much the same sort of person as his predecessor whom CARLYLE described at the battle of Fontenoy as a person "without knowledge of war or fear of death." The British Army is the last stronghold of aristocracy and privilege, and Great Britain has been paying in prestige the penalty for keeping it so. Whatever the differences between the War Office and the Horse Guards, and they have been chronic for generations, they are reconciled when any radical reformer urges that the army should be made a scene for promotion according to fitness and not to favor. The notion of an effective reform of the British Army by the British War Office, especially in a Conservative administration, is entirely lacking in seriousness.

A PROBLEM IN CASUISTRY.

The Cudahy incident at Omaha promises to give rise to an interminable and inconclusive discussion. It involves a subtle problem in casuistry—or perhaps several such problems—not unlike those which Oriental sages and story tellers were so fond of, and of which certain modern writers of romance have made good use. Such problems have a peculiar fascination for most people, perhaps because every one feels at liberty to solve them in the way that best suits himself, and cannot very well be shown to be in the wrong, since both questions and answers are hypothetical.

Reduced to its least expression, the Cudahy incident was as follows: A bright lad, the son of a man reputed to be wealthy, was kidnapped and held for ransom. The price demanded for his release was $25,000, in gold, because less readily traceable than banknotes. This demand was accompanied by threats of grievous bodily injury to the lad if the sum named was not promptly paid. These threats profoundly alarmed the mother, who naturally felt that the boy must be recovered at any cost, and that it would be time enough to discuss the ethics of the case when he was safe at home. With this view the father seems to have concurred. Under very melodramatic conditions, the sum demanded was left in a lonely place by the water side, under a lantern tied to a stake, which had been put there to mark the spot. The kidnappers were evidently what in the last century would have been called "honest rogues," for as soon as they got the money the boy was returned unharmed.

What should the father have done under these trying circumstances? No doubt he took a strictly business view of the situation. He was "caught short," so to speak; much as he is reported to have occasionally caught less skillful speculators in lines of merchandise with which his name is prominently identified. He doubtless felt that the cheapest way out of the difficulty was to pay the money and get the boy back, taking care not to get caught that way again. To have his family reunited and prepared to enjoy the holiday season was worth a great deal more than $25,000. What sacrifice would not be warranted to rescue a beloved son from captivity and danger and restore him to the maternal embrace?

But it was clearly the duty of Mr. CUDAHY, as a citizen and a business man, to refuse to be blackmailed. No matter at what cost of anxiety or unhappiness, he should have made his heart as a millstone and set his face as a flint against the compounding of a heinous felony which strikes at the most sacred of human ties—parental affection. He should have notified the Omaha police that he proposed to hold them responsible for the return of his son, and that if they did not rescue him and hunt down the manstealers, he would employ his wealth, and such influence as it would command, to disgrace and degrade every officer of the department who failed to show due diligence. He should have announced that he had all the money needed for a campaign of detection and prosecution, but not one cent for tribute to kidnappers who would be encouraged by success and immunity to practice their nefarious trade in other homes. In this position he would have had the support and approval of every right-minded man—and few imitators.

For, Sir or Madam, would you reason thus coldly if your own child was in the hands of brigands, and you were in daily receipt of letters showing that your every movement was known and every plan anticipated? If you had reason to believe that your child would be disfigured or destroyed if the blackmail was not paid and the amount demanded was, perhaps, no more than you would be willing to spend in Christmas presents, what would you consider your first duty?

Such a dialogue between heart and conscience might be prolonged indefinitely. Character and temperament fix the point of view wherever their converging lines chance to cross. What one should do under given conditions, and what he would do, so often bear to one another the relation which the east bears to the west, that the casuist has a clear field for almost any theory of human conduct he may choose to assume.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—There are not a few municipal departments, the heads of which, when subjected to popular criticism, can reply, often with truth and always with some degree of credibility, that only those possessed of specialized information concerning the work done and the difficulties under which it is accomplished have any right to set themselves up as judges. Of these fortunate departments, that over which Commissioner NAGLE presides is not one. One man can tell about as well as another whether a street is clean or dirty, and it requires no expert knowledge to decide whether as many department employés are to be seen sweeping the pavements now as in the days of Col. WARING. On these points the opinion of the New York public is in direct opposition to that of the Commissioner, and there is not the faintest doubt that he is wrong and the public right. The streets of the city are obviously in better condition than they were in the period before anything like a thorough cleaning had ever been thought of, but, as obviously, their condition is far inferior to what we have since that dreadful era become absolutely sure it ought to be. The disagreement between the Commissioner and his critics as to the number of cleaners at work is merely one of definition. By "at work" Mr. NAGLE means "on the pay roll," just as last Winter, when he triumphantly reported the removal of more loads of snow than Col. WARING had ever disposed of, he simply meant that by paying twice for a good many loads he had made a truly brilliant showing—in his drafts upon his appropriation. Furthermore, Mr. NAGLE convicts himself of something approaching gross incompetency when he contents himself with claiming to present results as good as those attained by his great predecessor. Col. WARING had to create a street-cleaning force out of nothing, yes, out of worse than nothing; to Mr. NAGLE there was transmitted, almost unimpaired, a body of trained and well-intentioned subordinates whom he had only to allow to go about their business. His critics are aware, too, that, despite its growth, New York is daily becoming a city easier to clean and to keen clean. Improved methods of urban transportation have removed thousands and thousands of horses from the streets, and the rapid introduction of self-propelled vehicles is banishing the animals at least by the hundreds.

—Much as the electricians have done in recent years in the way of producing and manipulating their mysterious "fluid," their work is still very far from completed. They can furnish electricity in any desired quantities, but they cannot yet do it either directly or cheaply, and their control of it still leaves more than a little to be desired. A small thing that well illustrates the present imperfections of electrical application is the warmth of commendation bestowed by The Electrical Review upon a newly invented incandescent lamp, so constructed that it can be "turned down" like an oil lamp. Of course this is a highly desirable characteristic, since one of the chief objections—apart from cost—to the common incandescent lamp is its failure to permit of any gradation between illumination of full strength and no illumination at all. The new device gives six intensities of light, according to the position of the switch. But there is no corresponding economy of electricity used. One of the improved lamps, when tested, showed the following results: "At the first position it took 63 watts and gave 16 candle power; at the second position it took 55 watts and gave 7.6 candle power; third position, 48 watts, 3.8 candle power, fourth position, 43 watts, 1.8 candle power; fifth position, 38 watts, 0.8 candle power; sixth position, 33 watts, 0.4 candle power." Here the force expended—that is, the expense incurred, decreased with the quantity of light obtained, but the decrease was far from proportional. In the sixth position, when thirty-nine-fortieths of the light had disappeared, the lamp used more than half as much electricity as it did in the first position. Something very much better than that must be shown before it can be admitted that the incandescent lamp is perfect.

—All Americans are occasional, most of them are frequent, and many of them are constant, guests—to use the common euphemism—at hotels. Therefore does every American have more or less knowledge about the faults of hotels and their keepers, but information concerning the faults of the "guests" is much less widespread. With the hope of making things more nearly equal, it seems worth while to present the perfect patron, as viewed by the person patronized. Mr. H. M. PEASE went to the Palace hotel, in Cincinnati, one year ago, and he has been there ever since. On his arrival, says a local paper, Mr. PEASE wrote his name on the register without a word to the clerk. He did not say how long he would remain or make any of the usual inquiries. At the end of the week he paid his bill, as he continued to do for the weeks following. He never passed a good morning, commented on the weather, or talked politics. When he came down in the morning he never asked if he had had a call or looked in his box. Not once has he rung his bell or asked for ice water. He always seemed to be satisfied with everything, and was so quiet that his name in the house was "Noisy PEASE." He had been at the hotel for over four months before any one even knew what his business in town was, but one day curiosity could no longer be restrained, and in reply to inquiry he said he was there superintending the change of system made by the telephone company. After that he continued as silent as before, but, while he was quiet, he was not morose or disagreeable. On Christmas Day the proprietor of the house was moved to give Mr. PEASE a diamond watch charm, inscribed "Palace Hotel Star Boarder." From this narrative one can learn the standard by which every hotel keeper judges every "guest." From it, too, one can learn how few of us meet the hotel keeper's standard.

—According to Alderman BRIDGES, paresis is the disease that enables or compels a man "to think he's right when he knows he's wrong." Alderman BRIDGES illustrated his declaration by pointing to Alderman GOODMAN, but that, though interesting enough in its way, and especially in its possible consequences, was merely incidental, and should not distract attention from the extreme beauty of the definition of paresis. What welcome the definition will get from the medical profession we cannot prophesy, but it fits something or other, even if it doesn't fit paresis, and the something or other is a more than fairly common complaint, both in and out of Aldermanic Boards, all over this and other countries. We all number several persons among our acquaintances who think they are right, though they know they are wrong, and, thanks to Alderman BRIDGES, we can now tell these folks, whenever occasion arises, just what is the matter with them. It is always a great consolation to do that.

The Dog Nuisance.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The great mass of our city's pedestrians, if appealed to, would indorse your correspondent's (J. T.'s) wonder that the filthy practice of some women in this city who lead dogs about our sidewalks for the purpose of defiling them, are not severely punished by city authorities.

The arrest of half a dozen of these women and bringing their names into the public print would put a stop to it for a while, if not permanently. Surely there is law already for such action by the police or other city officials. The press of this city and the Board of Health have ended spitting on car floors, urged by protests of women whose dresses were defiled. Let the women who are by that reform benefited join in protest with men against this vile and filthy "dog nuisance."

FIFTY-SECOND STREET.
New York, Dec. 24, 1900.

Unclean Streets.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I see an article in this morning's paper where Commissioner Nagle asserts that the streets are as clean, if not cleaner, than during Mr. Waring's time. If Commissioner Nagle will pass through Fifty-seventh Street, between Sixth and Seventh Avenues, at any time of the day he will find ample evidence that we have returned to the piles of dirt and scattered papers that decorated the streets a few years ago. At this moment—2 P. M.—I count nine piles of scrapings, (the street, though paved, is never swept,) no man in sight, and the wind distributing it into our areas and houses. There is no enforcement of the rule that papers must not be thrown into the streets, and I know this is but a sample of the condition of the whole city.

A RESIDENT.
New York, Dec. 27, 1900.

The Canteen Again.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The canteen question seems to be the irrepressible conflict, and is likely to be until settled by the will of the people. So far as the people are represented in Congress through the ballot box direct, the House has twice passed the law to abolish the canteen. The people should stand by their Congressmen, especially when their object is to elevate the army and the Nation also. If the traffic in intoxicants as a beverage is wrong, let the Government cleanse its own departments first and set a good example. If the canteen is an abomination in the navy, how can it be otherwise in the army? If the canteen is the place to tempt the recruit that never drank liquor, it should be abolished. How can the people close up the places outside of the posts and barracks when the Government licenses them? Let us close up the National canteens or saloons first and then the outsiders. J. W.

The Teachers and the Davis Law.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I desire to thank you for the strong, just, and dispassionate appeal for the retention of the Davis law in your editorial of Wednesday last.

Thousands of teachers have read it and been deeply gratified by it. They feel that none of the influences at work in their oft-repeated struggle to secure fair compensation is so potent to help them as an enlightened public opinion. No one can dispute the title of THE NEW YORK TIMES as a leader of such opinion. Hence their gratification. MAGNUS GROSS.

THE "SONG OF THE SKIRT."

From London Truth.

With fingers weary and cramped,
And a wrist that was stiff with pain,
A lady walked, in a Paris gown,
Down Bond Street, in the rain.
Splash—splash—splash—
Through puddle and slush and dirt,
And half to herself, in a sobbing tone,
She sang this "Song of the Skirt":

"For Fashion's sake," she moaned,
"Full many a cross bear we,
Like abject slaves we bow
To her every new decree;
But of all the cruel modes
With which we women are cursed,
Our walking gown, with its trailing train,
Methinks is by far the worst!

"Sweep—sweep—sweep—
Where the waste of the street lies thick;
Sweep—sweep—sweep—
However our path we pick;
Dust, bacillus, and germ,
Germ, bacillus, and dust,
Till we shudder and turn from the sorry sight
With a gesture of disgust.

"Oh men with sistere dear!
Oh men who have well-dressed wives,
It is not alone an expensive mode,
It is one that hazards lives!
For malignant microbes swarm
In the triturated dirt,
And the dress that sweeps it up may prove
A shroud as well as a skirt!

"Sweep—sweep—sweep—
As we walk o'er the West End flags,
For, however we try to carry that tail,
A part of it always sags—
The hem of it always drops
In the Winter's greasy slush;
The hem of it sweeps the Summer's dust
More clean than the dustman's brush.

"Drag—drag—drag—
Whatever our strength or health;
We have all to draw that heavy train,
Whatever our rank or wealth.
Whatever the dress has cost,
Fashion's laws we dare not shirk;
Old and young we alike must daily do
The scavenger's dirty work.

"Oh! for one hour of ease
As I shop in the crowded street—
With no drag upon my knees,
And no pull about my feet!
For only one short hour
To be as I used to be,
When I wore a skirt of sensible length
Which my ankles left quite free!

"Oh! but for one short hour,
A respite, however brief,
Till my Christmas shopping at least is done,
And from rain we've some relief!
The so-called 'Rational Dress'
Possesses for me no charms,
Yet on days like this I could willingly rush
Into Lady Harberton's arms.

"As I feel the distressing strain
Of my train on my aching wrist,
I could well-nigh vow henceforth
Fashion's edicts to resist.
When I see what my hem's swept up,
Though in walking I'm so expert,
I am very much more than half inclined
To drive home and burn my skirt!"

* * * * * * *

With fingers weary and cramped,
With a wrist that was stiff with pain,
A lady shopped, in a Paris gown,
In Bond Street, in the rain.
Splash—splash—splash—
On she swept through the slush and the dirt;
And still with a voice of dolorous pitch,
Would that its tones could reach the rich,
She sang this "Song of the Skirt"!

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL

Bernard Shaw's Prizefighter Transferred to the Stage.

"Cashel Byron" at the Herald Square Theatre—A New French Play—Stage Gossip.

It is getting to be so much the fashion for men to step from the prize ring to the theatrical stage that no one should be surprised by the intrusion of Bernard Shaw's celebrated gentleman "bruiser," Cashel Byron, in the drama. Cashel is the hero of a new play which was "tried," and which, in its turn, severely tried the patience of the spectators, at the Herald Square Theatre yesterday afternoon. Cashel seems to have emerged from the libraries and twelfmo form for the purpose of proving the vast and wearisome conversational powers of up-to-date pugilists. But that was unnecessary.

The play is hardly a fair transcription of the novel, which is diverting and witty. Bernard Shaw has, above all other qualities, a sense of humor. The play lacks that and most other qualities a good play should possess. The playwright saw only the romantic situation of a fair young woman in love with a prizefighter, and the effect of her love upon the man, who was a gentleman by birth, if not by breeding. Even this he has proved himself incapable of handling.

He begins with a first meeting of the lovers, when Cashel is in training for his great glove contest with the renowned Paradise. There is a practice bout with the gloves in Act I., which is the best part of the show and was particularly well done yesterday, not so much by the actor of Cashel, as by his supposedly vanquished opponent, Bob, a character borne with admirable skill and humor by Mr. "Billy" Elmer, described on the bill as the "actor-boxer." The traits of Skene, the ex-fighter and trainer, were also well denoted by our old friend of so many "trial" performances, Mr. Harry St. Maur.

From this episode the action proceeded to Cashel's bad behavior after dinner in the house of the fashionable lion hunters, to his reunion with his mother, and his marriage with Miss Carew, an uninteresting young woman, surely, in Shaw's novel, but no such attitudinizing, platitude-preaching creature as the inexperienced dramatist has made her.

Mr. Harrison Wolfe, who made this play, and posed and spouted as the hero, is a fairly good-looking young man who should learn to stand, to walk, and to use his voice, if he intends to stay on the stage. He is a dreadfully bad actor, and most of his associates are actors of the same sort. But the parts were enough to drive the most gifted comedians to despair, while the tediousness of the play o'erflowed the measure.

The Liebler Company has issued a beautiful souvenir of Viola Allen's production of "In the Palace of the King." It is a quarto of twenty-five pages, interleaved with ten handsomely printed photogravures of Miss Allen in the character of Dolores and scenes from the play. The paper and typography are of an excellent quality, while the "letter-press," instead of being the incoherent raving of some hireling puffer, is a readable account of the play and the historical epoch to which it belongs. The covers and title page were designed by Ernest Haskell.

Bisson's co-laborer in the authorship of a new and successful comic piece, "Le Château Historique," produced at the Odéon, in Paris, and likely soon to be adapted for our stage, is Berr de Turrique. The scene is an old château lately purchased by a retired tradesman. Rousseau once dwelt there, and the new owner permits crowds of admirers of the great Jean Jacques to roam over the place at will because the fees they give enable him to secure service without paying wages. His butler has already sold sixty-three quill pens with which Rousseau wrote the "Contrat Social." The retired tradesman is therefore a huge admirer of Rousseau, though he has never read his books.

His elder daughter, Marguerite, however, has fallen absurdly in love with a more recent occupant of the château, a poet named Coudray, who never appears in the play, though his spirit seems to pervade it, and whom she has never seen. The daughter's husband employs his friend, Barrios, to impersonate the poet, and disgust the infatuated young woman, which he does in the manner of David Garrick in Robertson's play, falling in love, in the meanwhile, with Marguerite's younger sister, Geneviève. But, unhappily, the husband of a lady with whom the poet has eloped now appears on the scene with vengeance in his eye, while Marguerite, discovering that the Coudray who has disgusted her is an impostor, manages to have yet another pseudo-poet arrive and face him at a critical moment. There is nothing new in this sort of an imbroglio, but the piece is said to be exceptionally well written.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

Annual Performances of "The Messiah" by the Oratorio Society.

This is the season of the year when the musical soul-cleansing process takes place. People who do not on any occasion go to hear any sort of music better than that to be heard at the Casino or the New York hasten as if their eternal welfare depended upon it to hear "The Messiah." It is a sort of musico-religious ceremony that comes, with Christmas, once a year. It is regarded by those who do it as a solemn duty, and they induce themselves to be transported into the seventh heaven of delight when the oratorio chorus sings in its sleep. For the choristers have sung "The Messiah" year in and year out till they take about as lively an interest in the contrapuntal sinuosities of the score as the overweary newspaper man to whom Handel's masterpiece has no such religious or musical significance as a Christmas piece by Palestrina or the Christmas oratorio of one Sebastian Bach.

Living upon this one musical and pious duty of the declining year the public overcrowds the draughty spaces of Carnegie Hall with its numbers and its plaudits. It rejoices to know that "every valley shall be exalted," and that Handel was a great master. It adores the conducting of Mr. Frank Damrosch, who could in all human probability now conduct this work by absent treatment, and it glorifies the singers of the delectable solo numbers. The work was given as usual by the Oratorio Society on Wednesday afternoon and again last night. The solo singers were Lillian Blauvelt, Mrs. Morris Black, Evan Williams, and David Bispham. These are competent singers. It was not likely that the music would fall of effectiveness in their hands. The afternoon concert was well attended. At the evening entertainment seats were at a premium, and were to be had only of speculators. These facts should be printed for the sake of the records of music in this town, but there seems to be no especial reason why any critical comment should be made. A performance of "The Messiah" in these days is not likely to present new features, and this is New York, not London, where the name of Handel ranks next to that of the Queen, and must be praised with many adjectives.

The balance sheets of the Birmingham and Hereford festivals, both of which have just been issued, will be a rude shock to those who argued that adequate rehearsals for great musical festivals would increase the expenses without adding to the receipts. Once more it has been proved that a bolder policy not only is justified from an art point of view, but that it pays. Extra rehearsals were tried at both the Autumn festivals, and with the result that the receipts at Hereford increased by £600 and at Birmingham by £1,000. The Birmingham Festival Committee have therefore been able to have upward of £3,000 out of profits to the General Hospital—a splendid result, upon which all concerned may be congratulated.

At Gmunden, the rooms which Brahms so often occupied have been fitted up for exhibition, in the same manner as in the composer's own time, the table laid for supper, Brahms's dressing gown being hung over the chair. This surely is rather excessive realism.

Every one will regret to learn that Dr. Edvard Grieg is somewhat seriously ill at Copenhagen of an internal malady, which gives considerable anxiety to his friends. Grieg has suffered for some years from a weak chest, which has caused him to winter in a warmer climate than his native Norway. But his present illness seems to be a new development.

Many persons have noted that Mme. Melba of the opera company has gained considerable flesh since she was last here. This is perhaps the natural result of her enlargement of her repertory. She has "taken on" another heroine of unclean morals and pulmonary tuberculosis, and for some occult reason such doings always make prime donne grow stouter. Perchance this is nature's way of protesting against the impersonation of these carrion birds of song. Yet it is a matter for sincere hope that there will not be too much of Mme. Melba "in the coming by and by." There is not too much of her now, for she is just like Little Buttercup a plump and pleasing person." It is reported that she will desert these sunny shores next season for those of her native land, Australia. Our loss will be Australia's gain.

How widespread is the popularity of Sullivan's comic operas may, perhaps, partly be judged from the fact that a performance of "Pinafore" is now being organized by the police among the snows of Regina, in Assiniboia. It may, perhaps, save people the trouble of looking the name up in a gazetteer if we say that Regina is 357 miles northwest of Winnipeg, and is the capital of the Northwest Territory of Canada. This story comes from a London paper, and has a curious sound, inasmuch as hereabout policemen generally prepare "Pirates of Penzance," because of its policemen's chorus.

DREYFUS DEMANDS JUSTICE.

Says He Will Seek Legal Recognition of His Innocence to His Last Breath.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—Ex-Capt. Dreyfus has written to the Premier, M. Waldeck-Rousseau, denouncing as another falsehood a recent statement of Henri Rochefort, in L'Intransigeant, that he (Dreyfus) had sent to Emperor William of Germany in 1894 a letter afterward stolen from the German Embassy at Paris, and which, annotated by the Emperor, constituted formal proof of the crime. Dreyfus adds:

"My innocence is absolute, and legal recognition of this innocence by a revision I will seek to my last breath. I am not the author of the bordereau annotated by the Emperor, which is a forgery, nor of the original, authentic bordereau, written by Esterhazy to save Henry. All the principal authors of my iniquitous condemnation are still alive. I am not despoiled of all my rights. I still retain that of every man to defend his honor and have the truth proclaimed. I, therefore, have the right to ask you to order an inquiry."

Picquart Does Not Want Amnesty.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—Col. Picquart has written to M. Waldeck-Rosseau, the Premier, warmly protesting against the inclusion of himself in the Amnesty bill. He says he does not wish to owe his rehabilitation to such a measure, and indignantly repudiates the rumors that compensation will be offered to him now that he has been amnestied. He declares that he renounces his appeal to the State Council against the decree placing him on the retired list, in order to dispose of the accusation that he is seeking advancement or decoration.

RUSSIAN CONSUL AT BOMBAY.

M. Klemm Appointed—Right to Have Consul There Gained After Long Negotiations.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 27.—To occupy the post of first Russian Consul at Bombay, the Government has appointed M. Klemm, for many years in the Foreign Office service in Central Asia and latterly Secretary of the Russian Political Agent at Bokhara.

Russia secured the right of Consular representation at Bombay after long and difficult negotiations, the British Government being slow to admit that the commercial interests of Russia justified the departure.

The real objection, naturally, was fear that the Consulate would serve for political instead of commercial purposes.

PAYMENT ON TURKISH CRUISER.

None Made on Signing the Contract, It Is Believed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 26.—It is the general belief that the Cramps's contract for the construction of a cruiser for Turkey was signed without the first payment being made.

This view is supported by the fact that the Porte has formally promised to pay nothing to Americans before paying the Krupps, and the Germans have not yet received anything.

BRITISH DEMANDS ON TURKEY.

Turkish Soldiers Assaulted and Maltreated Charge d'Affaires.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 26.—Some Turkish soldiers have grossly assaulted and maltreated the British Charge d'Affaires, Mr. de Bunsen, and other members of the British Embassy, in the vicinity of the powder magazine at Makrikeïn (Makrikeuy?) Sharp demands for redress have been made to the Porte.

Czar to Leave the Crimea Soon.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 27.—Diplomatic circles here have been informed that the Czar will leave the Crimea within a week, but will not arrive here before the Russian New Year, spending the intervening period with the Grand Duke Sergius, uncle of the Czar and Governor of Moscow. Court circles are pleased that the Czar will leave the unhealthy Crimea, where malaria is feared at this season, and the diplomats anticipate the usual New Year's receptions. A scaffolding is being erected for the annual ceremony of blessing the River Neva by the Czar.

Colombian Rebels Meet Defeat.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—Arthur M. Beaupré, Secretary of the United States Legation at Bogota, has cabled the State Department that he has been informed by the Colombian Government that the invading troops were overtaken by the Government forces at Rosario; also that their leader, Gen. Uribide, was defeated at Corazel, in the province of Bolivar. He was retreating with a few remaining followers through the Department of Magdalena, toward the Venezuelan line. The war is said to be progressing favorably for the Colombian Government.

Big Fire at London Docks.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—One of the most serious fires which have occurred in the East End of London during the last ten years broke out to-day at the East India Docks. Five immense sheds filled with goods, including a thousand bales of hemp and quantities of jute, were consumed. The shipping in the neighborhood and some warehouses were saved by the great exertions of the firemen.

To Import American Wood.

BERLIN, Dec. 27.—The establishment of a free harbor at Emden will, it is expected, make it an important port for American wood. Westphalian firms have already ordered 10,000 tons of pitch pine to be sent there for shipment, via the Dortmund-Ems Canal. A joint stock wood company has been organized in Emden to import pitch pine and other woods in large quantities.

Lord William Beresford's Condition.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Lord William Leslie de la Poer Beresford, who has been suffering from peritonitis, passed a very bad night and was reported worse this morning. Later in the day it was announced that Lord William had rallied slightly, but that his condition was very grave.

For a Russian Church in New York.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 27.—The Holy Synod has ordered that all the churches in its jurisdiction take up collections to help build an orthodox Russian Church in New York City.

Prussian Diet to Meet Jan. 8.

BERLIN, Dec. 27.—The Prussian Diet has been summoned to meet on Jan. 8.

MANY BRITISH SUCCESSES

The Boers Repulsed at Various Widely Separated Points.

Invaders of Cape Colony Being Driven North—Burgher Commandant Demanded Christmas Luxuries.

NEWCASTLE, Natal, Dec. 27.—The Boers celebrated Christmas in the district between Standerton and Ingogo by more or less determined attacks upon every British garrison along the lines of communication. These, however, were in all cases successfully repulsed.

At Utrecht the Boer commandant sent in a demand for whisky, cigars, and Christmas luxuries, failing which he threatened to attack the town. His demand was ignored, and the Boers attacked Utrecht in strong force on Christmas morning. They were repulsed with loss, the British casualties being but slight.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 27.—A small party of Boers attacked Burghersdorp on Dec. 24. They were repulsed after heavy fighting.

The Boers are active, and skirmishes in several places have been reported.

Martial law has been proclaimed in the districts of Beaufort West and Carnarvon.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—The following dispatch from Gen. Kitchener has been received from Pretoria, under Thursday's date:

"Yesterday 200 Boers attacked a small police post near Boksburg. The police gallantly drove them off before reinforcements from Johannesburg arrived. The Boers damaged the mining machinery in the neighborhood.

"The Boers attacked Utrecht at 2 o'clock this morning and were driven off.

"The Boers held up a train three miles west of the Pan, and were driven off.

"The Eastern force of the Boers in Cape Colony was headed yesterday and driven in the direction of Venterstad.

"The Western force is still being driven north through Strydenburg."

An earlier dispatch from Lord Kitchener said:

"The Boers' Eastern column, in Cape Colony, is apparently headed by our troops about Reitport Spruit. The Boers' Western column is reported to have gone north in two portions, one towards Prieska and the other through Strydenburg. They are being followed up."

The latest dispatches from South Africa show that Lord Kitchener has succeeded in holding the invading Boers in check, but has not yet been successful in expelling them from Cape Colony. Small commandos continue to display astonishing daring and activity over an immensely wide field.

It is questionable whether Gen. Kitchener's proclamation will have much effect until then. Dr. De Wet has been captured. The Boers are likely to regard it as a sign of weakness and to have a wholesome dread of De Wet's vengeance if they surrender.

The proclamation is approved by the party at home that favors conciliatory terms to the Boers as a step in the right direction.

A dispatch from Vryburg, dated Dec. 20, says the Boers, in considerable numbers, were then making an unexpected movement westward. They had 150 wagons. The dispatch suggests that they were trekking to Damara-land, although the Boers themselves denied such an intention.

DE WET IN STRAITS AGAIN.

Big British Force Fighting Him—Rumor That He and Steyn Will Offer to Surrender.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—The following dispatch has been received from Lord Kitchener:

"Pretoria, Dec. 26.

"Knox, with Barker, Pilcher, and White, is engaged with De Wet's force, holding a position in the neighborhood of Leuwkop.

"De Wet hopes to break through and go south again."

BLOEMFONTEIN, Orange River Colony, Dec 26.—There are received but unconfirmed rumors here that Gen. De Wet, Mr. Steyn, and Gen. Haasbroeck have had a conference and decided to offer to surrender, provided the colonial rebels are not punished, and the leaders, including themselves, are not deported."

A BRITISH ARMY SENSATION.

War Office Demands Resignation of Gen. Colvile—He Refuses to Resign.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—The War Office has begun the promised reform of the army in a sensational manner. It has demanded the resignation of Major Gen. Sir Henry Edward Colvile, commanding an infantry brigade at Gibraltar and recently commanding the Ninth Division of the South Africa field force. Gen. Colvile refuses to resign, and he is now on his way to England.

The news is all the more startling, as the question of Gen. Colvile's responsibility for the yeomanry disaster at Lindley last May was fully investigated by the authorities when Gen. Colvile returned from South Africa last Summer. After the inquiry Gen. Colvile was reinstated in his command at Gibraltar in September last. The attitude of the War Office indicates that the new régime in Pall Mall will reverse the decisions of Lord Lansdowne and Lord Wolseley in regard to some of the recent commanders in South Africa.

Gen. Colvile, like Gen. Methuen, has always been a great social personage in London and is a prominent clubman. He has had a most distinguished military career, has been repeatedly mentioned in dispatches, and is familiarly known as "Odgers." He is also a well-known author, and on the occasion of his second marriage created a stir by going on his honeymoon in a balloon.

Sir Henry Colvile is the head of one of the most ancient families in the United Kingdom—the senior branch of the families of Colvile and Colville, which separated in the twelfth century. He was born in 1852, and on his mother's side is also descended from a famous old family, his maternal grandmother being the twenty-second Baroness de Clifford. He entered the Grenadier Guards in 1870, and before filling several important aide de camp posts, served with distinction in the Soudan campaign of 1884, and commanded the Unyoro expedition in 1894. He has also held a large number of important special offices.

Among Sir Henry's literary works are the official history of the Soudan campaign, written by order of the War Office, and "The Land of the Nile Springs."

The disaster for which Gen. Colvile is now apparently held responsible occurred near Lindley on May 31, and the news of it was received in London three days later, the same day on which the news of Lord Roberts's entry into Pretoria was announced. The Thirteenth (Irish) Imperial Yeomanry were attacked by a much superior force of Boers, and were obliged to surrender. They numbered between four and five hundred men. Gen. Methuen was sent by Lord Roberts in pursuit of the Boers, but was too late to catch up to them.

SON OF LORD DUFFERIN WOUNDED

BURGHERSDORP, Cape Colony, Dec. 26.—Col. Grenfell continues in touch with Kruitzinger's command of 700 men, who are carrying off the British prisoners. Kruitzinger has abandoned his Maxims and carts.

An attempt of the Ninth Lancers to turn Kruitzinger's flank, at Plaisterheuvel, on Dec. 24, resulted in eight casualties among the lancers, including Lord Frederick Blackwood, who was wounded.

Lord Frederick Temple Blackwood is the fourth son of the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava. He was born on Feb. 20, 1875, and joined the Ninth Lancers in 1899. His eldest brother, the Earl of Ava, was wounded at Ladysmith last January, and died a few days later.

The second son, now the heir to the Marquisate, is Lord Clandeboye, (Lord Terence John Temple Blackwood,) who married Miss Flora Davis, daughter of John H. Davis of New York.

CAPTURED YEOMANRY RELEASED?

LONDON, Dec. 28.—The Evening Standard says it understands that the equadron of yeomanry which, as announced in a dispatch from Cape Town, was entrapped and captured by Boers, whom it was following from Britstown, was released after the men had been relieved of their horses and other equipment.

Ten of the yeomanry, the paper adds, were wounded.

LORD ARMSTRONG IS DEAD.

Famous Inventor and Manufacturer of War Implements Passes Away at Rothbury, England.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Lord Armstrong died this morning at his home at Cragside.

Sir William George Armstrong, first Lord Armstrong, was one of that little group of inventors and manufacturers who have made modern armament what it is. He was born in 1810, being the son of a merchant and Alderman of Newcastle-on-Tyne. He was intended for a solicitor, being articled to a lawyer after he left school, and proceeding so far in the legal profession that he became a partner in the business.

However, from his early years Armstrong had taken a deep interest in science. As a youth, he began to study electricity, and his studies resulted in the invention by him of the hydro-electric machine, the most powerful means of developing frictional electricity yet devised. For this he was elected, when he was a very young man, a Fellow of the Royal Society. His success as an inventor led him to abandon the law, and to devote himself entirely to a career in which his scientific bent could have full scope.

Armstrong's next invention was an electric crane, and between 1845 and 1850 he perfected the "accumulator," by which an artificial head is substituted for the natural head gained only by altitude. He also greatly extended the application of hydraulic power to a variety of purposes, and he and some of his friends founded the Elswick Engine Works.

It was in 1854 that Armstrong first became known as an inventor of war material, putting out in that year the ordnance gun that bears his name. The Rifled Cannon Committee recommended the adoption of the gun, and Armstrong presented the patents to the Government, which knighted him in recognition of his unselfish patriotism. Later Sir William extended his system of guns of all sizes, the primary principle being the coiling of one wrought iron tube over another until a sufficient thickness has been reached.

Sir William had been appointed Engineer of Rifled Ordnance, but in 1863 he resigned the post and rejoined the Elswick Company, which, ever since then, has been one of the largest manufacturing concerns of its kind in the world, and has taken a leading part in the development of artillery and other implements of war.

It would be impossible in limited space to given even a list of the honors and decorations which Sir William received from foreign Governments and from universities and other institutions. As President of the British Association, he created a sensation by drawing attention to the gradual lessening of the supply of coal, which resulted in the appointment of a Royal Commission to inquire into and make suggestions on the subject.

Sir William was enobled in 1887, the year of the Queen's first Jubilee. He once stood for Parliament as a Liberal Unionist, but was defeated.

Lord Armstrong owned one of the finest collection of modern English pictures in existence at his place at Cragside, Rothbury. He was also the owner of Bamburgh Castle, Belford, and of a large house at Newcastle-on-Tyne. He was married to a daughter of the Bishop of Auckland in 1835, but leaves no children.

Syndicate to Develop Damara-land.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 27.—A strong international syndicate has been formed for the development of the mineral resources of Damara-land. The bulk of the capital, which is British, will be held jointly in London, Paris, Berlin, and New York. The German Government, which was formerly extremely discouraging toward the efforts of foreign capitalists to develop the country, is now offering every facility. The scheme includes colonization, mining, irrigation, and the construction of a railway from Swakopmund to Etjimbingva.

No Paderewski Duel Reported.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—The Prefecture of Police has not heard of the alleged duel on a small island in the Seine, in which, according to a report circulated in New York City, Paderewski, the pianist, was killed. The musical publishers, Chandens & Durand, who have business relations with Paderewski, do not believe he is here.

Kaiser to Inspect New Liner.

BERLIN, Dec. 27.—Emperor William will go to Hamburg in January to inspect the Hamburg-American liner Princess Victoria Louise, prior to her excursion to the West Indies. His Majesty will spend a night on board.

Wimperis, the Water Colorist, Dead.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Edmund Morison Wimperis, Vice President of the Royal Institute of Painters in Water Colors, is dead.

Bargain Sale at Woman's Bazaar.

A continuous sale is in progress at the headquarters of the National American Woman Suffrage Association in the American Tract Society Building, Nassau and Spruce Streets. The fragments that remain from the bazaar held during the first week of this month are for sale at reduced prices. The offerings include articles ranging from pictures to baby socks. The pictures are paintings of different kinds which were among the expensive articles of the bazaar. A few drawings in black and white and some large photographs of Western scenery are marked at half price. Great reduction has been made in the prices of all the goods. There is a large stock of knit goods, shawls, and various articles of baby wear. The association already has $7,000 to its credit, net returns from the bazaar, and there are many sources yet to be heard from.

Congressman Sulzer's Father Dead.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Dec. 27.—Thomas Sulzer, father of Congressman William Sulzer of New York, died this morning at his home, 461 Walnut Street, this city. Mr. Sulzer was sixty-eight years of age and was well known in Elizabeth. He was born in Germany and came to Elizabeth in 1848. He is survived by a widow and seven children, of whom Congressman Sulzer is the second oldest.

Greater Jersey City Commission.

The Greater Jersey City Commission will meet this afternoon in the office of Mayor Hoos, in Jersey City. It is anticipated that definite action will be taken regarding the proposed consolidation of the municipalities of Hudson County into one city. The Committee on Plan and Scope, it is understood, recommended consolidation. It is believed consolidation will be voted down by the commission.

New Jersey Charities Aid Society.

The managers of the New Jersey State Charities Aid Association met in Jersey City yesterday and elected these officers: President—Charlton T. Lewis; Vice President—The Rev. Albert Erdmann; Treasurer—Thomas M. Gopsill; Secretary and Librarian—Mrs. Emily E. Williamson. Mrs. Williamson said she thought an investigator should be appointed, and was willing to surrender her salary of $600 a year on condition that the money should be used as part payment of the investigator's salary. The offer was accepted.

Children's Institution Gets $100,000.

VINELAND, N. J., Dec. 27.—A bequest of $100,000 has been placed in the hands of the Directors of the New Jersey Training School for Feeble-Minded Children, at this place, by Thomas H. Vinter, executor of the Maxham estate. The legacy will pay off all obligations, and give the institution a cash balance of about $60,000.

Christmas Gifts for Lepers.

HONOLULU, Dec. 19.—The sum of $293 in silver dollars was taken to the Leper Settlement at Molokai yesterday, being $1 for each leper, as a Christmas gift from the people of Honolulu. The money was the proceeds from the annual concert for the benefit of the unfortunates.

Mother and Children Burned to Death.

DUBOIS, Penn., Dec. 27.—The residence of Mrs. Harriger, in the village of Sigal, was destroyed by fire to-day, and Mrs. Harriger and her two daughters, aged five and seven years, were burned to death.

Natives Kill Prospector and Eat Him.

VICTORIA, B. C., Dec. 27.—The steamer Miowera brings advices from Queensland that a prospector named P. Killane has been killed, and, according to the belief of the ship's people, eaten by the natives.

EDITOR HARMSWORTH HERE FROM LONDON

Believes United States Should Control Nicaragua Canal.

His Views on Other Public Questions—Praise for The New York Times's Paris Edition.

Alfred C. Harmsworth, editor and owner of The London Daily Mail, arrived in New York on the White Star liner Teutonic yesterday. He is accompanied by his wife, and comes to this country on a much-needed vacation. Most of his time in the country will be spent in visiting the various Winter resorts in Florida and other Southern States. He expects to return to London in March. At the Holland House, where he is stopping while in New York, Mr. Harmsworth was seen yesterday afternoon. He has very decided opinions as to this country's right to construct, control, fortify, and close, if necessary in time of war, the proposed Nicaraguan Canal. The war in the Transvaal, he said, was all over except the putting on of the finishing touches. Europeans know more than Americans, he asserted, concerning conditions in the Philippines. Comparing London and New York newspapers, he said that the former were the more reliable, while the latter are much the more enterprising. As to the amending of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, which was the first subject discussed, he said:

"There is no adverse criticism on the part of the English of the amendments to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty so far as I have ascertained. You are going to build the canal, pay for it, and why should you not control it? If we dug a canal we would certainly expect to control it, and I think America looks at the matter in much the same light. You are going to let us use it in time of peace, and that is all we want on our side of the water. As for fortifying it and closing it if necessary in time of war, that is your privilege. I am certain England wouldn't hesitate to take the same step in regard to the Suez Canal if the occasion should arise."

Concerning the war in the Transvaal, Mr. Harmsworth said: "The war is over in South Africa, and it only remains to put on the finishing touches. So far as we are concerned, it would not matter if it lasted twenty years longer. As for the Boers, they are the best fighters in the world, as well as the bravest, and have been spurred on during the war by the most corrupt politicians in the world, headed by President Kruger, who cleared out of the country, took all of the money, and left the women and children for the British to feed. The trouble in South Africa was settled by the tremendous influx of English people. I do not know what was the American opinion of the war, but I do know numbers of Americans died fighting with the British for the old cause of "no taxation without representation."

Referring to the insurrection in the Philippines, Mr. Harmsworth said: "The Germans are watching the course events are taking, thinking that America will finally give up the job as a bad proposition, and then they expect to come in and finish matters. As to how long the trouble will last, I cannot say. It is something like our own affair in South Africa, with the exception that instead of one single stretch of territory to look after, you have about 1,500 islands to keep an eye on. France is also watching closely the trend of affairs over there.

"As to my opinion of the question of the much-discussed Anglo-American alliance, I may say the English people never make alliances. There is a feeling, however, of sympathy between the people of the two countries arising, perhaps, from the fact that they are of the same race, and also, perhaps, from the additional fact that Americans and the English are so thoroughly detested on the Continent of Europe. There is a great friendship for Americans on our side, and we take great pride in the achievements of the country during the past hundred years under the leadership of men who in nearly every stage of its development have borne English names."

When asked how he thought American and English newspapers compared in their general features, Mr. Harmsworth replied: "The difference between the newspapers of the two countries is largely a surface difference. In comparing the New York papers with those of London, I find that the American newspapers are more or less counterparts of our own. In the matter of news getting the American newspaper is on the whole vastly more enterprising, yet not, if I may venture to say so, quite so accurate as the British. We are paying less attention to editorial writing and giving more time to the getting of news. On the other hand, your editorial writing is improving all the time, three or four of your papers having editorial pages that are unrivaled in any part of the world. As to the enterprise of American journals, THE NEW YORK TIMES furnished a splendid illustration of that in publishing during the Paris Exposition every day a splendid Epiropean edition on the grounds. It was a splendid enterprise, calling for, as it did, the greatest volume of cable news ever flashed across the Atlantic to any one newspaper."

BROOKLYN WATER HEARING.

Mayor Says He's Going to Stir Up Municipal Assemblymen and Urges Delegation to Do the Same.

A hearing was held yesterday in Mayor Van Wyck's office on the question of increasing the water supply in Brooklyn. A delegation from the Manufacturers' Association, the Committee of Fifty, and the Federation of Labor were present. Among the speakers were Edward M. Shepard, Alfred T. Waite, Charles A. Schieren, Ludwig Nissen, John McKeen, and Charles M. Chadwick.

J. Hampden Dougherty said that the old conduits in Brooklyn were inadequate, and that the water supply of the borough was in a dangerous condition. Mayor Van Wyck was asked to urge the work on conduits so that no water famine would result from the neglect of city officials. Mayor Van Wyck said:

"We agree to the necessity you urge. The Municipal Assembly has been holding up many of these matters. Bombard some of the Aldermen and Councilmen."

Ex-Commissioner of Public Works Alfred T. White went into the details of Brooklyn's water supply, and explained the deficiencies. Edward M. Shepard also urged that prompt action be taken on contracts.

"I'll do that right now," declared the Mayor.

Then the Mayor called on Commissioner Dalton of the Water Supply Department to tell what work was being done in Brooklyn. The Commissioner explained that the work of laying the 48-inch water main from the Millburn pumping station was being hastened, and that soon after Jan. 10 the work of laying pipe would be begun by the contractor. Mayor Van Wyck then remarked:

"What you gentlemen ought to do is to start a campaign against some of the members of the Board of Aldermen and the Council. When they see what you are doing they will come to time and act promptly on matters brought before them. That is the way I am going to do, and you should do the same thing."

CITY TO BUY A WATER PLANT.

Will Acquire That of the Flatbush Company by Condemnation.

The Board of Estimate has decided to purchase by condemnation proceedings the Flatbush Water Company of Brooklyn. The price for the property has not been fixed, and it will be some time before the city can acquire the water works. The contract to furnish water to the city expires with this year, and this led the city officials to take the initial step in the purchase of the plant.

The Flatbush Water Company has for years been supplying the residents of the district with water. The supply is obtained from driven wells. The company owns several miles of mains, and the plant is said to be worth $100,000.

Not Working for Bryan in 1904.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—Charles A. Walsh of Iowa, Secretary of the Democratic National Committee, arrived here to-day to assist in arranging for the meeting of the National Executive Committee in January. Regarding a report circulated to the effect that the present organization of the Democratic Party is planning to make W. J. Bryan the Presidential candidate in 1904, he said: "There is no foundation for such a story. As the last address sent out by the committee says: 'It is not designed to advance the interests of any man or faction.' That is what the organization declared, and that is all I care to say about the matter."

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

This evening will be devoted to dancing, both in town and country. The large colony of well-known people who have country houses in and around Morristown, Madison, Morris Plains, and the Oranges will meet at the beautiful country residence of Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Thebaud, "Stone Acre," at Morris Plains, where a large dance will be given. The dancing event of the evening in town will be the cotillion to be given by Mrs. Charles Tracy Barney at her residence for her daughter, Miss Helen T. Barney. There will be about thirty couples, and the cotillion will be led by Worthington Whitehouse, who will dance with Miss Barney. Mrs. Church's Friday evening class will meet at Sherry's, and the Knickerbocker class at Delmonico's. Other incidents of the day are to be a tea to be given by Mrs. Thomas Garner at 17 Madison Avenue, and a débutante dinner of sixteen covers to be given by Mrs. C. Du Bois Wagstaff (Miss Amy Colt) of 21 West Twenty-first Street.

***

Mrs. Robert Thompson of 5 East Fifty-third Street will give a dinner on the evening of Thursday, Jan. 3, in honor of Dr. Lewis Rutherfurd Morris and Mrs. Morris (Miss Katharine Clark). Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Berwind of 2 East Sixty-fourth Street will give to-morrow evening a dinner in honor of Mrs. William F. Burden and her fiancé, Dr. Andrew S. Clark. Mrs. George Crocker will give an opera dinner this evening, and Mrs. Charles Abercrombie of 25 Madison Square North will give a luncheon on Jan. 3.

***

Mrs. John Jacob Astor has decided to give her dance, originally appointed for Jan. 14, on Tuesday evening, Jan. 15. The cotillion, a large one, will be led from either end by Craig Wadsworth and Harry Lehr respectively. The dance to be given at Sherry's by Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt on Wednesday, Jan. 2, will be much larger than was first planned, and there will be fully 175 guests.

***

Mrs. David Morrison of 20 East Forty-ninth Street will give a dance for young people and in honor of her daughters, the Misses Nathalie and Lilian Morrison, at her residence on the evening of Friday, Jan. 4. Mrs. H. de Berkeley Parsons is to give the first of several dinners on the evening of Saturday, Jan. 12.

***

Dr. W. Seward Webb and Mrs. Webb are to open their town house on Jan. 4. Dr. Webb was in town yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills intend returning to town the day after New Year's. Mrs. Mills's mother, Mrs. Maturin Livingston, is already in town for the season.

***

Mrs. William C. Schermerhorn gave a reception for Mme. Sembrich at her residence, 40 West Twenty-third Street, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Schermerhorn was assisted in receiving by her daughters, Mrs. John Innes Kane, Mrs. S. W. Bridgham, and Miss Schermerhorn, and also by Mme Sembrich. Among the guests were Mrs. Astor, Col. John Jacob Astor and Mrs. Astor, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Sloane, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Kountze, Bishop Potter and Mrs. Potter, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Duer, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Bayles, Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Porter, Mrs. John C. Minturn, Mrs. Alfred Schermerhorn, the Misses Hewitt, Mr. and Mrs. Grenville Kane, Miss Stokes, Miss Cottenet, and Woodbury and Nicholson Kane, Chandler Robbins, E. du Vivier, Rawlins Cottenet, George C. Munzig, F. Townsend Martin, and Richard Peters.

Miss Emily D. Grogan of 10 East Fifty-fourth Street gave a tea yesterday afternoon. She had receiving with her the Misses Mildred Dix, Julia Edwards, Julia and Lena Fanshawe, Dorothy Draper, Mary Weston, and Eleanor Swayne. Her guests were débutantes and a number of college boys.

***

Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes entertained a few of her son Harold's school friends at luncheon yesterday, and later in the day the lads were entertained by the ascension of a large toy balloon, whose construction and inflation were supervised by Master Stokes.

***

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt was the star of the Fourth December Musical Morning yesterday at the Astoria. The large ballroom was more crowded than on any previous morning, and all the well-known women in New York seemed to be present. Mme. Bernhardt recited Alfred de Musset's "Lucile" and several poems by her son, Maurice Bernhardt. Miss Anna K. Otten, the violinist, played, and David Bispham sang several selections, arousing his fair audience to great enthusiasm by his rendering of "Danny Deever." All the restaurants in the Waldorf-Astoria were crowded at luncheon, and several large luncheons were given.

***

Mrs. William A. Street of 43 Park Avenue gave a dinner last evening in honor of her débutante daughter, Miss Rosamond Street. Covers were laid for eighteen, and after the dinner about twenty couples came in for the dance that followed the dinner. The dancing was general and there was no cotillion. Among the guests were the Misses Nathalie Schenck, Nathalie Henderson Jones, Smith, Cryder, and Schuyler Schieffelin, Barclay Kountze, Oakley, and Benjamin.

***

Capt. Warren C. Beach and Mrs. Beach (Miss Norrie) gave a dinner last evening at their Fifth Avenue residence in honor of Miss Cornelia Brady Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Harris. The guests, besides Miss Harris, included the Misses Katharine Pratt, Ella de Peyster, Bertha Wurtz, and Katherin McClure, and Cecil Landale, Arthur Morris, Leonard Kip, John Jay, and North Duane.

***

Another of last night's dinners was one given in honor of Miss Elisa Strong and William V. B. Kip by Mr. and Mrs. Philip Rhinelander at their residence. The table was decorated with holly and the Neapolitan orchestra played during the dinner. The guests, in addition to Mr. Kip and Miss Kip, were Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Oakley Rhinelander, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hooker Hamersly, Mr. and Mrs. Howland Pell, Percival Kuhne, Miss Margaret Robison, Katharine D. Hall, Eleanor Morris, Matthew A. Wikes, Mc-Rae Livingston, and Andrew Bibby, Mr. and Mrs. Rhinelander are to give dinners on the evenings of Jan. 2 and 8. That on the latter date will be in honor of Miss Cornelia B. Harris.

Charles C. Aldrich, son of Thomas Bailey Aldrich, and Mrs. R. F. Richards of Cambridge, whose engagement was announced on Dec. 15, were married in Cambridge on Christmas Day. Mrs. Richards was formerly Miss Alexander, a daughter of the late Junius Brutus Alexander of Staten Island, and a sister of Mrs. Fitzhugh Mayo of Richmond, Va.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Moore Robinson will give a dinner at their Philadelphia residence to-morrow evening for Mr. and Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse of this city. Clarence Gray Dinsmore has arrived at Aiken, as have also Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Eustis (Miss Edith Morton) and George Peabody Eustis. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stickney are reported to be at Brunswick, Ga.

***

Among those who arrived yesterday on the Teutonic from Liverpool were Dr. Horace G. Brown, Walter H. Chamberlin, Capt. W. F. Dean Dundas, Col. Grant and Mrs. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred C. N. Harmsworth, Dr. G. W. Hosmer, Leigh Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. George West, the Hon. P. O'Reilly and Miss O'Reilly, and Joseph Pulitzer.

Christmas Party for Miss Townsend.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—Mr. and Mrs. Richard Townsend gave their annual Christmas party this evening, when they entertained 125 young people, the friends of their seventeen-year-old daughter, Mathilde. It was the first entertainment in their new home in Massachusetts Avenue, one of the finest residences in Washington. The invitations were limited to the friends and former comrades of Miss Townsend, including eight or ten of this season's débutantes and a large contingent of college men at home for the holidays. In the dining room roses adorned each of the small tables, at which supper was served at 11 o'clock. Mrs. Townsend, who is the daughter of the late William L. Scott of Erie, Penn., is returning to society after a period of three years of mourning. She will not give any large entertainments this Winter, but will give a series of dinners. Miss Townsend, the only child and heiress to the fortunes of both parents, is being educated at home, and will not make her début for two seasons.

THE VANDERBILT WEDDING.

Ceremony at Newport Jan. 14 Will Be Simple—Special Trains for New York and Boston Guests.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Dec. 27.—This evening Mrs. F. O. French and Miss Elsie French returned from Tuxedo, where they spent Christmas with Mr. and Mrs. Amos Tuck French.

The work of opening The Breakers and removing the 200 storm windows and doors will begin Tuesday next with a force of fifty men. According to the contract, this work must be completed within seven days after the work begins. While the contractors are engaged on this work a large force of servants will prepare the interior for the reception of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and her family and guests.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt will give his bachelor dinner on the evening of Jan. 11 at The Breakers, while Miss French will entertain her bridesmaids on the following evening at Harborview.

The services at Zabriskie Memorial Church will be the simple services of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and will be as short as possible. The boys' choir will furnish the music under the direction of William H. Boone, choirmaster and organist of the church. The selection of the special music for the wedding ceremony will soon be made by Mrs. French and her daughter.

The four ushers, the maid of honor, and the four bridesmaids will enter the church and advance to the steps of the altar, preceded by the bride and her brother, Amos Tuck French, where they will be met by the bridegroom and his best man, Reginald Vanderbilt, and the Rev. G. B. Morgan of New Haven, a cousin of the bride's mother. There the betrothal service will be read. After that the bride and bridegroom and the best man and maid of honor will pass up to the altar, where they will be met by the Rev. Mr. Beattle, rector of the church, who will perform the wedding ceremony.

The guests from Boston will arrive by special train at 11 o'clock, and carriages will be in waiting at the station to convey them to the church, where Organist Boone will give an organ recital for their special benefit. A few of the 200 invitations have reached here from New York. They are of the ordinary design and engraved as follows:

> Mrs. French requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of her daughter, Elsie, and Cornelius Vanderbilt, on Monday, the 14th of January, at 12 o'clock, at St. John's Church, Newport, R. I.

At the wedding breakfast there will not be more than 125 guests.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt has arranged to have special trains leave the Grand Central Station in New York with relatives and wedding guests at two minutes past 1 on the afternoons of Jan. 12 and 13, while a special train with those wishing to return to New York from Newport will leave at 4 o'clock on the afternoon of the wedding day. These trains will be specially made up with a view of comfort and speed, and will make record runs between the two cities.

Despite reports to the contrary, the wedding will in no sense be a large function. Less than 200 relatives and immediate friends will be present at the wedding breakfast at Harborview. The room where this will be served will be decorated principally in pink, which shade will also prevail in the decorations in the church except about the altar, where there will be a magnificent display of white flowers and palms, some of which will stand twenty feet in height.

RUN ON BALTIMORE BANKS.

Throngs of Depositors Withdraw from Savings Institutions.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 27.—The effect of the embarrassment of the Old Town Bank, for which a receiver was appointed late yesterday, was felt in all the savings banks of the city to-day. Throngs of depositors were lined up before the doors when they were opened for business and demanded their money. Several of the larger banks had extra paying tellers on hand, and the demands in all cases were promptly met. It was noticeable that few of the depositors had large amounts to their credit, the major portion footing up a few hundred dollars or less.

At noon the crowds that had surrounded the banks in the early morning hours had been accommodated and left, and thereafter the banks took on apparently their every-day business appearance. As far as known the National banks did not experience any unusual rush of business.

Judge Stockbridge to-day appointed J. B. Ramsay co-receiver, to represent the court, of the Old Town Bank. A third receiver will be named on Monday. Neither the American nor the Old Town Bank receiver has completed a statement of the condition of the property he represents.

WEDDINGS OF A DAY.

Morris—Wynkoop.

The wedding of Stuyvesant Fish Morris, Jr., and Miss Elizabeth Hillis Wynkoop was celebrated yesterday afternoon in Calvary Church, Twenty-first Street and Fourth Avenue. The Rev. Dr. J. Lewis Parks officiated. The bride had no maid of honor or bridesmaids. Her gown was of white silk crêpe, over silk. The skirt, cut without the usual long train, was laid in side plaits, and the bodice was decorated with butterflies in appliqué lace. She wore a girdle with loops of pearls. Her tulle veil was caught to her coiffure by lilies of the valley, and over her face she wore a shorter veil of tulle, and she carried a shower bouquet of the same flowers. There was no bridal procession, the ushers taking their places in the chancel before the bride started up the aisle on the arm of her father. Mr. Morris's best man was his brother, Richard Lewis Morris, and the ushers were Daniel Woodbury Wynkoop, brother of the bride; James Nicholas Gallatin, Thomas Wilkinson Satterthwaite, James Ripley Bartholomew, John Hill Prentice, and James Duane Pell. The church was decorated with Christmas greens, festooned in arches across the aisles.

After the ceremony there was a small reception, for relatives and intimate friends only, at the residence of the bride's father, Dr. Gerardus H. Wynkoop, 128 Madison Avenue. Among the guests invited to the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lewis Morris, Miss Eleanor Morris, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. White of Providence, R. I.; Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Fish, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Prentice, the Misses Julia and Daisy Pierson, Mrs. S. N. Benjamin, Mr. and Mrs. William G. Hamilton, Judge Gray and Mrs. Gray, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Tappan, Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Hall Butler, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wynkoop, Mr. and Mrs. Paul G. Thebaud, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Duer, Mr. and Mrs. Pinchot, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Scrymser, Col. J. J. Astor and Mrs. Astor, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Alexandre, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Cowdin, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Miss Helen Potts, Miss Lucile Weeks, D. L. Haight, Lloyd Phoenix, Col. J. Schuyler Crosby, Goelet Gallatin, H. Evelyn Pierrepont, Jr., Dr. Daniel W. Wynkoop, Dr. Stuyvesant Fish Morris and Mrs. Morris, John H. Rutherfurd, Mrs. F. J. de Peyster, Mr. and Mrs. Robb, and Mrs. Goodhue Livingston.

Hugli—Camp.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—Miss Ethel Theresa Camp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman H. Camp of this city, and Emil Hugli of Switzerland, were married this evening at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, the Rev. Alfred Harding, the rector, officiating. The bride wore a wedding gown of white crepe du chine built on taffeta. Mrs. A. G. Crombie of New Rochelle, a bride of last Summer, was matron of honor. The wedding party further included the bridesmaids, Misses Marion Canfield of New York, Elizabeth Moore of Elizabeth, N. J., and Elsie Jecko and Victoria Ludgate of Washington. Oswald Camp was best man. A small reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugli left later in the evening for a short Southern trip. They will return to Washington before sailing for Europe Jan. 12. Mr. Hugli, who is a well-established lawyer of Berne, is the brother of the former Secretary of the Swiss Legation in this city.

Watchcase Makers' New Union.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 27.—Delegates representing about a score of organizations in New Jersey, New York, and Pennsylvania met here last night and formed the International Watchcase Makers' Union of North America. Heretofore the men have had no National organization. They were generally affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. To-morrow a permanent organization will be effected and officers will be elected.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Henry E. Doremus.

Henry E. Doremus, eldest son of Cornelius Doremus, President of the Germania Life Insurance Company, died yesterday at his father's residence, 51 West Eighty-seventh Street, of a second attack of typhoid fever. Mr. Doremus was unmarried and thirty-nine years old. He was well known among the yachting fraternity of Long Island Sound. For a number of years he was Treasurer of the Second Avenue Railroad Company and continued in that office until the consolidation with the Metropolitan Railroad. Since then he had traveled considerably. He was one of the founders of the Indian Harbor Yacht Club, in Greenwich, Conn., in 1889, and was its first Commodore.

Obituary Notes.

JOHN C. GOODRIDGE, M. D., of this city died yesterday at Lakewood, N. J. He was a prominent young physician, with offices both in this city and in Perth Amboy, N. J. He was an alumnus of Williams College and a member of the American Geographical and the New England Societies.

Mrs. O. H. TIFFANY, widow of the Rev. Dr. Tiffany of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and sister-in-law of Archdeacon Tiffany of the Protestant Episcopal Church, died at her home, 223 East Seventeenth Street, yesterday. She was born in Maryland, and interment will be made in Baltimore.

TREADWELL SMITH, formerly Superintendent of Police at New Haven, died at his home there yesterday after a short illness. He was born in Hempstead, L. I., in 1830. Mr. Smith was a member of the New Haven police force from 1861 to 1897, when he was placed on the retired list at his own request.

JOSHUA D. BAKER, who for five years past had been manager of the Hotel Lafayette, in Philadelphia, died yesterday after an operation for appendicitis. He was taken ill last Sunday. Thirty-five years ago he began his hotel career in Harrisburg. For the past twenty-five years he had been associated with various hotels in Philadelphia. He was fifty-four years old, and was born in Perry County, Penn.

JOHN HOWARD JONES, who, from 1868 to 1875, was agent for the Northwestern Associated Press, in Chicago, and for the greater part of that time agent for the Western and California Associated Press, died at his home in that city yesterday, aged sixty-four. His reports of the great Chicago fire of 1871 gained him considerable fame. For a number of years Mr. Jones was Superintendent of the West Division Postal Station in Chicago.

W. H. MOORE died at his home, on West Sixth Street, Plainfield, N. J., Wednesday, after an illness of six weeks with typhoid fever. He served one term in the City Council as a Republican. He was forty-six years old, and was born in Rahway. He was connected with the Electrical Works at West Orange. He was associated intimately with Mr. Edison, and was largely instrumental in perfecting the incandescent light. He leaves a wife.

JAMES MUNROE BALDW

SKIPPER FOR LAWSON BOAT

Capt. Haff Recommended by the Leading Boston Yachtsmen.

THE MATTER STILL UNSETTLED

Nothing Definite Has Been Learned of the Lawley Ninety-Foot Centreboard Yacht.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 27.—There was a rumor about town to-day that Capt. Hank Haff was to be the skipper of the new Lawson cup defender. But the builders of the boat would neither deny nor affirm the rumor. "I will not say that it is so or that it is not so," said Mr. Crowninshield, the designer, and Mr. Clapp, Mr. Lawson's secretary, said: "Mr. Lawson is not in town, so that Capt. Haff could not have been engaged very well. And the truth is that the matter of a skipper has not yet been settled."

Nor was the skipper himself inclined to be any more communicative. He spoke in high terms of his old friend, Capt. Watson, who has all along been mentioned as the probable skipper of the Lawson boat, and said that the best man would be chosen for the place, irrespective of any other considerations, and the implication was or was not that Watson was the best man, as any one choose to take it.

There seems to be a concerted effort to make up a "mystery of the skipper." This much is certain, Capt. Haff has been in town since Wednesday, in conference with the promoters of the boat, with the sailmaker, and with Designer Crowninshield. He was in the latter's office both this morning and a forenoon. He also had a talk with Commodore Forbes, who, it is said, consented readily to let him take charge of the new boat if the chance was offered.

CAPT. WATSON'S SUPPORTERS.

The friends of Capt. Watson still think, as they have thought all along, that he will be the skipper. The most common supposition is that Mr. Lawson intends to follow the precedent of Sir Thomas Lipton, and have two skippers on his boat, one of them a strong, energetic, lively sailor, though without cup-racing experience, to handle the boat and the crew, and the other a man of greater years and experience who has sailed in many cup races, to give advice and counsel.

The boat has undergone so many modifications that it is now said that it approaches almost a lin keel, with other changes so that her water line will be similar to that of former cup defenders. However, all is speculation on this point until the Herreshoff boat is so far along that it will be too late for the New York people to adopt any of the features of the Boston boat.

If a number of Deer Islanders who have been on either the Defender or Columbia can be obtained, it is likely that they will be in the crew, although the proportion will be small. It has been pointed out that the Swedish hands on the Defender in 1899, under Capt. Rhodes, were considerably ahead of the Deer Islanders on the Columbia in sail-setting, although the downeasterners improved greatly before the season was over and the Columbia met the Shamrock.

One of the strongest supporters of Capt. Haff has been Gen. Charles J. Paine, who headed the Boston syndicate in 1885, when the Puritan defended the cup; in 1886, when the Mayflower defeated the Galatea, and who built the third Boston boat, the Volunteer, in 1887. It was this latter boat that Capt. Haff sailed to victory over the Scottish yacht Thistle, afterward purchased by the German Emperor and named the Meteor.

Capt. Haff also sailed the Vigilant in 1893 and the Defender in 1895, so that his experience on large sloops and cup defenders has been the most extensive of any sailing master in America.

THE CENTREBOARD BOAT.

There is still considerable mystery regarding the Lawley ninety-foot centreboard.

A preliminary design has been made by the Quincy Point builders, and it was said to-night that a syndicate to build the boat had actually been formed. No one could be found, however, who could give the names of any of the backers of the Hanley boat.

The yard at Quincy Point is well adapted to the construction of a light-draught boat, and nearly all the appliances are near at hand.

The Hanley yard is but a short distance below the new works of the Fore River Engine Company, which is preparing to build two battleships.

It is believed that a wooden centreboard boat can be built in about half the time that it takes to construct yachts like the Columbia or Defender, so that the backers of the Hanley boat have at least two months to perfect their plans and organization and still have their boat in the water in time for a good try-out.

NO INVITATIONS FOR ROYALTY.

Kaiser and Prince of Wales Not Yet Asked to Attend Yacht Races.

Although the New York Yacht Club, through Secretary J. Y. S. Oddie, denies that invitations have been sent to the Prince of Wales and the Emperor of Germany to witness the international yacht races next season, as alleged in a London paper, it is quite probable that such invitations will be sent at the proper time. Invitations to witness the races will be extended by the New York Yacht Club to the principal foreign yacht clubs, and as both the Prince of Wales and the Emperor of Germany have manifested a personal interest in yachting, it is probable that special invitations will be extended to them.

The statement that President McKinley will join with the New York Yacht Club in the invitation is, of course, denied at Washington. Should either royal personage signify an intention to visit this country, the President would, of course, receive and entertain him on behalf of the Nation.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—Nothing is known at the White House concerning the story cabled from London to the effect that the New York Yacht Club would invite Emperor William of Germany and the Prince of Wales to witness the yacht races for the America's Cup next Summer, and that President McKinley would write concurrently to the Kaiser and the Prince, inviting them to visit the United States. At the White House it is stated that nothing of the sort is in contemplation. The Prince of Wales was a guest at the Executive Mansion during President Buchanan's Administration.

Work on the Defender's Keel.

BRISTOL, R. I., Dec. 27.—The work of removing the clay around the lead keel of the new cup defender at the Herreshoff works was finished to-day. The planking around the mold also was removed and a crew of men began the work of boring the holes for the lag screws which are to fasten the lead keel to the keel plate. The attachment of these two parts of the yacht involves the cutting of a groove along the entire length of the top of the lead keel for the plate to rest in. Between 300 and 400 screws are necessary to fasten the parts together, and each boring is three or four inches deep. While this work is being done other men are planing the lead and filling up airholes in the casting with melted metal. By these processes the keel will be made smooth.

It is considered likely that this work will require a week or more, and until it is completed further steps in the construction of the defender will not be taken.

Social Features of Harlem Y. C.

The Entertainment Committee of the Harlem Yacht Club has made great preparations in the way of entertaining the members during the ensuing year. The clubhouse is now being renovated and will be finished in time for the second monthly reception to be held to-morrow evening. The seventh annual ball and reception will be held on the evening of the 7th of February.

Elliott Won the Shoot.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 27.—J. A. R. Elliott of Kansas City defeated William R. Crosby of O'Fallon, Ill., at Washington Park to-day in a shooting contest for the cast-iron championship medal by a score of 96 to 91.

NO BASEBALL ORGANIZATION.

Absence of Manning Causes a Postponement of Business.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—No definite organization was accomplished this afternoon by the baseball men who came to Chicago to promote the American League No. 2. The standard of salaries, by-laws, and the general lines of the final organization were discussed, but a telegram from Manning of Kansas City, saying he would be here with his representatives early to-morrow, caused the magnates to postpone final action until his arrival.

Ban Johnson, President of the American League, spent the day with the minor league men giving advice and keeping things moving along smoothly. It is the intention to have non-conflicting schedules in all cities where the American League has two clubs, or where the American has but one and the new Western League a club.

PRATT DEFEATS PENNSYLVANIA.

Brooklyn School Basket Ball Team Scores 23 to Quakers' 19.

Pratt Institute High School's basket ball quintet, champions of the Long Island Interscholastic Athletic League, sprang a big surprise on the basket ball team of the University of Pennsylvania in the Pratt gymnasium in Brooklyn last night by defeating the visitors by 23 points to 19 in a most stubbornly contested game.

When the Philadelphians arrived there was a long wrangle over the rules. The Quakers wished to play under National League rules and Pratt under 1900 rules, and the latter went. In the first half, for Pratt, Nash, Preston, and Merwin, in the order named, made three goals from the field, and then Nash added two goals from fouls, and was followed by Ritter with one from the field, and then Nash added another, making a tally of 12 points. The visitors played hard and fast, their blocking, checking, and throwing being fine, but they were terribly handicapped by the rules under which they were forced to play. Susser made two, Darraugh one, Wilkensen one, and Bennett two for the Quakers, leaving the tally of the half, amid great excitement, even up, with 12 points to 12.

Both teams played hard in the second half, but the Pennsylvanians were outpointed and their throwing was poor. The final tally stood: University of Pennsylvania, 19 points; Pratt Institute High School, 23 points. The same players distinguished themselves in the second period as in the first. Line-up:

Pratt. 23.	Position.	Penn., 10.
Nash	Left forward	Wilkenson
Merwin	Right forward	Evans
Varlan	Centre	Bennett
Ritter	Left guard	Sausser
Preston	Right guard	Darraugh

Referee—J. H. Stelle, Pratt Institute. Umpires—R. L. Bailey, University of Pennsylvania, and Mr. Moebus, Pratt Institute. Timekeepers—Bassing, Pratt institute, and Mr. Smith, University of Pennsylvania. Goals from fouls—Darraugh, 1; Nash, 4. Goals from field—Sausser, 5; Darraugh, 2; Wilkenson, 1; Bennett, 1; Nash, 4; Preston, 3; Ritter, 2; Varion, 1; Merwin, 1. Time of game—Two twenty-minute halves.

INTERCOLLEGIATE CHESS GAMES.

Princeton Led in Opening Play of Quadrangular Tourney.

The four universities—Columbia, Harvard, Yale, and Princeton—began their ninth annual chess tournament at the Columbia Grammar School, on East Fifty-first Street, yesterday afternoon. Hitherto teams of only two players from each college figured in the competition. By a change in the rules, however, the teams have been doubled, so that there are now sixteen players in all. Another change provided for a single round team tournament limited to three days, in place of six. The players who assembled at the appointed time were: For Columbia—Kaufman G. Falk, 1901; Frank H. Sewall, 1902; Rudolph K. T. Schroeder, 1903, and Howard A. Keeler, 1904; for Yale—James F. Sawin, 1904; Henry C. Buss, 1902; Edward B. Adams, 1901, and C. A. Roberts, 1902; for Harvard—Everett K. Perry, 1904; Claude T. Rice, 1901; Arthur J. Fotch, 1901, and William G. Clerk, 1901; for Princeton—James B. Hunt, 1902; John C. Henley, Jr., 1902; Alfred S. Weston, 1899, and Richard Ely, 1902.

Following are the totals of the play of the teams for the day:

Colleges.	Won.	Lost.	Colleges.	Won.	Lost.
Columbia	2½	1½	Princeton	3½	½
Harvard	1½	2½	Yale	½	3½

In the second round to-day Columbia will be matched with Yale and Harvard will be pitted against Princeton.

Tie in College Chess Tourney.

The second day's play in the triangular chess tournament between Brown, Cornell, and Pennsylvania at the Manhattan Chess Club yesterday resulted in a tie all around, between the competing colleges, Cornell gaining half a point on the day's play, Pennsylvania losing half a point, while Brown just held her own. Each college team has now won two and lost two games.

TURF WAR IMMINENT.

Question of Dates May Cause Trouble at Turf Congress Meeting.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—The fight which took place at the last annual meeting between the delegates of the Southern tracks and the Northern men is expected to be renewed at the special meeting of the Western Turf Congress here to-morrow.

According to the rules governing the congress, there is only one question that can be acted on at the meeting, and that is the one regarding the fixing of dates for the different members of the association. None of the local tracks can begin racing before June 10, according to the present rule, and it is for the purpose of changing this order that the meeting has been called at the request of the Chicago tracks. It is claimed that enough votes have already been secured to assure the reconsideration of the obnoxious rule, and the Northern tracks will insist on a change of dates.

Secretary Martin Nathanson of the Harlem Jockey Club said to-night regarding to-morrow's meeting:

"Of course, we have a very good idea what the result will be. There are fourteen votes in the congress, and it will take eight to carry our point.

"We will use every fair means to work together in harmony, and then, if we fail, we will be justified in pulling out of the organization and race independently. We are in favor of every track racing whenever it sees fit, and that is what we are going to do."

ROAD DRIVERS PROTEST.

No More Speedway Match Races for Money to be Held.

The Road Drivers' Association of New York, through its Executive Committee, last night placed itself on record as disapproving of betting on match races held on the Speedway, and in the future will in no way recognize or participate officially in any race in which there is money involved.

The meeting of the Executive Committee was held in the Rossmore Hotel, and was attended by nearly every member. At the suggestion of Alexander Newburger the committee adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That we, the members of the Road Drivers' Association of New York, disapprove of the making of match races on the Speedway for money, (however worthy the object may be,) and refuse to recognize or participate in them in any way."

The committee decided that in the future the association shall devote more of its attention to horse shows and parades than the giving of matinée races. Dr. H. H. Kane presided. Al Reeves was Secretary.

ON LOCAL BOWLING ALLEYS.

Orientals Win Three More Games in National League Tournament.

By winning three games from the Golden Rod team in the National League tournament last night the Orientals win first place in the tournament, unless the Fidelias should win all of their last three games next week, in which case the result will be a tie. The scores:

A New Bowling Record.

Thomas Jay Webb of Indianapolis came within one pin of the maximum possible bowling score of 300 in a game at the City Club, Boston, on Tuesday evening. He made a strike on every ball but the last, which missed the eighth pin, making his score 299.

Baltimore Shooters Won.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 27.—The first of a series of three shoots between teams of nine men each, representing the Keyatone Shooting League of this city and the Baltimore Shooting Association, took place today on the grounds of the Keystone League, at Holmesburg Junction, a suburb of this city, and the Baltimore men won by a score of 198 birds killed to the local team's 189. The next shoot will take place in Baltimore on Jan. 17. Following are the scores of the teams:

INTERCOLLEGIATE MEETING.

Members of Three Committees Discuss Affairs of the Association Generally.

An informal meeting of the Executive, Advisory, and Faculty Advisory Committees of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America was held yesterday afternoon at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, at which the following were present: President Albert G. Mason, Harvard University; Secretary William A. Young, New York University; Treasurer W. R. Quinn, Columbia University; Jesse D. Dana, Yale University; A. D. Warner, Cornell University, and Edward A. Mechling, University of Pennsylvania, of the Executive Committee; Gustavus T. Kirby, Columbia University, and Murdock Kendrick, University of Pennsylvania, of the Graduate Advisory Committee; Prof. George Wharton Pepper, University of Pennsylvania; Prof. Ira N. Hollis, Harvard University, and Prof. R. N. Corwin, Yale University, of the Faculty Advisory Committee.

Chairman Kirby of the Advisory Committee stated after the meeting that no formal business had been transacted, and that the meeting had been held for the purpose of getting together the three committees and deciding upon a policy regarding a number of questions now pending. He stated that the case of Beck, the Yale athlete whose amateur standing is in question, is still in the hands of a committee, and that a report, which is likely to be favorable to the accused athlete, will be rendered at the next meeting of the committee.

The revised eligibility rules, it was stated, will be issued in about two weeks.

Kent to Try for Record.

Arthur Kent, the champion sprinter of the Pastime Athletic Club, has decided to try for the 65-yard indoor record at the joint athletic meet of Company I of the Seventy-first Regiment and the Star Athletic Club, to be held at the regimental armory, Jan. 13, 1901.

Another feature of the occasion will be the exhibition of standing broad and high jumping by Ray Ewry. He will also be a contestant in the running high jump. The strongest handicap runners in the metropolitan district have entered for the two-mile handicap. McLaughlin and Arnold of the New West Side A. C.; Fennell, McCabe, Shevlin, and Hollester of the Star A. C., and Arnold of the Union Settlement A. C. are some of those who will start.

Athletic Association to Disband.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 27.—Announcement was made to-day of the voluntary dissolution of the Syracuse Athletic Association upon Dec. 31.

Notes of College Athletes.

E. P. O'Donnell of Heckersville, Penn., a member of the class of 1902, has been elected manager of the Georgetown University football team for next season.

The date of the annual Cornell interclass cross country race has been changed from April 27 to Saturday, March 30. The race will be similar to the recent intercollegiate race in this city.

Gymnasium work for Harvard's track team candidates will begin on Monday, Jan. 7. Capt. Hallowell, has advised all the men intending to try for positions to do as much practising as possible in the open air during the holidays.

Enthusiasm for hockey is on the increase among the students in the University of Pennsylvania, and the regular team has been materially strengthened by the presence of Hare, one of the university's strongest football players. Capt. Wallace is weeding out the weaker material and expects to have a good team ready for the big games early in the new year.

I. K. Baxter, the champion pole vaulter and high jumper of the University of Pennsylvania, is keeping in constant practice in preparation for the college athletic season next year. In the trip abroad last Summer, Baxter won more prizes than Kraenzlein, the crack hurdler, and the Philadelphia students look to Baxter as a great aid toward winning the intercollegiate championship at the next track meeting.

Andrew O'Dea, who coached the ambitious oarsmen of the University of Wisconsin last year, will handle the men again this coming season. He is reported as saying that he is exceedingly pleased at the new material and he believes there will be no difficulty in picking enough new men to add to the old ones who remain another year, to make a strong crew. It is reported that Phil King, the graduate manager, is to make a tour among Wisconsin's Eastern alumni in an effort to raise funds for the crew.

Charles Dudley Daly, who was Captain of the Harvard Football team last season, has decided to become a soldier, and he is now attending the National Preparatory Academy at Highland Falls for the purpose of fitting himself to pass the West Point examination in March. He was appointed to his cadetship from a Massachusetts district. In view of the publicity now being given to West Point hazing, Daly is reported as saying that he is willing to take what is coming to him, if that is one of the necessities toward obtaining a place in Uncle Sam's army.

At an athletic conference held at the University of Michigan last week and attended by a number of prominent alumni of the institution, strong pleas were made for a return to the old "Michigan system" of football tactics, for Michigan coaches, wherever possible, and more liberality on the part of Faculty as regards athletics. The Chicago Alumni also asked that two football games be played each year in Chicago. One they want early in the season, in order to get a line on the men, and they desire the Thanksgiving Day game be made a permanent feature. Prof. Pettingill of the Faculty Athletic Committee stated that many of the recommendations would be accepted by the Faculty.

The Yale basketball team has left for its Christmas holiday tour, which includes a journey as far West as Fond du Lac, Wis., where games will be played to-morrow and Monday. Games on the homeward trip will be played at Hiram College, Cleveland, Ohio, and at the Ohio State University, Columbus. Later in January games will be played with Harvard, Cornell, and Dartmouth. "Al" Sharpe, the best baseball player in the university, has been prevailed upon to give up practice in that sport, so as to save himself for baseball in the Spring. The Yale basketball team is: O. M. Clark, Captain; R. B. Hyatt, H. B. Colton, C. E. Rogers, C. D. Lockwood, M. A. Finck, L. B. Hall, and H. S. Hetrick.

Capt. Reid of the Harvard baseball nine, will be assisted in his duties toward getting the men in shape for the coming season by the presence of Jack McMasters, who will resume his duties as physical trainer immediately after the holidays. All of the old men except two—Loughlin and George—are back in college, and as both played the same positions, in the outfield, there really is but one place to be filled by a new man. It is quite possible, however, from the promising new material in college that some of the older men may be temporarily ousted from their positions. One of the most promising new men is Walter Clarkson, who did some grand pitching on the freshman nine last year. He is a brother of John Clarkson, the famous league pitcher, and inherits the latter's baseball abilities to a nicety. Young Clarkson is an exceptional batsman, and strong batters are needed by the team more than anything else.

Pennsylvania's track training methods will be materially changed from last year. The famous trainer of the Red and Blue athletes, Murphy, has gone to Yale, and the system adopted for the coming season is one of graduate coaching. George Turner, who is well known to collegians as a skillful trainer, will be in charge of the candidates for the various teams, and he will be assisted in different branches of the work by such well known men as Kraenzlein, McCracken, Bucholz, Orton, and Grant. Orton will be in training for the team, and other good men are Capt. McClain, Hare, Bushnell, Tewkesbury, and Baxter. There is some good new material, including Colket, who got second in the pole vault last year in Paris and London; Drumheller, an improving quarter and half-mile runner; Deakin, in the pole vault; Elwell, Goodman, and Sharpe, in the sprints, with Cook, Wastney, and Metzger in the quarter-mile.

Yale Basket Ball Team Won.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Dec. 27.—The Yale basket ball team met the team composed of members of the Thirtieth Separate Company in the State armory to-night and defeated the Elmirans by a score of 24 to 4. The college boys won by superior team work and brilliant individual plays. The local guardsmen showed great pluck, but were fairly outclassed.

LARGER PUBLIC PLAY GROUNDS.

Cricketers Advocate More Space for Golf, Polo, and Other Sports.

There was a meeting yesterday at the Young Men's Christian Association building in Brooklyn of cricketers interested in the proposition to extend the public playing grounds of the borough. Representatives of the Manhattan, Brooklyn, Kings County, St. George, New York, and Nelson Lodge Clubs were in attendance, and they listened with interest to the statement of Dr. Robert Boocock, who has been at work on the proposition for many months.

The idea is for the city to purchase the property adjacent to the parade ground extending from Caton Avenue to the railroad track, which would give ample space for polo and golf. Dr. Boocock stated that he had already secured the signatures of 250 residents of Brooklyn to petition to bring the matter before the proper authorities, and he expects to secure the support of the devotees of polo, baseball, and, in fact, of all who consider that the more facilities there are given for public playgrounds the better it will be for the community at large.

Incidental to the meeting came up a proposition to organize a Prospect Park Cricket Association, but there were so many different views expressed regarding the necessity and feasibility of this that nothing was done in the matter. The Manhattan representatives appeared to think that with the Metropolitan League and New York Cricket Association in existence there was no need for another organization—especially if one of its objects should be to restrict its members' cricket to Prospect Park.

NORRIS WON AT BILLIARDS.

The second game in the Knickerbocker Athletic Club billiard tournament for the club championship was played last night between Charles S. Norris and John A. Hendrick, and was won by the former by a good margin, Mr. Norris running out his string of 300, while Hendrick was left with 227 to his credit.

It was a good game, nevertheless, and, like the previous night's contest, showed the winner's exceptional qualities of nerve and coolness when they are most desired. The scores follow, a 14-inch balk line being used:

Norris—14 0 7 6 4 2 1 0 0 0 34 7 1 0 0 0 3 4 8 11 1 0 12 7 1 11 4 1 4 0 5 12 3 19 15 0 0 0 4 0 7 1 2 5 0 21 10 0 0 2 21 2. Total, 300; average, 5 45-51.

Hendrick—4 7 0 2 2 0 10 2 0 5 18 2 0 0 15 3 0 24 0 2 0 1 0 5 0 13 10 1 13 0 0 0 2 9 14 0 21 2 0 8 8 0 0 9 0 0 4 29 0 0. Total, 227; average, 4 27-50.

Charles S. Norris and Albro Akin will be the contestants in to-night's game.

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS.

MISSOURI PACIFIC SURVEYS.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Col., Dec. 27.—It is reported that the Missouri Pacific has placed a corps of engineers in the field surveying a line westward from the present terminal of the Central branch at Lenora, Kan., and this report has revived talk of the intention of that company to build the Denver Short Line.

The engineers have not made known the purpose of this survey, and there is no other feasible plan which would induce the company to set stakes across a country which has been covered no less than three times in the past fifteen years.

Rock Island trainmen brought the report to this city that the engineers are working near Oberlin, Kan., some distance west of Lenora, and apparently following the last survey, made about eight years ago.

Vandalia Road Receiver's Report.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 27.—The annual report of Receiver Malott of the Vandalia Road was filed to-day in the Federal Court.

Mr. Malott assumed the receivership on Nov. 14, 1896, and during his incumbency the profits have reached $1,038,784. During the year ante-receivership indebtedness to the amount of $547,573 was paid. This indebtedness consisted of overdue notes of the company, interest on them, accounts payable, judgments, claims, and expenses of prior operations.

The Santa Fe Gets Pecos Valley Line.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—Announcement was made to-day of the acquisition by the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Railway Company of the Pecos Valley and Northeastern Railroad. The line runs from Amarillo, Texas, where it connects with the Santa Fé system to Pecos City, a distance of 372 miles. The price the Santa Fé paid for the new property could not be ascertained, but it is understood that payment will be made by cash and general mortgage bonds.

Restricting the Free List.

Presidents of the Trunk Line and of the Central Traffic associations, at a recent meeting, agreed to take the representatives of private freight car lines off the free list. These private freight car lines include refrigerator car companies, oil tank car lines, and a long list of similar concerns. Requisitions for trip and other passes for the representatives of these lines had become more or less of a burden to the railroads. This practice was abolished some time ago by the Western lines.

Brief Railroad Items.

The new freight classification, which will become effective Jan. 1, will make at least one radical change in that it reduces the minimum carload from 24,000 to 16,000 pounds.

The American Ticket Brokers' Association, through its President, has offered a standing reward for the conviction of any ticket broker who is guilty of altering or forging tickets.

A special meeting of freight representatives of Eastern railroads is to be held about the middle of January for the purpose of regulating import freight traffic. It is proposed to appoint a joint agent to take charge of this business, in which rates are now badly demoralized.

AN INDIANAPOLIS MYSTERY.

W. H. Smythe, a Prominent Mason, Found Shot in the Head and Will Probably Die.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 27.—William H. Smythe, Secretary of the Masonic Grand Lodge of this State, was shot in the head in his offices in the Masonic Building here shortly after noon to-day. It is believed that he cannot live. Mr. Smythe claims a woman did the shooting, but the police have so far been unable to locate her.

Lewis A. Coleman, an attorney, found Mr

DOCTOR ACCUSED BY BROTHER.

Intoxication Charged, but Paulson Says He Is Victim of Conspiracy.

Dr. John J. Paulson of 148 Hamilton Avenue, Brooklyn, who at one time had a considerable reputation in that borough as a practicing physician, was arraigned before Magistrate Bristow in the Butler Street Police Court, yesterday, on a charge of vagrancy preferred by a policeman who had found him wandering about the streets.

Thomas Paulson of 694 Seventh Street, his brother, who also appeared in court, charged the prisoner with habitual intoxication. The Magistrate refused to entertain either of these charges, and committed Paulson to be examined as to his sanity.

Paulson was graduated from the Long Island College Hospital in 1891. He is one of a family of six children, and says that his relatives are trying to defraud him of the property of his mother, who died intestate.

W. H. NICHOLS SERIOUSLY ILL.

Prominent Manufacturing Chemist Suddenly Attacked by Appendicitis.

W. H. Nichols, one of the most prominent chemical manufacturers in Brooklyn and the founder and President of the Nichols Chemical Company of Laurel Hill, L. I., is seriously ill from appendicitis at his home, 353 Clinton Avenue, Brooklyn. It is hoped, however, by his physicians that he will recover without an operation. He was attacked suddenly on Sunday.

Mr. Nichols was only twenty-one years of age, in 1870, when he was graduated from the New York University and began business with his father, A. H. Nichols, as a manufacturing chemist. In January, 1891, the business was merged into a corporation, which has now a capital of $2,500,000 and large plants for the manufacture of acids and fertilizers at Laurel Hill, L. I., Troy and Syracuse, N. Y., and Capellon, Canada. Mr. Nichols is Vice President of the Manufacturers' Association of Kings and Queens Counties and President of the American Exploration Company. He is a Trustee of the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn.

Legal Notices.

AT A SPECIAL TERM, PART I. OF THE Supreme Court, held at the Court House, in the County of New York, on the 31st day of October, 1900. Present: Hon. John J. Freedman, Justice.

In the matter of the petition of a majority of the Directors of the American Impulse Wheel Company of New York for a voluntary dissolution of said company.—Order to show cause.

On reading and filing the petition of Herbert P. Campbell, James R. Vandyck, and Lester B. Churchill, duly verified on the 25th day of October, 1900, whereby it appears that said petitioners constitute a majority of the Directors of the American Impulse Wheel Company of New York; that said company is a corporation created under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business in New York County; that said company is insolvent, and its property is not sufficient to pay all just debts for which it is liable or to afford reasonable security to those who may deal with it; that said company owns a quantity of personal property, subject to incumbrance, and is indebted to divers persons in large amounts, a great part of which is past due, and that said company is doing business at a loss, the income from the sales of its wheels being greatly insufficient to pay its running expenses, not including interest on company's bonds, and that said company has no money with which to pay any of its obligations, except to the amount of the sum of 37-100 dollars ($8.37); and that if a small proportion of its creditors were to bring actions for the recovery of the sums due them, and the property of the company should be levied upon and sold under execution, said property would be exhausted in paying costs and expenses and the amounts of the judgments, and there would not be enough to satisfy the claims of all the creditors, and that it would be beneficial to the interest of all the creditors and stockholders that said corporation should be dissolved and its property placed in the custody of the court; and the said petitioners, containing schedules showing assets and liabilities of said corporation and the other matters required by statute to be shown; now, on motion of Frederick H. Sanborn, counsel for said petitioners, and on reading and filing admission of due and timely service of notice of this motion, and a copy of the said petition and the petition of Herbert P. Campbell, James R. Vandyck, and Lester B. Churchill, verified on the 25th day of October, 1900, and the schedules hereto annexed, upon the Attorney General of the State of New York, it is Ordered that all persons or corporations interested in said American Impulse Wheel Company of New York show cause before Edward M. TO THE FIRST MORTGAGE BONDHOLDERS

OF THE
Fort Worth and Denver City Railway Company.

The interest on the first mortgage bonds of the Fort Worth and Denver City Railway Company, which, by agreement of October 12th, 1895, between a Committee of the Bondholders and the Union Pacific, Denver and Gulf Railway Company and its Receiver, was reduced for a time to four per cent., will, after December 1, 1900, accrue and be payable at the original rate of six per cent.

The control of the Company through stock ownership is in the Colorado and Southern Railway Company, and it appears from published reports that the present earnings of the property are not sufficient to pay the full interest on the bonds. Under these circumstances it becomes essential that the bondholders unite in securing all the consideration to which they are entitled, and, if need be, enforcing their rights under the mortgages and otherwise protecting their interests.

The undersigned have been requested by the principal bondholders to act as a bondholders' committee, and in order to confer upon the committee necessary authority, the bondholders are respectfully urged to deposit their bonds at once with the United States Trust Company under a bondholders' agreement lodged with it.

Engraved certificates of deposit will be issued by the Trust Company, and application will be made to the New York Stock Exchange to list the same.

Copies of the agreement can be obtained either from the Trust Company or from the Committee.

We herewith offer for subscription:

$10,000,000

Southern Pacific Company

2-5 Years 4½% Gold Bonds.

Due December 1, 1905.

(Redeemable at the option of the Company on and after December 1st, 1902, at par and accrued interest.)

At the price of 98% and Accrued Interest, payable as follows:

$50.00 per Bond on January 7, 1901, and
$937.50 per Bond on February 1, 1901.
$987.50 per Bond of $1,000.

The Bonds are Coupon Bonds in denomination of $1,000 each, with the privilege of registration as to principal. They are dated December 1, 1900, from which date they begin to bear interest at the rate of 4½% p. a., payable half-yearly on June 1st and December 1st. Both the principal and interest of the Bonds are payable in the City of New York in United States Gold Coin of the present standard of weight and fineness and without deduction for any tax or taxes which the Southern Pacific Company may be required to pay or to retain therefrom under any present or future law of the United States or of any State or County or Municipality therein.

Mr. Charles H. Tweed, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Southern Pacific Co., states the following in a letter to us, dated Dec. 27th, 1900:

"The $10,000,000 Southern Pacific Company 4½% Gold Bonds are a direct obligation of the Southern Pacific Company, and are secured by a Mortgage or Deed of Trust dated December 1, 1900, to the Central Trust Company of New York, Trustee. They form part of a present issue of $15,000,000 of such bonds, secured by deposit with the Trustee of $7,174,000, face value of various bonds, and $59,487,000, face value of various stocks, of companies controlled by the Southern Pacific Company, besides stock of Wells, Fargo & Co. to the amount of $1,530,000 face value.

The Mortgage contains a statement of the securities deposited with the Trustee, as well as the terms and conditions under which further issues of Bonds may be made against deposit with the Trustee of additional securities or the mortgaging of additional properties as security thereunder, but the aggregate amount of Bonds at any one time outstanding thereunder is not to exceed $30,000,000.

The Company reserves the right, upon three months' previous notice, to redeem all or any part of the Bonds at par and accrued interest on, or at any interest date after, December 1, 1902, under certain terms and conditions, as stated in the Mortgage, but if a portion only of the outstanding Bonds are at any time to be so redeemed, their distinguishing numbers are to be determined by lot.

The proceeds of the $15,000,000 Bonds will reimburse the Company for a portion of its capital expenditures during the last five years, including the acquisition of the control through stock ownership of upwards of 580 miles of railway, and of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and will furnish funds for the improvement and betterment of its properties.

THE EARNINGS AND EXPENSES OF THE SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY, in respect of its Proprietary and Leased Lines, and the Miscellaneous Income and Expenses of the Southern Pacific Company, and of all Proprietary Companies, for the year ending 30th June, 1900, as compared with the year ending 30th June, 1899, (excluding Houston and Texas Central R. R. and lines in Texas subsidiary thereto,) were, as certified by Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Co.:

Payment in full may be made in purchaser's option, on January 7th, 1901, under discount at the rate of 4½% p. a., against delivery of Interim Certificates issued by the Central Trust Company of New York, Trustee.

COPIES OF THE MORTGAGE, embodying the terms and conditions upon which the security for the Bonds is to be held, dealt with, and disposed of, may be obtained at the Central Trust Company of New York, or at our office.

The subscription will be opened on Friday, JANUARY 4TH, 1901, at 10 o'clock and close at 3 o'clock, or earlier, on the same day.

Allotments will be made as soon as possible thereafter, the right being reserved to reject any applications and to award a smaller amount than applied for. Default of payment of the instalment due February 1st, 1901, will render the previous payment liable to forfeiture.

Subscriptions will be received simultaneously in AMSTERDAM by Messrs. TEIXEIRA DE MATTOS BROTHERS, and application will be made to list the Bonds on the New York Stock Exchange.

MARKET MOVEMENT.

The stock market yesterday in the early trading was influenced by the lower prices sent over from London, and by a report industriously circulated on the floor that the bankers were to call a large number of loans and that money rates at the same time would be sent sharply up. As a consequence selling orders, some of them attributed to profit taking, but much the greater number of them to short sales, were put in the market and prices fell off somewhat throughout the general list. Following this early selling the market lapsed into a state of dullness and irregularity until shortly after noon, when large buying orders were placed by Morgan and Standard Oil interests. The instant result was a sharp recovery in quotations under the leadership of Reading, St. Paul, North American, Rock Island, Ontario and Western, Consolidated Gas, and Amalgamated Copper. This better tone held for the remainder of the day, with the close showing substantial strength.

Notwithstanding the fact that London sent over lower prices, the operators in that market turned buyers later in the day, and it was apparent that a sentiment had been improved by the action of the Governors of the Bank of England in not increasing the Bank's minimum discount rate.

Of the standard railway shares, St. Paul was the leader, selling up over 2 points, to 140⅞, the highest price on record, and closing strong. The buying was on a very large scale, nearly 100,000 shares of the issue being traded in, most of the purchases coming from leading local banking interests, though Western houses also were large buyers. What induced to the buying is a matter of conjecture, as there was no definite news on the security. It was said, however, that the entrance of James J. Hill into the property signified some important plan of closer relations with other of the Granger systems. The old story of an increased dividend was also revived.

***

People's Gas was easily the feature of the market, the tape recording the opening at "20,000 shares from 108 to 110," as compared with a closing price on the day previous of 106¼. A great crowd had gathered around the trading post of the stock at the opening, among whom were a large number of shorts who rushed to cover on the definite announcement by Senator Depew that the Chicago Gas war had been settled, and that he and his friends had been large buyers of the stock. At the same time investment orders were placed in the market, with the result that the bidding sent the price sharply up to the figures indicated. Subsequently, on profit taking by buyers in the early part of the week, the stock reacted, but later held firm and closed steady at 108. All told, 58,000 shares of the stock were traded in during the day.

***

In the steel stocks, inside buying was most in evidence in Federal Steel on the favorable dividend prospects. Pressed Steel Car was helped by the reports of several new contracts, while Steel and Wire was bought by Chicago interests.

Discussing the pig iron market, Rogers, Brown & Co. say:

"It is seldom that the last week of the year sees much buying of pig iron. This year, however, is an exception. There has been a fair business doing in small lots, and one or two transactions of magnitude have been closed in Eastern markets. The trade is requiring increased shipments on contracts, which proves that stocks in buyers' yards are small and the melt is increasing.

"The year closes with bright prospects in America, but amid gloom in England and Germany. How far the discouragement there over American competition will disappear when the pressure of present heavy shipments of pig metal, billets, &c., is relieved, remains to be seen. It is certain that since the advance in this country and the heavy decline in prices in Great Britain and on the Continent now, export business must stop, so far as heavy lines are concerned. In the lighter finished forms, however, there is not likely to be much interruption.

"The most active features of iron consumption at present are shipbuilding, bridge construction, railway equipment, and kindred lines. Never in the history of the country were the large plants devoted to the above industries so full of contracts. There is improvement also in cast iron pipe, which for years has been in more or less depression."

***

Buying by Morgan interests was responsible for the sharp upward movement in Ontario and Western, a net gain of 2 points being recorded on transactions involving some 111,000 shares. While there was no definite news in respect to the stock, its activity and strength, and the coincident strength of the Reading and other coal stocks led to further talk of some other important development in the coal stocks, second in importance not even to the Pennsylvania Coal Company transfer.

***

Resumption of Standard Oil buying in the Wheeling and Lake Erie shares in the last hour of trading sent those securities sharply up from the low figures. It is officially stated that an announcement in connection with this buying will be made in a few days.

***

The movement in Leather Trust securities was accompanied by a persistent report that a readjustment of the stocks is to be carried through. Officials of the company refuse to discuss the matter.

***

United States Rubber shares were among the weakest on the list, though there was no news to explain the heaviness. At the offices of the company it is declared that the report of a cut of 25 per cent. in prices is without foundation.

***

Sugar Trust stock, after selling down as low as 139½, took on a tone of aggressive strength under persistent buying from Boston, credited to Thomas W. Lawson. The quotation ran up in short order to above 145, then dropped over a point, only later to return to the high figure, where it closed. A meeting of the Directors of the company was held during the day, but at its conclusion President Havemeyer stated that only routine business was transacted. A report that an extra dividend had been declared on the stock was denied by Mr. Havemeyer.

***

Interests connected with the property are steadily absorbing Hocking Coal and Iron shares. It was announced from Athens, Ohio, yesterday that the largest coal mine in Ohio, owned and controlled by the company, will soon be equipped and ready for operation at Doanville, eight miles northwest of Athens. It is said that when sufficient entries are driven and the mine is in full blast the daily output is expected to reach 2,500 tons.

***

The advances in Consolidated Gas and Brooklyn Union Gas were on buying credited to the Standard Oil interests identified with the property.

Chicago Great Western preferred B was strong on reports that the earnings of the company are so satisfactory that a meeting is shortly to be held to discuss changes in the dividend policy of the system.

***

North American, ordinarily inactive, showed buoyancy in the late trading, appreciating 2¾ points on dealings in 28,000 shares. J. P. Morgan was said to be a large buyer of the stock.

***

The Wabash securities were taken in hand by a bull pool and moved up. Not much outside buying, however, appeared on the advance. The old report of closer traffic relations with other systems was heard, but, as on former occasions, it could not be officially confirmed.

Wall Street was yesterday treated to a number of excellent statements of railway earnings. They included Norfolk and Western, with a gain of $44,140, for the third week in December; Missouri Pacific, with a gain of $13,000; Southern Railway, with a gain of $39,110—all for the same period. Atchison for November reported net earnings of $2,071,000, a gain of $166,780. The only disappointing statements were those of Jersey Central and Erie, the former showing a decrease of $61,650 for November, and the latter a decrease of $19,645 for the same period.

The indications are that the bank statement on Saturday will make a favorable showing. During the week the banks have gained something over $1,750,000 from the Sub-Treasury, representing payments for interest and premium on bonds, while it is understood there has been a fairly considerable gain from the interior also.

STOCK EXCHANGE NEWS.

Application has been made to the Stock List Committee to list the following: St. Lawrence and Adirondack Railway Company $800,000 first mortgage gold 5 per cent. bonds of 1996; $400,000 second mortgage gold 6 per cent. bonds of 1996; New York, Ontario and Western Railway Company $1,500,000 first refunding mortgage 4 per cent. bonds.

Robert D. Wrenn, A. Murray Young, 15 Wall Street; J. H. McCullough, at Flower & Co., and George S. Baldwin were yesterday elected to membership in the Stock Exchange.

Third Avenue new 4s have been placed on the unlisted department of the Stock Exchange.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC BONDS.

Speyer & Co. will offer in this city, simultaneously with the offering in Amsterdam by Teixeira de Mattos Brothers, $10,000,000 Southern Pacific Company 2-5 years 4½ per cent. gold bonds, due Dec. 1, 1905, but redeemable at the option of the company on and after Dec. 1, 1902, at par and accrued interest. The bonds are offered at 96 and accrued interest, payable as follows: $50 per bond on Jan. 7 and $937.50 on Feb. 1, 1901, a total of $987.50 per bond of $1,000. Payment in full may be made in purchasers' option on Jan. 7, 1901, under discount at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum against delivery of interim certificates issued by the Central Trust Company of New York, trustee.

These bonds are a direct obligation of the Southern Pacific Company. They form part of a present issue of $15,000,000 secured by a deposit with the trustee of $7,174,000 face value of various bonds, and $59,487,000 face value of various stocks of companies controlled by the Southern Pacific Company, besides stock of Wells, Fargo & Co. to the amount of $1,530,000 face value. The aggregate amount of bonds at any one time outstanding under the mortgage is limited to $30,000,000. The proceeds of the $15,000,000 bonds will reimburse the company for a portion of its capital expenditures in the last five years, including the acquisition of the control, through stock ownership, of upward of 580 miles of railway and of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and will furnish funds for the improvement of its properties. The earnings of the Southern Pacific Company for the year ended June 30 last, as certified to by chartered accountants, show a surplus over all charges and interest of $7,253,420, against a surplus of $4,477,975 in the previous year.

Subscription books for these bonds will open at 10 A. M. on Jan. 4, 1901, and close at 3 o'clock or earlier on the same day. Allotments will be made as soon as possible thereafter, the right being reserved to reject any applications and to award a smaller amount than applied for. Application will be made to list the bonds on the New York Stock Exchange.

FORT WORTH AND DENVER BONDS

The interest on the first mortgage bonds of the Fort Worth and Denver City Railroad Company, which was reduced for a time to 4 per cent., will hereafter accrue and be payable at the original rate of 6 per cent. It appears that the present earnings of the property are not sufficient to pay the full interest on the bonds. Accordingly the principal bondholders have requested Henry K. McHarg, Sidell Tilghman, and Franklin B. Lord to act as a bondholders' committee, and in order that this committee shall have necessary authority the bondholders are asked to deposit their bonds at once with the United States Trust Company, under a bondholders' agreement lodged with it.

A VANDERBILT EXAMPLE.

In the betterment that has come to the financial conditions of the railroads of the country through improved methods of management, exceptional illustration is presented by the statistics of operation of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad. Though the company's mileage has actually been reduced about 25 miles, gross receipts from 1897 to the beginning of 1900 have increased over $3,300,000 and net receipts have risen during the three years from $6,755,000 to $7,781,000, with fixed charges reduced from $3,000,000 a year to $2,724,000. THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Money was in good demand and firm to-day in view of the approach of the year-end. Discounts were steady, but there was little doing, even by the Bank of England, which handled most of the business.

Business on the Stock Exchange was resumed to-day in a feeble way after the holiday, operators being mainly occupied with the settlement. Consols were firm, home rails were irregular, and districts were very firm. Brazilians were in demand.

Americans were active, but weak, and mostly below parity on realizations. The principal relapse was in Northern Pacifics, especially preference shares, on continued offerings on the statement that an official denial had been made of the early retirement of the preferred stock. Norfolks were in good demand. The bull account in Americans here appears to be the largest opened in many years.

Consols for money, 97½; consols for the account, 97 9-16; Atchison, 48¾; Canadian, 94⅞; St. Paul, 143; Illinois Central, 133¾; Louisville, 89½; Union Pacific preferred, 85⅞; New York Central, 147; Erie, 25⅜; Pennsylvania, 145; Reading, 13; Erie first preferred, 60⅝; Northern Pacific preferred, 89¾; Grand Trunk, 7½; Anaconda, 10⅛; Rand Mines, 39⅝.

Bar silver steady at 29 11-16d per ounce.

Money, 3½@4 per cent. Rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 4@4⅛ per cent.; three months' bills, 4¼ per cent.

Spanish 4s closed at 69¾.

Of the total amount of bullion withdrawn from the Bank of England on balance to-day was £90,000. Gold premiums: Buenos Ayres, 130.60; Madrid, 33.85; Lisbon, 38; Rome, 5.45.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—Business on the Bourse to-day was irregular and inactive, but later improved and prices closed rather firm. Internationals hardened, especially Brazilians. Rio Tintos were considerably higher, on the advance in copper. Kafirs commenced weak, but improved.

Three per cent. rentes, 101f. 50c. for the account. Exchange on London, 25f. 8c. for checks. Spanish 4s closed at 70.35.

The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows the following changes: Notes in circulation increased 59,800,000f., Treasury accounts current decreased 22,075,000f., gold in hand increased 7,375,000f., bills discounted increased 101,650,000f., silver in hand decreased 2,700,000f.

BERLIN, Dec. 27.—Prices on the Boerse to-day were irregular. Northern Pacifics were easier in response to New York, and Canadian Pacifics rose substantially on the increase in traffic receipts. Home funds were firm, and locals were heavy on unsatisfactory manufacturing reports.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 41½ pfennigs for checks. Discount rates: Short bills, 3½ per cent.; three months' bills, 4⅛ per cent.

The weekly statement of the Imperial Bank of Germany shows the following changes: Cash on hand decreased 18,400,000 marks, Treasury notes decreased 3,400,000 marks, other securities increased 29,620,000 marks, notes in circulation increased 40,820,000 marks.

MADRID, Dec. 27.—Gold was quoted to-day at 34.07.

BANK OF ENGLAND'S STATEMENT.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—The weekly statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes: Total reserve decreased £1,771,000, circulation increased £180,000, bullion decreased £1,591,000, other securities increased £325,000, other deposits decreased £1,009,000, public deposits decreased £421,000, notes reserve decreased £1,621,000, and Government securities were unchanged.

The proportion of the Bank's reserve to liability is 37.52 per cent. Last week it was 40.23 per cent.

Rate of discount unchanged at 4 per cent.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Though the transactions yesterday in the market for outside securities were not very large, there was considerable fluctuation in prices. Distilling of America was the most erratic of the active issues, but in a number of other issues as well variations of a point or more were noticed. The majority of the changes resulting from the day's operations appeared on the side of gains, but in some few cases substantial declines occurred.

***

DISTILLING OF AMERICA, which for several days had been steadily advancing, opened yesterday with much show of strength and on the initial transactions the common stock advanced to 7⅞ and the preferred to 34½. These sharp advances, however, were not well maintained, and though the selling movement which followed them was by no means heavy, the prices of both common and preferred declined even more sharply than they had advanced. Both issues ended lower than Wednesday's final quotations. The early advances seemed the result of an effort to bid the stocks up and were not accompanied by any news relating to the company. Notwithstanding the sharp fluctuations in these stocks, the trading in them was very much smaller than on the previous day. The transactions in the preferred stock did not exceed 2,000 shares, and trading in the common was on an even smaller scale. The preferred closed at 34½ bid, a net loss of three-quarters of a point, and the common at 6¾, a net loss of a quarter of a point.

***

ELECTRIC VEHICLE enjoyed a still further advance. The strength of the stock was attributed to recent developments of a favorable character in the business of the company, but no definite reports were heard. The common stock, after selling as high as 22¼, closed at 21 bid, a fractional net gain, and the preferred stock was bid up from 35 to 44½. The only sale reported was made at 40.

***

ELECTRIC BOAT, after several days of dullness, came into some demand, and the common stock ended the day at a substantial advance. About 500 shares sold between 28½ and 29½, and it closed at 29 bid, a net gain of 1 point. The preferred stock closed, as on Wednesday, at 49 bid, but no transactions in this issue were reported.

***

CRUCIBLE STEEL opened strong and sold up to 22¼, but later suffered a rather sharp decline. It went to 20⅝, and then recovered to 21⅛, showing a net loss at the close of three-quarters of a point. The preferred stock was dull and, with the common, weaker than on the previous day.

***

AMERICAN BRIDGE was quiet, only a few hundred shares changing hands during the day. With the rest of the steel stocks, it declined fractionally.

***

CRAMPS' SHIPYARD, on the purchase of a few hundred shares, sold up about 4 points, to 81.

***

BRITISH COLUMBIA COPPER sold just at the opening at 22, but on subsequent sales declined to 21½. It was offered there at the close and showed a fractional net loss.

***

UNION COPPER was traded in to the extent of 400 or 500 shares at 5½, a slight advance over Wednesday's price.

***

SEABOARD AIR LINE securities were all weak, but few transactions were made in this market. The common stock at the close was offered at 10, showing a net loss of half a point, and the preferred stock was 1½ points lower, at 28½ bid. The heaviest decline occurred in the bonds, which closed at 69½ bid, a net loss of 2 points.

***

Closing quotations yesterday, compared with those of the previous day, were as follows:

TO GO INTO BANKRUPTCY

Johnson, Seymour & Co. Unable to Effect a Settlement.

Petition by H. A. Seymour—David Webster Refuses to Join Him—Whereabouts of Mr. Johnson Unknown.

Henry A. Seymour, one of the partners of Seymour Johnson & Co., stock brokers of 71 Broadway, who failed in May last, filed a petition in bankruptcy yesterday, both individually and as a partner in the firm, so as to put the affairs of the firm into bankruptcy. He requested David Webster to join in the petition, but the latter refused. Frederick W. Johnson, the other partner, it was stated, has departed for parts unknown.

The firm's liabilities are $682,630, of which $403,000 are secured and $219,630 unsecured. The nominal assets are $750,865, consisting of stock and bonds, $542,945; accounts, $203,862; cash in banks, $1,251; stamps, $792; personal property, $1,843. Of the accounts, $16,942 are considered good.

The firm made an assignment on May 28 last, and two involuntary petitions in bankruptcy were afterward filed against them by a few of the creditors, both of which petitions have since been dismissed.

Epstein Brothers, attorneys for Mr. Seymour, said yesterday that Mr. Seymour had been undergoing an examination before a referee in the State courts by the assignee at the instance of some of the creditors, and an injunction was obtained yesterday restraining any further proceedings in the matter. Mr. Seymour has been trying to effect a settlement with the creditors, but could not put it through. There will be an offer of compromise submitted in the bankruptcy court.

Epstein Brothers said they could not say at present what the offer would be. Some months ago, it was stated that Mr. Seymour was negotiating a settlement at 50 cents on the dollar cash, and notes for the balance, and 117 out of 185 creditors had accepted the offer.

Alfred Hayes, Jr., to whom the firm's assignment was made, said yesterday:

"No business has been carried on since the assignment by any member of the concern. Frederick Johnson had a seat on the Exchange, and that was sold immediately after the assignment. The offices of the firm were given up upon the assignment."

When asked why Mr. Johnson left the city, Mr. Hayes said that he thought he had gone into the ranching business in the West.

GOVERNMENT CROP REPORT.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—The Statistician of the Department of Agriculture estimates the United States wheat crop of 1900 at 522,229,595 bushels, the area actually harvested being 42,495,385 acres, and the average yield per acre 12.29 bushels. The production of Winter wheat is estimated at 350,025,409 bushels and that of Spring wheat at 172,204,096 bushels, the area actually harvested being 26,235,897 acres in the former case and 16,259,488 acres in the latter. The Winter wheat acreage totally abandoned in Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, and Illinois is finally placed at 3,522,767 acres, and the Spring wheat acreage totally abandoned in North Dakota and South Dakota at 1,703,467 acres.

The extraordinarily rapid rate at which the Winter wheat acreage of Nebraska is gaining upon the Spring wheat acreage of that State has necessitated a special investigation of the relative extent to which the two varieties were grown during the past year. The result of the investigation is that while no change is called for in the total wheat figures of the State, 590,575 acres have been added to the Winter wheat column at the expense of the Spring variety.

The newly seeded area of Winter wheat is estimated at 30,282,564 acres. While this acreage is slightly greater than that sown in the Fall of 1899, as estimated at the time, it is 600,634 acres less than the area that was actually sown, the discrepancy being due to that remarkably rapid development of Winter wheat growing in Nebraska with which, as above stated, the department's reports had failed to keep pace. A comparison of the newly seeded acreage with that of the Fall of 1899 shows that of the eleven States and Territories that sowed one million acres or upward with Winter wheat one year ago, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Kansas, California, and Oklahoma report an increase amounting to 971,704 acres, and Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Texas, and Tennessee a decrease of 1,780,191 acres. The average condition of the growing crop on Dec. 1, was 97.1 per cent. of the normal. There are many complaints of the Hessian fly, but the low condition figures reported from Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, and Tennessee, 86, 80, 87, and 84 respectively, are fully offset by the exceptionally high conditions reported from Kansas, Missouri, California, Oklahoma, and other States, in all of which it is above normal.

The production of corn in 1900 is estimated at 2,105,102,516 bushels; oats, 809,125,989 bushels; barley, 58,925,833 bushels; rye, 23,995,927 bushels; buckwheat, 9,560,966 bushels; potatoes, 210,926,897 bushels, and hay, 50,190,991 tons. The area from which these crops were gathered was as follows in acres: Corn, 83,320,872; oats, 27,304,795; barley, 2,894,282; rye, 1,591,326; buckwheat, 637,930; potatoes, 2,611,054, and hay, 39,132,960.

The corn crop of 1900 was one of the four largest ever gathered, while the oat crop has only once been exceeded. On the other hand, the barley and rye crops are the smallest, with one exception in each case, since 1837, the buckwheat crop is the smallest since 1883, and the hay crop the smallest, with one exception, since 1888.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Sales of Dwellings and Small Properties Make Up a Fair Day's Business —Auction Room Dealings.

The Frank L. Fisher Company has sold for Josephine Halstead, for $35,000, the four-story dwelling 127 West Seventy-fourth Street, 20 by 60 by 100.

Wright Barclay has sold for Peter Wagner the four-story American basement dwelling 341 West Eighty-fourth Street, 17 by 102.2, one of a row of three recently completed.

The Central Realty Bond and Trust Company is the purchaser of 38 Wall Street, the sale of which was reported yesterday. The property is subject to a long lease, and will, it is said, be held as an investment.

Rumors of the sale of the property 682 Broadway, a three-story building at the southeast corner of Great Jones Street, lacks confirmation. Title to the parcel stands in the name of Temple Prime. The present tenants of the building, the East River National Bank, will vacate the premises on May 1, but an officer of that institution said yesterday that he was not aware that the property had been sold.

It is reported that Ambrose K. Ely has sold to Dr. George F. Laidlaw the four-story dwelling 58 West Fifty-third Street, 21 by 100.5.

Porter & Co. have sold for Ellen Dreher, as executrix of the estate of John Fallon, for $24,500, the five-story double tenement 304 West One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Street, 25 by 99.11.

Edward Stein and Charles Gahren have sold for John F. Cordes the five-story flat, with store, 586 Columbus Avenue, 27.8 by 100.

Kahn & Baumann have sold for Annie Ripin the three-story dwelling 245 East Fifty-eighth Street, 20 by 100.5, to Robertson & Grant, and have resold the property for the latter firm to a client for occupancy.

Peter Axelrad has sold for William Prager to Samuel Padwee, for $39,250, the seven-story flat 44 Gouverneur Street, 24 by 102.

A report of sales made by Brokers I. Randolph, Jacobs & Co., published in this column yesterday, made it appear that Ruth & Hoffman had bought 65 East Ninety-ninth Street, and George Schuster 75 Christopher Street. There parties, respectively, are the sellers, and not the purchasers, of these properties.

Ghames & Losere have sold for William C. Schwarz, for $4,000, the plot, 50 by 100, on the east side of La Fontaine Avenue, 50 feet north of One Hundred and Eighty-first Street.

The apartment house at the southeast corner of Madison Avenue and Sixty-sixth Street, 50 by 100.5, was transferred yesterday by Louis Korn to the Jackson Realty Company for a consideration of $150,000 over mortgages of $250,000.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg" stands for mortgage and "R S" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stamps shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 50 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus 1,000 times the value of the revenue stamps on the conveyances should therefore show the true consideration:

HART TO REGAIN CONTROL

Third Avenue Road's Old Chief Owner Will Redeem His Stock.

SQUEEZE FOR MONEY LENDERS

Some Have Disposed of Collateral and Must Pay Penalty for Efforts to Manipulate Values.

Henry Hart, formerly President of the Third Avenue Railroad Company and for many years a conspicuous figure in municipal street railways, is about to come into his own again. Within the next few weeks he will call on the Wall Street syndicate, which has had pledged with it several million dollars' worth of his stock in the Third Avenue Company, to return to him the collateral and take back the amount for which it was pledged. The story is a dramatic one.

When the affairs of Mr. Hart became so involved a year ago as to threaten his holdings in the road's stock, his friends, including A. J. Elias, his son-in-law, then President of the Third Avenue Company; Edward Lauterbach, and a number of others, made rigorous efforts to save him from the impending ruin. As a result of their efforts, a syndicate was formed which included many prominent financiers. With this syndicate Mr Hart deposited $3,000,000 of the stock of the company at par. The agreement which was entered into between the parties in January last was to the effect that about a million dollars' worth of the stock, which was then quoted in the market at 120, was to be sold outright at par to the new company. In consideration of Mr. Hart's virtually giving the syndicate this $200,000 in profits, the syndicate agreed to lend Mr. Hart about $2,000,000 on the remaining stock. The syndicate was to hold this stock as collateral security for a year, with the understanding that if Mr. Hart was unable to take up his obligations at maturity, the syndicate could buy the remaining stock at 125.

The troubles of the times for the Third Avenue line that followed this deal are history. The break of the stock to 50, its almost immediate recovery to par following the control obtained over it by the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, the appointment of a receiver, and other collateral matters are well known. Through all, it was contended by Mr. Hart's friends that the syndicate, or some of the members of it, had been the least active of those who were systematically hammering at the property and trying to encompass its ruin. There was never at any time the faintest expectation that Mr. Hart would be able to take up his stock at the expiration of the term of the contract, and now that he stands ready to do so it is stated in unmistakable terms by Mr. Hart's friends that more than one of the persons comprising the syndicate are in sore straits and that some of them have even gone so far as to try to effect a compromise with the agents representing Mr. Hart.

These members of the syndicate, confronted by a call from Mr. Hart for his stock, which, it is alleged, they have sold out, are in the position of being unable to procure any of the stock in the market. It is now held almost entirely as investment stock from the fact that the Metropolitan Street Railway Company has guaranteed within a certain time to pay to the holders 5, 6, and 7 per cent. interest. What will be the outcome of the matter when Mr. Hart stands ready to fulfil his part of the agreement can only be conjectured. The fact is that Mr. Hart has raised all the money necessary to take over his collateral and the Travelers' Life Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., is advancing the final part of the necessary $2,000,000.

A. J. Elias, when spoken to concerning the matter yesterday, said: "I do not see how the matter interests any one except the parties to the agreement. Mr. Hart borrowed certain moneys, he pledged certain securities, he stands ready to pay back the loan and take his property. That is all there is to it. The details are of no consequence."

Edward Lauterbach was also of the opinion that the matter was a private one. "A loan was made," he said, "collateral was given, now the man stands ready to repay the loan and he naturally wants the security he pledged. The security is worth more than it was pledged for and naturally he is anxious to have it. It is entirely a private matter and I do not care to say anything more about it."

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

New York City.

MARIE S. PENFIELD.—Judgment for $5,027 was entered yesterday against Marie S. Penfield in favor of John Wanamaker for balance due for goods sold to her between Feb. 1 and June 1. She paid $857 on the bill. She was served with the summons at 123 West Eighty-ninth Stret.

Out of Town.

ARMSTRONG, BAKER & CO.—Armstrong, Baker & Co. of New Hartford, N. Y., manufacturers of underwear and knit goods, made a general assignment yesterday for the benefit of their creditors to George W. Rice of New Hartford. The firm has been in business a number of years and employed about 100 hands.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

DAVID MAIBRUNN.—David Maibrunn, residing at 57 Grove Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $3,456 and nominal assets of $3,782, in outstanding accounts. He was formerly in the meat business for ten years.

ALBERT H. BALCOM.—Albert H. Balcom, clerk, residing at 219 West Thirty-fourth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $3,320 and no assets. The debts were contracted in Chicago in 1897 and 1898, as a partner in the firm of Bernarde & Balcom.

JOSEPH DAUGIRD.—Joseph Daugird, residing at 19 East One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $5,750 and no assets. The debts were contracted at Dallas, Texas, twelve years ago, where he failed in September, 1889.

GEORGE M. COLLINS.—George M. Collins, agent, residing at 530 West One Hundred and Twenty-third Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $26,292 and no assets. Of the liabilities, $22,522 are secured by bond and mortgage, and $8,793 damages for personal injuries in favor of Elise Koch, who recovered a judgment against him in Chicago on May 6, 1900. The liabilities were contracted in Chicago from 1895 to 1900.

JOHN MCSWEENEY.—John McSweeney, builder, of 241 West One Hundred and Third Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $201,202 and assets consisting of lots at White Plains, $400, and notes for $775, the value of which is unknown. Mr. McSweeney was for many years in the liquor business, which he gave up about three years ago, and has also been in the building line for about ten years. Of the liabilities, $74,500 are secured by bond and mortgage on property formerly owned by him, and $126,702 are unsecured. Among the unsecured liabilities are $77,000 to Robert W. Stuart for money loaned on a bond dated Aug. 31, 1899, and $23,679 deficiency judgment in favor of Jeremiah P. Robinson, as trustee for Elizabeth De Witt Leonard, the property being at Nos. 3,132 and 3,134 Broadway. There are twenty-four other unsecured creditors, principally for materials and labor.

CHARLES E. WHITE.—Charles E. White, truckman, residing at 72 Bedford Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $4,959 and assets of $500 on a debt due. Of the liabilities, $2,314 are stated to be alleged liability for goods stolen by two persons, and the claims are in favor of Hochstim & Bossach, $1,400; David J. Ullman, $670; Hein & Fox, $190, and M. D. Mirsky & Co., $54. The rest of the liabilities are for groceries, liquors, cigars, rent, and money loaned. Samuel S. Myers, his attorney said that the reason for Mr. White's going into bankruptcy is that an employe had absconded with a large amount of goods intrusted to his care for delivery. Mr. Ullman, one of the creditors, who lost a considerable quantity of goods in this way, commenced an action in conversion in the Municipal Court against Mr. White and sought to obtain an order for his arrest. Mr. Myers obtained an injunction in the United States District Court restraining the continuance of the proceedings in the Municipal Court. Mr. White started in the trucking business thirty-five years ago, and was located at Bleecker and Wooster Streets.

WARDEN J. E. NAGLE FAILS.

FOUND DYING IN AREAWAY

Dr. Brown, Noted Syracuse Oculist, Expired in Police Station.

Theory of Foul Play, Disproved by the Autopsy, Which Showed Asphyxiation.

Dr. Hiram Hungate Brown of Syracuse, N. Y., one of the most prominent oculists in the country, was found lying unconscious yesterday morning inside the iron palings of a shallow areaway at 200 West Forty-fifth Street, the home of Richard King, a broker.

The man was first noticed at 6:45 o'clock by a milkman, who called Policeman Hillman of the West Forty-seventh Street Station. The peculiar position in which he was found seemed to indicate that he had fallen through the iron gate. There were two abrasions on his face. He was taken to the West Forty-seventh Street Station, where he died a few minutes later, without regaining consciousness. Papers in his pockets established his identity. He also had about $10 in money and a gold watch and chain. The body was removed to the Morgue, where Dr. Weston performed an autopsy.

Dr. Weston at first expressed the opinion that the bruises on the head might have been made with some instrument, and that the man had been attacked by footpads, but, on hearing the story of the police of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, Dr. Weston arrived at the conclusion that death had been caused by asphyxia, and that the cuts and bruises could have been caused by a fall. The lungs of the man were entirely congested, the liver enlarged, and the brain showed the effects of habitual use of alcohol.

How Dr. Brown came to be in West Forty-fifth Street is not known. Mr. King is not acquainted with the physician, and members of his family know nothing of the case until notified by the police. It is believed that Dr. Brown fell into the areaway, if he did fall, between 6:30 and 6:50 o'clock. The police of the West Forty-seventh Street Station believe that the gate by which he was found was unlocked, and that Dr. Brown leaned against it and pitched forward. Mrs. King, however, asserts that the gate was locked.

Dr. Brown and his wife left Syracuse last Friday to spend the holidays in New York. They stopped at the Hotel Imperial. The following statement was made by W. L. Fa-by, a friend of the family:

"On Wednesday evening Dr. and Mrs. Brown had several friends to dinner at the Imperial, and shortly after the dinner the doctor and some of his guests left the hotel. One of those who went out with Dr. Brown was Howard Irving Smith, a newspaper writer. The doctor did not return in the morning, came the news of his death."

Howard Irving Smith, one of the last to see Dr. Brown alive, said that after leaving the Imperial with him they had gone to the Waldorf-Astoria, then to the Manhattan Hotel, and finally to Rector's restaurant in upper Broadway, where they ate oysters and drank a while. There they were joined by four men, one a stranger to Mr. Smith. All left the place together about 3 o'clock. Mr. Smith took a cab home, and the others, he says, disappeared. Dr. Brown, he said, had been drinking champagne, but he was not intoxicated.

Dr. Brown was forty-eight years old. He has no children. He was known all over the country for his skill as an oculist, frequently being called to this and other large cities to perform difficult operations. His services commanded high prices, but he was noted as a friend of the poor, frequently attending gratis those too poor to pay him, and because of his charities. Mr. Brown is a cousin of Edwin Knowles, the theatrical manager, of Brooklyn. The solicitor of the late doctor and an undertaker, both from Syracuse, arrived in New York last night. The body is to be taken to Syracuse to-day.

MR. PHILBIN ACTS PROMPTLY.

Gets Indictment Against East Side Woman While She Is Testifying.

District Attorney Philbin made clear the line of action he will pursue regarding the resorts of the "red light district" by personally securing yesterday the indictment of May Stanley, while the latter was testifying as a State's witness in General Sessions. Morris Cohen of 533 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn, was charged with abducting fifteen-year-old Mollie Waffenstein of 312 East Fourth Street, taking her to one of the McGurk resorts in Third Avenue, and there administering to her drugged soda water. Later, it was testified, he took her to 59 East Tenth Street, where she was received by the Stanley woman. The latter testified that Cohen brought the girl to her house, which she said was a furnished room place, eminently respectable. Agent Barclay swore that it was a disorderly resort.

During the progress of the trial Judge Foster ordered a transcript of the testimony taken to District Attorney Philbin. The latter proceeded immediately with it before the Grand Jury, and the indictment against the woman was found. When the jury found Cohen guilty, the Stanley woman was arraigned under the indictment and committed to the Tombs until to-day. Cohen will be sentenced to-day.

Mr. Philbin sat on the bench with Judge Foster when the verdict was delivered and later visited Part II., Criminal Sessions, where Recorder Goff is sitting. Mr. Philbin bowed to the Recorder and remained in the court room a few minutes while Assistant District Attorney McClelland conducted the examination of a witness.

EVERALL WILL CONTESTED.

Children of the Testator Dispute Their Stepmother's Claims.

The children of George Everall have started a contest of his will, declaring that the paper filed in the Surrogate's office was not regularly signed. The children allege that their stepmother procured the document by fraud. This will contest comes as a climax to the legal fight over the body of the testator. At present the body of Mr. Everall is in a receiving vault at Woodlawn Cemetery awaiting the decision of the Supreme Court as to whether it shall be buried beside Mr. Everall's first wife or in the plot purchased by the second Mrs. Everall.

The will over which there is a contest is dated Sept. 20 last, and leaves all of the testator's property to the widow. Mr. Everall died on Nov. 30.

The contest was begun on behalf of Harry J. Everall, Florence E. Manulgan, and Annie E. Archer, in their petition to the Surrogate the children say "that the said alleged will was not duly executed by the said George Everall, deceased; that he did not publish the same as his will in the presence of the witnesses whose names are subscribed thereto; that he did not request the said two witnesses to be witnesses thereto, and that the said alleged witnesses did not sign as witnesses in his presence or in the presence of each other."

The will is witnessed by Pauline E. Thomas and Sarah E. Slaker. Neither witness adds her address to her signature, and the contestants declare they do not know who the witnesses are.

Francis W. Aymar represents the contestants and James W. Osborne has charge of the widow's interests.

The second Mrs. Everall was Mrs. Katherine Hayden, the widow of William Hayden, who was at one time manager for Stuart Robson. Her marriage to Mr. Everall, a Fifth Avenue tailor, took place at Trinity Church on Aug. 6, 1899, the only witness being Nellie McHenry, the actress. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Everall sailed for Europe.

In a business way the father and children were closely related, as Harry J. Everall was the Vice President of the tailoring company, while the sons-in-law were respectively Secretary and Treasurer. Mr. Everall left considerable property besides his interest in the company.

Mr. Guggenheimer to Dine Newsboys.

President Randolph Guggenheimer of the Municipal Council is arranging a banquet to be given at his expense on Washington's Birthday to the newsboys of the city. On Jan. 17 President Guggenheimer will speak to the newsboys at the home on Duane Street on the subject of how to win success in life.

Daughters of Revolution Reception.

The New York City Chapter Daughters American Revolution will give a midwinter reception celebrating the wedding day of Gen. Washington. The actual date is Jan. 6, but the chapter will receive on the afternoon of Jan. 5, from 4 to 7, at Sherry's. There will be music, a collation, and addresses by distinguished guests.

DESERTED WIFE'S STORY.

Attempted Suicide the Sequel to an Elopement.

When Maud Hawthorne, a young married woman, was arraigned in the Lee Avenue Police Court, Brooklyn, yesterday, charged with attempted suicide, she told a sad story. The young woman is twenty-two years old, and lived with her husband at 290 Marcy Avenue until Christmas Day, when she was deserted. Finding herself alone, the young wife wandered from her home into the streets, determined to end her life. She purchased mercury tablets from a drug store, and after walking about the streets until a late hour, swallowed them. She then staggered into the Eastern District Hospital, where her life was saved.

"I was tired of life," she sobbed, when asked by the Magistrate why she wanted to die. "My home is in Richmond, Va., where my people were well-to-do, my father, now dead, having been a wealthy iron founder. A year ago Thomas Hawthorne appeared in Richmond. We met and fell in love with each other. Notwithstanding parental objections, I yielded to his solicitation to elope.

"My husband brought me North, and we came to Brooklyn to live. He didn't treat me well, and I secured employment in a candy factory to help us along. Two weeks ago I was laid off, and my husband then began to act cruelly toward me, and on Christmas Day deserted me."

Magistrate Kramer was so impressed with the woman's story that he paroled her on her promise not to repeat the act, and issued a warrant for the arrest of Hawthorne on the charge of abandonment.

WILLIAM H. MOGER'S DEATH.

Dry Goods Man Expires After an Operation for Throat Trouble.

William H. Moger, Vice President and Superintendent of the dry goods corporation of Henry Batterman Company, at Flushing Avenue and Broadway, Brooklyn, died suddenly yesterday at his home, 270 Stuyvesant Avenue, Brooklyn. Mr. Moger had been ill but a few hours. About 1 o'clock yesterday morning he awoke complaining of a sore throat. Dr. M. E. Peterson of 428 Hamburg Avenue was called in and after an examination found that the patient was suffering from oedema of the glottis. Dr. Stephen B. Lutz and Dr. Ricord were called in for consultation. An operation was decided upon and immediately performed.

Shortly after the operation the patient was seized with a choking spell and died a few minutes later. Before the end came, and while the patient was sinking, he seized a piece of paper, upon which he wrote a memorandum telling where all his bonds and stocks and other goods and chattels could be found.

Mr. Moger was born in Brooklyn fifty-eight years ago and was connected with the Batterman Company for sixteen years. He was President of the H. Batterman's Employes' Mutual Benefit Association. He was the former Superintendent of the South Third Street M. E. and the Cook Street M. E. Church Sunday schools.

A widow, a daughter, and a son survive him. The son, George F. Moger, is the cashier of the Broadway Bank.

FELL FOUL OF A POLICEMAN.

Spaniard Who Lost His Way Struck O'Connell Because He Refused to Fetch a Cab.

Señor Juan Gaytia y Gardia, who arrived in this country from Spain four days ago on his way to Montreal, arose early yesterday morning and left his apartments at the Fifth Avenue Hotel for a stroll. His walk finally led him to Thirty-seventh Street and First Avenue, where it struck him that the surroundings architecturally, aesthetically, and picturesquely were becoming commonplace and uninteresting in the extreme.

Turning to retrace his steps to his hotel, he came upon a gashouse, which he did not remember passing before. He took another direction, and, after walking a distance which he calculated would bring him to his apartments, he was annoyed and confused by bringing up at the busy entrance of a well-known slaughter house. After crossing numerous small parks, vacant lots, and being halted a number of times at the brink of the East River, he threaded his way back through a labyrinth of pushcarts to the same old Thirty-seventh Street and First Avenue corner, which he recognized by six large garbage barrels grouped in a strikingly informal manner.

The Old World wanderer at this moment espied Policeman William O'Connell, and petulantly directed him to call a cab. O'Connell said he would direct the Señor to a cab stand several city blocks distant.

"Ah, Carramba! get me a cab," ordered Señor Gaytia y Gardia, stamping his foot.

The policeman replied in a liquid flow of expression to the effect that he was not in that business, and then the Spaniard struck him with his fist. He was promptly arrested, and then again struck the officer.

When arraigned in the Yorkville Court the Señor explained that he had originally had no idea of assaulting the policeman, but was lost, hungry, and angry. He was held in $500 bail for trial in Special Sessions. He deposited the amount of bail with the City Chamberlain. He said he regretted the experience, as the delay will cause him to be late in arriving in Montreal.

CITY MARSHAL PRATT EXPLAINS.

Denies That He Evicted a Sick Woman and Says He Did His Duty.

City Marshal Pratt, who evicted the Dietz family in Brooklyn ten days ago, yesterday gave out a statement. Two hours after the eviction Mrs. Dietz gave birth to a child, and on Christmas Day she died in Flatbush Hospital.

Pratt in his statement denies that Mrs. Dietz was in bed when he went to the house, and further asserts that he told her he would call an ambulance if she wished to go to the hospital.

As for dispossessing her, he says he had no option, as the landlady refused to wait another day, and threatened to report him if he did not do his duty.

The body of Mrs. Dietz was removed yesterday to the home of George Kern, 111 Debevoise Street, a neighbor, who has taken the five motherless children and father in until Dietz can find quarters. Dietz had a small insurance upon his wife's life, just enough to bury her, and the funeral will take place to-day and the burial will be in the Lutheran Cemetery.

A Noted Picture Sold.

Ex-Secretary William C. Whitney has purchased a large, full-length standing portrait by Van Dyck of William De Villiers, Viscount Grandisson. It was originally in the possession of the Buckingham family, from whom it passed into the hands of Lady Grey. Jacob Herzog of Vienna, an art writer, purchased it from Lady Grey, and it was shown at the Van Dyck tercentennial in Antwerp in 1899. It was purchased there by a New York art dealer the same Autumn, but was not brought here until late last Summer.

The portrait is a remarkably fine example of the great Dutch painter. It is instinct with life, virile in execution, and is remarkable for the flesh tones and the painting of the details of the elaborately embroidered Court costume. The dealer who sold the canvas to Mr. Whitney declines to state the price paid, but the general report in art circles is that the dealer secured it for some $50,000, and doubled his money on the transaction. It is probable that Mr. Whitney paid a larger price for the picture than has ever before been paid for a painting in this country. The canvas will be a notable addition to the goodly number of examples of the early English, Dutch, and Flemish masters already owned by Mr. Whitney and which now hang in his Fifth Avenue palace.

Record of the World's Shipping.

The volume for 1901 of the "Record of American and Foreign Shipping" is now being delivered. The "Record" contains full particulars of about 17,000 vessels of all classes and nationalities, rules for the construction and classification of vessels, rules for the construction and survey of steam machinery and boilers for vessels, and provisions for the installation of electric lighting and power apparatus on shipboard. The work also contains lists and addresses of prominent shipbuilders, dry docks, marine railways, marine machinery, and boiler constructors in the United States, list of vessels whose names have been changed, also compound names indexed by last name, names and addresses of owners of vessels classed in the "Record." The "Record" is published by the American Bureau of Shipping, 66 Beaver Street, this city.

SAYS RATS DROVE HIM OUT.

Tenant Declares the Rodents Show a Strange Predilection for an Up-to-Date Apartment House.

Another case was before Justice Worcester in the Eleventh District Municipal Court yesterday involving rental of apartments in the Hartley apartment house, at One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street and Central Park, in which the defendant declares he was forced to leave on account of the presence of ferocious and obtrusive rats.

The apartment house is seven stories high, and is elegantly appointed and fitted with all the latest improvements. It would appear, however, that there was something about its construction peculiarly inviting to rats, for, according to several of the tenants, about all the prosperous and well-to-do rats of Harlem have taken apartments there. Last Spring Henri Wolfe vacated his apartments in the building, and when sued for rent as a defense declared that the rats living there were so large and ferocious that they even came up out of their holes in the daytime and took viands from his table. He said that it finally came to either his leaving or the rats getting out. The rats refused to move, so he vacated. Judgment was, however, found against Wolfe, the Judge holding that rats were no excuse.

The defendant yesterday was Richard B. Lee, who vacated his apartments on May 10 last. Mr. Lee made a number of defenses, the principal one being the rat nuisance. He said the rats seemed to own the place. They ignored the tenants, and did about as they pleased. A man, he said, hardly dared stay out late at night, being certain to see all sorts of rats upon going to bed. The women went about in a state of terror, holding their skirts and leaping for chairs at the slightest sound. A bloomer epidemic was threatened among the feminine tenants.

A decision was finally given in favor of the defendant.

CANNOT GET PULP WOOD THERE.

Adirondack League Club Decides Not to Sell to Paper Manufacturers.

The Adirondack League Club held a meeting yesterday in the rooms of the Board of Trade and Transportation, at 203 Broadway, for the purpose of determining the advisability of allowing paper manufacturers to get pulp wood out of certain portions of the 100,000 acres of land leased by the club.

The Committee on Ways and Means appointed some time ago to look into and recommend whether the club should permit lumbering operations in Hamilton and Herkimer Counties presented a report at the meeting strenuously opposing the issue of such a permit. A resolution supporting this report was unanimously adopted.

The committee, through its Chairman, President J. M. Taylor of Vassar College, argued that no contract should be entered into for the cession of the pulp wood, on account of the danger of forest fires.

LOCAL OPTION TAX LAW.

President Feitner's Views—Would Exempt Mortgages from Taxation.

President Feitner of the Department of Taxes and Assessments was asked yesterday about the proposed local option tax law prepared for presentation to the Legislature by a committee of the Chamber of Commerce. He said:

"As a general principle I am in favor of local option in taxation. I have not studied the Chamber of Commerce law, but understand that it is the old bill introduced by Senator Elsberg revived. One fault is that the law gives the power to the Legislature to force the city to spend large sums of money and then they propose to pass a law levying assessments for State taxes in proportion to the amount of money spent by the city. This is wrong."

"Would you favor exempting mortgages from taxation?"

"Yes. There should be some reform on taxation so that the different classes of property would bear equal burdens. At the present time it is practically impossible to levy assessments on all personal property, and real estate must bear the burden."

President Feitner said he thought the Department of Taxes and Assessments would take no official action on the Chamber of Commerce law, but that the different officials might study the matter and give their views to the public.

BOY FRACTURES BOY'S SKULL.

Fight Over a Football Argument May Have Fatal Ending.

Bad feeling engendered by rivalry between two boys' football teams resulted in a fight Wednesday night between John Bressingham, fifteen years old, of 421 East Sixty-ninth Street and John Krettil, the same age, of 1,280 First Avenue. Bressingham is now in the Presbyterian Hospital with a fractured skull as a result of the encounter.

The boys belong to rival football teams and have engaged in several games. The rivalry between the teams has been so bitter that already several fights have taken place between individual members. Krettil and Bressingham met about 8 o'clock Wednesday night at Sixty-ninth Street and Avenue A, and the old football argument was taken up. Bressingham offered to fight and Krettil promptly accepted. Bressingham was getting the better of the encounter when Krettil picked up a large stone and struck his antagonist on the head with it. This ended the fight.

Bressingham went home and his mother washed the blood from his head. The wound did not appear to be serious and the boy went to bed. He awoke about midnight, however, with violent pains in his head, and his father took him to the hospital, where the surgeon said the skull was fractured and that the boy was in a critical condition. The father then went to the police station and made a complaint against young Krettil. When arrested the boy did not deny throwing the stone.

Cars Cut Off Policeman's Leg.

Andrew Shea, a mounted policeman of the High Bridge Station, fell under a railway car and had his right leg crushed below the knee while attempting to get off a train last night at King's Bridge, where he lived. He was removed to Fordham Hospital, where the surgeons decided to amputate the leg at the knee. Shea is thirty-seven years old and has been in the service for sixteen years.

NEW EMPEROR OF CHINA?

Empress Regent Said to Have Appointed a Fifteen-Year-Old Boy.

He May Be Pu-Chun, the Son of Prince Tuan, Who is Now that Age — Kwang-Su Asks Reformers' Aid.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Standard says:

"Private advices from the Province of Shan-Si say that, while the Court was sojourning at Tai-yuen-Foo, the Empress Dowager secretly appointed a new Emperor, with the title Tung-Hsu.

"He is a fifteen-year-old boy, who was taken to Sian-Foo in the imperial yellow chair. This explains the permission given to Emperor Kwang-Su to return to Peking.

"Emperor Kwang-Su has notified the reform party that he is returning to the capital, and will need its assistance."

Whether the boy stated in the foregoing dispatch to have appointed Emperor of China by the Empress Regent, Tsze-Hsi An, is the son of Prince Tuan cannot be gathered. Prince Tuan's son was declared the heir to the throne last year, when the Empress Dowager seized the reins of power. His name is Pu-Chun, but it is customary, when a new Emperor ascends the throne, for him to adopt another name.

The age given as that of the new Emperor—fifteen years—corresponds to that of Pu-Chun, who had just entered his fifteenth year when he was declared the heir apparent.

The Chinese reform party has recently been working to secure the restoration of Emperor Kwang-Su to full power.

NEW NEGOTIATION PLANS.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—The State Department is inclined to discredit the report from Peking that Li-Hung-Chang and Prince Ching have heard from Emperor Kwang-Su, and that the Emperor objects to the provisions in the joint note calling for the reduction of the forts and the permanent establishment of legation guards. It is not considered improbable that Kwang-Su may object to these provisions, but it is not believed that he has received the note yet, and when he does receive it it is considered highly improbable that he will make an immediate answer.

It would take a week, State Department officials say, for the note to get to Kwang-Su, at his retreat in the mountains, and the same length of time for a reply to go to Peking. There is a belief in official circles that the Emperor will take at least a week to consider the terms of the note before making any reply.

New schemes for depriving the Ministers at Peking of all but a formal share in the negotiations are being considered. The plan for referring the indemnity question to the Court of Arbitration at The Hague is still under consideration.

A new proposition which is under consideration in case the arbitration scheme may not commend itself to the powers is for the appointment of additional Commissioners to act with Minister Conger. This was the President's original plan, before the preliminary negotiations were referred to the Ministers. He intended to appoint Seth Low, Gen. James H. Wilson, and Minister Conger as peace envoys. At that time the Administration supposed that each power would appoint several Commissioners. When the other powers announced their wish to leave the preliminary negotiations to the Ministers, the President yielded in order to avoid delaying the work of settlement. It has many times been a matter for regret to the Administration that the powers ever suggested the present method.

It is realized that additional Commissioners could hardly be appointed with full powers as to other nations. If appointed they would probably appear nominally as advisers to Minister Conger. It would, however, be definitely understood with that diplomat that among the three Commissioners the authority of the other two would be equal to his own. This would no doubt be the method pursued if the other powers failed to follow the example of the United States and continued to leave the negotiations in the hands of the original Envoys.

The Administration is hopeful, however, of arriving at a solution which will commend itself to the other powers. Some of them are understood to be as weary of the incessant wrangling and working at cross-purposes in Peking as is this country.

SCRANTON CARS STOP RUNNING.

Strikers Bombard the New Crews, Who Desert Their Posts.

SCRANTON, Penn., Dec. 28.—A conference was held to-day between Timothy Burke, a local Director of the Scranton Railway Company, and a committee of the striking employes. It was said that a proposition for settlement would likely be forthcoming to-morrow.

Thirteen cars were taken out of the barn to-day, but only five or six of them were run at any one time. Not a single passenger was carried on any car, and at 3 o'clock the company ordered that the cars should cease running.

Everywhere the cars moved they were greeted with volleys of snowballs or stones and most of them had their windows smashed. The crews in many instances deserted upon arriving at the company's office, after withstanding a siege of not more than an hour or so, and demanding their wages, returned to New York or whatever place they happened to have come from.

Only three of the fifty-three men who arrived last night from New York worked to-day, and when twelve more men came in from Syracuse this morning the strikers corralled and sent back nine of them.

BALTIMORE BANK RUN STOPPED

Wealthy Citizens Make Large Deposits Publicly — Building Associations in Trouble.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 28.—While the savings banks of this city paid out to-day about $250,000 to hundreds of timid depositors who held small accounts, the runs were soon checked, and the panicky condition of yesterday did not prevail. The old Baltimore Savings Bank and one or two others were crowded at times with anxious people, but they were soon quieted.

The Clearing House Association announced that it would uphold the savings banks, that they were all perfectly safe, and had all the funds needed to pay depositors. This action gradually restored confidence. Depositors were also relieved of their anxiety by the appearance of a number of private bankers and wealthy citizens early in the day at the savings banks on which the runs were continued from yesterday, who openly deposited large amounts.

One prominent citizen in the Baltimore Bank held up above his head five new one-thousand-dollar bills, and, passing the money through to the teller, called for a book. Others deposited from $1,000 to $5,000. This substantial evidence of confidence caused many workmen, women, and others to turn away and leave their deposits in the banks. At the Old Baltimore Savings Bank some persons who withdrew yesterday waited to redeposit the full amounts to-day, but the bank refused to accept them.

A number of building associations which are depositors in the Old Town Bank will be embarrassed by the closing of that bank. The officers of them are taking precautions against runs. Judge Stockbridge signed an order requiring the Equitable Building Loan and Savings Association to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed.

Steps were taken to-day looking to a reorganization of the American National Bank. It is proposed to increase the capital stock from $200,000 to $300,000 and to request present stockholders to subscribe for the additional amount in the proportion of one share for each two shares they now hold. This would meet the bank's outstanding obligations.

The Old Town Bank stockholders next week will make arrangements to reopen that concern.

KIDNAPPERS' PONY IDENTIFIED.

Former Owner Says It Was Sold to "Pat" Crowe, the Cudahy Suspect.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 28.—Daniel Burris to-day positively identified at Pacific Junction, Iowa, the pony left there mysteriously in the barn of a Mrs. Mack the day following the Cudahy abduction as one he sold to a man answering the description of Pat Crowe a few days before the occurrence of that event.

Mrs. Thomas B. Cooper, a married daughter of Burris, was to-day shown a collection of twenty-five photographs taken from the Rogues' Gallery and asked to select if she could one or more which resembled the "light-complexioned man who called to buy the pony." She at once picked out two of the photographs, which she was sure were those of this man. The pictures were those of Crowe. Mrs. Cooper is the fifth person who saw this man who has identified him with a likeness of Crowe, and the police now feel sure that he is one of the men wanted. They have not been able, however, to get a clue to the identity of the dark-complexioned man who was associated in the crime.

The detectives are now very anxious to locate Lizzie Burns, who is alleged to have been an intimate friend of Crowe. Miss Burns was employed at hotels in South Omaha up to the time of the Cudahy abduction, since which time she has not been seen.

ST. PAUL RAILROAD ALLIANCE.

Norman B. Ream and James J. Hill to Enter Directorate at Next Annual Meeting.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—Norman B. Ream and James J. Hill will go into the Directorate of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad Company at the next annual meeting. It is also rumored that J. J. Hill is to become President of the company.

On the Street this is taken to mean that J. Pierpont Morgan and the Standard Oil people are in control of the St. Paul system. To the company itself it means much more. It signifies an alliance between the St. Paul and the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern, the Erie, and the Baltimore and Ohio, as well as with a number of other companies in which the interests named are dominant.

Mr. Morgan and his friends generally favor good dividends, and the statement is made that the St. Paul dividend will be raised at once to a 6 per cent. basis, as against the present 5 per cent. rate. Mr. Hill is President of the Great Northern Railroad Company. Morgan interests are dominant in Northern Pacific, and these two companies will do business with the St. Paul, assuring to the latter the traffic trade of the two former.

The Baltimore and Ohio should also profit through the combination, as both the gentlemen who are to go into the Directorate of the St. Paul are Directors in Baltimore and Ohio.

The stock has been advancing at a rapid rate, and the tip to buy has been given out quite generally. It is supposed, however, that this was on account of the reported plan to raise the dividend from a 5 per cent. to a 6 per cent. rate. It may be that even more important developments are in contemplation than have been made public.

KENTUCKY PARSON BANKRUPT.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 28.—The Rev. T. C. Stackhouse, the Methodist minister of this place who has for years made a practice of breeding trotting horses, has filed a petition in bankruptcy.

No schedule of the assets or liabilities has been given out.

WOMEN RAID A SALOON.

Special to The New York Times.

MATTOON, Ill., Dec. 28.—By a daring raid, the women of Longview have done what the officers of the law, the clergy, and the male moral element of the village have failed in doing, enforce the anti-license clause.

A score of them met and after a long interval of prayer repaired to the building occupied by an illicit saloon. The door was locked, but it was quickly smashed in with an axe and the earnest crusaders poured into the place. On the shelves were flasks and jugs of liquor. Filling their arms, they marched to the street and destroyed the whole stock and quietly repaired to their homes. The women promise to repeat the feat if it becomes necessary.

FORTUNE STOLEN FROM A MAIL POUCH

Money and Negotiable Paper for $100,000 Taken.

CHECKS WERE THROWN AWAY

Operator at Wyandotte, Mich., Left the Bag Uncared For—Plunder Marks the Trail of the Thief.

DETROIT, Dec. 28.—A mail pouch containing $100,000 in negotiable paper and an unknown amount of money was stolen from the Wyandotte (Mich.) station of the Michigan Central Railroad some time last night.

The last mail for Wyandotte arrives at 10:28 P. M. on the Michigan Central, and owing to the lateness of the hour it is left in the station until morning. When the two mail sacks were thrown from the train last night, Night Operator Richert threw the pouches under a seat in the corner of the waiting room. He then went to his home in Detroit. To-day, when Mail Carrier John McCleary came to the station for the mail sacks, one was missing. About the same time George Bessy, a driver of an oil wagon, reported at the station that a pouch, ripped open and empty, was behind an oil tank a short distance from the station. The J. B. Ford Alkali Works is one of the principal industries of Wyandotte, and about the time of the finding of the pouch two office employes brought in a number of checks and opened envelopes they had found strewn along the railroad track.

Postmaster Johnson of Wyandotte was notified and went to the scene of the robbery. The trail of the thief was marked along the railroad track by strewn letters, checks, and drafts. Most of the mail was intended for the J. B. Ford Company, and a force of clerks was sent out to collect the letters strewn along the track. The reason for this activity on the part of the company was that J. B. Ford, Jr., said he expected a draft to-day from New York for $40,000. The draft did not come to-day, and it is believed that the robber or robbers took it with other valuable papers from the pouch.

THE DANISH WEST INDIES.

Direct Negotiations for Their Sale to This Country Said to be Going On.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The Copenhagen correspondent of The Daily Mail says:

"The American and Danish Governments are engaged in direct negotiations for the sale of the Danish West Indies, and the Danish Minister in Washington will shortly submit a proposal for the consideration of the American Senate."

BERLIN, Dec. 28.—The National Zeitung and the Tageblatt, discussing a revived report that Germany is seeking a naval station in the Danish West Indies, affirm that Germany never had such an intention.

TAKEN FROM BED BY BURGLAR.

One Child Placed on Sofa, Another Put to Bed with Servant, So He Could Have Room to Pack Up.

The home of Henry Babchin, which is over his jewelry store, at 24 Newark Avenue, Jersey City, was visited by a remarkably careful burglar early yesterday morning. He had gathered several articles which he carried into a room where Babchin's children, Lillian, eight years old, and Sylva, five, were sleeping. There being no table in the room on which he could make the parcels into a bundle, he utilized the bed. In order that he might have room, he took the elder girl in his arms and carried her into the parlor, where he placed her on a sofa.

"Is that you, Papa?" asked the child, half awakening.

"Yes, dear," whispered the burglar; "go to sleep again."

Lillian closed her eyes as the burglar spread a coat over her. Then he carried the other child to a rear room and placed her in bed with the servant. After that he used a quilt from the children's bed to do up his plunder in. This consisted mainly of wearing apparel, the cash proceeds being only $5.

The robbery was discovered shortly before daylight, when the younger child awoke and commanded Annie, the servant, to return her to her own bed. Annie was puzzled to know how Sylva got into her bed, but she was more surprised to find the children's bed empty. She aroused Mr. and Mrs. Babchin, and they found Lillian on the sofa.

The burglar, who was still in the house, ran down stairs, dropping his bundle on the way, and escaped over the rear fence. All he finally secured was the cash he had taken from Mr. Babchin's trousers pocket.

INCREASE IN PULLMAN ESTATE.

It Is Said to Have Grown in Three Years from $9,000,000 to $15,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—The second accounting in the estate of George M. Pullman was filed in the Probate Court this afternoon by the executors, Robert Lincoln and Norman B. Ream.

The statement showed the receipts and disbursements of the estate since the first accounting was made, Jan. 10, 1899. The instrument contained many pages, and the assistant to the Judge had set aside four hours for its consideration.

It is said that the estate of $9,000,000 left by Mr. Pullman, who died on Oct. 19, 1897, has been increased by the management of the executors to almost $15,000,000.

FOUND HER MONEY CHARRED.

Woman Put $219 in Stove for Safe-keeping—Treasury Makes Refund.

Special to The New York Times.

PORT CHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 28.—Several weeks ago Mrs. Jacob Marks, wife of a fruit dealer on Main Street, uneasy because of the reports of frequent burglaries, took her savings, amounting to $198, and placed them in the oven of her gas stove. A few days later she put in $21 more, making $219 in bills.

On the following day, finding that the fire in her range was out, and being in a hurry to get breakfast, Mrs. Marks forgot the money in the gas stove and lighted the oven. She smelled something burning, and upon opening the doors found the bills scorched almost to a crisp. Mrs. Marks sent the charred money to the Sub-Treasury in New York, and yesterday received new bills for the amount.

VALUABLE DOGS POISONED.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Dec. 28.—There is excitement among hunters who own fine dogs and among cattle owners in the neighborhood of Boston Corners, Dutchess County, over the death of several valuable hounds from eating poison that had been spread over the fields and mountain paths by a stranger, who came to the locality a fortnight ago.

The man, who said he was from New York, distributed the poison, it is said, to kill foxes for the purpose of selling their skins. Small cakes of lard and fish were found, and an analysis showed them to be filled with strychnine. The stranger has disappeared, taking with him a large number of fox skins.

THE POPE THREATENS FRANCE.

Hints He May Use His Influence Against Her if Law Against Religious Associations Is Passed.

PARIS, Dec. 29.—Le Matin publishes an interview with the Pope on the attitude of the Waldeck-Rousseau Ministry toward the religious congregations. Referring to the Premier's speech at Toulouse on Oct. 28, when M. Waldeck-Rousseau enlarged upon the necessity of the chamber passing a law regulating associations—a measure directed against religious congregations—the Pontiff said:

"The Concordat is being changed from an instrument of peace into one of war and oppression. Even in Protestant countries religious orders are not excluded from the liberties enjoyed by other citizens. They will probably return to England and the United States, as in the days of the Terror, to find a refuge against the iniquity of Catholic France.

"The Associations bill is the negation of all the laws of liberty. I hope the Government of France will not renounce the services I am still able to render her. Several times recently I have been solicited by the head of a powerful State to permit the rights of France in the East and Far East to be disregarded. I have refused, although compensations were offered to the Church. But if the orders, without which Catholic expansion is impossible, are to be suppressed, what answer shall I give in a day when similar proposals are made?"

BIG STEEL PLANT FOR CHICAGO.

Illinois Steel Company to Spend $10,000,000 in Erecting the Largest Works in the Country.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—According to a report from inside men at the Illinois Steel Company's works in South Chicago that corporation has decided to erect a structural steel plant on its property, situated just north of its present works on the lake shore. It is said that $10,000,000 will be spent on the plant, which will be the largest in the country and the only one west of Pittsburg.

Judge Gary of New York and the Directors had a meeting here to-day, and to-night they had a dinner at the Chicago Club to celebrate the beginning of the new project.

That this enterprise would be begun soon has been rumored for some time among the workers at the mills. The company owns about 100 acres of very valuable land formerly the property of the Cheltenham Improvement Company and which was at one time used for amusement purposes. For many years the steel company has had it fenced in, but made no other use of it than for one or two railway tracks and storage grounds for coal, &c. It fronts the lake shore and has good railway connections.

To-night, when John W. Gates was asked concerning the new project, he replied that he was out of Illinois Steel, but that he understood that Gary and his associates were celebrating the matter. When the question was put to Judge Gary, he sent back word that he was not prepared to talk of the matter "at this time."

It is believed to be the company's purpose to put up the finest plant of the kind in the world and go extensively into the structural field.

MR. BRYAN STILL A CANDIDATE.

Chairman Jones Does Not Believe a Formal Attempt Will Be Made to Eliminate Him for 1904.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Talk about the desire on the part of some of the Democrats to shelve Mr. Bryan as a Presidential candidate for 1904 is variously discussed here in Washington. In this city Mr. Bryan has a large number of the admirers who are expected to come to his aid in another effort to win the Presidency, but there are also other Democrats who doubt the wisdom of renewing attempts to establish American confidence in his judgment and executive ability.

Senator J. K. Jones, who has during two Presidential campaigns had opportunity to become acquainted with Mr. Bryan and the attitude of the American people toward him, bluntly discredits the report that a formal effort is to be made to eliminate him from consideration as a candidate. He says he does not know a member of the Executive Committee who believes that Bryan is now or has been moved by any unworthy or selfish purpose in seeking the Presidency.

"I believe," said Senator Jones, "that if there is a man alive whose political conduct is free from the influence of selfish ambition, that man is Mr. Bryan. The men who know him well and have been associated with him in the political contests think of him as I do. It is the earnestness and unselfish purpose to do that which will best promote the principles in which he believes that makes me attached to him. I believe that at any time in the past he would without hesitation have withdrawn if by so doing he could have served the cause in which he believes.

"At Kansas City Mr. Bryan would, I believe, have withdrawn his candidacy had it appeared that these principles would have been better promoted by the nomination of some one else.

"Washington said of Gen. Greene that he was the one officer of the whole Continental Army who would give up his commission and serve with a musket if by so doing he could best advance the interests of his country. This might be said truly of Mr. Bryan, and the gentlemen who are represented as being alarmed by Mr. Bryan's ambition believe this, as I do.

"There has been no discussion of a meeting of the Executive Committee for any purpose. I have had it in mind to call a meeting before long to consider some details of organization work at some time soon, but I do not think I have mentioned this idea even to my secretary, Mr. Sefton. I have merely been considering the matter in my own mind, and thought of consulting with Mr. Johnson on his return from California."

ILLINOIS DEMOCRATS TO MEET.

John P. Hopkins, Gold Democrat, to be Chairman of State Committee.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—A call has been issued for a meeting of the Illinois Democratic State Central Committee, to be held at Springfield on the evening of Jan. 7. The issuance of the call for the meeting on that date renders practically certain the election of John P. Hopkins of Chicago, who was Chairman of the Illinois Gold Democratic State Committee in 1896, as Chairman of the State Central Committee.

The Hopkins faction has wished for a meeting upon this date, while the anti-Hopkins people have made strong efforts to have the meeting postponed until Jan. 10. William J. Bryan will be here on Jan. 8, and his friends were anxious that the selection of a State Chairman be postponed until after his visit.

The Hopkins people have, however, scored a decisive victory over the friends of Mr. Bryan by having the call issued for the 7th. The call is signed by twenty-one out of a total of thirty-one members, all of whom will vote for Hopkins. Among the signers of the call is Thomas Gahan, Illinois member of the Democratic National Committee.

HURRICANE SWEEPS THE BRITISH ISLES

Many Lives Have Been Lost and Much Property Damaged.

TWO WARSHIPS WERE INJURED

Immense Destruction of Shipping—All Continental Services Suspended—A Theatre in Oswestry Wrecked.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—A fearful storm has been raging over England, Wales, and Ireland during the past twenty-four hours, and enormous damage has been done afloat and ashore. The full extent of the disaster will probably not be known for several days, as telegraph wires are down everywhere. As it is, the reports of shipping casualties that have already reached here are almost innumerable, while news of disasters inland is beginning to come in. At one place—Oswestry—a theatre was destroyed.

The observers at Queenstown say the hurricane is the fiercest in years, but from what is known up to the present Wales appears to have suffered worse than any other part of the United Kingdom.

In addition to the vessels, some not yet identified, which have been wrecked or placed in great danger, the fate of some of the cross-Channel mail steamers is in doubt. For instance, the Great Western Railway Company's steamer, plying between Milford and Waterford, is twelve hours overdue, and no tidings of her have yet been received. All the Continental services have been suspended.

Her Majesty's ship Black Prince, at Queenstown, and Her Majesty's ship Teaser, at Portsmouth, have both been badly damaged.

In response to rockets from Eddystone Light, Rigrod has sent a dockyard tug, with a lifeboat, to assist what is reported to be a large steamer in distress in the English Channel.

Some fifty barges and sailing craft broke from their moorings in the Thames alone.

A disastrous accident occurred near Taunton. The breakwater at Watchet Harbor yielded to the force of the gale, and became a wreck, permitting a tremendous sea to have full play against the shipping in the harbor. Several vessels broke adrift, two foundered, and five others were driven into a hopeless tangle in a corner between a pier and a wharf, where they lay grinding each other. Their masts and bulwarks speedily went, and their hulls were greatly battered. The damage will reach many thousands of pounds.

The British bark Primrose Hill (Capt. Wilson, from Liverpool, Dec. 23, for Vancouver) went on the rocks three miles off South Stack, (not far from Holyhead.) She broke in two and went to pieces in a few minutes. One man out of the crew of thirty-five men was saved by a lifeboat.

Some time before she struck the Primrose Hill dropped her anchors, but mountainous seas were running. No sooner had the ill-fated ship touched the rocks than the three aftermasts went overboard and she broke in twain, leaving only the foremast standing. Three minutes later this went also. The vessel was soon smashed up. The steamer Hibernia stood by throughout, but was powerless to aid. The Holyhead steam lifeboat made three vain attempts to reach the Primrose Hill. The latter's crew were huddled on the poop, when a huge sea dashed over the vessel, washing all away. One sailor was finally hurled against the rocks, sustaining terrible injuries.

The Spanish steamer Enecuri, (last reported arrived at Bilbao, Nov. 29, from Boulogne,) which had sought shelter in Portland Roads, was driven ashore at the Portland breakwater. The Weymouth lifeboat attempted to rescue her crew, but the fearful seas running prevented the rescuers from accomplishing their task. Twenty-two of the crew, however, managed to reach the breakwater, but five are still on board. It is feared that the Enecuri will list and fill.

The Austrian bark Capricorn was driven ashore near Bude, Cornwall. Nine of the crew were drowned, one was saved, and four are still on board, with little likelihood of being rescued, as they are unable to avail themselves of the rocket apparatus. Two other vessels are ashore on the Cornwall coast.

Several ships were stove in at Ilfracombe Harbor. The bark Ragna was wrecked off Trevine, near Cardiff, three of her crew being drowned and nine being rescued by rocket lines.

The British bark Pegasus, Capt. Bailey, from San Francisco, Aug. 17, for Queenstown, where she arrived on Dec. 23, and sailed Dec. 24 for Liverpool, was incorrectly reported to have foundered off Penarth Roads. One man of the crew of thirty-four was landed at Cardiff, and the statement of the vessel's loss originated with this sailor. It appears that the Pegasus grounded off Lavernock Point, but she was subsequently floated and towed to a place of shelter. When she grounded her boats were made ready for lowering, and the falls of one of them carried away, precipitating five men into the water. They were all drowned with the exception of the sailor landed at Cardiff, who was picked up by a tug.

The British bark Queen of Cambria, (Capt. Roberts, from Tocopilla, Aug. 30, for Falmouth,) while being towed into Falmouth parted her tow line, and the force of the gale blew her across the bows of the British bark Crown of India, (Capt. Williamson, from San Francisco, Aug. 17, which arrived at Falmouth Dec. 27,) damaging the latter's head. The Queen of Cambria was cut down to the water's edge. She has been beached and is leaking.

The mail steamer Victoria, while shipping mails and baggage yesterday at Folkstone, broke from her moorings and was obliged to put to sea. It is not yet known whether she has taken shelter or proceeded to Calais.

The British steamer Penpol, from Sulina, Nov. 23, for Dublin, is ashore on the sands between Aberavon and Briton Ferry. No fatalities have occurred.

It would be impossible to enumerate all the minor casualties already reported.

STORM SWEEPS FRENCH COASTS.

PARIS, Dec. 29.—Storms of extreme violence have swept the west and northwest coasts of France.

There has been some loss of life, together with considerable damage to shipping.

Cable Communication Affected.

The Western Union Telegraph Company sent out the following notice yesterday: "A severe storm prevails in Ireland and Southern England. The telegraphs are working very unreliably, and communication is frequently suspended."

Blizzard in Colorado Mountains.

WASENBERG, Col., Dec. 28.—A blizzard has been raging here the past thirty-six hours. Fears are expressed for the safety of the miners who are working on the Corando and other mines on Mount Blanco. They are penned in at an altitude of 11,000 feet.

QUAY IS STILL CONFIDENT.

Believes He Will Have 150 Votes for Senator on Joint Ballot.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Dec. 28.—Matthew S. Quay, who reached Harrisburg to-day from Washington, to take personal charge of his canvass for United States Senator, said to-night that the Stalwart Republicans won their fight at the polls on Nov. 6, and the situation has not changed since he made his original declaration that he would have 150 votes on joint ballot in the Senate and House, or twenty-two more than necessary to a choice. Senator Penrose issued a formal statement in which he says he has no doubt whatever that both branches of the Legislature will be organized by the regular Republicans, and that Col. Quay will be elected Senator.

DE WET'S CAPTURE REPORTED.

South Africa Company Gets Word that He Has Been Caught—He Failed to Break Through to the South.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Persistent reports are in circulation in London and on the Continent that Gen. De Wet has been captured.

The British Chartered South Africa Company has received information to that effect from a source in which it is accustomed to place implicit confidence.

The War Office, however, is without any confirmation of the report.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 28.—Gen. De Wet's attempt to break through to the south has been frustrated, and he is now reported to be at Senekal, with a large commando, holding the country between Ficksburg, Senekal, and Winburg.

Gen. Knox is holding the country between Ladybrand and Winburg.

TOBACCO WORKERS STRIKE.

Fifteen Hundred Employes of the Continental Tobacco Company at Louisville Quit Work.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 28.—Fifteen hundred people are involved in a strike of the employes of the stemmery of the Continental Tobacco Company. The other plants of the company in Louisville are not affected. The employes went out this afternoon on a cry of "Fire!" which was an agreed signal. Only a few failed to join the strike, and they were rendered idle by the suspension which followed.

The hands are paid $2 per hundred for stemming. They claim that only the experts can make $1.50 a day. In anticipation of a reduction on Jan. 1 to $1.75, the employes went on strike for $2.25.

The stemmers are also complaining about new regulations adopted since the Doerhoefers retired from the conduct of the stemmery. They are now required to remain inside the factory during the dinner hour. They want the privilege of going home to dinner. Then they are fined 10 per cent. of their wages if as many as five particles of stems are found in their work. The smallest pieces are counted against them, and they want this rule revoked. Furthermore, they are required to do certain cleaning up, which, they say, cuts into their time and should be performed by others.

The police were called to disperse the strikers from about the great plant at Twenty-fourth and Main Streets. Only one man caused any trouble, and he was arrested.

GIRLS THROWN INTO BONFIRES.

Two Boys Arrested Charged with Having Caused the Death of One Child —Other Victim May Die.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Dec. 28.—One little girl is dead and another is in a critical condition as the result, it is alleged, of being thrown into bonfires by boys. Two boys, John Eckert and Frank Wenzell, both ten years old, and living in the First Ward, are locked up charged with having caused the death of six-year-old Mamie Newbolli, who lived on Hudson Avenue. The other burned girl is Rosie Cholonisnki, seven years old.

Mamie Newbolli was standing by a bonfire which boys had built on Hudson Street, near the plant of the Gas and Electric Company, when she was seized and thrown into it. When she was dragged out again almost all her clothes were burned away and there were large burns on both arms and legs, as well as on her body. She was taken to the hospital, where she said that the two boys mentioned had thrown her into the fire. Wenzell and Eckert, when arrested, denied having thrown her into it and said that she had fallen in herself. The little girl died to-day. Her father became temporarily insane at the sight of her agony and had to be placed in restraint.

The other little girl was burned at a bonfire on Freel Avenue. Her story was similar to that told by the other little victim. Every shred of clothing was burned from her body, and she is now lying at her home with only a slight chance of recovery.

Arrests of other boys are expected.

TWO MILES OF WIRES FOR $1.

Purchaser of a Telegraph Company's Property In a Quandary.

Two miles of wires belonging to the Postal Telegraph Company in the town of Union, Hudson County, were sold at auction yesterday for taxes amounting to $151.70, which it is claimed the company owes. The wire, which is strung on poles of the Hudson Telephone Company, was knocked down for $1 to Charles Singer, Town Clerk of Union, who bid personally and not as an official.

When asked if he was going to start a new telegraph company, Mr. Singer said he guessed not, but was in a peculiar position. He said:

"The wires are mine. I have paid for them. The township in accepting my money placed itself in a position where it is bound to deliver those two miles of wires where I can take possession of them. If it does not, it seems to me I can sue the town for breach of contract.

"Just how the town is going to deliver the goods to me I cannot say. The Postal wires are somewhere amid a big maze of telephone company's wires. It seems to me it will be necessary for the town to find out which wire belongs to the Postal Company. To do that it will require the use of experts, not only as linemen, but who can tap the wires to see whether dots and dashes or spoken words are passing over the wires. To ascend the poles of the telephone company would be trespass. To cut a wire which is not yours is a criminal offense; hence, if in searching for my wire the men cut a telephone wire their fate would be State prison or the penitentiary at least.

"I don't see how the town is going to deliver that which I have paid for, but I am considering the advisability of offering the telegraph company the use of the wires at a nominal rate and let them stay where they are."

TWO PORTRAITS OF MARQUETTE.

Montreal Painting Differs Greatly from the Statue in Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—The most picturesque statue in the old Hall of Representatives at the Capitol is that of Père Marquette, robed in the garb of a Jesuit priest. The Star directs attention to it in the light of a recently discovered portrait of Marquette, said to have been found in the garret of a religious house in Montreal.

The portrait shown in the statue is that of a tall, spare man, with a face suggesting the life of an ascetic. The Montreal portrait is quite different. That painting is marked "Père Marquette," and it shows a face clean shaven, full, and round, with large, expressive eyes, the whole countenance beaming with intelligence and kindliness. The painting was so covered with the dust of centuries that no outline of it could be distinguished until put through the process of a careful cleaning. It has so forcibly impressed those who have seen it, not only as a great work of art, but as a genuine likeness of Marquette, that arrangements are now under way for the copyrighting of photographs of it both in this country and abroad, and until all such rights have been secured, it is said, neither the painting nor photographs of it will be exhibited. Both the picture itself and the back of the canvas have been photographed.

Notwithstanding the great differences found to exist between the portraits, it is not considered probable at the Capitol that the statue will be withdrawn until the authenticity of the Montreal portrait is better established, or until Wisconsin shall intimate dissatisfaction with her contribution to the National Gallery of Sculpture.

CORONER'S JURY HOLDS THE BELLEVUE NURSES

Declares that Hilliard Met Death at Their Hands.

HOSPITAL METHODS CRITICISED

Bail of Each Prisoner Is Increased to $5,000—Ogden Mills Signs Bonds.

A verdict to the effect that Louis H. Hilliard came to his death from asphyxiation and fractured ribs caused by Jesse R. Davis, Edward O. Dean, and Clinton L. Marshall, was brought in at 9:00 o'clock last night, by the jury which had heard the evidence at the inquest before Coroner Fitzpatrick.

The jury was out thirty-six minutes. Following is the verdict in full:

The verdict of the Coroner's jury is that the said Louis H. Hilliard came to his death on the 12th day of December at Bellevue Hospital from asphyxiation and fracture of the ribs inflicted on the 11th and 12th days of December, 1900, at the place aforesaid by Jesse R. Davis, Edward O. Dean, and Clinton L. Marshall, day nurses in the pavilion for the insane at Bellevue Hospital; and we censure the authorities of said hospital for laxity of the methods of the medical service of said pavilion for the insane, which tended to bring about the death of the deceased.

Mr. McIntyre, Assistant District Attorney, asked that the persons named be committed to await the action of the Grand Jury.

"Granted," said the Coroner, "and I will hold them under $5,000 bail each."

Mr. McIntyre objected to bail being received, saying that the case might be more serious than the Coroner apprehends.

"Can there be a case showing more depraved minds than these nurses exhibited?" he asked, after reading sections from the Penal Code, one of which defined murder in the first degree as death caused "by an act eminently dangerous to others and evincing a depraved mind, regardless of human life, although without premeditated design, to effect the death of an individual."

"While these men may have resorted to extreme measures," said the Coroner, "I cannot think they had any intent to endanger life, or that they were regardless of human life. They were simply thoughtless and excited." The Coroner again announced the bail would be $5,000 each.

Ogden Mills, who was on the original bonds of $1,000 each, signed the bonds required by the Coroner, and the nurses were released.

Mr. McIntyre said that he would lay the case before the January Grand Jury on Wednesday next. He will ask for an indictment for murder in the first degree, as he intimated he would while the inquest was on. About 1 o'clock in the afternoon, while Thomas J. Minnock was testifying, Mr. McIntyre arose and said:

"I want to fix the responsibility. If this testimony is true and there was a deliberate attempt to lessen vitality it takes the case out of the province of manslaughter and makes it one of murder." The Assistant District Attorney spoke with firmness and solemnity. The three accused nurses shifted slightly in their chairs, but gave no other evidence of nervousness.

Mr. McIntyre's remark followed an interruption in the testimony of Minnock, who had been called while Dr. H. Valentine Wildman was on the stand to clear up the time of the alleged ass it was to fill out the record. Mr. Gleeson said it was Dr. Moore's. Mr. Gleeson then said that he went to the pavilion for the insane on Wednesday, about 4:50 P. M. The patients were at supper. He saw Hilliard, who was perfectly cool. He went into the office, when he heard a noise, and, looking out, saw a patient on the floor on his back, the nurses scuffling with him and holding him down.

Mr. Gleeson added: "Marshall sat on Hilliard's feet, Dean was kneeling on the floor, holding his hands, and Davis was trying to put on the sheet. Dean left the patient struggling with Marshall and Davis, and let me out. He was speaking in French. I left before he was taken into the room."

"Was the patient violent?"

"He was; he was kicking and trying to bite."

"How could he kick when Marshall was holding his feet?"

"He got clear of Marshall."

Mr. McIntyre offered in evidence the entry in the nurses' books on Wednesday, Dec. 12.

Annie McDermott, cook in the kitchen of the pavilion, testified that Hilliard was violent when he came on Tuesday. On Wednesday he refused to eat his supper. Davis came out and told him to eat.

The witness was asked if she remembered making a statement that Davis struck Hilliard on the head.

"I said Davis gave him a slight slap that would not hurt a baby. Then he got up and fell."

"You know your story well," remarked the Coroner.

Mrs. Ada Willard, Superintendent of the Mills Training School for Nurses, said that she thought the entry in the case book was in Davis's handwriting, but was not positive.

In reply to questions from Mr. Anderson she testified that the nurses had good records in the training school.

William F. Clancy, one of the pupil nurses in the Mills Training School, who was on duty in the pavilion for the insane on Tuesday night, Dec. 11, explained that when he came to make his entries in the book he found that a page had been skipped and he turned back and used the blank page.

When Richard A. Donnelly, one of the nurses who was on duty in Davis's place, had told of Hilliard's admittance, Mr. Anderson objected to his examination on the ground that he was one of the nurses and practically accused with the others.

"He is not under any charge," said the Coroner.

"I am retained by Mr. Mills to protect him," said Mr. Anderson. The Coroner then warned the witness that any testimony he gave might be used against him, and he might refuse to testify.

"Then I refuse," said Donnelly.

"On the ground that your testimony might tend to incriminate or degrade you?" asked Mr. McIntyre.

"Yes," said Donnelly. "Mr. Anderson wanted the statement withdrawn, but the Coroner refused."

MINNOCK IS RECALLED.

Minnock was recalled after recess. In answer to questions by Mr. McIntyre, he said that while Davis twisted the sheet and held one of Hilliard's arms, Dean held the other. He said that the sheet was about the man's neck fully two minutes, and he never moved after it was removed.

"About Thursday," Minnock added, "before I confessed that I was in the pavilion to get a story, Davis was sitting in the office at a table and pulled out a pocket knife and began cutting the leaves of a magazine. Then he called Dean and said, 'How am I going to fix this?' Then he said, 'Call Marshall,' and Marshall came and closed the door."

Mr. Anderson cross-examined the witness sharply as to why he did not say that Hilliard was on the bench in his testimony on Thursday.

"Why did you not say that Davis twisted the sheet?" Mr. Anderson asked.

"I may have omitted it."

"You are trying to twist your story!" said Mr. Anderson.

"I think you are doing the twisting," answered the witness. Minnock said that Gleason saw the nurses kick Hilliard, and then said, "Let me out of here," and got out.

Mr. McIntyre then rested the case of the State.

In summing up for the accused nurses Mr. Anderson said he had not put witnesses on the stand because the Criminal Court was the place to do that. The whole case, he said, rested on the testimony of Mr. Minnock. It was difficult, he said, for the nurses to secure evidence to vindicate them. Mr. Minnock is absolutely "unmedicted," said Mr. Anderson, "by all the witnesses who could be found, and there is no testimony that fixes upon any one man any specific act that caused the death of this person."

Assistant District Attorney McIntyre said that in 7,000 cases that had come before him as prosecuting attorney this was extraordinary for its brutality. What was this man murdered for? Because he refused to eat. It may be said that Davis did this, but if Dean and Marshall took any part in the act they are guilty with him of murder. We are not relying on Minnock. He is amply corroborated by Dr. Donlin's autopsy.

Coroner Fitzpatrick pointed out that he had given the fullest opportunity to show whether Hilliard had received any injuries before he went into the hands of the nurses. Dr. Fitch's testimony, he said, was contradicted by witnesses who saw bruises on Hilliard's face, and Dr. Moore's testimony it was almost useless to go over because he had manifested almost no interest in the physical condition of the patient. There was no reason to doubt Minnock's testimony. The point was for the jury to decide whether the injuries were inflicted before Hilliard reached the hospital or in the hospital in the hands of the nurses.

O'ROURKE NOT SURPRISED.

Superintendent Says Jury Was There to Believe Minnock.

When Superintendent O'Rourke of Bellevue Hospital was informed of the verdict he said:

"I could not expect anything else. The verdict was in line with the opinion of Coroner's Physician Donlin. The jury was there to believe Minnock's testimony, but my private opinion is that Minnock is a liar, and he has proved himself as such by the little episode in the pavilion the night he let the cat out of the bag and said he was not insane, but only faking.

"I feel very sorry for the young men as their lives are now blighted. I cannot tell what the outcome of the trial will be."

Dr. John W. Moore, who had charge of the insane pavilion, refused to be interviewed. He said he was not an official of the hospital.

STUDENT NURSES EXAMINED.

Board of Managers of Training School in Session Four Hours.

There was a meeting of the Board of Managers of the Training School for Male Nurses yesterday, at which fifteen nurses were examined. The board remained in session four hours. At the end of that time Dr. George B. Fowler, the President of the board, announced that no statement would be given out until a report had been submitted to Commissioner Keller. He said that the work of examining the nurses had been begun, but not finished.

A previous meeting of the board was held on Thursday night, at which Commissioner Keller's letter was considered. Commissioner Keller was not at his office yesterday. He is confined to his rooms at the New Amsterdam Hotel with a severe attack of bronchitis.

Several of the nurses in Bellevue yesterday complained that they are being overworked, as the staff of nurses has been diminished by discharges and suspensions, and the vacancies have not been filled.

MR. CHURCHILL AND MAJ. POND.

Disagreement Leads to the Correspondent Refusing to Lecture at Brantford, Ontario, Last Night.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Dec. 28.—There is a disagreement between Winston Spencer Churchill, M. P., the war correspondent, and Major Pond, the manager of his lecture tour. Mr. Churchill is a guest of the Governor General, Lord Minto, at Rideau Hall, Ottawa, and Major Pond has gone on to Toronto threatening the vengeance of the law unless Mr. Churchill decides to fill his engagements.

The cause of the quarrel is that Mr. Churchill thinks he should get more money for his lectures, and the Major insists in holding him to his contract. Mr. Churchill was to have lectured in Brantford, Ontario, to-night, but did not stir from Ottawa.

Mr. Churchill had a very large audience in Montreal at high prices, and demanded a larger share of the profits, refusing to continue unless the price he received was doubled. Major Pond said that Mr. Churchill had notified him he would not go further than Ottawa unless his demand was acceded to. Major Pond stated he could not pay more, as in many places he would probably either make nothing or lose, and he needed a good profit in some places to average up for the series of lectures.

Mr. Churchill, when seen to-day in Ottawa, would not discuss the alleged demand for more money. He said he had not broken his contract. He said he would go to Toronto. He did not go to Brantford because he was too tired, but he would go there later if desired.

HARLEM DESPERADO SHOT FOUR MEN

One of Miles McDonnell's Victims Dead; Another May Die.

ALL REFUSED TO GIVE DETAILS

Murderer Opened Fire with Two Revolvers on Crowd in Onawa Hotel Cafe—Dead Man's Brother Vows Vengeance.

Four men instead of one, as was at first supposed, were shot in the affray in the Onawa Hotel Café, One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street and Park Avenue, early yesterday morning, and one of them is dead. It was several hours before the police learned how serious the affair had been. The man who succumbed to his wounds was George Price, who died at his home, 215 East One Hundred and Twenty-second Street, yesterday afternoon. The other victims are Edward Courtney of 592 East One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Street, shot in the abdomen; Thomas Kennedy of 213 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, shot in the left leg, and Charles McMullen, known also as William McGinnis, of 128 East One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street, shot in the right arm. Miles McDonnell, who did the shooting, is a notorious Harlem character.

It appears that Kennedy, McMullen, and Price were dragged out of the café by friends and secreted in the hotel before the police arrived on the scene, and it is not likely that it would have come to light that they had been shot had not the physicians attending Price insisted on the police being informed, as they feared he would die on their hands. As it was, he refused to make any statement to the Coroner or the police, but did identify McDonnell as the man who shot him.

Many conflicting stories were told yesterday, but the best information obtained went to show that about twenty men, many of them well known as gamblers in Harlem, were drinking over the bar in the Onawa Hotel Café when the shooting took place, about 1 o'clock. There had been a violent quarrel between Thomas Kennedy, the reputed owner of several Harlem gambling houses, and McDonnell, who was formerly in partnership with him. Suddenly, McDonnell pulled two revolvers and, retreating behind the lunch counter, behind which he stooped, opened fire.

RUSH FOR THE DOORS.

"About the first or second shot fired struck Courtney in the abdomen, and he fell unconscious to the marble floor, with his head resting on the brass foot rail in front of the bar. Instantly there was a mad rush for the doors, and the three bartenders fell flat on their faces behind the bar shouting murder. Price was the next victim, but, instead of falling, was seen to stagger out into the hallway. It is believed that Kennedy and McMullen were hit as they were attempting to escape from the room. Price, Kennedy, and McMullen were taken care of by friends and immediately secreted in the rooms of the hotel up stairs. Courtney either had no friends to assist him, or they were not quick enough in getting him out of the place before the police arrived on the scene.

Policeman Cornelius Maher, who was standing at the corner of Madison Avenue, heard the series of shots, and, running to the spot, entered the café and found McDonnell standing behind the lunch counter with two revolvers in his hands, while, stretched out on the floor, was Courtney. With a blow of his nightstick he disarmed McDonnell, and after placing a pair of handcuffs on him went outside and rapped for help. An investigation revealed the fact that Courtney was not dead, and the three bartenders were pulled out from under the bar too frightened to talk. An ambulance was summoned from Harlem Hospital and Courtney was removed thence in a critical condition. Not a word about the other wounded men was said.

Later Price was taken by friends to his home, and Dr. Frederick Bower of 200 East One Hundred and Twenty-third Street was called in to attend him. He worked over him for the greater part of the night, but finding him sinking called in Dr. Charles Upton and Dr. Kingman B. Page, the latter bringing with him an X-ray apparatus, with the aid of which the bullet was discovered just under the patient's heart. It was impossible to probe for it, however, owing to the man's condition. All three physicians agreed that the case must be reported to the police at once. Price begged them not to, but they insisted, and finally Mrs. Price, the injured man's wife, went to the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Police Station with a certificate from the physicians and told Capt. Deane what she knew about the affair. He at once sent for Kennedy, whom Price was anxious to see, but could not find him.

In the meantime McDonnell had been arraigned in the Harlem Police Court before Magistrate Meade and held without bail on a charge of shooting Courtney. After hearing Mrs. Price's story, Capt. Deane went to the Harlem Prison, where McDonnell had been lodged, for the purpose of taking him before Price. The prisoner was very cool and collected, and one of the detectives who accompanied the Captain asked as they reached the street if he should put the nippers on McDonnell.

"No," answered Detective Joe Meehan. "He's shot two men already, and if he makes a move we'll drop him in his tracks."

This remark seemed to have the desired effect upon the prisoner, who was as docile as a lamb.

On reaching the apartment of Price which is on the third floor of the double flat house 215 East One Hundred and Twenty-second Street, the party was met by Harry Price, a brother of the wounded man, who, on seeing McDonnell, broke out into a storm of abuse and said:

"So you did do it, after all, didn't you?"

McDonnell paid no attention to these remarks and was taken into the room where Price lay.

"Do you know this man?" asked Meehan, addressing Price.

A nod of the head was the only answer.

"Well, who is he?" asked Capt. Deane.

"He's the man that fired five shots at me."

"What is his name?"

"Take him away! Take him away!" was the only answer that could be got out of the dying man despite the efforts of the police.

On leaving the house Harry Price again started in to abuse McDonnell. Following the party to the street Price said, shaking his clinched fist at McDonnell, "If that man dies I'll kill you, so mark my words."

Throughout this ordeal McDonnell remained perfectly cool, his steel gray eyes never so much as blinking.

Capt. Deane, after lodging McDonnell in the Harlem prison, at once notified Coroner Hart, who went to see Price, but had little or no success in obtaining a statement from him.

"Don't talk to me, see Kennedy," was all Price would say.

Coroner Hart then went to Harlem Hospital, where he tried to get Courtney to make a statement by telling him that Price had squealed.

"Well, if Price squealed, I won't," was Courtney's answer, and the Coroner was obliged to leave him without clearing up the matter in the least. Price's condition grew rapidly worse as the afternoon advanced, and he died at 3:30. About this time a report reached the station house that McMullen had been shot, but the police failed to locate him.

McDONNELL'S DESPERATE CAREER.

McDonnell, who is about six feet in height, recently shaved off the full sandy beard that he always wore. He has a bad eye and was always quick to pull a gun on the slightest provocation. He is of Irish birth and came to this city from the West about eight years ago. He was at one time the Eastern agent for a large toy house in Buffalo at a salary of $3,500 a year. He took to drinking, however, and lost his position. He has a wife and two children, who live at City Island, where he occupies a pretty cottage. After he lost his position he took to gambling, and was associated with Street Cleaning Commissioner Nagle when Little Monte Carlo was running at West Farms, N. Y. A couple of years ago he had trouble with Nagle, and he entered the employ of Thomas Kennedy, one of his victims, who kept a gambling house at 161 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, and later formed a partnership with him.

He first fell into the hands of the police when Dick Walsh, who was a banker in Kennedy's place, stole $1,300 and disappeared. He was finally located in Baltimore, and McDonnell sent for him, telling him to come back and all would be right. Walsh did come back and McDonnell met him near the corner of One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street and Park Avenue, not a hundred feet from the scene of yesterday morning's tragedy, and after shaking hands with him drew a razor from his pocket and cut Walsh's right ear off close to his head. Throwing it in the gutter he remarked, "That's what we do with welchers in Ireland."

A warrant was issued for McDonnell, but he got out of the way, and the matter quieted down for a while. Later the warrant was served upon him, and before the case came up McDonnell was arrested again, charged with assaulting James Finn, a driver, employed by Louis Kahn, a livery stable keeper in East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street. McDonnell and three friends had been drinking in a saloon and wanted a coach to take them to City Island. Finn found they were all drunk, and refused to take them, whereupon McDonnell pulled a revolver and ordered him to drive on. Finn whipped up his horses, but drove to the stables, and, seeing the doors open, dashed in at full speed. Here McDonnell, seeing what Finn had done, knocked him unconscious with the butt end of a whip. The stablemen fell upon McDonnell and thrashed him. McDonnell's friends, however, got him out of this scrape by paying Finn's doctor's bill and giving him twenty dollars, and when the Walsh case was called the complainant did not appear.

On another occasion McDonnell entered the bar of "Jack" Elliott, proprietor of a roadhouse at City Island. He ordered whisky, and when asked what brand, drew a gun and shot the top off a bottle, remarking: "That's the bottle I want." Elliott drew a revolver and fired at him, but no one was hit.

He has also figured in numerous other barroom fights. Up to three months ago McDonnell and Kennedy had been partners in the gambling house at 161 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street. At that time it is alleged that Kennedy accused him of appropriating money that did not belong to him. This precipitated a row, and McDonnell, drawing a revolver, fired at Kennedy, but missed him. The employes of the gambling house disarmed McDonnell, took the money away from him, and then kicked him out in the street. He went to a pawnshop several doors from 161 East One Hundred and Twenty-first Street and purchased a revolver, when he told the clerk, it is said, that he intended to use it on Kennedy and his new partner, Eddie Burke.

McDonnell has been in hard luck of late, and has been borrowing money from all who would lend to him. He was feared by many of the Harlem gamblers on account of his recklessness with a gun, especially when he had been drinking.

There were a number of witnesses to yesterday morning's shooting, but the only ones the police have the names of are William Cordes, 2,272 Third Avenue; Henry Lankenan, 79 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street; Joseph Gentz, 79 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, and Charles McMullen, whom the police are now looking for.

REV. MR. JOHNSON TRACED.

Went to Montreal and Now Supposed to be in England with a Nurse.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Dec. 28.—The Rev. James Le Baron Johnson, ex-Chaplain of the New York Fire Department, who disappeared from Watkins, N. Y., over two weeks ago, has been traced to Montreal, and is now probably safely landed in England. At the same time he disappeared Miss Mary Hoffman, a nurse in training at Bellevue Hospital, was missing, and the surmise is that it was she who passed in Montreal as his wife, and is now with him in England.

Relatives of the missing clergyman, who have been searching all over the continent for him, are in Montreal to-day and discovered that the Rev. Mr. Johnson sailed by the Allan Line steamer Tunisian from Halifax on the 15th inst. for Liverpool, England. By means of one of his trunks his relatives traced him to Buffalo, and thence to Montreal.

He arrived here Dec. 9 and went to the Windsor Hotel, taking one trunk. Here, although he was alone, he registered as "Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery, Louisville, Ky." The only remained one day, when he removed his trunk to 31 Beaver Hall Hill, where he introduced himself to Miss Gleeson, the landlady, as Mr. Ruggles. He remained at that address until the morning of Dec. 13, when he was joined by a woman believed from a description given to be Miss Hoffman. Both left the city together.

The Rev. Johnson, for some time previous to his disappearance, had been at a sanitarium in Watkins, N. Y., and departed from that institution about two weeks ago. About the same time Bishop Potter received a communication from him requesting that his deposition from the ministry be announced. The announcement was made a week ago.

The Rev. Mr. Johnson had resigned as assistant pastor of Grace Church and as chaplain of the Fire Department some time ago, and his resignation had been accepted in both instances. His illness dates back to last Spring.

His arduous duties broke down his nervous system, and he went to Europe for a stay of two months to build up. But he did not recuperate. Nevertheless, when he returned he resumed his duties. He was at the Hoboken fire, going out on a tug to comfort those imprisoned in the burning ships. The sights he witnessed on this occasion completely shattered his nerves, and shortly after he went to the Watkins Sanitarium.

THE BURNZ MURDER TRIAL.

Specialists Fail to Discover Signs of Insanity in the Prisoner.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 28.—In the trial of Edgar C. Burnz for the murder of Herbert B. Fellows, the Scarsdale station agent and Postmaster, the District Attorney introduced as witnesses a number of distinguished insanity experts, whose evidence tended to show that the boy was rational when he committed the crime. The first of the expert witnesses called was Dr. Carlos S. McDonald, the authority on mental diseases. The witness stated that during the past thirty years he had examined 50,000 persons as to their sanity. He said he had examined Burnz at the request of District Attorney Andrews. In ruling upon objections Judge Keogh held that the witness could only testify to the impression made upon him by what he had seen of the prisoner in the court and to personal observation other than that made when the boy was brought before him for examination.

In answer to questions Dr. McDonald said that, judging from what he had seen of Burnz in court, he did not think he was insane or subject to fits of melancholia. Witness said he had never known of a case of insanity brought on by cigarette smoking alone.

Dr. Samuel P. Lyon, Medical Superintendent of Bloomingdale Asylum, testified to his observations of the defendant in court. He could not say whether the boy was insane or not. He did not know of a case of a person going insane from the use of cigarettes alone, although they contributed to such a disease to a mind so prejudiced.

Dr. Edgar C. Spitzka, the specialist on insanity and nervous diseases, also testified. From the examination the witness formed the opinion that Burnz exhibited no signs of insanity.

Edwin T. Maxham of New York testified that he had employed Burnz as office boy in his place of business for ten months. Although he had found Burnz dishonest, the prisoner always impressed him as being rational.

The case will be summed up to-morrow.

DYNAMITE BLOWS MEN TO ATOMS.

Explosion in West Virginia Kills Six and Injures Several.

KEYSER, West Va., Dec. 28.—One of the most disastrous accidents in the history of railroad building in this section happened at Baker Camp, near Durbin, Pocahontas County, on the line of the coal and iron railroad now building out from Elkins. As the result of a dynamite explosion six men are dead and several others are not expected to live.

The accident happened at noon yesterday, while the men were at dinner. Some dynamite had been placed about the stove to thaw out, and shortly after a terrific explosion wrecked the camp, killed three men outright and injured eight others, three of whom have since died. The dead men were blown into atoms, legs, arms, and hands, and even parts of their bodies, being found in different directions from the little building in which they lived among the mountains.

FORTUNE FOUND IN A HUT.

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, Dec. 28.—Forty-five thousand dollars in Government bonds, with the coupons still attached and running back for thirty years, were found yesterday in a chest in a hut occupied by Hermit Ypsilanti Smith, who died a few days ago.

Smith had lived near Fletcher, Miami County, for forty years, and was not known to have a cent. His mind was deranged years ago by the death of his wife. Pension vouchers untouched for years were also found amounting to about $25,000.

GEN. ALGER ON THE BEEF CONTROVERSY

His Long-Expected Defense Made Public at Last.

DRIVES HARD AT GEN. MILES

In Upholding Gen. Eagan the ex-Secretary Impugns the Commanding General's Honesty.

The long-expected defense of ex-Secretary of War Alger against the attacks made upon his administration of the War Department during the war with Spain is ready for issue. It will appear in the coming number of The North American Review under the title of "The Food of the Army During the Spanish War." Much of what Secretary Alger has to say is necessarily a rehash of the testimony brought out by the Dodge Investigating Commission and the court of inquiry, but much, also, is new and interesting.

After stating what the charges of Major Gen. Miles were in regard to canned roast beef, and refrigerated, or so-called "embalmed," beef, Gen. Alger says:

"Upon Commissary General Charles P. Eagan the charges fell with the suddenness and sharpness of a blow from an assassin's knife out of the dark. Gen. Eagan had been an officer of the regular army for thirty-six years. He had risen from a Second Lieutenancy to the highest rank in the Commissary Department to which his ambition could aspire. Gallant and fearless on the battlefields of the civil war and the hostile Indian plains of the West, he had a record for soldierly qualities of which any officer might well be proud.

"No other supply bureau of the army had excelled the Commissary Department in promptness, efficiency, and successful administration during the war. I never entered the War Department, whether early in the day or late at night, and called for the Commissary General that he did not report at once. I never gave him an order that was not immediately carried out to the letter. Indeed, his zeal and anxiety for the soldiers in camp and field were so great that his efforts in their behalf, during the long and weary days and nights of the hot Summer, nearly resulted in his prostration from overwork. The charges of Gen. Miles, made so publicly and so positively, and the manner in which they were for the first time made known, seemed to Gen. Eagan, in his nervous condition, the more magnified and horrible. Upon hearing them he pitifully exclaimed: 'Gen. Miles has crucified me upon a cross of falsehood and misrepresentation!'"

EAGAN'S UNMILITARY LANGUAGE.

Gen. Alger then reviews the incident of Gen. Eagan asked for a rehearing before the Dodge Commission, after Gen. Miles's testimony, and when it was accorded him, branding the commanding General as a liar. Gen. Alger clears himself of all responsibility for Gen. Eagan's unmilitary language concerning his superior officer and tells of the interview he had with Eagan after Eagan had committed his great blunder. Gen. Alger says:

"The allegation that I had inspired or had any knowledge of Gen. Eagan's intended attack upon the statement of Gen. Miles is absolutely untrue. He did not make known to me the nature of his proposed answer to the charges. Neither did he consult me in the matter. I never saw the reply, nor did I know its character until a copy of it was handed to me by a member of the press. Had Gen. Eagan submitted his manuscript to me, he would undoubtedly at this writing still be in full possession of the rank and privileges of the office of Commissary General of the United States Army. As it was, even the self-prejudicial and intemperate presentation made by Gen. Eagan convinced the commission that there was no foundation in fact for the charges and insinuations deducible from the terms 'pretense of experiment' and 'embalmed beef.'

"As soon as I learned of Gen. Eagan's statement before the commission I sent for him. I informed him of my surprise and mortification at his conduct. Why did you not permit your friends to read your testimony? Why did you not show it to me and thereby have prevented the disgrace that is now sure to come upon you and the uniform you wear? You had no right,' I continued, 'to make use of such unbridled language at a time and under circumstances which will assuredly result in associating the President's name and my own with such a disgraceful episode.'"

Gen. Eagan's court-martial and suspension are familiar history. Then Alger takes up Gen. Miles's statements about canned roast beef. He says that if Gen. Miles did not know canned roast beef was an authorized ration he was guilty of inexcusable ignorance; if he did, his statement that an unauthorized ration was furnished was a willful attempt at misrepresentation. Gen. Alger then brings out some new evidence to show that Gen. Miles's prejudice against canned roast beef did not exist early in the war. He says:

"If we are to believe written evidence to the contrary, it does not appear that Gen. Miles was even honest in making his dilatory charges that the tinned beef was issued as the pretense of an experiment, and that it was not a part of the ration. On the 17th of June, 1898, his most confidential staff officer signed a letter, by 'direction of the Major General commanding the army,' instructing the Depot Commissary at Tampa to furnish to Gen. Nunez 10,644 pounds of canned roast beef, to be issued from the subsistence stores of the army. If we are to accept the reading of this letter as correct, it proves that Gen. Miles knew that canned fresh beef was a part of the ration; that he knew there was a large quantity of it at Tampa for issue to the troops; and that he so far approved of its use as to direct that the ration be furnished in large quantities to our allies."

SAYS GEN. MILES WAS AT FAULT.

The court of inquiry found that canned fresh beef was an unpalatable ration when not cooked, and when not served with vegetables. Gen. Alger says this was a proper finding. He also admits that provision for cooking on the transports "seems to have been either neglected or impossible," and that there was "lack of accessability to the vegetables." But responsibility for these conditions, he charges, rested mainly with Gen. Miles, who went to Tampa as the special representative of the War Department, and who, if he did not look into the question of food for the Santiago expedition, did not do his duty.

"Besides finding that canned fresh beef was unsuitable when not cooked with vegetables," says Gen. Alger, "the court of inquiry also expressed the opinion that the purchase of 7,000,000 rations by the Commissary General during the first two months of the war with Spain was a colossal error for which there is no palliation.' This, of course, is a question for judgment as between the court of inquiry and Gen. Eagan.

"The ration was not a perishable article, and I do not think that the expression, 'colossal error,' as applied to this purchase, was warranted. Moreover, the Navy Department purchased annually 500,000 pounds, or 667,000 rations, of this same canned beef. Again, the War Department is now sending to the Philippines 1 rations of canned fresh beef a month for a force something less than 70,000. This is at the rate of approximately 2,000,000 rations a year for a force about one-fourth the size of the army for which Gen. Eagan provided 7,000,000 rations during the war with Spain, when he expected to feed, and did feed, also, our Cuban allies, besides many starving Cuban reconcentrados."

On the subject of "embalmed beef" Gen. Alger presents nothing new. He reviews the evidence taken by the Investigation Commission and the Board of Inquiry to show that Gen. Miles's assertion that "embalmed beef" had been furnished the soldiers had but flimsy foundation.

In conclusion, Secretary Alger says:

"The army had won its battles in Cuba and the Philippines, Porto Rico had peacefully come into our hands after a few skirmishes; the protocol had been in operation for over four months, and even the treaty of peace had been signed at Paris. Then comes the Major General commanding the Army of the United States with his charges. While the allegations of Gen. Miles were not based upon fact, and were conclusively disproved by two separate tribunals, unimpeachable in their composition and methods of investigation, the irreparable damage had been done. A brave, honest, and faithful officer, suffering under the lash of such cruel, unwarranted, and unjustified imputations, while exonerated from the heavy odium of those charges, was, as a result of them, sacrificed on the altar of his own passion, righteous in its existence but inexcusable in its expression. Besides this, a false impression had been created throughout the country as to the food furnished the army, which may never be removed. The charges of Gen. Miles, twice proved false in spirit and substance, are therefore the more heinous in their effect. Yet the present Congress promoted Gen. Miles to be Lieutenant General, and has thus far failed to give to Gen. Shafter the rank of Major General to retire upon in his old age, and this after his magnificent campaign at Santiago, as well as his former distinguished services."

POLICE COURTS DISCUSSED.

Large Audience Listens to Addresses in People's Institute.

That the police courts and what goes on in them have a keen interest for the people was illustrated last night at the People's Institute in Cooper Union, where a large audience listened to a number of addresses on the subject. Magistrate Deuel was to have delivered an address, but he was ill and could not be present. He sent his manuscript, however, and this was read by Prof. Charles Sprague Smith. Magistrate Deuel said that the Police Magistrate was clothed with tremendous, almost autocratic, powers, and unlike other judicial tribunals there was no time in the police court for deliberation or precedents for guidance and instruction. A Magistrate, he said, must have quickness of perception, directness of purpose, fearlessness of character, and equability of temper, all dominated by intellectual honor and practical common sense.

"The position," he said, "does not demand extraordinary intellectual ability. A man of average intellectuality can quickly learn the technical duties, can elicit the facts on both sides, can sift out the truth, can determine guilt, and impose a sentence authorized by law. Two men of equal integrity and intelligence presiding as Magistrates in a police court may each go through his part with legal precision, and yet differ widely in the results actually accomplished. One may inflict misery and suffering on some innocent members of the community and increase public burdens, and yet impose no sentence beyond the just deserts of the offender. The other may conserve public interest equally as well without the misery or the burdens. One rigidly austere may legally accelerate the speed with which some unfortunate member of the community is going to moral destruction; the other, keyed by nature to a larger and healthier sympathy, may, by mildness and clemency, help the offender on to respectability, sobriety, and honesty.

"The police court is unmistakably the people's court. An attorney is unnecessary, and men and women in all conditions of life come in person and in their own simple way to state their grievances and interpose their defense. Children of twelve and fourteen years come unattended, present their juvenile troubles, and ask for judicial assistance. Probably 80 per cent. of the business of these courts is transacted without either the aid or the embarrassment of attorneys. The influence of the police court, be it wholesome or perverse, reaches quarters otherwise inaccessible and leaves an impress upon the character and sentiments of men whose indifference and hatred may not be dangerous, but whose loyalty and patriotism are highly important."

Ex-Magistrate Kudlich gave a number of experiences from his own service in the police courts illustrative of their methods and showing the extraordinary range of cases that Magistrates are called to pass upon. He defended the system of summons in use in the police courts as saving much trouble and the infliction of disgrace upon innocent persons, who were in many instances only the victims of spite.

Mr. Kudlich spoke strongly in favor of the proposed court for children provided in the charter amendments, and also for the proposed parole law such as was in use, in Massachusetts. Often, he said, when a man was sent away his family, left without support, suffered, whereas could he have been put on probation his desire to do better would have a chance of demonstrating itself. "After all," said Mr. Kudlich, "it is better to keep the prisons empty and the homes full."

Mr. Kudlich took the same stand as Miss Rosalie Lowe, who also made an address that the efficacy of the police courts depended largely upon the honesty of the police. It was necessary, he said, for the Magistrate to look on the policeman as the sworn officer of the law, and to do that it was necessary to have faith in his honesty.

DEATH OF JOHN TOMS.

Fact Recalled that He Was Once Strung Up by Thumbs 5½ Hours.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Dec. 28.—John Toms, aged sixty-eight, died at the residence of Mrs. Sarah Van Cleef yesterday. He was the assistant in the Sheriff's office. He was born in New York, where his father was a contractor. Mr. Toms was a drummer boy in the Mexican War. After the war he returned to New York. Toms secured a position in the Custom House. Subsequently he went to North Branch and worked on a farm for Cornelius Van Cleef. He worked thirty-three years for Mrs. James Kilpatrick. During the Winter he remained alone in the house and took milk daily to Mrs. Kilpatrick at New Brunswick.

One stormy night two neighbors—John Walker and Frank C. Cook—dropped in, and after chatting a few moments one of them said, "See how it rains!" Toms turned to look out of the window when they grabbed and overpowered him. They took $57.50 and a gold watch from him. An attempt was made to shoot him; but the cartridge missed fire. He was bound, gagged, and suspended by his thumbs in a closet, where he remained for five and a half hours. Mrs. Kilpatrick, not getting her daily supply of milk, journeyed to the farm and found Toms nearly dead.

A reward for the capture of the miscreants was offered, and Detective Oliver fastened the crime upon the guilty parties, Walker turning State's evidence. He was sentenced to fourteen years in State prison and Cook got seventeen years.

THE WEATHER.

LOCAL FORECAST—Fair and colder; fresh northerly winds.

The barometer was low last night in the Atlantic States, and there have been general rains and snows from the upper valley and lake region eastward, and local rains and snows in the Southwest. Generally fair weather will prevail to-day and to-morrow, except that showers will continue to-day in the Florida Peninsula, snow in Northern Vermont, and rain or snow to-morrow in Western Montana. It will be much colder in the Atlantic and Eastern Gulf States, with frost to-night in Western, Northern, and Central Florida; Southern Alabama, and Southern Georgia. On the Atlantic Coast the winds will be fresh west to north.

The record of temperature for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from THE YORK TIMES's thermometer and from the thermometer of the Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	Weather Bureau. 1899.	1900.	TIMES. 1900.
3 A. M.	24	32	36
6 A. M.	23	34	37
9 A. M.	25	38	41
12 M.	25	39	42
3 P. M.	28	37	42
6 P. M.	27	37	40
9 P. M.	26	37	38
12 P. M.	24	31	34

THE TIMES's thermometer is 6 feet above the street level; that of the Weather Bureau is 285 feet above the street level.

Average temperatures yesterday were as follows:

Pripting House Square	38½
Weather Bureau	35 2-3
Corresponding date 1899	22
Corresponding date for last twenty years	36½

The barometer at 8 A. M. was 30.02 and at 8 P. M. 29.91. The humidity was 83 per cent. at 8 A. M. and 66 per cent. at 8 P. M. The maximum temperature was 39 degrees at 11 A. M. and the minimum 31 degrees at 1 A. M.

Old people have sometimes a morbid craving for food after eating, mistake it for hunger, and eat again, and then have the "hunger" again with a "sinking" feeling. It isn't hunger, of course. It comes of a low condition; and Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil is the remedy for it.

We'll send you a little to try if you like.

UNPOPULARITY OF FOREIGNERS IN CHINA

Wu-Ting-Fang, in a Montclair Church, Gives the Reason for It.

Says They Are Discourteous, Overbearing, and Affect an Air of Superiority —Urges Policy of Conciliation.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Dec. 28.—Wu Ting-Fang, the Chinese Minister at Washington, spoke from the pulpit of the Congregational Church of this place, to-night, to the members of the Outlook Club on the "Causes of the Unpopularity of the Foreigner in China." The meeting originally was to have been held at the Montclair Club Hall, and Mr. Wu did not know that he would have to speak in a church until his arrival in the village.

As soon as he appeared Mr. Wu became an object of especial interest to the large female portion of his audience, who seemed visibly impressed by his gorgeous attire. He wore a rich dress of light-blue silk, with Oriental figures woven into it. A pink jacket gave the necessary contrast in color effect, and at his right side he carried half hidden by his dress a short sword of Asiatic make. On his head he wore a black cap with a large diamond fastened on it.

His pigtail was resplendent in its black, silky, shinyness. His feet were encased in high, silk boots, or socks, as he called them during his address. The latter was typewritten, and he carried it in his left boot. He pulled it out while Dr. Bradford, the pastor of the church, welcomed him, and with a silver-handled pencil, which he produced from the wide folds of his gown, he made notes of something the minister said. Then as the latter's remarks grew somewhat lengthy, Mr. Wu nervously pulled a lace handkerchief out of his puffy sleeve, and finally consulted a gold watch which he fished out of a secret pocket in his pink jacket.

The Rev. Dr. Amory H. Bradford, in his welcoming address, asked Mr. Wu not to hesitate to express his opinions because he happened to speak in a Christian Church. In his opening remarks Mr. Wu referred to this request, saying that he had been afraid he would be handicapped in expressing his views, but that he was agreeably surprised to be so cordially welcomed by a clergyman. Before approaching his theme, Mr. Wu referred to his recent speech in Carnegie Hall.

"To my great surprise," said he, "I find that some clergymen misunderstood my remarks. They criticised me for attacking Christianity. I never intended to do so. My theme was Confucius, and in illustrating him I took Christianity as my standard because of all religions it is the highest form, and by comparing Confucius to that standard I meant to pay it a compliment. I have been quoted by the papers as saying on that occasion that the missionaries were clamoring for vengeance. I said that 'some' missionaries were clamoring, and I am not responsible for misrepresentation by the press."

Mr. Wu then began his discourse on the subject of the evening, the "Causes of the Unpopularity of Foreigners in China." He said in part:

"This is a delicate subject to handle, and I fear I shall stir up a hornets' nest, but I shall try to be impartial. China in ancient times was not indisposed to trade with foreigners. But these came from Asiatic countries and adopted our customs and manners and gave us no trouble. In later times all foreigners were treated with great respect and kindness, even official posts being conferred on them. I refer only to Marco Polo, the Venetian traveler, who in 1247 visited China and was made a Privy Councilor, an Assistant Envoy, and even Governor

POLICE CAPTAIN HERLIHY ON TRIAL

The Rev. Mr. Paddock Tells How the Official Insulted Him.

DEFENSE OBJECTS TO YORK

Police Board's President Blocks ex-Judge Pryor's Attempt to Exclude Him from the Trial Room.

Testimony given by the Rev. Robert L. Paddock was the feature of the opening day's proceedings in the trial of Police Captain John D. Herlihy, recently of the Eldridge Street Station. The trial began at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon before the four Police Commissioners, Bernard J. York, President of the board, presiding. Ex-Judge W. M. K. Olcott was the lawyer for the prosecution, the attorneys associated with him being P. V. R. Van Wyck and W. N. Wilmer. For the defense appeared Louis J. Grant and ex-Judge Roger A. Pryor.

Three charges had been made against Capt. Herlihy—neglect of duty, conduct unbecoming an officer, and violation of rules in not keeping proper record. These were filed on Friday of last week, when, after the defendant had been arraigned, an adjournment until yesterday was taken.

Mr. Paddock, who was on the stand for more than two hours, recalled many interviews between himself and the accused officer, stating that on some occasions the Captain had admitted that disorderly houses existed in his precinct, saying he was unable to prevent their existence; that at other times the Captain had denied absolutely the existence of such places. He told how he had at last, provoked by an experience of more than the ordinary outrageous character, caused to be haled into the Eldridge Street Station a young man whom he accused of warning the keepers of certain disreputable resorts. He said that on this occasion the Captain had been present while the Sergeant took down the complaint, and that after this was done and the prisoner had been locked up, Herlihy had insulted him, calling him a liar and then shaking his fist in his face.

Following this episode, Mr. Paddock recounted the circumstances of a visit that he paid to Inspector Cross. During the interview, the witness said, Capt. Herlihy was present. Mr. Paddock, according to his testimony, told the Inspector that he had come to ask his advice as to what action he should take regarding the treatment he had received from the Captain, but the Inspector replied that he had no advice to give, saying, after being urged, that he would advise the preferring of charges against Herlihy.

"Capt. Herlihy," continued the clergyman, "interposed here that he himself would advise me to present the charges. He said he would show me up as responsible myself for these conditions. Inspector Cross then said that I was most unreasonable in what I wanted, and that I would not be satisfied if I were in Paradise. I told him that as it was evident his advice had not been given in the friendly spirit for which I had looked, it was useless to me, and that, therefore, I could not through him prefer the charges."

Mr. Paddock's testimony dealt with the conditions prevalent in the district of the Twelfth Police Precinct. He named various places where he had been accosted by women. He told what they had said to him. Mr. Grant pressed him to say what was "the worst that was said by these women." Mr. Paddock answered that Mr. Grant, when it came his turn to cross-examine the witness, dwelt on the fact that the latter had in no instance mentioned the exact date of any of these personal experiences in connection with the houses mentioned as disorderly in the formal complaint. After dwelling on this, the lawyer referred to "the gentleman's excellent memory." From the other side of the room, Mr. Olcott came back with: "It's just a usual, everyday kind of a memory."

Long before the trial began, interested spectators were in the Inspector Cross was there with his counsel, Mr. House, the Inspector's case being scheduled to come up before the board just as soon as that of Capt. Herlihy has been completed. Another who arrived early was the Rev. F. J. C. Moran, who is engaged in mission work and has had several clashes with the police. Chief Devery came in and took a front seat immediately the proceedings started. He greeted Capts. Herlihy. In the back of the room were the Rev. James H. George, rector of St. John's Church, Salisbury, Conn., and the Rev. Alexander J. Kerr of the Broome Street Tabernacle, both of whom were summoned as witnesses for the prosecution, the former having been with Mr. Paddock on the occasion when the latter claims to have been insulted by Capt. Herlihy.

WOULD EXCLUDE MR. YORK.

As soon as the Commissioners had taken their places, Judge Pryor arose and said that there was one member of the Police Board who should not sit on the case if he had made certain statements attributed to him by two newspapers.

"I refer to President York," he added.

Then he read from two newspaper extracts in which Mr. York was quoted as saying that if such conditions as were claimed to exist in the precinct of the accused Captain really existed in any precinct in the city the Captain of that precinct was responsible for them.

"I would suggest," ex-Judge Pryor continued, "that if those quotations are correct the President cannot with propriety sit in judgment upon the defendant here, as he has already announced this defendant's responsibility. It may be that the President has not been correctly quoted, however."

"The President," replied Mr. York, "is the best judge of the propriety of his sitting in this case."

"Since I am forced to do so," said ex-Judge Pryor, "I make the formal motion that President York be excluded from this trial."

"That motion cannot be entertained," replied President York firmly, "for the reason that no one has the power to so exclude him."

Counsel for the defense moved to strike out the first charge against their client. This was denied, Commissioner Abell dissenting. Then George Barrett, an employe of the Lawyers' Engineering and Surveying Association, was called to the stand to verify a map of the "Red Light District," which Mr. Olcott wished to offer in evidence. The defense made no objections, but when the prosecution proposed as evidence the weekly reports of Capt. Herlihy and the station book of complaints from citizens, Mr. Grant reserved the right to examine these documents before consenting to have them used. He took them in charge with Mr. Olcott's acquiescence.

Mr. Paddock was then called to the stand, and as he stepped forward ex-Judge Pryor asked that the other witnesses be excluded from the courtroom. To this the President agreed, and the Revs. Kerr and George were escorted to a private room by a Sergeant. In the beginning of his testimony Mr. Paddock mentioned as several places where he had been accosted by women and male "pullers-in" some houses that had not been specifically named in the complaint. This led to a prolonged discussion, as a result of which the defense finally obtained the ruling that the witness was not to be allowed to cite places not so named.

The witness testified to having been solicited in front of 256 Chrystie Street. There was a discussion, in the course of which the word "solicited" was barred by President York; whereupon the witness said that he had been "spoken to" at 176, 178, and 178½ Chrystie Street, and that the women at those numbers, sometimes standing in the doorways and sometimes on the stoops, had asked him to "come in." Speaking of the last number he said:

"I was approached by women, probably as many as 150 times in passing this house. They would call me by such endearing names as 'darling,' 'ducky,' 'dearest,' and the like. Often they would throw a kiss at me. Boys and girls were almost constantly playing around the house, for it is a very congested district."

Asked how often a policeman had been in the neighborhood when he was thus accosted, the witness said that an officer was on the corner or near it at least seventy-five of the one hundred and fifty times.

Commissioner Hess—Was this in the day or night?

"To the best of my recollection," replied Mr. Paddock, "I was approached equally as much in the day time as at night."

Mr. Olcott—Who is the police officer to whom you refer as having been near the place when you were approached?

"He gave me his name as Norton."

The witness explained that this Norton had been the officer who was usually on that beat. He added, under questioning, that what he meant by the policeman's being where he could have seen what was going on was that the policeman was within fifty feet of the spot where he was accosted. Mr. Olcott asked him what had happened on the night of April 20 last. Mr. Paddock replied that on that date, at about 10 o'clock in the evening, he walked around the district with his friend, the Rev. Mr. George. He said that they had just turned down Chrystie Street from Rivington, when they were addressed by women in front of Nos. 174 and 172. As this happened, the witness said, a man whom they had seen talking on the corner to a policeman ran after them, passed them, and shouted something to the women in the different doorways, whereupon the latter ran inside their houses.

"I asked this man to go back and meet the officer with me," continued Mr. Paddock. "He did so. I told the policeman that the man had warned the women to go inside at my approach, and that I wanted him arrested for disorderly conduct. Then the officer, the prisoner, Mr. George, and myself went together to the police station of the Twelfth Precinct.

GAVE MR. PADDOCK THE LIE.

"Capt. Herlihy was in the station when we arrived. The Sergeant asked the usual questions of the arrested man and of me, saying that he would hold the man until the next morning, when I should go to the Essex Market Police Court and make my charge against him. Capt. Herlihy then said to me that I was 'disgracing my cloth' in going around stirring up trouble and trying to put a bad name on my district. I told him that these houses existed and were open in his precinct. Thereupon he cried:

"'You lie, and you know that you lie.'

"When he said this he came toward me with clenched fists. He shook them in my face. Mr. George and I left the station as soon as we could."

Q.—How often did you see Capt. Herlihy?

A.—Four or five times in my office at the Pro-Cathedral and thirty or forty times in his room at the Twelfth Precinct Police Station.

Replying to other questions, Mr. Paddock said that he had frequently complained to the Captain about the existence of immoral houses in the precinct, particularly regarding the three already named in Chrystie Street and about some in Allen Street, especially Nos. 119 and 137. To show the locality of these places he used the map that had been offered in evidence by the prosecution.

On the next day after his visit to Capt. Herlihy with Mr. George, the witness said, he came to Police Headquarters to see Inspector Cross. This time, too, Mr. George was with him.

"I wanted to see Mr. Cross alone," Mr. Paddock went on, "and I told him so. Capt. Herlihy was there, sitting beside the Inspector. To the latter I said that what I wished to talk with him about was a matter relating to the precinct in which I lived.

"'Well,' he replied, 'you must say what you have to say in the presence of Capt. Herlihy.'

"I told him that I had been trying to assist the police of the district in closing the immoral houses; that I had done this in a friendly way as I could. I said that I had been to patrolmen, Roundsmen, ward detectives, and the Captain, and that, in spite of all this, the conditions had continued to be as bad as ever, until things had come to such a pass that my own life was in danger. Several threats, I told him, had been sent to me. I asked for his advice as to what to do. He refused to give me the advice. Then I told him that I would have to go to his superior. Whereupon the Inspector said that I had better prefer charges.

"Capt. Herlihy here interposed. [Mr. Paddock related what the Captain had said, as told above.] I did not go to the Captain and the Inspector as a purist, expecting impossible things. I simply asked that he see to three matters—the suppression of the open pursuit of their business by the prostitutes, the segregation of these women from the little children and from the houses in which the other occupants were respectable people, and the prevention of the public flaunting of vice on the streets.

"I once told the Captain that 63 Stanton Street was one of the most outrageous places ever heard of—that is, as far as outside appearances went to show anything. I kept going to him, from November, 1899, until not long ago, telling him each time that I had already spoken to his subordinates to no avail. One of the places that I complained of was 140 Chrystie Street—this was in the latter part of December of last year. I told him that the neighbors were coming to me regularly and making complaints of these places, and that I myself had been accosted in front of them by people who told me in plain words what they wanted. I also told him of the two houses at 114 and 123 Stanton Street, adding that cards of invitation to one of the latter had been given to some young men on the steps of the Pro-Cathedral. Further, I told him of being approached at 199 and 201 Forsyth Street, and of how the boys in my congregation had had the same experiences there and elsewhere.

"Once the Captain said of one of these places that it was impossible to change the condition of affairs. At another time he denied the existence of such places."

All the time that Mr. Paddock was testifying there were constant objections on the part of the defense, especially from Mr. Grant. The latter occasionally held whispered conferences with ex-Judge Pryor, and Judge Pryor was once heard to ask the question: "Who is running this case, anyway—you or I?" In most cases the decision was against Mr. Grant.

CLERGYMAN WAS ASSAULTED.

The witness told how, in the latter part of last February, when walking on Rivington Street, he was accosted by a young man, and how, when he tried to take this youth down a neighboring street, they were followed by a big man who had come out of one of the houses before which the young man had been a "puller-in." The big man, said Mr. Paddock, caught him and gave him a shove as if to hurl him into a cellar entrance that was open on the sidewalk. He said that it was only with great difficulty that he escaped from falling down the hole by jumping over it. The big man kicked the young one and dragged him off.

Then the cross-examination began.

Attorney Grant—Did you ever go to Capt. Herlihy and offer to identify any of the witnesses?

A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you ever offer to identify any such persons whom you alleged had done wrong in your presence?

A.—I did.

Q.—Capt. Herlihy took immediate action in that case, didn't he?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you ever offer to go to court and make a sworn complaint?

A.—I did not.

Later in the examination Mr. Grant asked:

"Could the policeman whom you said was fifty feet away from you at the time you were accosted hear what any of these women said to you?"

A.—He could, I believe.

Mr. Grant objected to "beliefs."

Mr. Grant took up the case of the young man whom Mr. Paddock had arrested on the evening of his last encounter with Capt. Herlihy. After an exhaustive cross-examination on this subject, in which the witness reiterated what he had said in answer to the questions in the direct examination, Mr. Grant produced an affidavit signed by the clergyman in the Essex Market Court on the morning when the prisoner came there for trial. In the affidavit it appeared that Mr. Paddock had stated his charges in a more amplified way than he had to the Police Sergeant or to the Captain. Mr. Grant demanded an explanation of this. After much talk on all sides, the witness said that the only explanation he could give, if it were true that the affidavit accused the prisoner of more things than he had intended, was that he had been told by the clerk of the court that his charges were correctly written thereon and had signed it without reading it over carefully.

Mr. Grant then talked at length on the alleged discrepancies. He even said that if any other man than Mr. Paddock had done this thing he would have made himself liable to prosecution for perjury. Mr. Olcott responded from his seat that this was ridiculous.

Before the discussion went further an adjournment was taken. The trial will come up again on next Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and the witnesses will be Mr. Paddock and Mr. George.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

OLEAN, N. Y., Dec. 28.—The general store of F. W. Merritt & Son, East Olean, and a dwelling house adjoining it, occupied by Charles Beebe, were destroyed by fire this morning. The loss will be heavy.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Dec. 28.—Fire early this morning at the Spiritualist camp ground at Lily Dale destroyed five cottages belonging to Mrs. Scheu, Nellie Warren, Mrs. Covell, Miss Russell, and Mr. Herne. The Herne photograph gallery was also destroyed. The total loss will reach $10,000.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Dec. 28.—The Brownville Company's mill at Brownville, a suburb of this city, caught fire from a hot box over the engine this morning and was entirely destroyed. The mill was valued at $150,000, and the owners carried an insurance of only about $25,000. The mill was owned by A. L. Upham, S. A. Upham, and C. W. and Munson Gable of this city.

PORTLAND, Me., Dec. 28.—A fire which broke out in the basement of the C. S. Woolworth Five and Ten Cent Store early to-day caused a loss estimated at about $75,000, and little more than half this sum is covered by insurance. Mr. Woolworth is the heaviest individual loser, his stock of $20,000 being practically ruined. It was fully insured. The other losses include J. H. Rines, owner of Rines Block, $10,000; Miss Anna M. Roberts, milliner, $15,000; R. M. Lewson & Co., cloaks and ladies' furnishing goods, $10,000; Hotel Waldo, $5,000, and several smaller concerns.

GOSSIP ABOUT THE CHIEF

Many Rumors as to When Devery Will Go.

Commissioners Decline to Discuss the Matter—Mr. Nixon "Sees a Light Ahead."

Rumors of Chief Devery's early retirement were thicker than ever at Police Headquarters yesterday, but beyond denying the wildest of these none of the Commissioners nor the Chief himself would speak about the matter, and the day passed without positive developments.

The Police Board sat all the afternoon at the Herlihy trial and held no meeting afterward, although the list of fifty Roundsmen eligible for promotion to Sergeantcies, which they called for on Thursday, arrived from the Civil Service Commission during the afternoon.

President York said after the adjournment that the board would be likely to meet to-day. Commissioner Sexton said that he had not the Chief's resignation in his pocket, as had been reported, and that he had never seen such a document.

Gossip about the gray building, however, was no longer as to whether the Chief would go or not, but as to the manner of his going—whether he would be retired by the Commissioners, or whether he would himself make application to be placed upon the pension list. It was deemed ominous by some that within the last day or two there has been a lull in the thunderings from Hugh McLaughlin. This was taken by some to mean that a promise had been given.

The question of Chief Devery's probable successor was frequently discussed and the name of Capt. Titus, who has just succeeded Capt. McClusky as Chief of the Detective Bureau, was more than once mentioned. When asked about his prospects Capt. Titus smiled and said: "That's too far ahead to talk about."

Mingling with a swarm of politicians who came to further the chances of their friends in the new promotions were many of the newly appointed Captains, who received hearty congratulations.

The new headquarters of the Committee of Fifteen in the Park Row Building were not open for business yesterday, although Assistant Secretary George W. Morgan was busily engaged in getting things in shape. William H. Baldwin, Jr., the Chairman, said there were no further plans to announce. It was announced that Bishop Potter will be one of the speakers at the Workingmen's Dollar Dinner in Arlington Hall to mark the incoming of the new century. John S. Crosby will be toastmaster. Edwin Markham, as the midnight hour arrives, will recite a poetical greeting to the twentieth century, which he has composed for the occasion.

Affairs went very quietly at the headquarters of the Tammany Committee of Five, at 190 Bowery. Lewis Nixon was in Philadelphia all day, and upon his return last evening said: "The only news I have is that I have just received a letter from Mr. Croker, and he says that he hasn't had any carouncles, as published, and never was in better health in his life." Asked about the Tammany vice crusade, he said: "I see a light ahead. That is all I can say."

M. Warley Platzek was sick with bronchitis yesterday. The committee expects to hold its next meeting Monday.

SAYS HIS AUNT IS INSANE.

An application was made in the Supreme Court yesterday for a commission to inquire into the sanity of Mrs. Anna M. Deene of 409 West One Hundred and Fiftieth Street. The application was made by a nephew of Mrs. Deene, who stated that his aunt, who is worth nearly a quarter of a million dollars, is over eighty-two years of age and is incompetent to manage her affairs. The nephew said that he was over fifty years of age, but that his aunt took him for a brother of his who is eleven years older and who bears no resemblance to him. She is also said to constantly mistake a forty-five-year-old nephew for an eighteen-year-old grandnephew.

According to her nephew, Mrs. Deene sometimes imagines herself of royal descent and decorates herself with jewelry, puts on her nightdress, and remains in bed to receive visitors. Any person who addresses her as Queen, the nephew says, is able to get checks and money from her. Affidavits were submitted by other relatives and by her coachman to show that Mrs. Deene is incompetent to manage her affairs.

The application was opposed by David L. Osborne, a nephew; Bridget E. Smyth, a niece, and Margaret A. Pfeffer, an adopted child of Mrs. Deene, who produced an affidavit from Mrs. Deene herself denying the allegations as to her sanity. She said that the trouble with the applicant was that she had ceased giving him money. Justice Blanchard reserved decision.

MORE SEVERE DIVORCE LAWS.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 28.—The circuit Judges of Missouri favor more stringent divorce laws, and at their annual meeting here adopted a resolution recommending to the State Legislature the passage of an amendment which will prevent the guilty party to a divorce proceeding from remarrying under three years.

The Legislature convenes in January and it is likely that the provision will be passed. Another recommendation calculated to decrease the number of divorces is that the party who files suit must be a resident of the county in which the proceeding is filed for at least one year.

Big Dividends for Bostonians.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 28.—The dividends to be disbursed to Bostonians next month aggregate no less than $20,671,648. Nearly all the money is to be disbursed in this city. In addition, $1,019,000 principal matures in Boston at this time. The State of Massachusetts interest payments are very heavy.

"BILL" BERESFORD IS DEAD.

Lord William, Husband of the Dowager Duchess of Marlborough, Expires at Midnight.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Lord William Leslie de la Poer Beresford died at midnight.

Known to almost every "Tommy" in the British Army as "Bill" Beresford, Lord William Beresford was famous in his own country long before he came into notice in America as the third husband of the dowager Duchess of Marlborough, formerly Mrs. Louis Hammersley of New York. He was born on July 20, 1847, being the third son of the fourth Marquis of Waterford. He was educated at Eton, and joined the Ninth Lancers in 1867.

The greater part of Lord William's service in the army was in India, where tales are still told of his courage in battle and his no less daring escapades—his mad drives and other break-neck feats. He was Military Secretary to three Viceroys, but whenever he had a chance he went off to take part in one of the "little wars" so frequent a few years ago. For one deed of splendid heroism he received the Victoria Cross.

Lord William married the Dowager Duchess of Marlborough in 1895, and since then had been living quietly in England. He was the elder brother of Lord Charles Beresford.

AMASA THORNTON REMARRIED.

Ceremony Performed at a Church Where a Christmas Entertainment Was in Progress.

Amasa Thornton, the well-known Republican politician of this city, was married last night to Mrs. Mary Emma Steinman of 209 Bay Thirty-first Street, Bensonhurst. The marriage was celebrated by the Rev. A. H. Rennie of St. James Methodist Episcopal Church, in Bensonhurst. It had not been previously arranged, and took place while a Christmas entertainment was going on in the church.

Mr. Thornton refused absolutely to say anything about his second marriage and made every effort to have it kept a secret. His bride secured a divorce a week ago from her former husband, who is at present in the Klondike. He had been formerly in the dry goods business in New York, and left for the Klondike last August. His wife heard nothing from him for some time and at length instituted divorce proceedings.

The couple drove up to St. James's Church about 8 o'clock last night as a Christmas entertainment was starting inside. Thornton jumped out and called for the minister. After some time Mr. Rennie appeared at the door and asked him what he wanted. When told that the pair wanted to get married the minister at first refused to perform the ceremony, but finally did so in an ante room in the church.

When it was concluded the bridal couple re-entered the carriage and drove off without waiting to receive any congratulations from the spectators at the Christmas entertainment.

Amasa Thornton is a native of St. Lawrence County, in New York State, and has been prominent in Republican politics in this city for many years. He is a lawyer and lives at 76 Madison Avenue. At one time he was the representative on the Republican State Committee for the Twelfth Congressional District. A short time ago he went to Rome to pay a visit to the Pope. His first wife died about four months ago. He has no children.

AMERICAN SAILORS' HEROISM.

French Admiral and the Commander of the Petrel Tell of Different Instances of Bravery.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—The Navy Department to-day received reports from two widely separated quarters of acts of heroism on the part of American sailors.

Capt. Chester of the Kentucky forwarded a letter of Rear Admiral Servan, commanding the French naval forces in Algiers, speaking in warm praise of the heroic conduct of two American bluejackets, Paul Ausseresses and Hugh Patrick Mullin, in rescuing a French seaman in the harbor of Algiers while the Kentucky was there.

In the other case Lieut. Commander Jesse M. Roper of the Petrel tells of unselfish conduct on the part of H. J. Coxe, hospital steward, and J. D. Fuller, S. A. Courser, R. Parsons, and J. Ward, sailors, in risking their lives in connection with a smallpox case on board ship in Manila Bay. The patient was taken on board a hulk, and there was attended night and day by the hospital steward. The climate and attending circumstances made the act one of much danger. The sailors then served as a funeral party, and were obliged to undergo thirty days in quarantine and to have all their clothes destroyed.

Acting Secretary Hackett has sent to each of the men named by Admiral Servan and Commander Roper a testimonial of the appreciation of their services, stating that they merit and receive the hearty commendation of the department.

ACTIVE CAMPAIGN IN MINDANAO.

Troops Capture Towns and a Rebel Stronghold—Arrests in Manila.

MANILA, Dec. 28.—An active campaign has been carried on by the Fortieth Infantry during December in Northern Mindanao. The town of Jemeniz was captured, as was also the insurgent stronghold in the mountains further inland. The coast town of Langarin was captured by a detachment of a hundred troops, who scattered the enemy in that vicinity, killing and capturing several. A portion of the troops thus engaged have returned to Cagayan and joined in the campaign which Brig. Gen. Kobbe is personally prosecuting.

Gen. MacArthur's proclamation is resulting in many arrests of alleged insurrectionists in Manila and vicinity, a few of those taken into custody being prominent. One prisoner was shot dead and another wounded in attempting to escape.

THE UNITED SERVICE.

Army.

Major Walter Reed, Surgeon, is detailed to represent the Medical Department of the army at the Pan-American Medical Congress, to meet in Havana Feb. 5.

Capt. George McK. Williamson, Assistant Quartermaster, will report in person to the Quartermaster General for consultation on official business.

Orders of Nov. 23 are amended to read as follows: Capt. William M. Ekin, Assistant Quartermaster, United States Volunteers, is honorably discharged from the service of the United States, to take effect Feb. 1, his services being no longer required.

Changes in the stations and duties of officers of the Medical Department and Acting Assistant Surgeons:

First Lieut. A. W. Shockley, Assistant Surgeon, is relieved from duty in the Department of Cuba, and will proceed to Fort Niobrara, Nebraska, and report to the commanding officer of that post for duty and by letter to the commanding General, Department of the Missouri, to relieve Acting Assistant Surgeon Clark I. Wertenhaker.

First Lieut. Theodore C. Lyster, Assistant Surgeon, is relieved from duty in the Department of Cuba and will proceed to Fort Schuyler, New York, and report to the commanding officer of that post for duty and by letter to the commanding General, Department of the East, to relieve Acting Assistant Surgeon William H. Brooks.

Major Louis W. Crampton, Surgeon, and Major William B. Banister, Surgeon, United States Volunteers, (Captain and Assistant Surgeon, United States Army,) are detailed as members of the board of medical officers at Manila, appointed Jan. 18, for the examination of candidates for admission to the Medical Corps of the army, vice Major William R. Hall, Surgeon, and Major Guy L. Edie, Surgeon, United States Volunteers, (Captain and Assistant Surgeon, United States Army,) relieved.

Major Thomas L. Hartigan, Thirtieth Infantry, United States Volunteers, having tendered his resignation, is honorably discharged from the service of the United States, to take effect Dec. 31.

Navy.

Lieut. F. P. Baldwin is detached from the Naval Academy and ordered home to wait orders.

Lieut. R. W. Henderson is detached from the Essex and ordered home; he has sick leave for one month.

Movements of Government Vessels.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Admiral Remey, on his flagship, the Brooklyn, has left Olongapo for Manila.

The Philadelphia and the Iowa, now on their southern cruise, have left Magdalena Bay for Acapulco.

The Farragut has arrived at San Diego.

The Wompatuck and the Frolic have crived at Hampton Roads.

The Hartford sailed yesterday from Curacoa to La Guayra, Venezuela. She will remain in Venezuelan waters looking after American interests, Capt. Hawley co-operating to that end with Minister Loomis, probably until relieved by the Lancaster, also a training ship.

The transport Port Stephens is at Nagasaki; the transports Wyefield and Athenian have sailed from that port, the former for San Francisco and the latter for Seattle.

HAZED CADETS FAINTED

Military Court at West Point Learns of Several Cases.

Denies He Had Convulsions; Put Cotton in His Mouth to Prevent Crying Out—U. S. Grant's Experience.

WEST POINT, Dec. 28.—So far as regards the taking of testimony, the work of the military court of inquiry concerning the death of ex-Cadet Oscar L. Booz will be finished at the West Point Military Academy to-morrow afternoon.

To-day's investigation brought out the testimony to the effect that cadets had been hazed to a degree of exhaustion, and two witnesses who were examined last week were recalled in reference to these cases. They were Cadets Pegram and Sheridan. The victims mentioned particularly were Cadets MacArthur and Haskell. Haskell is not in the corps now, so that his testimony was not available.

I remember Cadet Booz. I spoke to him after his fight with Keller. I told him he had not acted right in that bout, and that he ought to have gone on. He spoke in such a way to me that he showed he was tired of the place and wanted to leave.

Were you ever hazed?

Yes, I took pepper sauce, as much as a teaspoonful and a half at one time.

Who gave it to you?

Cadet Bender, who was discharged. He began by giving me a few drops. I think it was Bender who started the giving of pepper sauce.

Did it hurt you?

No, Sir, it was unpleasant, but it had no injurious effects that I know of.

Did you ever have to eat any disagreeable food?

Yes, Sir, on one occasion. I had to eat some preserved pineapple. There was plenty of quinine mixed up in it.

Did you know Cadet Breth or ever know him to be hazed?

Yes, Sir, I saw Cadet Bender exercise him. I never saw him exercised to the point of exhaustion, but he went as far as he could go. He was of a very nervous temperament. When spoken to suddenly he would tremble all over. I knew him at the preparatory school in Baltimore, and there he was found physically deficient by Major Winne. I mean deficient to enter this academy.

Cadet William N. Nichols of Connecticut said he belonged to the third class, and was in camp in 1899. He was exercised then and did 250 "eagles." He was also braced and hung to the stretcher, but not all at the same session. He remembered the case of Cadet Haskell, who fainted from exercising. The authorities investigated the matter.

The witness then told the court that his class agreed at that time not to submit to hazing by upper-class men. In reply to Col. Hein, he said that the class asked the Commandant to release them from the agreement. Asked why they did this, he replied:

I think the upper class men spoke to us about it, and we were afraid we would be "cut" by the upper class men.

How do you look upon the matter now?

I think the action we took was all right.

Were you informed your class would be "cut"?

No, Sir; we thought we would from what we heard and knew of the upper class men.

YOUNG GRANT'S HAZING.

Cadet Ulysses S. Grant, grandson of ex-President Grant, who is a third class man, was the next witness. He stands second in his class, the leader of which is Douglas MacArthur, a son of Gen. MacArthur. Young Grant said he was admitted to the Academy in 1899.

Were you hazed in that year?

Yes, Sir; I did "eagles," held out dumb bells, did footballs, and other exercises.

How long did these exercises last?

About five or six minutes, Sir.

Did you have to do anything else?

Yes. I took part in practical jokes and ridiculous things.

Were you hazed more than others, or less?

I think a little less than many others, Sir.

Did you ever do "dips" and get down on your hands and toes and raise and lower your body?

Yes, Sir.

Had you to sit on a locker and hold your feet in the air?

Yes, Sir; and also I had to hold out dumb bells.

Was any cadet punished for hazing you?

Yes, Sir; an upper class man was caught making me "eagle" and he was dismissed.

What answer did your class delegate to the Commandant to bring back to you in reference to your request to be released from your agreement not to submit to hazing?

He brought none, Sir.

Yet you say your class considered itself absolved?

Yes, Sir.

What influenced you to ask for this release?

We were told by upper class men that such a promise could not be kept. We asked the release the day following that on which we made the agreement. There was no outside influence brought to bear, Sir.

Anything else?

Yes, Sir; we were informed that the corps would not brook such an agreement, and we knew that a great many fights would ensue.

Was there any hazing in the last encampment?

There was no exercising or qualifying, Sir.

Did you ever qualify?

Yes, Sir; I qualified in "Sammy" and "Prunes."

Have you known of any brutal hazing?

No, Sir; if there was, I was not present. I heard talk in the camp that there was.

Did you do any hazing on fourth-class men yourself?

Yes; I made them "brace" and do some foolish things.

Any exercising?

No, Sir; there was a class agreement against that.

Lieut. Eugene P. Jervey, Jr., and instructor of languages at the academy, was then called and sworn. He had Cadet Booz in his class in 1898. The witness said that Booz was not particularly bright and not very quick. He looked like a man who the more he had to learn the less he seemed to know. His marks in the first week were proficient, but steadily declined. There was nothing in his appearance regarding neatness to distinguish him from other cadets. He thought Booz would have just passed in English at the January examination.

Cadet Douglas MacArthur of Wisconsin, leader of the third class, followed the Lieutenant in the witness chair. He said:

I entered the academy June 13, 1899. I was hazed, but was never exhausted or nauseated from exercising. I had to do foolish things, among which was to review a turtle passing down the company streets during the encampment, when I was a fourth classman.

Do you remember any upper classmen who hazed you?

Yes, Sir.

Who were they?

Is it is absolutely necessary that I give the names, Sir?

Gen. Brooke replied that it was, and the witness replied that Mr. Dockery of the present second class is the only one now in the academy. Gen. Brooke asked:

Do you know of any cadet fainting from hazing?

Yes; J. J. Murphy of the present fourth class. I assisted him to his tent. I found him lying near the ice tank, but he did not tell me what he had been required to do.

Did you haze any fourth-class men yourself?

I made some of them brace, but I did not exercise any one.

Why did you brace fourth-class men?

To take the rough edges off new men and take conceit out of them.

Then some of the "plebes" are conceited? How long does it last?

A very short time, Sir.

Is it a perfect cure?

Usually, Sir.

Were you ever seized with convulsions during 1899?

I can't say they were convulsions, Sir. They were like cramps in my muscles.

What was the cause?

In the first place, I was not feeling well, and it was after a warm day's work, and I also did some exercising.

Did you lose consciousness?

Not at all, Sir.

Cadet Charles T. Leeds of Massachusetts entered the academy at the same time as young MacArthur and Booz. He was hazed, he said, by exercising, but not to the extent of exhaustion. He also qualified in "Sammy" and prunes in the mess hall.

During the last encampment, how did you treat fourth-class men yourself?

I made them "brace," Sir.

You don't consider "bracing" hazing, then?

No, Sir.

Do you remember any of your classmen having gone to the hospital with a broken jaw?

Not from bazing, Sir.

I did not ask you that; from any cause?

Yes, Sir.

Who was it?

Cadet Carrithers, Sir.

How was he hurt?

In a fight, Sir.

With whom?

I don't know, Sir.

Cadet Edward N. Johnston of Oregon was called, and was about to be let go when he asked the permission of the court to say a few words regarding hazing and bracing. The court granted his request, and the witness, who is the leader of the first class, said:

There seems to be a great deal of misapprehension in reference to hazing and bracing. I consider that they are absolutely unconnected. Bracing is indulged in by upper class men on fourth-class men for the purpose of insuring the proper military carriage of the corps and with a regard to the appearance of an officer after he has graduated.

Cadet John C. Pegram of Virginia was recalled. He was examined last week, and the object of the court in recalling him was made apparent by the first question put to him by Gen. Clous.

Will you tell the court, Mr. Pegram, what you did in the matter of hazing in the camp of 1899?

I don't remember any special case.

Let me refresh your memory. Do you remember cadets being in quarantine at that time?

Yes, Sir. I exercised several.

Did you ever know any cadet to faint?

Yes, Sir. I exercised Cadet Kenzel. I gave him 150 eagles, I think. It was in my room. He left and walked away. Cadet Williams called me out into the hall and told me a man had fainted. Kenzel was lying down. I gave him some water, lifted him up, and he said he was all right.

Any other cases?

I heard that a cadet named McGinnis had fainted, and also that a "plebe" had near the sink. To the latter I carried smelling salts. He was a fourth-class man. He revived. I was not engaged in hazing him.

Did you ever hear of cotton being put in cadets mouths to keep them from crying or being hysterical?

Yes, I heard of such a case, but was not present.

What case was this?

I was told that Cadet MacArthur had requested some upper classmen to stuff his mouth with cotton so that he could not cry out hysterically, as he said he could not control himself after some severe exercising.

Why should he do this?

There was an officer near by at the time, and I was told MacArthur was afraid he would hear him.

Young Phil Sheridan followed Pegram on the stand. He was also examined last week. He added the name of Cadet Brenton to the list of those who had fainted after exercising. He also said that Cadet Haskell was only shamming the night that he was supposed to have fainted. Cadet C. R. Alley of Massachusetts said that on one occasion in cam

CLUB VELLUM
Writing Paper

This is the most remarkable writing paper known to the trade. Every manufacturer in the business, save one, says that it is impossible to produce the paper at the price. Yet we get it year after year, though we don't get as much as we could sell if we had it. Last year we sold a hundred tons of it. The year before, we sold a hundred tons. To-day we have ready another equal quantity—

100 tons of Paper, and
15,000,000 Envelopes

In appearance and writing surface it has no match anywhere at its price, or near it.

Made in two shades, cream and azure; and in three popular sizes, Frances, Helen and Octavo. Price,

10c a pound
Envelopes, 15c a hundred

Club Vellum is also made in commercial sizes, as follows:

Hotel and Club Paper, 5 x 8 inches, at 75c a thousand; 25c a quarter thousand.

Business Paper, 8 x 10 inches, at $1.50 a thousand; 45c a quarter thousand.

Special Counters in Basement, Fourth avenue side.

Women's HATS

Radically reduced in price. This is an after-Christmas clear-up, and some of our handsomest evening hats—just eighteen of them—form part of this offering. Their prices are reduced exactly one-half. Thus:

$17.50 from $35 $12.50 from $25
$15 from $30 $10 from $20

Besides, there are ten French hats, the remainder of our splendid Fall importations, that are marked at still more surprising reductions. The values are $30 to $40 each—

Choice at Ten Dollars

Second floor, Tenth street.

Bolero JACKETS

These are very jaunty and cozy little coats for women—a wholly new idea. Not nearly so cumbersome as the usual negligee sacque, but quite as comfortable as most of them and ever so much more attractive.

They're made of flannel, in various solid colors—new, bright shades—and prettily trimmed with gold-mixed braid or stitched taffeta; lined with excellent silk. Some are sleeveless, others have elbow sleeves. Prices, $2.25 to $6.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Girls' COATS

This is a most favorable time to buy a really elegant coat for a girl or young lady at a very liberal saving from its real value. The two particular lots offered to-day come fresh and new from a manufacturer who kept his stock full for all demands up to Christmas day. Now he sends them to us at the reductions we tell of.

They are as smart and handsome as any garments shown, This word of them:

At $10.50, worth $15 to $18—Box coats of handsome black and Oxford pebble cheviot; all beautifully tailored and silk lined.

At $13.50, worth $20—Three-quarter length coats of black and Oxford cheviot; all beautifully lined and tailored; some have box backs, others half fitted.

Second floor, Ninth street.

HOSIERY

Here are a few sorts each for men and women. Good sorts, though they're marked very cheaply. Some are about a third below value. Others are fully a half less than their actual worth.

For Men—

12½c a pair—Seamless half hose; "clerical" merino; heavy weight; durable and elastic. Value 18c.

3 pairs 50c—Fine cotton half hose in assorted shades of tan or fast black. Also fast black with unbleached or gray soles. Also of fine merino in natural color or assorted tan shades. Value 25c a pair.

For Women—

3 pairs 50c—Fine gauge fast black cotton stockings; good weight; elastic; double soles, heels and toes. Value 25c a pair.

25c a pair—Ingrain lisle thread stockings; fast black; Richelieu or Rembrandt ribbed; with white soles. Value 50c.

Broadway.

Spangled ROBES

The entire stock, comprising some of various elegant robes in solid black, a lot of steel-and-black and white-and-silver spangled robes, is offered at reduced prices to-day. The reductions throughout will average one-third. The $30 robes are reduced only to $25, while those that sold recently at $150 are now but $75.

With the Dress Trimmings, Tenth street.

SHOES

New Year's Day of all days is the day for new things, and shoes are the foundation of good dress. If you want the smartest and best shoes that skill can make they are here—

Men's Shoes, $7, $5 and $3.90—in particular.
Women's Shoes, $7, $5, $3.

Every sort and every size.

Perhaps you are bent on saving up after Christmas generosity. Then we can offer you very excellent shoes at these positive savings:

For Men—
In the Barrain Store, across Ninth street from Main Store.

Shoes at $1.30—600 pairs of heavy soled, satin leather lace shoes; good value at $2.

Shoes at $1.90—Patent leather shoes in the newest styles, and plenty of them; a chance to save nearly half on the New Year's shoes.

Shoes at $2.85—Mostly heavy weights in shoes made to sell at $3.50 and $4; styles and leathers correct for this season.

Boys' Shoes—
At $1, $1.25, $1.50 and $1.70—And the saving about a third—a big saving on boys' shoes, which are seldom made up much ahead of orders.

For Women—
In Basement of Main Store.

Shoes at $1.40—Black kidskin, lace and button; patent leather, lace only; values in this lot run to $2.50.

Shoes at $1.80—A dozen sorts to choose from, and every kind desirable; patent leather or kid, lace or button, and nearly every size in each kind; values run to $3.

Shoes at $2.30—2.80—pairs just received from the factory; were our own $3 lines until shouldered out by the peerless RELIABLE line, and better than any other three dollar shoe we know.

For Children—
Shoes at 75c, 85c, 95c and $1—Thousands of pairs sold and worn without complaint testify to our care in selecting.

Artificial Flowers

For home decoration. A lot of roses, chrysanthemums, lilies, and so on—all excellent imitations of the natural flowers—are greatly reduced in price. Various artificial plants are likewise made cheaper. Some at 25c that were 65c to 85c.

Roses, pink, red, yellow and white, at 5c, 10c and 15c. Some of these were 50c.
Chrysanthemums, white, yellow, pink and purple, at 5c, 10c and 15c. Were 15c to 75c.
Lilies, white, yellow and purple, at 15c. Were $1.
Lilacs, white and purple, at 5c and 10c. Were 35c to 65c.

A Holiday Clean-up of Fine SILKS

Some of the most elegant silks in stock are affected, as well as many of the more popular kinds. Every piece that has suffered from the holiday hurry, or shown itself to be slow of sale at its right price is brought out for a hurry-up mark to-day. Such reasons as these: Pieces that are shop-worn, finger-marked, colors that sell slowly, mussed, short ends, sorts that have stayed in stock too long. Now they must go in a jiffy. The new prices will make amends for all other failings; for truly sumptuous silks can now be bought for a trifling cost, while these very limited lots last.

At $1.50, originally $9—
Fancy French Silks—white brocades with warp-pointed flowers in colors.

At $1.50, originally $8—
Rich White Moire Antique, with wide satin stripes; pink ombre to white, with bunches of roses on Canalae ribbon dividing the tint.

At $1.50, originally $7.50—
Rich White Faille, with violets in bunches and scrolls of violet satin ribbon.

At $1.50, originally $6—
Rich French Turquoise Satin, with stripes, brocaded with white and blossoms, and buds in color on white.

At $1.50, originally $5.50—
Rich Side Band Silks; pink roses and foliage on one side, and diminishing satin stripes make up the novelty.

At $1.50, originally $5—
Rich Pekin Satin; stripes of satin and silk are divided by clusters of narrow satin stripes of black, with shadow of flowers peeping between, in old rose.

At $1.50, originally $5—
Satin-back French Peau de Soie, gray, yellow, green; brocaded with garlands of white and birds in flight; white on these colors.

At $1.50, originally $4.50—
Rich Jacquard Satins; old rose, gray, cadet; brocaded with reeds and stems of white satin.

At $1.50, originally $4—
Royal French Armure Silks; gray, lavender, cornflower, ciel, pink, castor, old rose, reseda and dark gray.

At $1.50, originally $4—
All-silk Liberty Satins, with printings of tiny flowers on gray, on lavender, on yellow.

At $1, from $2—
Printed Satin Liberty; navy blue on white, black on white, black-and-white on gray and on lavender.

At $1, from $3 and $3.50—
Rich soft Satins, brocaded and corded into rich designs.

At 65c, from $1.25 and $1.50—
A lot of last season's Printed India Silks; lavender, gray, lilac and ciel.

At $1 to $6.50, from $3.50 to $14—
A lot of French and German fancy Velvets; Panne Figure Satins, Chameleon Panne Velvets, Panne Velvets with silver, Fancy Panne Velvet.

At $1, from $5—
Plain Silk Velvets in off shades.

At $1, from $3.25—
Plain colored Velvets in off colors.

At $1, from $2.25—
Plain colored Velvets in cerise, garnet, lavender, rose, yellow, violet.

At $1, from $1.50 to $5—
Velvets in these colors—old rose, gray, blue, cerise and magenta.

BRIC-A-BRAC
Under-price

The Art Room has a collection of pretty things that were passed by in the holiday hurry. It's impossible to give everything a fair show—in fact, part of the Teplitz goods was detained on the ocean on an unfortunate vessel and did not arrive until Christmas was over. In this lot the variety is at its best, still unpicked-from, and is a rare group of pieces at the low prices marked, which are about a third below their worth. The lot includes heads, busts and figures in an entirely new finish. Prices, $5, $7.50, $10, and up to $27.50 each.

From the holiday stocks come these:

About two hundred pieces of Teplitz—Figures, Groups and Busts. A few are slightly chipped with the holiday handling, but the greater number are perfect. All are reduced a third:

40c, from 60c.
55c, from 85c.
80c, from $1.25.
$1.60, from $2.50.
$2.50, from $3.75.
$2.75, from $4.25.
$3.75, from $5.
$5, from $7.50.

A few fine pieces of Italian Faience at half prices.
90c, from $1.85.
$1.80, from $3.75.
$3.25, from $6.50.
$6, from $12.
$8.75, from $17.50.

Sale of Silk Waists
Two Groups of Splendid Values

There is one lot of handsome waists—a manufacturer's samples—of fine taffetas in rich, new solid colors and fancy stripes. Mostly in bodice effects; some with vests of same color as waist; others with vests of contrasting color. All are lined and boned.

Values are $10 and $12. Price, $7.

The other is a collection of pretty taffeta waists in solid colors—all the new shades—and black. These are all corded in new effects, and are prettily trimmed with braid. All made with the new bishop sleeve. A very fair $4.75 value, though the price is but $3.25 each.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Women's JACKETS
$12 and $15 Kinds at $7.50

Not many—perhaps fifty in all. But they're fine, stylish jackets, every one, and at the new price as good a bargain as will likely be offered anywhere this winter.

Some of kersey, others of Venetian cloth, a few of double-faced mixtures. All in the newest, best styles—short and jaunty—some with box backs. Not a jacket in the lot is worth less than $12—a fair proportion of the group are good fifteen dollar values.

The Price is $7.50 Each.

Second floor, Broadway.

Framed PICTURES
Many Kinds at Little Prices

It's house-cleaning time for the Picture Store. And here are the odds and ends that remain from a record-breaking holiday selling. They're to be closed out with little ceremony. Prices are cut exactly in half in many instances, others are treated not quite so severely, but reduced sufficiently, nevertheless, to make coming for them well worth while. There are only one or two of a kind, but a great many kinds, from which these brief hints:

Some carbon photographs that were $5.25 are now $2.75.
Photogravures, in oak frames with gilt beading, at $1.75, though $2.75 was very moderate.
Platinum photographs, in shaded silver frames, that were $5.50, are now $2.75.
Photogravures, in fancy oval wood frames, 13x16 in.; were $1.50; now $2.25.
Platinum prints, in 14x17 in. oval opening black and gold frame; were $3.75, now $2.50.
Photogravures in oak frames, with or without mats; figures and landscapes; were $7.50 and $10, now $5.

Picture Store, Fifth floor.

Elegant DRESSES
Under-price

This announces some very radical price-concessions on a number of handsome Costumes suitable for street wear. Most of the group are imported, and all are most artistic in style and superbly tailored; some are handsomely trimmed.

Values range up to $135—to-day all are marked at Seventy-five Dollars a Suit.

Second floor, Broadway.

TOILET ARTICLES

A lot of imported tooth brushes, all perfect goods, with excellent French bristles, at 5c to 25c—well worth 10c to 40c.

Some celluloid soap boxes with mirror fronts, at 25c, though regularly 35c and 45c. Mirrors of black or white celluloid at 25c—value double.

About 2000 cakes of violet soap—made especially for Wanamaker's—at 5c a cake. A particularly good toilet soap for so little a price.

In the Under-price Store, Basement.

Children's HATS

Several lots have been gathered up to close. The prices have been so lowered as to make the operation a quick one. Should be finished to-day. School hats at 25c and 50c, that were $1.25 to $2.50; Tam O'Shanters, golf and military caps, at 25c, that were 65c to $1.50; and Alpines at 75c, instead of $1.50.

In the Under-price Store, Basement.

RUGS Reduced

Sixty-five sheep and goat-skin rugs, in all the usual sizes, at $1 to $4.25 each. Were moderately priced at $3 to $8.50.

Persian Wilton rugs at $1—handsome and durable. The last little lots are now offered at this price. No more to come.

In the Under-price Store, Basement.

TABLE LINEN

A collection of remnants of 2 to 3½ yards each are offered at substantial reductions in price. They are table linens that sell regularly at 40c to $2 a yard. These remnants at the rate of 30c to $1.50 a yard.

In the Under-price Store, Basement.

CALENDARS

A long counter in the Under-price store holds a miscellaneous stock of calendars, now marked at one-half regular prices. Many beautiful specimens will be found in the collection. Prices were 2c to $1.90 each. Choice at just half.

Six for 55c Broadway and Ninth St.

Men's Overcoats

The Wanamaker clothing business grows and grows. The clothes are the sort that appeal to men. Of highest character in the matter of fabrics, and made up in an irreproachable manner. Then, other qualities assured, prices are unmatched.

These hints of excellent Winter Overcoats:

At $8.50—Overcoats at a low price that are of sterling goodness and correct in form. Made of all-wool Oxford-mixed frieze with plaid body lining and iron-yarn sleeve lining, velvet collar.

At $10—Overcoats of all-wool black frieze, lined throughout with heavy serge; satin sleeve linings and velvet collars. Mostly large sizes. $12 was the early season price.

Also at $10—Overcoats of all-wool Oxford-mixed frieze with satin shoulders and wool body lining; satin sleeve linings; velvet collars. A good $12 value.

At $15—The kind of overcoat that pleases the young man—has big broad shoulders and loose back, satin shoulders and wool body lining.

At $12—The best ulster you ever saw for the price; of all-wool Oxford-mixed frieze; plaid lined and two-inch band of black satin down side of facing; compare it with $15 ulster in other good stores.

Striped Worsted Trousers, $5—We've done wonders to deserve the reputation of selling the very best pure worsted Trousers that can be bought for five dollars. We now have two hundred pairs at this price that might fairly be priced at seven dollars—smart, handsome and absolutely all-wool, $5 a pair.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Boys' Clothing

The stocks were subjected to severe and prolonged attack before Christmas. The lines have been freshened up a bit here and there, and an unbroken front is again presented. Saturday is always a busy day with us in this boys' clothing store. Preparations have been made for an unusually spirited selling to-day. Good values throughout the stock, of which are briefly mentioned these few:

Splendid school suits of all-wool with extra trousers for boys of 8 to 16 years. $5.

Blue serge sailor suits, neatly trimmed with braid; attractive and durable; sizes 3 to 12 years. $5.

Heavy, durable reefers of frieze, warm and well made, with high collar; sizes 4 to 16 years. $5.

All-wool frieze overcoats, with neat velvet collars; single-breasted; sizes 4 to 16 years. $5.

Second floor, Ninth street.

Walking STICKS

If you've thought of a stick to give as a New Year's gift we can be helpful in the matter of selecting a suitable one. We've done a lot of thinking on the subject, as this splendidly varied stock will testify. Many wholly new styles are shown this season. Moderate prices rule—none is fanciful.

Walking sticks in Partridge, Penang and Weichsel wood, silver trimmed, at $1, $1.50, $2 and $2.50 each.

With inlaid wood, silver trimmed, at $3, $3.50 and $4.

With stag or Cape horn handles, at $2, $2.50 and $3.

With ivory, horn, silver or gold, at $4 to $10 each.

Broadway.

Office Furniture

An important item in our office furniture stock is Flat-top Desks. We show a very complete line in all the best sizes, at quite a range of prices, from the plain, practical sorts to those made of finest materials. Flat-top desks largely take the place of office tables, taking up but little more room and giving the additional advantage of large drawer capacity. We sell these desks in both oak and mahogany. To-day we tell of some special styles in oak:

At $10—Single pedestal, flat-top oak desks; 42 in. long, 30 in. wide; pedestal has 3 drawers with slide above; paneled ends and back; well built and finished.

At $12.50—Double pedestal, flat-top oak desks; 50 in. long, 30 in. wide; 4 drawers in left pedestal, 3 in right; slide above drawers in each pedestal; paneled ends; open back.

At $17—Quartered white oak, single pedestal desks; 42 in. long, 32 in. wide; 3 drawers in pedestal, 1 double depth; center drawer; built up, writing bed with framed-in edges; paneled ends and back.

At $19—Quartered white oak, double pedestal desks; 50 in. long, 32 in. wide; 4 drawers in left, 3 drawers in right pedestal; slide in each pedestal and center drawer between; writing bed is five-ply built up center with frame around edges; hand-carved drawer-pulls; drawers finished inside and fitted with movable partitions.

At $24—Same desk as above, 60 in. long.

At $22—Double flat-top desks; 55 in. long; 43 in. wide; desk complete on both sides; 4 drawers in left pedestal, 3 in right; slide above each pedestal and center drawer between; a total of 16 drawers and 4 slides; paneled ends and well built.

Other flat-top desks at $15, $16, $17.50, $19, $24, $25.50, $27.50, $31.

Fifth floor.

FANCY GOODS for Little

This word is about a collection of fancy articles of leatherette that have been slightly damaged—not available as gifts, but nice things to have for one's own use now that such a trifle pays for them. The lot includes—

Handkerchief and Glove Boxes with gilt tracing.
Necktie Boxes in dark purple and green, painted with Marguerites.
Necktie and Glove Boxes, in imitation Levant, highly polished and painted.
Glove and Handkerchief Boxes, in white leatherette, painted with bunches of violets; others in gray, painted in "Kaiser Blumen."
Necktie Boxes, in brown leatherette, with gilt tracing.

Regular prices were 25c and 50c; to-day choose for ten cents each

There is also a lot of the same sort of boxes in perfect condition, marked at just half former prices.

Basement, Fourth avenue.

BIBLES
Prayer-books, Hymnals

There's variety here still wide enough to meet any fancy, notwithstanding the tremendous ante-Christmas selling. During the next few days there'll doubtless be selling nearly as extensive, for all of these are just as appropriate for New Year's gifts. And they're all very good values, too. Here are four Bibles that are exceptionally low in price:

The Genuine Oxford Self-Pronouncing Teachers' Bible—Beautifully printed on Oxford India paper. The largest type self-pronouncing Bible in the smallest compass yet made. Size 8½x5½ inches and only 1¼ inches in thickness; weight, 1¾ pounds; bound in Argentine Morocco; Divinity circuit leather lined; red-under-gold edge. Beside the Old and New Testaments, this Bible contains 16 beautiful maps, concordance and all the helps. Our special price, $3.50. This Bible has been sold as high as $5.25.

The Art Bible—Containing the authorized version of the Old and New Testaments; 850 illustrations by the most celebrated artists; morocco binding, Divinity circuit, red and gold edges; size 7x9¾ in. and 2 in. thick; $1.25, was $1.85.

Bagster's Comprehensive Teacher's Bible—With all the helps; printed from long primer type, with the self-pronouncing feature in addition. Bound in flexible style (French morocco,) so it will lie open perfectly flat; can be folded right back; can be rolled up without injury to either the back or sewing. Size 8¼ x 6 in., and 1¾ thick. Price, $1.20. Has sold up to $2.50.

Here's the cheapest good Bible of which we have any knowledge. It contains: A Table of Contents by Chapter Headings and thirty-two pages of Helps; in all 844 pages. Printed from good, clear minion type on good paper. Strongly bound in black cloth with red edges, making a book 5¼ x 7¼ in. and 1¼ in. thick. Price, 35c.

Book Store, Ninth street.

WHITECAPS SUED FOR $200,000.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 28.—D. A. Jennings of Columbus, Ohio, has filed suit in the United States Court against about twenty citizens, men and women, of Washington County, Indiana, for $200,000 damages.

He claims they whitecapped him on Jan. 30, 1900, and persecuted him and his family until they were forced to leave the State. Jennings says he ran a newspaper in Salem, in which he had $15,000 invested. He claims the people of the county are so intermarried that they control all the social, religious, and political institutions. They undertook, he alleges, to control the policy of his paper and he opposed them. False charges were made against him in the local courts, he says, and the court costs alone took every dollar he had. The women, he says, undertook to get his wife to join in the conspiracy against him.

RELIGIOUS NEWS AND VIEWS

Plans for the Interdenominational New Century Revival.

Movement Will Be as Broad as the Country and Without Hippodrome Effects, Chairman Hall Says.

The week of prayer with which the leading ministers of the country are preparing to open the new century is only the first step in an interdenominational movement to create a great revival all over the country at the beginning of the new century. This movement was suggested by the late evangelist, D. L. Moody, in a talk with William Phillips Hall, the business-man evangelist. Mr. Hall at a conference of the leading ministers of the country suggested the scheme of a National gospel campaign. He communicated with a number of representative clergymen and started a general discussion of the subject. Next, he addressed letters to a carefully selected list of religious workers elaborating the plan. More than one hundred of these letters were sent out, and the result was a conference held in this city on Dec. 3. It was decided that a special Nominating Committee of five should be appointed to name a National Central Committee, which was to arrange methods and get the movement into actual operation.

The movement will not recognize any doctrinal differences, and is expected to strengthen and unite the churches of all denominations all over the United States. It is planned to begin systematically through the co-operation of existing religious agencies. The leaders of the movement have called it the Twentieth Century Gospel Campaign. The plan is backed by men of influence and offices for conducting the campaign will be opened in this city. The Treasurer of the Central Committee is D. D. Parmly, President of the Phoenix National Bank. In order to begin the work properly in this city a meeting of ministers and laymen will be held here on the afternoon of the last day of the century. The meeting will be held in the Young Men's Christian Association Building, on East Twenty-third Street, and invitations to it will be sent to all Christian ministers within fifty miles of New York.

William Phillips Hall is Chairman of the National Central Committee. The first step the committee took after its organization was to issue the appeal for a week of prayer to open the twentieth century, suggesting that committees be formed to arrange for its observances in towns and villages all over the country.

Mr. Hall says that this week of prayer will be the opening of a revival all over the country. "Creeds will be put in the background," he said, "and men of every denomination will unite in the common cause of promoting the effectiveness of existing church agencies. It is probably the longest step ever taken in interdenominational co-operation. We are not planning any spasmodic revival, and we don't contemplate any hippodrome spectacle. But we hope that by the leadership of a committee constituted of trusted representatives of every denomination all churches can be helped."

DIVINE SERVICE IN DANCE HALL.

Fifty-ninth Street Resort May Become a Mission.

A religious mass meeting will be held tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in the place that has become known as Billy McGlory's dance hall, Fifty-ninth Street, near Eighth Avenue. The purpose of the meeting is to test the sentiment of religious people in Manhattan on the subject of starting in the hall a permanent evangelical work on a large scale. Among those actively interested in the movement are the Rev. Dr. R. S. MacArthur of Calvary Baptist Church, the Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, the Rev. John H. Elliott of the Thirty-fourth Street Reformed Church, the Rev. Dr. D. Asa Blackburn of the Church of the Strangers, and Mr. Louis Klopsch of The Christian Herald.

The sermon to-morrow afternoon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. A. C. Dixon of Brooklyn, who has long been seeking a large auditorium in New York for evangelical work.

CHURCH FOR ARMENIANS.

Organized with the Rev. Haigag H. Khazoyam as Pastor.

The Armenian Evangelical Church was organized yesterday at the Congregational Council held at the Adams Memorial Presbyterian Church, Thirty-first Street, near Third Avenue. The new church, which is the first Armenian Church established in New York, will be allied with the Congregationalists, but owing to concessions made in the matter of government will, in some respects, resemble a Presbyterian Church. The pastor of the new church is the Rev. Haigag H. Khazoyam. He was a pupil at Harpoot College, in Turkey, when that institution was burned and the massacre of missionaries and converts occurred.

He came to the United States in 1896 and started a mission among the Armenians of New York. His work in this city grew until now he has a congregation of about 150. The installation of the new pastor will take place to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Adams Presbyterian Church. The Rev. M. A. Malcom, formerly a professor at Harpoot College, will preach the sermon.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

SUBJECT.—Jesus Annointed at Bethany. (Matthew xxvi., 6-16.)

GOLDEN TEXT.—She Hath Done What She Could. (Mark xiv., 8.)

Probably soon—if not immediately—after the interview with Zaccheus, Jesus and His Apostles left Jerico with the caravan of strangers which they had joined to go to Jerusalem. It was a journey of but a few hours, and they soon reached the little town of Bethany—about "fifteen furlongs" out of the city. (John xi., 18.) While the great caravan passed on to find lodgings where they could, Jesus and His Apostles remained in Bethany. He, and as many of them as could be accommodated there, were undoubtedly received into the home of Martha and Mary and their brother Lazarus, and the others in the houses of near-by friends. For "the Jew's Passover was nigh at hand," (John xi., 55,) when the city and every suburb was thronged with visitors, and when every one was glad to receive acquaintances who had come from a distance, and to welcome strangers.

It was no accidental thing, however, that Jesus reached that city just at that time. Neither was it simply because it was a custom to which every devout Jew was expected to conform, as directed by the law of Moses. (Deuteronomy xvi., 16.) His movements were always directed by considerations which influenced no other Jew in the land. And He knew that at this Passover—as He afterward told His disciples—"the things concerning" Him were to "have an end." (Luke xxii., 37.)

Knowing all this, He had planned and timed every movement from Galilee to Jerusalem to carry it out, for the offering of Himself as a "Sin Offering" must be a voluntary offering, or else it could not be either acceptable to God or sufficient for man. (John x., 17-18.) Therefore He left Jerico in time to be at Bethany "six days before the Passover," the great feast which commemorated deliverance by death.

For the next three months our attention will be fixed exclusively on incidents belonging to these "six days," and yet not one half of them will be brought before us. They are very important incidents, demanding our most careful and prayerful study. For these "six days" are the most momentuous days in the whole history of the world. They mark the completion of the world's Redemption.

Beginning with the incidents of these days we also find that the four Gospel writers make a marked change in the character of their narrations. Concerning Jesus's ministry in Galilee and Samaria and Perea, they are by no means a unit in their records. But just as they united in declaring the incidents belonging to the beginning of His ministry, so now they again unite in declaring, with marked unanimity, the closing incidents of that ministry. They are the incidents of these "six days."

THE ANOINTING AT BETHANY.

The first of these incidents to which our attention is called is this anointing at Bethany. A careful comparison of the several Gospel narratives, however, indicates very clearly that it was not the first incident to occur. Jesus arrived in Bethany, to be sure, "six days before the Passover," but it does not follow that "they made Him a supper" immediately on His arrival. St. Mark says only, that "being in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper, as He sat at meat," (14, 3,) the anointing took place. And St. Matthew, in a like indefinite manner, says simply that it was "when Jesus was in Bethany." (xxvi., 6.) St. Luke makes no mention of it whatever. Both St. Matthew and St. Mark, however, connect the supper and the anointing very closely with the betrayal of Jesus in Jerusalem, and not with His arrival in Bethany. This we will see more clearly in the sequel.

In St. John's narrative also, it is only in appearance that they are connected with the arrival. For, after stating the fact that "Jesus, six days before the Passover, came to Bethany," John evidently drops the exact order of events to announce that "there they made Him a supper"—thus emphatically connecting the supper with the place, rather than with the time. It was "there," and not then. But after describing what took place at that supper, he again takes up the order of events, and says that "on the next day"—that is, "on the next day" after the arrival—the people "took branches of palm trees, and went forth to meet Him." (vv., 12, 13.) This agrees with the accounts given by all of the other evangelists.

And it is not strange that St. John should introduce the story of this incident, just at this point, and in this way, in his narrative. Of all the Apostles, he—the most loving, earnest, growing, and spiritually minded—was the one to whom was given the clearest visions of the person and work of our Lord. To him Jesus was far more than a mere man, although he probably had not as yet learned to know truly how much more. But every manifestation of Himself drew John—as it did not any of the other Apostles—closer and closer to Him. Matters, therefore, which deeply interested the other evangelists, so that they dwelt upon them in their narratives with great fulness, to him were of comparatively little importance. They interested and helped men—to the human mind they were marvels of wisdom and love—they clearly revealed what Jesus was able to do and teach—but if they did not reveal in some superior way what He was in Himself, as a rule, John took no notice of them.

It was however, with just such a manifestation that Bethany and Lazarus were associated in his mind. Some three or four months before he had visited that town under very peculiar circumstances. Martha and Mary were then in the deepest grief because of the death of their brother. When he was taken sick word was sent to Jesus, but He "abode two days still in the same place where He was," (John xi., 6,) and when at last He did go to them, Lazarus "had lain in his grave four days already." (John xi., 17.) All this must have seemed particularly strange to John, for he knew that "Jesus loved Martha and her sister, and Lazarus." (John xi., 5.) But then, he saw his Master stand at the mouth of the grave, and with irresistible authority say, "with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth." and at once "he that was dead came forth." (John xi., 43, 44.)

IMPRESSION ON JOHN.

Long before that he had seen Jesus in Capernaum stand at the bedside of a young girl who had just fallen asleep in death, and, taking her by the hand, He had said: "Talitha-cumi! Damsel, I say unto thee, Arise." At once she awoke from sleep, and "arose and walked." (Mark v., 41, 42.) On another occasion, at Nain, he had stood with Him by the bier of a young man whom they were taking to the grave to bury, and at His command, "Young man, I say unto thee, Arise, and that was dead sat up and began to speak." (Luke vii., 14, 15.) Neither of these scenes, however, made the impression upon him that was made by the resurrection at Bethany. They attracted the attention of the other evangelists, but not his, and he makes no mention of them whatever, but this which so deeply impressed him, they omit altogether from their narratives.

But then, this miracle of Bethany was accompanied by features entirely wanting in the others. In both of them the dead had but recently died. In this, however, he had been dead "four days," and the body had begun to see corruption. In those, apparently, nothing more was said than a few words of comfort to the mourners. But in this, when Jesus comforted the sorrowing sisters, it was with peculiar words concerning Himself. For, not only did He say to Martha, "Thy brother shall rise again," but He added, "I am The Resurrection and The Life; he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in Me, shall never die." (John, xi., 25, 26.) This was the kind of revelation which at once attracted the attention of John.

And now, after an absence of from three to four months, he saw both Bethany and Lazarus again. During all this time, his mind had evidently been so full of what had occurred when he last saw them, that he took no notice whatever of the interview with "The Rich Young Ruler," or the receiving of the little children, the healing of the "Ten Lepers," the recovery of Bartimeus, the interview with Zaccheus, or of any other event by the way. These all interested the other evangelists, but not John. What he had seen and heard at Bethany, coupled with the instruction given by Jesus as they journey that he must suffer and die at Jerusalem, absorbed his whole attention. It is not strange, therefore, that now on this return to Bethany, "six days before the Passover," that the only incident of those "six days," which connected his Master with that place and with Lazarus, should be the very first to be recorded, no matter when it occurred. For when he wrote his narrative this incident, under the teaching of the Holy Ghost, must have shed a flood of light upon the death and resurrection of Jesus himself.

And truly it was a unique scene that was presented at that supper in Bethany, such a scene as was never witnessed before or since anywhere on the earth, but through all eternity it will be the constant scene presented in heaven to the eyes of the redeemed. For there reclined Jesus with Simon the leper on one side and Lazarus, who had been dead, on the other. The one He had cleansed, the other He had raised, and now they were feasting in His presence and with Him. It was a beautiful foreshadowing of "The Marriage Supper of the Lamb."

The sight must have been very impressive to John, for while others took notice that this supper was given "in the house of Simon the leper," he alone calls attention to the fact that "Lazarus was one of them which sat at meat with Him." When he was in Bethany a few months before Lazarus was dead and buried, and his body was so corrupt that even his own sister shrank from looking at it. But now, in full health and strength and joy, he was sitting at the side of Him whose voice had called him back from death, and who had said of Himself, "I am The Resurrection and The Life." Lazarus, death, life, Bethany, and Jesus, his Master, were all strangely but indissolubly bound together.

MARY'S TOKEN OF LOVE.

And all this must have been greatly intensified as the meal proceeded. For John alone tells us, not only that Lazarus was there, but also that his grateful sisters vied with each other in doing honor to Him who had done so much for them. The other evangelists say nothing about this, but only that "a woman" came in "having an alabaster box of ointment." John, however, says that with attentive care "Martha served," and saw that every want of her beloved Friend was supplied, and that Mary could not be content with merely serving. Gratitude like hers must express itself by the most costly offering she could make, even if it were her all. So he says that it was she who "took a pound of ointment of spikenard, very costly, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wined His feet with her hair." (Verse 3.) The fragrance of the ointment filled the house, but the fragrance of her deed filled the world, and "shall be spoken of for a memorial of her," Jesus Himself said, "wheresoever this Gospel shall be preached." (Mark, xiv., 9.)

Doubtless she did not herself understand the full significance of what she had done, for love always acts instinctively, and not because of argument. Jesus, however, saw the love and faith which prompted her, and He not only accepted it, but—as He has often done since with the loving sacrifices of many a humble believer—He interpreted to her and to others its true meaning. He did not say, however, that it was an anointing of Him as King, because of His entrance into Jerusalem a few days before, but that it was in recognition of His approaching death as an atoning sacrifice; "against the day of My burial hath she kept this." He said. For He was to lay down His life, not only for her, but for all, and this act of love was a true homage to Him as the Saviour of men.

When Mary poured out this ointment upon Jesus, the fragrance revealed its costliness to all who were at the table. But it did not awaken the praise of all. Judas, who at heart "was a thief, and had the bag, and bare what was put therein," (v. 6) saw nothing in the act of Mary but a needless waste of money. With a pretended sympathy for the needy, he openly said that the ointment might have been sold for more than 300 pence, and have been given to the poor," (Mark xiv., 5,) as if ministering to the poor was of more importance than ministering to Christ! But Jesus rebuked the interference. "Let her alone," He said. "Why trouble ye her? She hath wrought a good work on Me. For ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good; but Me, ye have not always." (Mark xiv., 6, 7.)

Apparently stung by this reproof, Judas watched his opportunity to leave the house and go to Jerusalem. There he found "the chief priests and Captains" not only ready, but glad to receive him. For while the feast to Jesus was going on in Bethany, plottings against Him were going on in Jerusalem. In the palace of the high priest His enemies, greatly excited by the popular demonstration when He entered the city a few days before, (Luke xix., 47,) were assembled together and "sought how they might kill Him; for they feared the people." (Luke xxii., 2.) So when Judas came into their assembly, "and said unto them, What will ye give me and I will deliver Him unto you?" (Matthew,) "they were glad, and promised to give him money." (Mark.) "And they covenanted with him for thirty pieces of silver. And from that time he sought opportunity (Matthew) how he might conveniently betray Him (Mark) in the absence of the multitude." (Luke.)

Thus this covenanting, according to St. Matthew and St. Mark, followed immediately after the reproof at the supper. "Then," says St. Matthew, "Judas went unto the chief priests." (xvi., 14.) But, according to St. Luke, who says nothing about the supper, it was when the plotting was going on that "then entered Satan into Judas, and he went his way and communed with the chief priests and Captains, how he might betray Him unto them." (xxii., 3, 4.) Thus the supper and the plottings must have been coincident, and the anointing at Bethany must have been closely connected with the betrayal in Jerusalem. This betrayal, as we shall see more fully hereafter, was consummated within the next two days. Thus the anointing declared and emphasized the "burial" which followed so closely upon the betrayal. It was an important link in the completing of Jesus' work as our Redeemer. Its object was not to exhibit Mary's love for Jesus, but to honor Him for His love to us all.

QUESTIONS ON THE LESSON.

What is said of Jesus' arrival at Bethany, and why was it no accidental thing that He reached that place at just that time?

To what will our attention be directed during the next three months, and why are the incidents important?

What change in the Gospel narratives is connected with these incidents?

What is the first incident brought to our attention, and what proof is there that it was not the first to occur?

Why is it not strange that St. John records it as the first in his narrative, and what characterizes all of his records?

How did the raising of Lazarus differ from other cases of raising the dead, and what effect did it have upon St. John?

In what respect was the scene at the supper in Bethany very unique, and what shows that it greatly impresed St. John?

How did Jesus interpret the anointing by Mary, and what is said of it?

What was the effect upon Judas, and what did Jesus say to him?

What did Judas do, and how does it show that the anointing took place some days after the arrival in Bethany?

What did the anointing emphasize, and what is said of it?

PHILBIN'S AXE WILL FALL.

Removal of One Assistant District Attorney Expected To-day.

District Attorney Eugene A. Philbin will make his first changes among the professional and administrative staff of his office to-day. That the changes will be extensive is not anticipated, and beyond the appointment of an assistant who will in a measure be his personal representative and chief aid, and the dismissal of a few subpoena servers, the District Attorney is not expected to deviate from his announced course to consider each man's ability and fitness before removing or retaining him.

Late yesterday afternoon the word was passed along the corridors of the Criminal Courts Building that the "axe will fall to-morrow; look out," and everybody went home with a long face.

Conferences were held by District Attorney Philbin during the day with Judge Foster and Recorder Goff, sitting in General Sessions, and after visiting these courts the District Attorney spent some time in the Court of Special Sessions familiarizing himself with the routine work of the courts and his duties therein. Later each Assistant and Deputy Assistant, to the number of twenty-six, was called into the new chief's office and questioned closely as to his duties and the nature of the work performed by each under the Gardiner régime. No assurance, so far as is known, was held out to any one that his position was certain. The thirty-nine "county detectives," who were known as subpoena servers until Col. Gardiner assumed office, were then sent for. They filed into Mr. Philbin's private office headed by "Chief Detective" Broderick. These men draw annual salaries aggregating $39,750. The District Attorney briefly said to them that upon each man's faithful and efficient performance of duty would depend his tenure of office, and that so long as duty was well performed, none need fear for his position. However, he added, it struck him that the staff was entirely too large for the business of the office, and this he declared he would look into fully, and should his idea prove correct, a reduction in numbers would very probably follow. This little talk failed to reassure the subpoena servers.

Mr. Philbin will to-day, in all probability, select some one known to him, in whom he may place implicit trust, as his chief assistant, though this title is purely complimentary, each full assistant receiving the same salary of $7,500 per year. John F. McIntyre was always known as Col. Gardiner's senior assistant and personal representative. Mr. Philbin, it was pointed out yesterday, comes into the District Attorney's office a comparative stranger, unknown to his staff, and in ignorance of their ability or how far they did their duty. The nature of his appointment and the antagonistic attitude of Tammany Hall, of which all of the assistants are members, combined with the amount of work connected with the office, renders it necessary for him to select some one in whom he can repose confidence as his chief aide. Mr. Philbin, owing no allegiance to any party organization, will, it is confidently asserted, select some one whose integrity is personally known to him, and this man, it is thought, will be either John J. Delaney or Edward J. Dunphy.

The former was Assistant Corporation Counsel under William H. Clark and the latter is a former Congressman. Both are prominent in Catholic circles. Some assistant will have to be removed to make way for the new appointee, as only eight are provided for by statute. Who the one to go will be is a matter of much speculation.

Mr. McIntyre is conducting the Hilliard examination before Coroner Fitzpatrick, Mr. Osborne has the Rice and Molineux cases in charge, Mr. Unger is the head of the Indictment Bureau, and was Col. Gardiner's mainstay when the latter first assumed office, having served under half a dozen administrations. Mr. Le Barbier is in charge of all cases on appeal. Mr. Walsh looks after arson cases, and this narrows the race for first place in the "removed" column to Assistant District Attorneys Blake, McClelland, and Townsend.

It is the general opinion that the work among the administrative staff will be equalized somewhat by the new District Attorney, some departments of the office being at present greatly overworked while others enjoy very light labors.

Some of the policemen on duty at Mr. Philbin's office were ordered to report to Capt. Flood at Police Headquarters last night. The police so ordered were Nicholas Brindley, Bernard Connolly, James Taggart, and John Palmer. The latter named has been on duty at the entrance to the District Attorney's office for nearly five years. He has been on the force for twenty-eight years.

To Fight London Dock Charges.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 28.—Minneapolis millers have taken a positive stand against the proposed increase in dock charges at London. After Jan. 1 the three big companies in Minneapolis will refuse to accept through bills of lading to London unless across the face of each document an indorsement is made specifying that the dock charge shall not be greater than 1s. 6d. per ton. The dock companies have given notice that they will charge 1s. 9d. after Jan. 1.

Commercial Travelers' Celebration.

TORONTO, Ontario, Dec. 28.—The Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada, in annual session here last night, decided to take part with the Commercial Travelers of the United States in the Travelers' Day celebration, July 11, at the Pan-American Exposition, when 25,000 commercial men are expected to be present.

CITIZENS' PAPERS WITHHELD.

Hackensack Judge Heard Some Remarkable Answers of Several Aspirants.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Dec. 28.—Judge Zabriskie is examining applicants for citizenship papers this week, and has been staggered at times by the wide range of information concerning this country which certain foreign aspirants to the right of franchise do not possess.

The things which some of the applicants do not know about the history and geography of the United States would fill a large volume. An idea of the fund of misinformation possessed by some of these would-be citizens can be gathered from the following answers which were returned by aspirants to the questions of Judge Zabriskie:

"What is the capital of this country?"
"Hackensack."
"Where is Rome?"
"In France."
"Where is Paris?"
"Can't tell."
"How did you get to New York?"
"Came in ship from Alexandria."
"Where is Alexandria, anyhow?"
"Don't know."
"Who is President of the United States?"
"Miken."
"Is this country an empire or a republic?"
"Oh, me Republican."

Judge Zabriskie told these applicants that they had come exceedingly well, but he could not give them the desired papers until they had touched up their knowledge of things American just a trifle more.

MR. COLER ON THE CITY CAMPAIGN.

Controller COLER is plainly intensely interested in the approaching campaign in this city. He talks about it and writes about it at frequent intervals to all sorts of audiences and in all sorts of periodicals. No one has any reason to doubt the sincerity of his feeling or the earnestness of his desire to have the best attainable result from the campaign. But we are compelled to admit that his discussion of the subject lacks definiteness, and on that account is likely to fall of the effect that he seeks.

In the current number of The Independent he has an article of some length in which he essays to trace the issues that "should be paramount in the next city campaign." Here is what he has to say as to the first and second issues:

> Honesty, economy, and intelligence in administration should rank first in every declaration of purposes adopted by parties or candidates. Honesty without intelligence may fall of good results in administration. Failure to live up to those three essential principles means failure at every point in the conduct of public affairs.
>
> Another issue of far-reaching importance should be the complete and permanent elimination of commercialism from city politics and government. In honest city administration there are no private favors for parties, factions, or individuals. The man who will sell the trust of the people for personal gain is a thief, without the courage of the pirate or the cunning of the pickpocket. There is no crime, no moral wrong, so base, so cowardly, so void of excuse or defense as the abuse of temporary trust and power to barter the rights and property of thousands for the benefit of a favored few. Wherever there is corrupt government there we find the favored contractor, the petted and pressed corporation, and the rights of the people mere pawns in the secret marts of dishonest politics. This is an issue upon which the voters of New York should endure no further concealment or evasion. They should demand that in future all the public business be done in the open with right and justice for all and special favor for none. There can be no compromise between honest government and government by the few for the favored. The two systems cannot possibly exist in the same municipality. And the public must be on guard at all times against plausible, but unscrupulous, individuals, who would manipulate movements for better administration to accomplish personal ends.

In substance, this is a statement that the chief task in the next city election will be to secure honesty and ability of the administration to be chosen. It hardly needs Mr. COLER'S assurance to convince any one of that. Everybody will not merely concede, but insist on it. The real question is how we are to get them. It is not to be expected that any party will openly profess its purpose to give a dishonest and stupid administration to the city. Mr. CROKER, in his most indiscreet moments, is not likely to do that. Mr. PLATT is no more likely to do so. We believe, and perhaps Mr. COLER believes, that in 1897 Mr. CROKER did intend to give just that kind of government to the city, and that Mr. PLATT intended to help him. If the same tactics were pursued next year by these two eminent politicians we should have the same view of their intentions, and we should have no difficulty as to the advice to be given to our readers in the election. But the situation has not reached that stage as yet.

What the people of New York would like to hear from Mr. COLER, we imagine, is some practical suggestion as to how the issue of honesty or dishonesty is to be clearly presented. If that can be done we have very little hesitation as to the result. The majority, indeed the great body, of voters in the city will not vote deliberately and knowingly for dishonest and incapable management of their affairs. There are relatively very few who could make money by that course, and the rest are not fools. The real difficulty is in getting the issue so plainly before them that they can see it. On this point Mr. COLER has not, so far as we are aware, given any light. In the course of his article he says that "the overthrow of irresponsible power may be desirable, but only as a means to an end. The upbuilding of one partisan element at the expense of another is never a guarantee of better government. It merely shifts apparent responsibility and stimulates the greed of party and personal gain." This is true enough, but what is the bearing of it? Does Mr. COLER wish us to refrain from overthrowing Tammany if it can be done only by the election of a Republican Mayor? Or does he think that there should be an organization of the people strong enough to defy both party organizations? If so, how does he propose to accomplish it? In brief, how would he get the issue of honesty and intelligence in the government before the people so directly and plainly that they will recognize it? If he will touch that button, the people will do the rest.

REAPPORTIONMENT.

It is greatly to be hoped that the House of Representatives will not be coaxed or bullied into enlarging its own numbers in consequence of the census of 1900. The Census Committee has done quite the right thing in fixing the number of the House at the present figure. But of course the report was made before the "pressure" really began. Already some queer anomalies have been discovered which would result from the retention of the present number. But like anomalies would appear if the number were fixed higher. And any undertaking to legislate in view of them would render the House more unwieldy than it is now, without a closer approach to arithmetical justice.

That the House is now too numerous for the convenient and orderly dispatch of business is admitted by its own most experienced members. Even that Speaker who "thanked GOD that it was not a deliberative body" admitted that it had not the proper facilities for the dispatch of its business. A proposal to remedy this defect by removing the desks from the floor of the House goes by Mr. REED'S name, although, if we mistake not, it was made by Mr. HEWITT, before Mr. REED was ever in Congress at all. Mr. HEWITT'S proposal was to restrict the area of the House, or rather to divide it, leaving one part the House proper and the other an apartment, fitted up with desks and so on, in which members could transact their private business, or such of their public business as was not directly connected with the business before the House, while the actual floor was given over to members who were interested in the current work of the body. This is virtually the method adopted in the House of Commons, a body more than twice as numerous as the House of Representatives, for which its chamber does not provide seats, to say nothing of desks. Undoubtedly the debates of the House of Commons gain greatly in interest and value from the restricted dimensions of the chamber and the fact that there is nothing else going on in it except debate. Mr. GLADSTONE, in one of his latest speeches in the House of Commons, referred to the discussion in progress as a "conversation," which nobody would think of doing of a debate in the House of Representatives, where a member has to exert a good deal of his energy in the mere effort to be heard.

The proposal that Uncle Sam shall provide an office for every member of the House is absurd, not to say impudent. But a writing and reading and lounging room for the use of members not interested in the current debate might very possibly be arranged within the present Capitol, and serve the same purpose served by the "tea room" of the House of Commons. In any case, the enlargement of the House of Representatives beyond its present membership should not be considered.

GEN. RATZENHOFER ON THE BOER WAR.

There has been one distinct and authoritative dissent from the chorus of Continental military critics, proclaiming that the South African war shows that England is, in a military sense, an effete Power. It has been entered by a high Austrian General, and, in the circumstances, must be taken to reflect the opinion of the Austrian General Staff. Gen. RATZENHOFER, President of the Austro-Hungarian Military High Court of Justice, recently delivered a lecture on the South African War at the Vienna Military Casino. It was an occasion marked with every sign tending to show that what took place was of a thoroughly authoritative, official, and non-personal character. Near the speaker were grouped the Archduke LUDWIG SALVATOR, as the representative of the Emperor, and Generals of the highest rank and most distinguished names. The remainder of the audience was made up of nearly 2,000 officers of all arms. In short, every condition was so carefully conceived that there could be no atom of doubt regarding the significance of the function.

Gen. RATZENHOFER looks for no elaborate and radical reorganization of the British Army after the war. None is necessary, he says. At the proper time the men now voluntarily fighting will return to their various peaceful occupations, to develop British industry and commerce and to extend British civilization. But in case certain military authorities should misinterpret the real situation he would inform them that the development and extension of the British arts of peace meant a corresponding development of the British fleet, and when that had been duly considered there was still the spirit of Anglo-Saxon imperialism which was rapidly binding the English-speaking peoples together by ties the actual character of which had so far defied European penetration.

According to Gen. RATZENHOFER there was little to be learned by an observation of the campaign in South Africa; the great object lesson was presented elsewhere. The nature of the country in which the military operations were conducted was particularly advantageous to the Boers, for it encouraged individual initiative; but the record of the Boers themselves showed them to possess little discipline and limited tactics, while their strategy, which had proved so efficient in South Africa, would be useless if employed in Europe. Nor would it be possible to manipulate on European battlefields large bodies of men of similar training to that of the Boers. On the other hand, the British soldiers, officers and men, although enterprising and capable, in certain vital moments of individual action were hampered by the traditions of their army and the lack of generalship to turn their undoubted good fighting and staying qualities to the best account in strange fields and before an enemy whose object was rather to inflict the greatest possible loss through every means in his power than to fight decisive battles. Instead of agreeing with most military critics in saying that the war has shown the advantage of having infantry trained to the saddle, Gen. RAZTENHOFER holds the opinion that it has simply emphasized the importance of having cavalry trained so that they may be readily manipulated as infantry.

In short, what prevented the campaign in South Africa from being of great importance to European General Staffs was the fact that similar conditions were likely to be encountered nowhere else in the world, but what was of supreme importance to the Powers—a lesson which should be studied from every point and to its minutest detail—was the transportation work achieved by Great Britain and the admirable way in which communications had been kept up between the operating columns and their base of supplies in the face of the most constant and trying obstacles known to modern warfare. The fact that within a reasonable period of time Great Britain had transported nearly 250,000 troops and 70,000 horses and mules over a sea passage of nearly thirty days was the important feature of the South African campaign and one which opened up a new field for profitable examination.

DEVERY'S CASE.

It is to be supposed that the announcement of DEVERY'S determination to stick to his place represents the present state of that policeman's mind. But it may also be expected that he will change his mind before putting the Police Board to the necessity of removing him. For, if he were removed on charges, he would forfeit the retiring pension to which he would be entitled if he withdrew of his own accord, "without a stain on his character."

It is superfluous to say that we should not regard any motions made by the present Commission of Police toward the reformation of the force as deeply serious. But the trial of HERLIHY and other current incidents relating to the force may compel the commission to make a pretense of choosing a scapegoat. For that situation DEVERY is eminently eligible. His appointment was little, if at all, short of a public scandal, and his behavior in office has been not short of that attainment at all. Common rumor insists that the form of vice which he is particularly charged with protecting is gambling. His actions give color to that rumor. But there is no form of lawbreaking for which he does not seem to have a warm sympathy. His judicial decisions that brutal prizefights were "scientific" boxing matches "for points" were of themselves quite sufficient to secure his dismissal from his place, or at least to justify such a dismissal. And his later deliverances have all increased the sentiment of decent people that any improvement in the police force must begin by his withdrawal from it.

It is perhaps not a sufficient objection to a policeman that he is a vulgar ruffian. Very efficient policemen have been deficient in outward grace and polish of manner. But when DEVERY explains that he has degraded one policeman because he "goes rolling around with a high hat on the back of his head," and humiliated another for being "too chesty," there is something more than mere vulgar ruffianism in the case. He is in effect confessing that he is managing his office in pursuance of his personal spites and dislikes, and that merit and efficiency have nothing to do with his official estimate of the conduct of his subordinates, or with his official treatment of them.

The force and extent of public indignation are things which a man of the Devery kind, or of the Croker kind, is never able properly to apprehend. They are apt to come to grief by underestimating these things. DEVERY has now a chance to get out, with whatever of "savings" he may have accumulated, without being called to public account. If he is called to account it is likely to go hard with him. Wherefore he would be very well-advised to get out at the earliest moment, and very ill-advised to "stick."

THE OUTLOOK FOR COAL EXPORTS.

The question whether Europe is now, and will in future remain, dependent in large degree upon this country for coal continues to be one of great and almost exciting public interest. Our Consuls in every transatlantic country have submitted voluminous reports relative to the existing coal famine, and have emphasized with almost hysterical earnestness the undisputed fact that the European markets would now absorb large quantities of our coal if they could get it. Hundreds of enterprising Americans, more or less prominently connected with the coal business, have scoured Europe to canvass the situation, and have reported according to their light. Those temperamentally optimistic estimate the requirements of Europe at hundreds of millions of tons per annum. Others admit the existence of the present demand, but consider the obstacles to a profitable export trade insuperable. Still others consider the coal situation in Europe wholly artificial, and believe that if the monopoly of the mine owners was seriously menaced from this country, prices would drop so quickly that continued exports would be impossible. Just where the truth lies between these extremes of trade opinion is still in doubt.

As the result of the wave of industrial development which began in 1898 and continued through 1899, there was a sudden and to some extent artificial increase in the demand for coal, since it was partly speculative. For every ton needed two tons were ordered, and a great deal of capital found a quick and certain profit in absorbing the visible supply and engaging the output of the mines as far ahead as the operators would permit. The Governments set the pace in the rush to corner coal by heavy anticipating purchases and engagements for naval purposes. The great manufacturing syndicates also looked after themselves with characteristic enterprise, and the smaller consumers were left to do the best they could. The heavy naval consumption of the past year has again brought the powers into the market for coal, and both France and Russia have seen large orders go begging because the coal to fill them is not in sight. Naturally the mine owners, who gained but little advantage from the coal panic in 1899 for the reason that they had filled their order books before the advance, are determined to have some share of the profit before the price drops again, and this they are now getting. Within eighteen months the price of English coal has practically doubled, and in the Continental markets the increase over the average of the five years, 1893-8, has been more than 100 per cent. How long the market can be maintained on so artificial a basis is uncertain. The industrial consumption is declining steadily. The British iron production has so far shrunken that instead of an output of 15,000,000 tons of pig in 1900, as predicted, it will scarcely reach 11,000,000 tons if the present pace is maintained. On the Continent many mills and factories are closed because of the high price of fuel, and the iron works of Germany are curtailing their output in all lines. They cannot sell their product for what it costs to make it, with fuel at present prices. Under these circumstances coal should decline to a price at or near its 1898 average, the more so as the causes which are checking consumption would continue operative for the present whatever the course of coal prices. That they are sustained by powerful influences is evident, but how long these influences will be effective is uncertain.

HOSPITAL SATURDAY AND SUNDAY.

The days that are annually set apart in this community to bring to the attention of the benevolent the needs of the sick poor in our hospitals are once more with us. To-day is "Hospital Saturday," when our fellow-citizens of Jewish faith make contribution to the cause in the synagogues; while to-morrow is "Hospital Sunday," when it is the privilege of the Christian to do a similar service for the afflicted through the church offerings. It is fitting to call attention to the fact that this is the last opportunity in the nineteenth century for the charitable to express in their places of worship their good-will toward their unfortunate fellow-beings; and it is to be hoped that a generous impulse will open wide the purse strings, so that the last hospital offering in the passing century shall be as a light upon the path of all good givers in the century to come.

It is also in place to call attention to the fact that the New York Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association was organized in 1879, and that the present collection, therefore, signalizes its majority. This in itself should serve as a stimulus to its friends to mark the advent of the association among the full-statured benevolent forces of the world, and incite to special gifts in recognition of the event. This organization has not yet received the recognition from the rich that it deserves and ought to receive. To be sure, it is a most popular and growing force for the alleviation of human suffering, but comparatively few among us have risen to the appreciation that here is an instrumentality in every way calculated to serve the best ends in the most direct manner. So deserving a cause is this that many who give hundreds ought to give thousands, and many who content themselves with subscribing tens or fifties should be represented by an additional figure.

It is gratifying to note that a marked increase in individual subscriptions is this year witnessed in the lists from the bankers and also in the dry goods trade, but a more universal recognition of the economies that are served in many ways by this Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association would inevitably lead to a support expressed in even more generous terms.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Childish minds probably never devised a more colossal scheme than was one which two little boys living near Binghamton originated this week and to a considerable extent carried out. These boys had been taught, like so many other boys, that a furclad individual named Santa Claus is the purveyor of all Christmas presents, and that, in the course of a single night, he traverses the whole world, distributing the gifts which he has somehow accumulated during the year. Unlike the majority of boys beyond the infantile age, these Broome County youngsters seem to have believed this ancient yarn, and, believing, they determined, in a way sadly characteristic of a monopolistic era, that they would get not only the presents allotted to themselves in the regular division, but also all the other presents intended for children everywhere. A bear trap that had lain for uncounted years with other rubbish in their father's barn was selected as the means of accomplishing this distinctly fiendish purpose. In the early dusk of the day before Christmas the trap was dragged to a spot which Santa Claus would have to cross in entering the house, and there it was set and skilfully, or, at any rate, effectually, concealed from casual observation. Then the boys retired to await events. The events came. Early that evening agonized cries, mingled with language distinctly incongruous with saintliness, startled the relatives who had gathered to participate in the Christmas festivities, and hurried investigation disclosed, firmly caught in the aged but still vigorous bear trap, an individual whose garments proclaimed to the delighted boys that their great scheme had been a complete and glorious success. Their visions of innumerable toys and mountains of candy lasted only a moment, however, and when they realized, as they were soon compelled to do, that they had captured, not Santa Claus, but an estimable cousin of theirs, who had assumed the rôle—and whose leg the trap had broken—gloomy anticipations, to say nothing of a gloomier skepticism toward all pretty legends, took possession of their minds. There the story ends. It's a good story, but a little weak in that it presupposes the existence of boys big enough to set a bear trap and still unsophisticated enough to believe in Santa Claus. Possibly enough the story is true.

A person without heart might get around the difficulty mentioned by surmising that the cousin was not as popular with the boys as he was estimable to other people, and that their assumption of credulity in reference to the gift-bearing saint was merely a device to escape the consequences of a trick the effects of which had been unexpectedly serious.

—From a weekly paper which once had considerable, and still has some, excuse for claiming to give accurate and authorized expression to the opinions of "society," we have with reverent scissors clipped this bit of eminently interesting information:

> ——, Jr., who has just been chosen Chief Marshal for Harvard Class Day, next June, the highest honor in the gift of the university, has been receiving many congratulations since the election, a few days ago. In spite of his aristocratic affiliations and all that goes with the name, which has always been one to conjure with socially in Boston, young —— is as democratic in the true sense as any man in college.

Of this the important part, the part upon which the attention eagerly alights and firmly fastens, is that declaring the Class Day Chief Marshalship the highest honor in the gift of Harvard University. When one remembers the large number of other honors, in the form of degrees of various sorts and Faculty positions of various ranks, that Harvard can and does bestow upon those who meet her approval, it is distinctly startling to learn that these are, in the estimation of certain most discriminating persons, matters of lesser, if not of little, moment in comparison with election to an office the duties of which are all performed in a single day, and, if left unperformed, would leave completely indifferent a rather large fraction of the human race. Disposed as we are to submit to our fashionable contemporary's decisions on all questions properly within its domain, we confess to finding much difficulty in evading the suspicion that it is just a trifle astray in its estimation of university honors. Putting aside our antiquated prejudices in favor of intellectual acquisitions as the objects most to be sought and esteemed by college students, we still have our doubts about the pre-eminence of the Class Day Marshalship. Where, pray, does the Captaincy of the football team come in?

—How does it happen that the French, of all the nations engaged in bringing China to her senses, have been the first to express formal disapproval of the slaughter and looting that have marked the operations of the allies, and the first to compel the return of private property stolen by her military representatives? It is neither unkind nor especially disrespectful to say that if France had been the last, instead of the first, to demonstrate this scrupulosity, the present surprise would not be felt. For it is the general belief that war, with all that war implies, still has attractions for the French people that it has not possessed of late for several other races, and we have had more than one excuse recently for thinking that French officers, if not French soldiers, would be pardoned and even admired by their countrymen for doing things in their professional capacity that would be regarded as highly obnoxious in civil life. The worst of the acts committed in China by the foreign forces would have received neither record nor consideration in a Napoleonic campaign, and, so far as known, the French judgment of NAPOLEON'S methods has not ever been severe, while the glory and the spoils he won have been accepted without apparent compunction. Yet the French Chamber has given what seemed to be a sympathetic hearing to excited denunciation of the doings of the French troops in China, and the French Government, after ordering of its own accord the return of the loot sent home from Peking by its commanders, has openly reprehended the "irregularities" committed, and has declared its earnest hope that the reports received have been exaggerations. There has been nothing of this sort in Germany, whose men are under charges at least as heavy as those made against the French troops. On the contrary, the Kaiser has had difficulty in finding words eulogistic enough to express his delight with the conduct of his soldiers. And in England and the United States, though the soldiers of neither have had much if any part in the slaughter of noncombatants or the sacking of homes and shops, there might well have been a few more protests than have been heard in regard to the conduct of the allies. Our own CHAFFEE did, indeed, speak out with effect, but his words, to the infinite regret of us all, have been suppressed by the cautious departmental officials, and nobody except themselves is yet allowed to enjoy the "tone" to which WALDERSEE objected.

The Vanderbilt Taxes.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a single taxer I desire to commend your very able editorial in last Saturday's issue entitled "Mr. Vanderbilt's Taxes." Read by the intelligent portion of the community, THE TIMES could certainly exercise a powerful educational influence in the advancement of scientific taxation, and I trust we shall be favored from time to time with similar editorials. Single taxers see in local option in taxation an opportunity for establishing the single tax, hence our efforts are employed in advocacy of this reasonable, rational, and essentially just reform.

Mr. De Freest Not a Candidate.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you please correct a statement made in your paper yesterday to the effect that I am a candidate for Arbitration Commissioner? I am not a candidate, and am not seeking any political preferment at this time.

Joax—Can't you cure her?

Hoax—Not much. When she hasn't anything else to worry her, she'll get out a railroad time-table and study that.—Philadelphia Record.

TRIUMPH.

S. E. Kiser in Chicago Times-Herald.

I hear the world scoff while he strives away,
I see men smile when he has turned to go,
And ever pity, but he does not know;
He has no ears to hear the things they say,
And so goes boasting on from day to day,
And in his eyes there is a happy glow,
Denoting an exulting heart below,
And in his visions pleasing fancies play!

Aye, let them laugh, since, happier by far
Than they who understand his frailties are,
He hurries on with triumph in his heart,
For what is triumph but a glad conceit
That lifts one o'er the rabble in the street,
And makes some common course a noble part!

"FIDELIO" AT THE OPERA.

Mme. Ternina as the Heroine and Mr. Dippel as Florestan.

After the glorification of the scarlet woman with pulmonary tuberculosis it was a great delight to all clean-minded people to hear an opera in which there was a celebration of the highest and holiest love known to humanity. This celebration came at the Metropolitan Opera House last night with Beethoven's "Fidelio." But the public was evidently not delighted with the opportunity to hear a decent work. There is no use of trying to disguise the fact that "Fidelio" is not of the type known as popular. It is a serious work in the first place; in the second it has dialogue which is utterly unsuited to the vasty spaces of the Metropolitan auditorium; and finally it has no mellifluous love duets. The only one in the score is a wild and almost incoherent cry of joy uttered by the reunited Leonora and Florestan. But nevertheless "Fidelio" is a masterpiece in its kind, and without doubt the scene in the prison is the most pathetic in all opera.

This scene was superbly done last night, and had its full effect with the audience. It owed most of its influence to the admirable interpretation of Leonora by Miss Ternina. This is one of her best parts, and she has never acted and sung it with more fervor and feeling than she did last night. Mr. Dippel gave her good assistance in the prison scene, and Mr. Bertram was a sufficiently sinister Pizzaro. Mr. Blass deserves praise for his excellent singing as Rocco, but he might have given a clearer idea of the conflicting emotions of this well-disposed old man acting under his fear of the cruel prison master.

A newcomer last night was Miss Fritzi Scheff, who appeared as Marcellina. This young woman brought a whiff of the Viennese style into the performance. She gave a capital impersonation of Rocco's daughter, singing with a thin and yet by no means disagreeable voice and acting with excellent comedy spirit. She will be heard from again, when further consideration can be given to her characteristics. Mr. Hubenet was an acceptable Jacquino. Mr. Damrosch conducted very vigorously, and the orchestra played somewhat roughly. The "Fidelio" overture was given before the opera and the "Leonora, No. 111." between the two scenes of the second act. The singing of the chorus in the first act was intolerably bad.

STANDARDIZING BUREAU PLAN.

Secretary Gage, Mr. Tittmann, and Others Speak Before Senate Sub-Committee in Favor of the Bill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Senators Nelson and Turner, sitting as a sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Commerce, today heard arguments in support of the measure now pending in the Senate providing for the establishment of a National Standardizing Bureau.

Among those heard were Secretary Gage, O. H. Tittmann, Superintendent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and also of the present Bureau of Weights and Measures; Prof. W. S. Stratton, Inspector of Weights and Measures under the present organization and also Professor of Physics in the Chicago University, and Prof. H. A. Rowland, Professor of Physics of Johns Hopkins University.

They explained the object of the bill, and urged the growing importance of a complete standardizing bureau under Government direction. Secretary Gage represented that such an institution is becoming more and more important as the years go by. His opinion of the importance of the proposed bureau, as well as that of the other witnesses, is summarized in a memorandum printed for the use of the committee, from which the following is an extract:

> Until recent years this work has been confined to problems concerned with the standards of length, mass, capacity, and temperature; but the increased order of accuracy demanded in scientific and commercial measurements and the exceedingly rapid progress of pure and applied science have increased the scope of such work until it includes many important branches of physical and chemical research, requiring for its successful performance a complete laboratory, fitted for undertaking the most refined measurements known to modern science.
>
> The introduction of accurate scientific methods into manufacturing and commercial processes involves the use of a great variety of standards of far greater accuracy than were formerly required. An accurate knowledge of the high temperature of a furnace or refinery, or the low temperature of a refrigerating process, is often essential to the economical working of the process. Enormous commercial transactions are daily based on the reading of electrical measuring apparatus, inaccuracies of which involve great injustice and financial loss; hence the National bureau should be in a position to calculate or test electrical standards of all kinds for commercial as well as the most refined scientific work.

Prof. Tittman made an argument for the establishment of the bureau upon Constitutional grounds, calling attention to the fact that the Constitution empowers Congress to fix the standard of weights and measures. He contended that fixed standards lie at the foundation of good government, and called attention to the measures adopted by Germany and Great Britain in the direction proposed by the pending bill for this country.

The bill contemplates the erection of a building in Washington for the use of the bureau and the appointment of a complete staff to take charge of the work.

GERMAN VIEW OF CANAL TREATY

Government Organ Regards Senate's Action as a "Slap for England."

BERLIN, Dec. 28.—The Kreuz Zeitung, Conservative, the chief mouthpiece of the Government, whose editorials are often prepared by Government officials, devotes two long articles to-day to the Nicaragua Canal controversy, pronouncing the Davis amendment of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty a "slap for England."

"Treaties could not be more recklessly brushed aside than they have been in this case by the United States Senate," says the Kreuz Zeitung. "This disregard of the law of nations, which had already been manifested during the peace negotiations with Spain, is in the highest degree regrettable. It is a counterpart of England's treatment of the Boer republics.

"President McKinley's Administration has been placed in a highly disagreeable position, inasmuch as the action of the Senate is a grave provocation to England, and it is impossible to face the anti-English feeling in the country. The Administration could not thus wound Yankee pride.

"If the President adopts the Senate's position, England will have a moral right to prepare a Fashoda for the United States, but, judging from previous experiences, she will not do so. The present tone of the British press toward the United States is in striking contrast with its ferocious tone toward France in 1898.

"England is not likely to play her strongest trumps against the United States, but if she were to do so she and not the United States would be the sufferer. Fortune is fickle."

GERMANS GET TURKEY'S ORDER

A Battleship to be Rebuilt at Kiel at Cost of £270,000.

BERLIN, Dec. 28.—The Ottoman Government has contracted for the reconstruction of the Ottoman battleship Assar-i-Tewfik at the Germania Wharf, Kiel, at a cost of £270,000.

The Cologne Gazette says that Germany in a friendly way informed the Porte that if the claims of the United States for damages growing out of the Armenian outrages were granted, Germany would expect similar treatment.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The foreign engagements of the Porte for the purchase and renovation of warships and for naval and military artillery now amount to £2,400,000," says the Constantinople correspondent of The Times, "while the treasury is absolutely empty and internal debts increase daily."

TURKISH INDEMNITY PAYMENT.

Cramps Will Be Recognized Only as Agents of the Sultan.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—The State Department has received no money as yet on account of the Turkish indemnity claims, nor has it had any connection whatever with the deal which has been made by the Cramps with the Turkish Government for the inclusion of the amount of the indemnity in the price to be paid for a warship by the Porte.

The department does not know that such contract has been made; moreover, it has had, for its own part, promises from the Turkish Government that the claims shall be paid. If the money comes through the Cramps it will be accepted, as the State Department recognizes the right of the Porte to select any messenger it may choose to transmit the money.

All that is necessary to make the transaction proper is that the fact shall clearly appear on the records that the money is paid by the Turkish Government to the Government of the United States, which will distribute it among the claimants adjudged to be entitled to compensation.

EDUCATION OF THE NEGRO

Radical Address at Richmond by Prof. Paul B. Barringer.

Antagonism to Blacks Is Industrial—Their Training, He Says, Should Be as Laborers Only.

Special to The New York Times.

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 28.—The subject of the education of the negro in the South has attracted more attention than any other brought before the Southern Educational Association at its meeting here. The most significant address made on this topic was one delivered to-night by Prof. Paul B. Barringer of the University of Virginia. He spoke in part as follows:

"It has always been a mystery to the people of the North why the non-slaveholding class at the South fought so ardently during the war. No explanation seems to solve the mystery for them. Let us first note by way of explanation that in the mountains of North Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia, (now West Virginia,) where the negro was unknown, the poor whites did not fight or else fought on the Federal side. Let us also recall that the enormous emigration that took place from the South was chiefly a labor emigration, and even the wealthy when threatened with poverty fled from the South. These things were because every workingman who knew the negro looked with fear upon the day of his emancipation.

"The laboring man who knows what it means to have to underlive his fellow will always hate the negro on contact. There are to-day thousands of negroes in the South living on a ration that costs 6 5-10 cents a day, or less than $2 per month, while if pressed they can live on the half of it. Imagine the fate of the white man who has to compete with such labor.

"Lured by higher wages, many negroes are now making pilgrimage to the North, to New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, &c. As a rule, they are the best trained workers of their race in the South, and hence the highest livers, but they underlive all competition so easily and cut wages with such profit to themselves that the hatred of the negro, always felt by the white workers of the South, is beginning to be felt at the North, and this is the true and only reason of the late race riots. Wherever he goes, disenchantment follows.

"In the South there are many men, formerly wealthy, who were ruined by the war and reduced to manual competition with negro labor. Their children are now coming to the fore with a hereditary intelligence sharpened by adversity, but with their very mother's milk they have drawn a hatred of the negro that is a hate of hell.

"The negro received from the South, as a gift, American residence, the English tongue, the opportunities of the Christian religion, a sound body, and thorough training in agricultural and all the domestic arts. After two centuries he received as a gift from the North freedom, citizenship, and the ballot. In the next generation he received from the two sections again as a gift, $200,000,000 in education, and he still stands as a beggar at the door of the South, now a criminal beggar. What are we to do with him? As he has grown in criminality and physical depravity since receiving what he has of education, that kind of education is surely a failure. Moreover, he has used this education, given in compassion as an arm of defense, as a weapon of political offense against those who gave it. Under the circumstances, there is a natural and growing sentiment in the South demanding that we give him only the pittance that he himself produces as a taxpayer, and then let him shift for himself. The object of this paper is to protest against the adoption of this policy as economically unwise and as unworthy of the South.

"We cannot lay down the white man's burden yet. It is now suggested that the hope of the negro is industrial education. It is held as a discovery, and it is shrewdly claimed that this education will check political antagonism. This is a mistake; any education will be used by the negro politically, for politics once successful is now an instinctive form of warfare. The question, then, plainly put, is simply this: Shall we, having by great efforts, gotten rid of the negro as a political menace, deliberately proceed to equip the negro of the future as an economic menace? Shall we, knowing his primitive racial needs, arm him and pit him against the poor whites of the South? In the South policemen do not patrol the fields and race hatred must be kept down, it only for the sake of the black. Read any account of a Southern race riot and see who usually furnishes the funerals. Almost always the black.

"To see how best to educate our two races at the South, let us look into the recent progress of this section and see what it shows. In 1895 there were about 2,500,000 spindles in the South, at the close of 1899, 5,000,000 spindles; to-day over 6,000,000. What part has the negro laborer played in this extension, and what part the white? In furnishing the raw material, the cotton, he plays the old slave day part, but in the function of the new South, in manufacture, he has no part. It may be asked 'has he had the chance?' Yes. In Charlotte, N. C., and in Charleston, S. C., he has been tried in the cloth factory and in the cotton mill, and he has failed in each case. The reason of his failure was the absolute lack of moral responsibility.

"The moral training of the negro should be implemented by the three Rs, and such simple training in agriculture and the domestic arts as all will need. The negro race is essentially a race of peasant farmers and laborers, and their education should be directed, first, to improving them as such. It is claimed that since education has raised up for this people its own leaders, the problem is solved. Far from it. An education that makes leaders at the expense of the laborer is a failure. Every negro doctor, negro lawyer, negro teacher, or other 'leader' in excess of the immediate needs of his own people, is an anti-social product, a social menace. Neither in the North, South, East, or the West can such a professional man make a living at his calling through white patronage; and to give him the ambition and the capacity and then blast his opportunity through racial prejudices and cast instinct, is to commit a crime against nature. In equal measure what is true of the professional man is true of every trade and calling in which the negroes' natural qualifications are not first considered."

JOHN C. SIMS WORSE.

Secretary of Pennsylvania Railroad Company Develops Heart Trouble.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Dec. 28.—After nearly two weeks of convalescence from an attack of appendicitis, for which he was operated upon at the University Hospital, John C. Sims, Secretary of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, to-day developed symptoms of heart trouble of so serious a nature that Dr. J. William White, his physician, remained with him during the entire morning. Dr. White said:

"For the first time in a week I am alarmed by Mr. Sims's condition. The operation for appendicitis was entirely successful. The heart trouble he has developed has no connection with his previous illness."

COAL FOR FRENCH GOVERNMENT.

Likely to Order 200,000 Tons from Philadelphia Next Year.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 28.—F. K. McIlwaine, a member of the American Chamber of Commerce, in Paris, is now in this city, closing negotiations for the sale of coal to the French Government. The order, he says, may reach 200,000 tons. The immediate necessities, covering principally railroad supplies, he adds, require 70,000 tons.

Mr. McIlwaine says he believes a substantial coal trade between this country and France will soon be established. He asserts the coal supply of France is 10,000,000 tons short of the demand. Formerly this deficiency was made up almost entirely by Great Britain. The great industrial establishments are becoming alarmed, Mr. McIlwaine said, by the possibility that this supply will be cut off owing to the scarcity of coal in England.

"The Government," he continued, "is dependent upon British coal, and it will readily be seen that the French Navy would be at a serious disadvantage in time of war. The attitude of the French Government toward American coal is distinctly favorable. I am here for the purpose of seeing whether American companies could, within the next six months, deliver upon the order of the French Government, at a satisfactory price, at least 200,000 tons. These arrangements have been completed, and it only remains for the quality of the coal to be proved satisfactory to inaugurate the business."

Mr. McIlwaine said he would secure a portion of the coal in this State and a part in Virginia to be delivered free on board.

BAY STATE GAS CO. CASE

Hearing of P. J. Brady's Suit Begun in Newark.

W. Bourke Cockran Calls Contract with Massachusetts Pipe Line Company a Blackmailing Scheme.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 28.—Judge Kirkpatrick, sitting in the United States Circuit Court, District of New Jersey, here to-day, heard argument on the return of a rule to show cause why the Bay State Gas Company of New Jersey should not be restrained from disposing of its property and assets, and why the appointment of Henry C. Kelsey as receiver should not be made permanent. Chauncey G. Parker, a lawyer of this city, brought the proceedings on behalf of Patrick J. Brady of New York, a holder of $10,000 of the bonds of the defendant company. It is based on charges of fraud and conspiracy in connection with the consolidation of several Massachusetts companies.

The defendant company was organized under the laws of New Jersey on Feb. 16, 1899. It was capitalized at $1,000,000, to be held by the Bay State Gas Company of Delaware, of which J. Edward Addicks is the alleged owner, and the capital stock of which is $100,000,000

A score of distinguished lawyers from several States interested in the case were present. W. Bourke Cockran of New York appeared as Mr. Parker's associate, and James H. Vredenburg of Jersey City represented the Bay State Gas Company of New Jersey.

Mr. Vredenburg read a lengthy affidavit by Frederick P. Addicks, Treasurer of the defendant company, denying the allegations of the complainnnt that the company was insolvent; it maintained that the only debt it had was that represented by outstanding gas bonds and assessed when required by the defendant company, and disputes the contention that a receiver is necessary to settle these liabilities.

Charles Butler of New York represented the defendants. He read an affidavit by George B. Nell, Treasurer and General Manager of the Charlestown Gas and Electric Company, which is not involved in the present litigation. Mr. Neil declared that it was impossible to produce gas in the City of Boston at a cost of less than 30 cents per 1,000 cubic feet of eighteen-candle power, except when undertaken on an enormous scale. The contract which the four Boston companies had with the Massachusetts Pipe Line Company to supply them with gas at 30 cents per 1,000 cubic feet was highly advantageous to them or to the amalgamated corporation known as the Boston Gaslight Company.

An affidavit by Frank E. Smith, who succeeded Frederick P Addicks as Assistant Treasurer of the four Boston companies, denied the charges in the bill that the contract was improper and improvident.

Bourke Cockran then began his argument. He maintained the defendant company had not shown there had been any additional pipe lines laid, nor that any element of value to the four Boston companies had been added. And there were no means of ascertaining, he stated.

"It was alleged," continued Mr. Cockran, "that the Bay State Company of New Jersey had no asset except a voting power in the Massachusetts companies. That power was a material asset, but not when held by one who had no interest in the earning powers. But it was an asset when exercised fraudulently and for the oppression of the minor companies.

"The Bay State Gas Company of Delaware was incorporated solely for the purpose of financing those other companies. This whole enterprise was from the beginning illusive. The amount designated for the payment of coupons of the bonds was wholly inadequate, and could only be had by encroaching on the principal, an act of fraud in itself. I ask the Court: Is it lawful to steal one gas company when it is held unlawful to steal one yard of gas pipe? This contract with the Massachusetts Pipe Line Company was entered into without any intention of using the pipes of the company. It was a blackmailing scheme pure and simple, and intended to defraud these bondholders. These gentlemen of the Delaware company elected themselves Directors of the Bay State Gas Company of New Jersey, and then proceeded to get control of the Boards of Directors of the Massachusetts companies."

"I've looked through the papers," remarked Judge Kirkpatrick, "and can't find how they did that."

"It's all in Mr. Cockran's argument," said Mr. Butler.

"That doesn't make it true," declared the Judge.

"I didn't say it was true," said Mr. Cockran.

"Well, what's the use of talking about it then?" asked the Judge.

"I'm merely trying to show to your Honor that it may be true," said Mr. Cockran.

"I haven't seen any proofs yet," returned the Judge.

Mr. Cockran then continued along the same lines until the rising of court.

THE BRITISH ARMY SHAKE-UP.

Lieut. Col. Spragge and the Hon. Ivor C. Guest Resign Commissions.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Lieut. Col. Spragge, who commanded the Yeomanry at Lindley, has resigned.

Several other resignations have been gazetted, among them being that of the Hon. Ivor C. Guest, M. P., a Captain of Yeomanry.

The career in the army of Lieut. Col. Basil Edward Spragge has been a distinguished one. He entered the Fifty-first Light Infantry in 1872, gained the medal with clasp for his services in the Jowaki expedition, was mentioned for gallantry in the first and second Afghan wars, and earned the thanks of his commanding officer for the part he played in the Burmese war of 1885-8.

The Hon. Ivor Churchill Guest is one of the most popular young men in London society, and is also well known to many people in this country, which he has visited several times. He is the eldest son and heir of Lord Wimborne, one of the wealthiest of the British peers. His mother is a daughter of the sixth Duke of Marlborough, so that Mr. Guest is a cousin of the present Duke.

Mr. Guest is a Captain in the Dorsetshire Yeomanry. He gained a seat in Parliament at the recent election, being returned as a Conservative from Plymouth. He had previously been defeated at a by-election in the same constituency.

DRIVING BOER INVADERS BACK.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 28.—The eastern parties of invading Boers are being constantly harassed and driven back toward the Orange River.

The Yeomanry who were captured near Britstown have been released.

JOHANNESBURG, Dec. 28.—The Boers damaged the new Kleinfontein and Chines Batteries yesterday.

Gen. Botha's Brother in Europe.

ROME, Dec. 28.—Major Grower Botha, brother of Commandant Gen. Louis Botha, has arrived in Rome on his way to The Hague. He carries dispatches for Mr. Kruger. In the course of an interview here to-day, he said the war in South Africa would last for years, that Mr. Steyn had planned the invasion of Cape Colony, and that a revolt of the Afrikanders was certain.

Ovation to Roberts at Gibraltar.

GIBRALTAR, Dec. 28.—The steamer Canada, with Lord Roberts on board, arrived here from South Africa to-day. The Field Marshal landed at noon and received a great ovation. The Canada resumed her voyage to-night.

Peru's New Customs Tariff.

LIMA, Peru, via Galveston, Texas, Dec. 28.—The Peruvian Government has finally issued a decree directing that the new customs tariff shall come into force May 1, 1901.

Baden Railways to Raise a Big Loan.

BERLIN, Dec. 28.—The Baden Railways' Sinking Fund Administration has contracted a 4 per cent. loan of 56,000,000 marks through the chief German banks. The subscription will be opened early in January.

Money for Haganey Family.

THE NEW YORK TIMES has received the following contributions for the family of Joseph Haganey: Two dollars from William F. Buhl and John Lindermann; $2 from "J. F. T.," and $1 from "T. J. M., Jr." The money has been turned over to the family.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

Being engaged in the coal business himself, his words carried more weight than would the declaration of an ordinary man. He is a big dealer from New England, who had been buying coal to try and satisfy the demands of his customers. "Like other dealers in my section of the country," said he, "I made a number of contracts with regular customers to supply their Winter coal at a fixed rate per ton. In the Summer, when the contracts were made, I made what seemed a fair and profitable rate to charge. Now I find myself loaded with a lot of business that must be carried out at a loss for every ton of coal furnished. Just now the loss per ton is not so very great, but I am now facing a problem that all dealers will have to face just after the first of the coming year. I have it from the very best of authorities here in New York City that the retail price per ton of all stove coals will be increased by at least $2 per ton. The Wall Street manipulators who have been such heavy buyers of coal properties, in the last few weeks have got the trade where they can pinch it now and get back some of the cost of their investments. They are planning to do it by concerted action about the 1st of January. Up is to go the price of coal at the mines, and that of course means an even larger advance for the consumers, proportionately, away from the mines. While the rates have not yet been definitely fixed, it is the best belief among the largest of the handlers of coal that the increase will mean an advance of at least $2 the ton in the price at which it will be doled out to the consumer. That advance will be necessary in order that the retailer may be able to carry out contracts for future deliveries with which he is loaded. As the making of such contracts is a universal custom, the advance will affect the price in all parts of the country."

***

Overheard on an "L" train: "Now, Mary, you must really arrange it so as to accept my invitation for the New Year's holidays at my father's place. He will be very much offended if you don't. I know it is thoroughly and fearfully country out there, and isn't a bit fashionable. But there are a host of young men there, and you won't have a half bad time. You know father has all sorts of traps in the stable, and there are eight head of horses. What more can a girl want?"

"When I was a boy," said The Veteran, as he puffed on his strong cigar after dinner, "I remember there was an awful scandal in our town—a little country place—because a temporary gravedigger, who had been hired to do the work when the regular hand was ill, buried a man with his feet to the west. Ours was a very religious, as well as a very superstitious, town. Among the older people there was a well-grounded belief that a person must be interred with his feet to the east, so that when Gabriel's trumpet should sound for the final awakening the dead should be able to face the angel on arising. This new gravedigger couldn't have known the tradition, or he would not have flown in the face of superstition and buried his victim with his feet to the west. The thing made such a scandal that they actually disinterred the body and turned the coffin around so that the dead man should rest in the right position. Of course the new gravedigger lost his job. I don't know that I have thought of the incident for a long time, until I had to go to Woodlawn Cemetery a short time ago to attend the burial of a friend. Then, for the first time, it dawned on me that there had been a change in the superstition, and that it had probably been wholly lost to sight, as have so many of the old ones. I noticed that the direction in which bodies are buried now seems to be settled by the direction of the path in front of the plot you own; that is, that interments are made with the feet pointing toward the path, no matter in what compass direction they may point."

***

It was a son of "the ould sod" who had this little passage with the salesman at one of the down-town jewelry stores the other day. He had come in to purchase a wedding ring for his bride-to-be. Leaning far over the counter, so that the clerk should be able to hear his wants without the necessity of informing all the other buyers in the store, Pat whispered to him, "Give me the best wedding ring you have in the shop."

"Eighteen karats?" querled the clerk.

"No!" snapped Pat, drawing back in an offended manner. "Atin' onions, if it's any of your dom business."

***

Both were manifestly from the country. They were young, bubbling over with enthusiasm and full of girlish confidences. One was a temporary resident, evidently here studying music, while the other was a friend visiting her for the holidays. They had many interests in common, principally young men. Their chatter about these, as about all things else, was in such a loud tone that it was manifest they were oblivious of the fact that there was any one else in the elevated train car with them.

"Do you know that I had the nicest kind of a Christmas message to send home to papa? The very day before Christmas when I took my last lesson Prof. Lambert told me to send him word that I was a regular musical geyser. Wasn't that perfectly splendid?"

"Musical geezer, I reckon," snarled the old curmudgeon who sat in the seat back of the gushing pair, and who was trying to read his evening paper while the two girls were chattering.

They were chatting at the Waldorf about the "enormous" use of automobiles in France, and how they had practically supplanted the horse with the younger set who make the fashions of that country. "It seems as if what was begun as a 'fad' had developed into a universal custom," said one of the enthusiasts at the sport. He had spent several weeks in France during the Summer, and naturally saw all the automobiles, but paid little attention to other vehicles.

"I don't want to curb your enthusiasm," said one of the executive officers of a big concern engaged in the manufacture of these mechanical carriages, "but it is a fact, nevertheless, that the use of the machines in France is very much overestimated, simply because enthusiasts see only automobiles when they are out enjoying the sport. Relatively, there are as many machines used right here in New York as there are in Paris, and the figures will prove it. Every machine in France is taxed, and when they tax things over there they do it systematically and thoroughly. So there are very few, if any, machines that are not on the tax list. These figures can be seen by any one interested in the subject. We had our agents there investigate the matter and send us the figures. I haven't them here with me, but I do know this: The figures showed that the concern with which I am connected turned out this year and delivered just a few more than one-half the whole number of machines registered and taxed in the whole of France. As there are about a hundred concerns making the machines in this country, many of them with a very limited production, it is true, the statement as to our production, which I assure you is absolutely correct, will go to prove that there are more machines in use here than in France, contrary to the general belief. Other concerns taken together manufactured certainly as many, and possibly twice as many, machines as we did. So you see the output here in the year 1900 must have exceeded the entire number of machines in use in France at the time the tax records were inspected a couple of months ago. My own opinion is that there are at least one-half as many more machines in regular use in the United States as are owned in the whole of Europe, and that the number in use right here in the City of New York for various purposes is greater than the number of machines in all France. Over there the idea as to the extensive use of the automobile is primarily due to the fact that auto-racing is a fad. It is talked of in sporting circles until the importance of the industry there is exaggerated. Here there is no racing to speak of, and very little chance that there will ever be any to amount to much. Our people are too practical to neglect the practical side of the machine, and there are mighty few of them who will take kindly to machine racing as a sport."

FORMED TO FIGHT TAMMANY.

New York City Democracy Organized for Mayoralty Campaign.

CAPT. CLIFFORD'S HOT SPEECH

Organization Leaders Work for Their Pockets All the Time, He Says—Resolutions on Tammany's Reign of Crime.

The New York City Democracy was organized last evening to fight Tammany Hall candidates in the next Mayoralty contest. The new political association is the outgrowth of the movement started by ex-Sheriff James O'Brien. A wider scope was given to the movement at a meeting held last evening at 1,481 Broadway.

Over 100 men were present, many of whom have been active in local politics before. The surprise of the meeting was the appearance of Capt. James Clifford, formerly of the Fire Department, who was dismissed from the service for seeking legislation favorable to firemen. Capt. Clifford made a stirring anti-Tammany speech. He told of the tyrannical despotism of Tammany over members of the Fire Department, and how the political leaders even in Fire Department matters "were working for their own pockets all the time." The speech of Capt. Clifford was received with hearty applause.

W. J. Boyhan presided at the meeting. The following resolutions were offered by Mr F. S. Hipkins and unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The most important municipal struggle since the overthrow of the Tweed-Tammany King, is now impending; and

Whereas, Tammany Hall, after three years of fattening on blackmail and blood money extorted from vice and crime to enrich Tammany leaders, is now trying to get another lease of power by pretending to discard its own criminal agents, only to throw off the mask should it get into power again, and

Whereas, The present Tammany administration has grossly wronged the people of New York by adding enormously to the burdens of taxpayers in order to increase the salaries of Tammany office holders, while at the same time cheating the laborer out of his hard-earned wage, and pretending to economize at the expense of the poor, and

Whereas, It is the duty of all good citizens to unite in putting an end forever to Tammany's reign of crime and to insure for the City of New York a government of the people for the people and by the people, instead of an administration directed from Wantage, England; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we hereby agree to devote our best efforts from now until the close of election day 1901 to securing for New York an honest municipal government that will deal fairly and justly with every class of citizens, put competent men in charge of public affairs, and put an end finally to the system of extortion, blackmail, and oppression, of which Tammany has confessed itself guilty, while at the same time shamelessly pleading to be forgiven by the community whose confidence it has abused, and whose interests it has foully betrayed.

And be it further resolved, That this organization shall be known as the New York City Democracy, and all citizens in sympathy with its objects are hereby invited to put themselves in communication with the Executive Committee of this organization, which committee will be in session after Jan. 1, 1901, at the headquarters of the New York City Democracy, 1,481 Broadway, to which all communications should be addressed.

It was then decided to open headquarters in Harlem and another headquarters below Fourteenth Street, in addition to the present headquarters at 1,481 Broadway.

A resolution was also adopted directing the appointment of a committee of three to confer with the various social and political organizations who are opposed to Tammany domination in city affairs and invite them to co-operate with the New York City Democracy.

Capt. Clifford was then introduced. He said in part:

"Since I was dismissed from the Fire Department I have enjoyed the liberty of a free man. I want to say that I am with you men heart and soul in this new movement. As the representative of the firemen of the City of New York I was directed by my fellow-members to do all I could in their interest. One of the duties which devolved upon me was to seek some legislation which the firemen were entitled to. The men in this department who daily risk their lives to save helpless men, women, and children are not being properly treated by Tammany Hall and Commissioner Scannell.

"I was appointed to try and secure in a measure fair treatment for the men. For this—and for nothing else—I was placed on trial and discharged by Commissioner Scannell, and the members of the committee who served with me were all transferred. These men only sought their rights. They are now persecuted worse than any set of men in Russia. My matter is now in the courts receiving judicial treatment. The brave men in the Fire Department are subjected to tyrannical treatment, and because they ask for their rights threats of dismissal from the service are made and carried out. The trouble is that some of the political leaders of the great party of Thomas Jefferson are looking out for their pockets all the time, and they do not care how men are treated if they can accomplish their own ends. I want to say that I will take part in this movement, and I hope it will be a great success."

Among those present at the meeting were Henry Campbell, P. M. Rhoades, Dr. J. F. Thomas, G. J. Murphy, Charles Mason, Edward Gallway, W. J. Boyhan, Solomon Mehrbach, Francis C. Brennan, Andrew J. Carson, and Thomas Bowe.

LONDON TIMES ALARMED.

Says It Is Useless to Disguise the Fact that American Are Outdistancing British Manufacturers.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The Times, in another article on American engineering progress, deals with educational influences, and arrives at the conclusion that it is not so much superiority of technical education which explains this progress as the fact that Americans give to young men positions which in the United Kingdom are supposed to belong to long experience.

Commenting editorially upon the whole situation, and in a regretful tone, The Times says:

"It is useless to disguise the fact that Great Britain is being outdistanced. The competition does not come from the glut caused by miscalculation as to the home demand. Our own steelmakers know better, and are alarmed. The threatened competition in markets hitherto our own comes from efficiency in production such as never before has been seen."

THE AMERICAN "SPECTRE."

BERLIN, Dec. 28.—The Berlin Society of Merchants, in the course of its annual report, published to-day, says:

"The first impulse in a reversal of the tide of prosperity proceeded from the United States. Unfavorable reports about the iron markets came from beyond the Atlantic in the Spring. The spectre of American competition in European markets produced immediately a disastrous effect upon the Boerse."

The Vossische Zeitung, Independent Liberal and advocating free trade, says in its annual financial review:

"It is known that the American iron works eclipse those of all other countries, whether in the magnificence of their establishments, or the methods of saving hand labor by technical devices, or in facilities for reducing the cost of production through the wholesale scale of their manufacture."

This journal admits that the break in the iron prices in Germany was caused by imports from America.

MRS. POTTER PALMER'S DINNER.

Entertains in Chicago in Honor of Mrs. Griswold Gray of This City.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—Mrs. Potter Palmer gave a dinner to twenty-four friends to-night, the guest of honor being Mrs. Griswold Gray of New York. Mrs. Gray has been the holiday guest of Mrs. Palmer, and the dinner in her honor was the first large event Mrs. Palmer has given since her return to the city for the Winter.

After the dinner Mrs. Martha S. Gielow, the Southern writer, gave some of her monologues and cradle songs.

London Stock Brokers in Difficulties.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The financial papers announce this morning that some trouble was disclosed on the Stock Exchange yesterday in the West Australian market, resulting in a considerable fall in the shares of the London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited, and Le Roi Mining Company, Limited. Seven firms had checks returned by the Clearing House. This does not imply failure, however, as it is expected that the usual period of grace allowed will enable the firms to meet their engagements.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The last Saturday of the year, and of the century, will be a quiet one in New York, from the social standpoint. Numbers of people went out of town yesterday, to remain until Wednesday next, and still more will follow them to-day. The largest contingent bound for any one place is that which left for Georgian Court, at Lakewood, where they are to be the guests. Tuxedo also attracted many well-known people, and the exodus of society was more like that of a June or September Saturday than one of December.

***

To-day will bring a number of incidents. There will be a fashionable wedding out of town—that of Mr. Hoffman and Miss Preston, at Tuxedo; a dinner for Miss Elisa Strong, by Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Oakley Rhinelander, at their residence, 36 West Fifty-second Street; a dinner in honor of Miss Sarah Gibbs Thompson, by Dr. E. M. Culver and Mrs. Culver, at 175 West Fifty-eighth Street; a dinner by Mrs. William Post, at her residence, and a dinner by Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Berwind, for Dr. A. S. Clarke and Mrs. W. F. Burden, 100 West Thirty-ninth Street. There will also be a party for children, to be given in the evening, at her residence by Mrs. John Jay White.

***

Mrs. Robert H. McCurdy (Miss Mary Suckley) of 11 East Ninth Street will give, in the Metropolitan Club Annex, on Thursday, Jan. 3, a luncheon for thirty women. Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs will give at her residence, to-morrow (Sunday) evening, a large dinner in honor of Mrs. William F. Burden and her fiancé, Dr. Andrew S. Clarke. The wedding of Dr. Clarke and Mrs. Burden will be celebrated on Jan. 2.

***

Mrs. Charles M. Lea of 10 West Tenth Street will give two coming-out receptions for her daughter, Miss Marjorie Lea. These will be given on Saturday, Jan. 5, and Friday, Jan. 25, respectively. Mrs. Lea was formerly Miss Charlotte A. Brown.

***

Mrs. John Jay White, Jr., (Miss Grace Hoffman,) will give a dance for boys and girls this evening at her residence, 103 East Sixty-seventh Street. The dance is in honor of her little daughter, Miss Louise L. White, and the youthful guests are to be costumed to represent popular books and songs.

***

At Delmonico's this evening will take place the third meeting of the Saturday Junior Cotillion, better known as Mrs. Erhardt's class. Owing to Mrs. Erhardt's absence from New York this Winter, Mrs. Gustav Schwab has these dances in charge. Although this class is for girls not yet out, there are still a number of those who became members of it several years ago who still attend its meetings. Among these are the Misses Cecil Boardman, Mildred Dix, Emily Grugan, Eleanor Swayne, Caterina Fecheri, Isabel Fowler, Elsie Ladd, Ruth Emmons, Ruth Warren Jones, and the Misses Bacon. The young men include Artemus Holmes, Richard Acosta, Sewall Boardman, and the Messrs. Stone, Gruner, Fecheri, Elliman, Stokes, and Vanderpoel.

***

Mrs. William Henry Parsons of 4 East Sixty-fifth Street has sent out cards for a reception on Thursday, Jan. 10. Mrs. Parsons is to be assisted in receiving by Mrs. David Smith Cowles and Mrs. William Henry Parsons, Jr. Mrs. Parsons will be "at home" on Thursdays in January.

***

To-day will bring the wedding at Tuxedo Park of Miss Zelia Krumbhaar Preston and Charles Frederick Hoffman. The ceremony is to be celebrated in St. Mary's Church by Bishop Potter, who will be assisted by the Rev. Eugene A. Hoffman and the Rev. George Grenville Merrill, rector of the church. A special train will take the guests to and from Tuxedo, and the boat for this train will leave the foot of West Twenty-third Street at 10:55 this morning. The returning train from Tuxedo will leave there at 4 P. M. The little Misses Marie L. and Eleanor Rodewald, nieces of Mr. Hoffman, will be the flower girls, and Gouverneur and Stoddard Hoffman will act as pages. The maid of honor will be Miss Mary Alice Preston, a sister of the bride. Mr. Hoffman, who is a son of Mrs. Charles L. Hoffman (Miss Eleanor L. Vail) of 31 West Seventy-second Street, is a Columbia graduate of the class of '98, and a member of several clubs. He will have as his best man William M. V. Hoffman, and the ushers selected are H. Evelyn Pierrepont, Jr., Francis E. Ward, Creighton Peet, Lewis Butler Preston, William McN. Rodewald, and W. M. D. de Peyster.

***

The second meeting of the Friday Evening Dancing Class, or Mrs. Church's, was had in Sherry's big ballroom last night. The guests were received by Mrs. Benjamin S. Church and Mesdames Christopher Wolfe, H. W. Robbins, and John Clarkson Jay. The cotillion was led by Alexander Hadden. The favors were satin calendars, trimmed with brass; pincushions with medallions, China pen trays, and other china trifles. Among the dancers were the Misses Stebbins, Church, de Peyster, Lenox Tilhast, Roosevelt, Simons, Crosby, Rutherford, Brown, Delafield, Pierson, Beekman, Jay, and the Messrs. Holt, Oddie, Anderson, Satterlee, Irwin, Livingston, Bayesen, Whipple, and Strong.

***

The purchase of the large Crabbe estate at Great Neck, L. I., overlooking the Sound, by W. Gould Brokaw is of great interest to the members of the large colony who have Summer homes at Bayside, Douglaston, Great Neck, and Sands Point. Mr. Brokaw's sisters, Mrs. James E. Martin and Mrs. Bramhall Gilbert, already own two large and beautiful places at Great Neck. Mr. Brokaw will remodel the old Crabbe mansion and make a game preserve of the thirty acres of woodland and construct a half-mile track and a polo field.

***

Mrs. Charles Tracy Barney gave at her residence, 100 West Thirty-eighth Street, last evening a dinner dance for her débutante daughter, Miss Helen T. Barney. The dinner was one of fifty covers, and a number of young men came in afterward for the dance. The house was handsomely decorated with palms, ferns, and cut flowers. The red room had poinsettia for its decorations, and in the pink room there were bridesmaid roses. The tables were decorated with pink roses by Thorley. Dancing began early, and the cotillion, which was made up of thirty couples, was led by Worthington Whitehouse, who danced with Miss Barney. There were several favor figures—one a Mother Goose figure, in which amusing favors were distributed. Other favors were baskets of bridesmaid roses for the girls and pictures of sporting subjects for the men, college flags, &c. Among the guests were the Misses Rosamond Sfreet, Eleanor Morris, May Gallatin, Sophie Langdon, Evelyn Blight, Caroline Wilmerding, Kathleen Neilson, the Misses Cryder, Sibyl Kane, Helen Kountze, Florence Twombly, Alice Olin, Nora Iselin, Nathalie Schenck, Eleanor Jay, Rossie Moran, Lelia Bryce, Sarah Van Alen, Nina Crosby, and Messrs. Arthur Street, Goelet Gallatin, Ashbel Barney, Robert L. Gerry, H. Evelyn Pierrepont, Jr., Schuyler Schieffelin, Barclay Kountze, Hoppin, Parrish, Hewitt, Kernochan, Robbins, Landale, Wilmerding, and Morris.

***

Mrs. Thomas Garner of 17 Madison Avenue gave yesterday afternoon a small tea for the débutante friends of her granddaughter, Miss Nora Iselin, who made her début at the first Assembly ball. Mrs. Garner was assisted in receiving by Miss Nora Iselin and the latter's cousin, Miss Therese Iselin. The house was decorated with holly and Christmas greens, and the tea table was also trimmed with holly. Among the guests were the Misses May Gallatin, Katharine Pratt, Nathalie Henderson, May Goelet, and the Messrs. Bryce, Cryder, Street, Smith, Robison, Crosby, Fanshawe, Prime, and a number of the younger men.

***

The funeral of Buchanan Winthrop, who died suddenly on Christmas Day, took place at 10 o'clock yesterday morning at Grace Church. There was a large attendance, as Mr. Winthrop was a notable figure in the club and society worlds of this city. There were especially large delegations from the University Club, of which Mr. Winthrop was one of the founders, and the Metropolitan and Union Clubs. The mourners were Mrs. Winthrop and her two children, Henry Rogers Winthrop and Miss Marie Winthrop; Mrs. Winthrop's sister, Mrs. Haslitt McKim and family, and Mrs. Winthrop's sisters, Mrs. Bend, Mrs. Sackett, and Miss Amy Townsend, and her brother, Isaac Y. Townsend.

***

Among those booked to sail to-day on the Aller for Gibraltar and Mediterranean ports are G. G. Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Capen, R. F. Capen, and Miss L. A. Capen, the Misses A. M. and Beatrice Mallet-Prevost, Henry C. Miller, A. Vatable, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Whitehead.

***

Late letters from London state that Mrs. George Cavendish-Bentinck, sister of Mrs. Ogden Mills, who suffers from rather delicate health, is ill at her London residence, and that Lady Mary Sackville, who spent the Winter here last year as the guest of Mrs. George Gould, has been ill with pneumonia at the Dowager Lady De La Warr's London house, but is now much better.

DEATH OF WILLIAM WESTLAKE.

Well-Known Inventor Succumbs to Bright's Disease at His Brooklyn Home.

William Westlake, one of the founders of the Adams & Westlake Company of Chicago, and widely known as an inventor, died yesterday morning at his home, 4 Spencer Place, Brooklyn, of Bright's disease. Mr. Westlake was born in Cornwall, England, in 1831, and came to this country when sixteen years old. He first worked as a roller boy in the office of The Evening Wisconsin in Milwaukee. Afterward he served an apprenticeship as a tinsmith and invented several tools for use in that trade, for which his employer got the benefit.

When twenty-one years old he was employed by Capt. Ericsson to make the patterns and model for his first hot-air engine. He later entered the service of the La Crosse and Milwaukee Railroad Company, afterward the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad Company, as a tin and copper smith. He began there the series of inventions which made him famous. The first of these was the Westlake car heater, the feature of which was that it dumped the fire in case of a derailment or other accident. In 1862 he invented the loose globe lantern, generally used on railroads. The oil cook stove he patented in 1865, and the stove board in 1869.

The last-named invention is said to net its makers a profit of $100,000 annually. The first practical car lamp was perfected by Mr. Westlake in 1873.

The loose globe lantern was the invention which started him to success. He organized the firm of Cross, Dane & Westlake, and began the manufacture of these lanterns, turning out 120,000 of them in one year. The firm was reorganized in 1874 as the Adams & Westlake Company, which for a time was the largest concern of its kind in the world. Mr. Westlake retired from this company without his patents and started anew for himself in New York in 1877. He was enabled to retire with a competency in 1883, since which time he had made his home in Brooklyn.

While living in retirement he invented several articles of utility. He was fond of yachting, and in 1888 built for himself the steam yacht Adelaide. The yacht was constructed mainly after Mr. Westlake's own designs and ideas. He also built the steam yacht Pigeon. Mr. Westlake is survived by his wife and three daughters. He was a member of the Lincoln Club of Brooklyn and other clubs, as well as of Acanthus Lodge, F. and A. M. The funeral services will be held at the residence this evening.

DANIEL A. HEALD DEAD.

ORANGE, N. J., Dec. 28.—Daniel A. Heald, President of the Home Insurance Company, died at his home, Woodside, in Llewellyn Park, West Orange, at 3:40 this afternoon. Heart disease caused his death. He was at his office in New York yesterday, but not feeling well this morning and the weather being bad he did not go to the city. This afternoon he began to sink and died within a short time.

Mr. Heald was eighty-two years of age. He was born in Chester, Vt. His grandfather and his father both fought in the Revolution. Daniel was the youngest son of Amos H. Heald. His early days were spent upon his father's farm. He was graduated from Yale University in the class of 1841. He then studied law in the office of the late Judge Reuben Washburn of Vermont and later married Judge Washburn's daughter. Mr. Heald was admitted to the Vermont bar in 1843. His taste lay toward finance more than toward law, and for a time he was cashier of a bank at Black River, Vt. In 1850 he served in the lower house of the Vermont Legislature and later was a member of the State Senate. Two years later he was admitted to the bar of Illinois, having moved to Galena in that State. While in the West he became interested in insurance. He finally accepted the position of General Agent of the Home Company, with headquarters in New York, and went to that city in 1856. His activity in insurance circles attracted much attention, and in 1868 he was made Second Vice President of his company. In 1883 he became its First Vice President, and in 1888 succeeded Charles J. Martin as President. When he first became connected with the company it had a capitalization of half a million dollars and assets hardly double that amount. Compared with the figures of to-day these are trifles.

Mr. Heald was much interested in the New York Board of Fire Underwriters. He was one of the organizers of the National Board. He went to live in Llewellyn Park in 1857. He was the last survivor of the founders of the park. He was elected Secretary of the Board of Proprietors of the park in 1858, and continued in that position up to the present. He was one of the nine original members of the New England Society of the Oranges.

Mr. Heald's first wife died in 1892, and five years ago he married Miss Elizabeth Goddard, who survives him. He is also survived by three adult children. Mrs. A. M. Burton, whose husband is an officer in the Home Insurance Company; John O. Heald, a lawyer, of New York, and Mrs. George L. Manning, whose husband is connected with Stevens Institute. The funeral services will be on Monday afternoon. The interment will be in the family plot at Rosedale Cemetery.

MAJOR PINTO IS DEAD.

LISBON, Dec. 28.—Major Alexandre Alberto da Rocha Serpa Pinto, the African explorer, is dead.

Major Pinto was a native of Portugal, having been born in the Province of Douro and educated at the Royal Military College, Lisbon. He entered the army in 1863, and six years later, by which time he had attained the rank of Captain, he went through the Zambesi war, in which he greatly distinguished himself, on one occasion saving a whole regiment.

Serpa Pinto was a good deal more than an ordinary Portuguese officer stationed in Africa. He mixed with and studied the natives, and in 1877 he set out on his famous journey across the Continent from Benguela to Durban. This journey occupied over a year, and Major Pinto described it in a book which has been translated into many languages—"How I Crossed Africa."

Geographical societies hastened to honor the daring explorer when the result of his expedition, which had been undertaken without fuss or advertisement, became known. The first class gold medals of the societies of London, Paris, Antwerp, Marseilles, and Rome were conferred upon him, and he was elected a Fellow of all the most important geographical societies in the world, as well as many scientific associations. The King of Portugal made him a Knight Commander of the Order of St. James; King Leopold of Belgium conferred a Knighthood upon him, and he received many foreign orders.

Edmund Collier, the Actor, Dead.

Edmund Collier died of asthma in St. Joseph's Hospital Thursday afternoon. He was the nephew of J. W. Collier and uncle of Willie Collier, the comedian, and has figured in the theatrical profession of this country for a number of years. He acted as leading man with Edwin Booth, John McCullough, and various other stars, and during his early career on the stage wrote a play, in which he appeared, called "The Crossroads of Life." His last appearance in this city was during the engagement of "Ben Hur" last season at the Broadway Theatre, when he played the rôle of Arrius.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Moses Coit Tyler.

ITHACA, N. Y., Dec. 28.—MOSES COIT TYLER, Professor of American History in Cornell University, died to-day, after an illness of three weeks. He leaves a wife, one daughter, the wife of Assistant Librarian W. H. Austen, and a son.

Prof. Tyler was born in Griswold, Conn., in 1833, and graduated from Yale in 1857. Afterward he took up the study of theology and pursued it at Yale and at Andover Theological Seminary. In 1859 he married Jeanette Hull Gilbert at New-Haven, Conn. The year following his marriage he accepted a call from the First Congregational Church of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., to become its pastor. He retained that pastorate until 1862. In 1867 he received the appointment of Professor of English Language and Literature at the University of Michigan. While holding that position he also acted as editor of the Christian Union in 1873-4. He remained with the University of Michigan until 1881. In that year Prof. Tyler became an Episcopalian and was ordained a deacon. In 1883 he was ordained a priest in St. John's Church, in Ithaca, N. Y., by Bishop Coxe. He received the degrees of LL. D. from Wooster, and L. H. D. from Columbia. Prof. Tyler was well known as an author. His best known publications are: "History of American Literature During the Colonial Period," "The Literary History of the American Revolution," "The Brannville Papers," "Life of Patrick Henry," "Three Men of Letters," "Manual of English Literature," and "Glimpses of England."

Dr. Erastus Edgerton Marcy.

Dr. Erastus Edgerton Marcy, who has been a strong advocate of homeopathy and a practising physician in this city for years, died on Thursday at his residence at 396 Fifth Avenue. He was born in Greenwich, Mass., and was the son of Laban Marcy, a well-known lawyer who was twenty times elected to the Legislature, and was frequently associated in his law practice with Daniel Webster. He studied at Amherst College, where he was an intimate friend of Henry Ward Beecher, and took a degree as Doctor of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania.

For ten years he practiced as an allopathic physician and surgeon at Hartford, Conn. At that time he was an opponent of the new school of medicine, and was appointed by medical societies to investigate the school of homeopathy. He went to Paris, and after studying the original manuscripts of Hahnemann became a convert to homeopathy himself. He came to New York, where he soon established a large practice.

He was the publisher of The North American Journal of Homeopathy, which he edited for thirteen years, and also wrote several books on scientific and medical subjects. He was the companion and physician to A. T. Stewart and one of the witnesses to his will. He was also physician to Adelina Patti.

Although brought up as a Presbyterian, Dr. Marcy became a Roman Catholic. He leaves a wife and two daughters. Mrs. Emma Raymond, a composer and musician, and Mrs. Nina M. Stedman, the wife of Ernest G. Stedman.

Mrs. Percy R. Pyne, Sr.

Mrs. Percy R. Pyne, Sr., died at her residence, 34 East Thirty-sixth Street, of pneumonia Thursday evening. Mrs. Pyne had been ill only a few days with a severe cold and no fears were entertained until Thursday afternoon. She was Miss Albertina Shelton Taylor, the daughter of the late Moses Taylor, and was born at the old Taylor house on Morris Street in this city in 1832. She married in 1854 the late Percy R. Pyne, who died in Italy five years ago. Mrs. Pyne inherited a large fortune from her father, which, added to that left by her husband, made her an extremely wealthy woman. She never cared for society, but was a very charitable woman and devoted to her family. There survive her of her immediate family, three children, Moses Taylor Pyne, who married Miss Stockton of Trenton, N. J.; Percy R. Pyne, who married Mi

WILL PURIFY ATHLETICS

Columbia Faculty Determined on Clean Amateurism.

NEW RULES AND REGULATIONS

Managers and Members of Teams to be Dealt with Summarily for Disobedience of Orders.

The final blow to objectionable methods in Columbia sport has been struck by the Faculty Athletic Committee in a set of stringent rules and instructions to be sent to the managers of all athletic teams at the university in the future. These rules are severe and clearly stated, but not too severe to be unjustifiable. Complete latitude is left for all recognized amateur methods, but the line is closely drawn, and if the tenets are strictly enforced, as it appears they will be, the future status of Columbia sport will be "clean and unsullied." Summary dismissal from the university is the penalty to be visited on manager and athlete alike for any infraction. The complete list of regulations and instructions will be printed and distributed as follows:

(1) Candidates reporting on the manager's call must not be enrolled until they have secured from the Director of the gymnasium a pass card good for the current college year, testifying to the satisfactory physical condition of the candidate to take up the work in question. Three grades of cards will be issued, which are good only for the current college year, for the three classes of athletic work, as per the following classification:

First Class—Rowing, football, boxing, wrestling, hurdling, strength test competitions, middle and long distance cycling, swimming, skating, and running.

Second Class—Lacrosse, baseball, hockey, polo, basket ball, fencing, gymnastics, handball, sprints, field athletics, including shot-putting, hammer-throwing, jumping, and vaulting.

Third Class—Cricket, golf, tennis, and shooting.

(2) The candidate should be instructed to obtain the grade card required, and should then at once be given a registration blank to fill out. He should not be admitted as a candidate before he has fulfilled both these requirements.

(3) The pass card of each candidate having been shown and the registration blank returned filled out, the manager must then countersign the blank and file it with the Secretary of the Faculty Committee. He should see that it is properly filled out and contains no evasive answers or omissions. He should further satisfy himself to the best of his power that the candidate has answered truthfully. Willful connivance with dishonest candidates on the part of the manager must and will be punished by the extreme penalty of the university.

(4) Only one registration is required of each athlete for each college year. If, however, he moves from one grade of athletics to a higher, he must obtain the corresponding pass card. Managers should satisfy themselves by consulting the Secretary of the Faculty Committee that a new registration card to have been filed in connection with other athletic work has actually been received.

(5) The process thus outlined must be followed not only at the first call for candidates, but at every subsequent call and whenever a new candidate enrolls. managers should therefore keep themselves well informed as to men-comers. The participation of non-registered or debarred candidates in any contest will be followed by summary punishment to both manager and athlete.

(6) Managers must register with the Faculty Committee, and be eligible under its rules; they are exempt only from the physical examination rule.

(7) Applications for all games must be duly filed with the Faculty Committee on the blanks prepared, and over the manager's signature; the whole season's schedule should be submitted at once; if this is not possible, applications for single games should be filed at the earliest possible date. Notifications of approval must be received before the game may be played. Reports on prepared blank forms or on sheets appended to these, which may be obtained at the gymnasium office from the Secretary, must be forwarded at the conclusion of each game. A printed programme, where possible, should accompany the report.

(8) The attention of managers is called to Section 3 of the athletic rules, to the effect that no athletic team shall engage in any contest with another team, when its books show an outstanding indebtedness exceeding $500.

"In conclusion, the Faculty Committee wishes to say that it must, as the official representative of the college corporation, maintain at all costs the university's name clean and unsullied in the athletic world; it hopes, however, to effect this in co-operation with and not against the student body. It, too, wishes Columbia's name to be great among athletes, but must insist that it be also honored and respected, and to this end invites as its most powerful allies the student athletic representatives."

CUTLER TEAMS PLAY HOCKEY.

Graduate Players Outclassed the Seven Composed of the Schoolboys.

Cutler School, although it has a hockey team fairly capable of holding its own with sevens of equal calibre, was decidedly outmatched in its game with a team composed of Cutler graduates at the St. Nicholas Rink last evening. Although the lads tried desperately to defend their goal, their opponents tallied eleven points, and held their own goal unassailable. As far as the alumni were concerned, the score might have been many points larger if they had put forth any strenuous efforts. As it was, they simply enjoyed a good bit of practice, and had the satisfaction of a duty accomplished to their school by affording the "preps" a chance to learn hockey.

Cutler once or twice did get within striking distance of the "grads'" goal, but their shoots were quickly checked, and the puck sent skimming out of harm's way.

The sevens of Andover and Lawrenceville Schools will meet in the St. Nicholas Rink to-night in their annual battle on the ice. The students in these schools go in large measure to Yale and Princeton, and the spirit of competition and rivalry that exists between these two of the Big Four extends to the "prep" schools also.

The line-up of the teams last evening was as follows:

Cutler Alumni.	Position.	Cutler School.
Raney	Goal	Musser
Mortimer	Point	Dabney
Williams	Cover point	Auerbach
Gunther	Forward	Sinkus
Warren	Forward	Hall
Inman	Forward	Cooper, Wilson
Belden	Forward	J. Cornell

Goals scored—Inman, 2; Mortimer, (2,) Gunther, Warren, and Belden. Referee—Howard Walton, St. Nicholas Skating Club. Time of game—15-minute halves.

COLUMBIA FRESHMEN WON.

Drisler School Seven Beaten by the Score of 3 to 0.

Columbia's freshman hockey team, the first one in her history, made its first appearance in the St. Nicholas Rink yesterday morning in a game with the Drisler School hockey seven. Although handicapped by the absence of two of its regular players and by the presence of three graduates on the Drisler team, the blue and white managed to win without much difficulty by a score of 3 goals to 0.

Neither seven displayed particularly good form and showed, naturally, a considerable lack of the skill that is seen in the work of the more experienced teams.

Columbia did not outplay Drisler to any noteworthy extent, except perhaps in team work. Von Bernuth, at goal, did excellent work for Columbia in turning aside several shots that would have developed into scores but for his alertness.

Drisler began the game with a rush and nearly tallied. A few minutes later, however, Wheeler got the puck near the centre of the rink, and skating slowly, carried the disk past the whole Drisler team and gently pushed it between the goal posts. The ease and slowness with which he scored was amusing. The next goal was gained by Akin on a pretty shot from the centre of the rink, and the last tally came through Mohlman by team work with Akin. Line-up:

Columbia, 3.	Position.	Drisler, 0.
Von Bernuth	Goal	Cooper
Work	Point	Roberts
Camp	Cover point	Bracher
Baxter	Forward	Hecker
Akin	Forward	Gibbons
Wheeler	Forward	Smith
Mohlman	Forward	Van Dam

Goals—Akin, Mohlman, Wheeler. Time of game—20 minutes.

Yale's Hockey Challenge Declined.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 28.—The challenge of Yale to the Toronto 'Varsity Hockey Club to play in New York next week has been declined as the Canadian team is not in good enough shape.

NEW RULES FOR TRAP SHOTS.

Governing Committee, Partially Organized, Will Complete Its Work Next Saturday.

At a meeting to be held a week from today at Inter-State Park, Brooklyn, the organization of a body that practically will govern pigeon and trap shooting throughout North America will be completed. The movement was begun early in the Fall, and men prominently identified with the sport have spent much time in a quiet way considering the matter, in addition to soliciting views and suggestions from the leading trap shots of the country concerning modifications and amendments of the old rules for shooting, but all results of this work have been reserved for announcement at next Satruday's meeting. Then a special committee, composed of J. A. H. Dressel, Dr. A. A. Webber, Walter F. Sykes, B. Waters, and W. R. Hobart, appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws, will report to a body known as the Governing Shooting Committee, which has for members all those of the special committee named, in addition to Dr. William Wynn, J. H. Voss, Charles Billings, H. C. Koegel, John J. Wellbrook, John S. Wright, William K. Park, Jacob Pentz, W. R. H. Hart, D. F. Pride, Elmer E. Shaner, and L. C. Green, with Walter F. Sykes President, B. Waters Secretary, and Dr. A. A. Webber Treasurer. At a former meeting this committee planned an organization in a general way, for convenience in transacting business, by resolutions providing that five members shall constitute a quorum for matters other than handicapping shooters, three members then to be a quorum, with the privilege, if three members should not be in attendance, of such member or members as are present appointing other persons to make up the number required for handicapping; the work of such meeting to stand as the regular act of the committee. It was further agreed that the first Saturday in each month shall be the time for regular meetings, and this provision will go into effect after Saturday, Jan. 5. Special meetings may be called at any time by the President.

The general body will assume control of the handicapping for the Grand American Handicap, the most important pigeon-shooting event of North America, and this control will give it a National character. Under this head, members of the committee are considering the matter of changes in the method of handicapping, and the next Grand American Handicap will be shot under the new rules. It is especially in relation to this matter that the views of the leading trap shooters of the country were called for. Under the existing rules, the handicap scale was practically limited between twenty-five yards and thirty yards. Experience has proved that with men like Gilbert, Elliott, Brewer, Fulford, and Money at thirty-one yards, it was practically impossible to frame an equitable handicap, as the men named and a number of others of about the same class, were better at thirty yards than many competitors in former Grand Americans would be standing on the traps. It therefore has been the practice to put the best men back of the thirty-yard mark, and even then the men further up had no chance against the tricksters. A number of suggestions equalizing matters have been made, and among them some excellent ideas have been advanced. One scale offered, which has met with general favor, and which, from expressions of opinion, doubtless will furnish the framework of the system of handicapping adopted by the governing body, is as follows:

For men at twenty-five yards—Two misses to count as kills, and two misses to count as no birds, giving the shooter two extra birds.

For men at twenty-six yards—Two misses to count as kills and one miss to count as no bird, giving the shooter one extra bird.

For men at twenty-seven yards—Two misses to count as kills.

For men at twenty-eight yards—One miss to count as a kill.

For men at twenty-nine yards—One miss to count as no bird, giving the shooter an extra bird.

For men at thirty yards—Pull back.

It is specifically understood that men classed now as thirty-yard men shall be put back at a distance greater than thirty yards. This scale is on the idea that the Grand American Handicap shall continue to be a sweepstakes at twenty-five live birds. The suggestion has been made that the number of birds shot at be increased, to make the race a longer one, and therefore a better test of the skill of the competitors, but that such a change will be made is improbable. The promoters of the big shoot, in spite of frequent ties, have found the twenty-five-bird test very satisfactory, and argue that the number of birds is large enough to eliminate the matter of luck, for all practical purposes, and makes the shoot quite as long as the majority of gunners wish it. Under a new handicap scale resembling the one outlined, it is expected that the number of entries for the Grand American will be greatly increased, as the increased allowance for the short-distance men will encourage many shooters to enter who, knowing they had no chance under the old scale, held off.

There was no intention by the Governing Committee to assume National control of trap shooting when the organization was begun, and the body asserts no such authority now, but the nature of the work on hand is of such a character that the committee in all probability will rule by the importance of the precedents it will establish.

PHYSICAL DIRECTORS MEET.

The annual meeting of American College Physical Directors was held at Columbia University yesterday. The Chairmen of various committees appointed last year to investigate questions of gymnastic interest reported on the various subjects as follows: "Gauge to Advisability of Determining the Physical Condition of Candidates for Gymnastic and Athletic Exercise," Dr. Jay W. Seaver of Yale; "Strength Tests and Inspection of Instruments," Dr. Dudley A. Sargent of Harvard; "On the Adoption of Uniform Terminology and Nomenclature for Gymnastic Exercise," Dr. W. G. Anderson of Yale; "Credit for Gymnastic Training in College Work," Dr. W. A. Lambeth of the University of Virginia; "On the Relationship Between Gymnastics and Athletics," Dr. W. G. Anderson of Yale.

The business meeting will be held to-day. Among the Directors present other than those mentioned were Dr. Watson Lewis Savage of Columbia, Dr. Paul C. Phillips of Amherst, Dr. R. Tait McKenzie of McGill University, Montreal; Frederick Marvel of Wesleyan, Dr. Edward Hitchcock of Amherst, Dr. Capar W. Miller of the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. Cook of the University of Minnesota, Dr. W. Goldie of Princeton, and Dr. Wehr of Adelbert College, Cleveland, Ohio. A telegram was received from Dr. Hastings of the University of Colorado stating that he will be in attendance to-day.

Yacht Genesee Out of Chicago Races.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 28.—Charles Van Voorhis of this city, owner of the champion yacht Genesee, says the Genesee will not enter the trial races at Chicago next year to try for the honor of defending the Canada Cup. The Genesee is the winner of this cup and defender of the Fisher Trophy. Mr. Van Voorhis announced after the Genesee had won the international trophy, that never again would he allow his yacht to sail under any colors excepting those of the Rochester Yacht Club. After the race at Toronto, in which the Genesee, as the representative of the Chicago Yacht Club, defeated the Canadian defender, Beaver, and carried off the most prized trophy on the Great Lakes, it was thought the Rochester Yacht Club would be given some recognition when it came to placing the inscription on the cup. This, however, was not done. This is not the only reason which keeps the Genesee out of next year's contest. Mr. Van Voorhis says he can see nothing in winning prizes for other clubs.

Deer Isle Sailors for Defender.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 28.—Private information received from Deer Isle, Me., would indicate that the crew of the Herreshoff cup defender is to be selected from the same material as was furnished the Columbia by Capt. Fred P. Weed last year. Capt. Uriah Rhodes, the sailing master for the new boat, is going to Maine about the middle of January to pick out a crew, and it is anticipated that he will get all the men he wants, and the pick of the Deer Isle yachtsmen. Many of the Columbia's crew are likely to be selected owing to their experience, especially the bowsprit and masthead staymen. W. Butler Duncan is known to have expressed his preference for Deer Islanders over Scandinavians, although the latter are very expert at stowing and bending on sail, as was shown by the Defender's crew in the trials with the Columbia off Newport, although the Yankees developed remarkably well when the actual races came.

Boston Yacht's Skipper in Doubt.

BOSTON, Dec. 28.—A master for the Lawson cup defender was not selected to-day, but the impression now obtains that both Capts. Haff and Watson will be retained to handle the boat. Capt. Haff was in conference with Designer Crowninshield to-day, and afterward the latter said: "We hoped to decide the question to-day, but as one of the men necessary to a final decision could not be on hand, we have nothing to say to-night. To-morrow, as soon as possible in the day, we will, we hope, be ready to make a definite statement."

Mr. Clapp of the Board of Strategy said that no contracts had been signed and nothing definite is yet reached.

NORRIS AGAIN VICTOR.

He Makes a Record-Breaking Run of 62 Points in the K. A. C. Billiard Contest.

Charles S. Norris won his third successive billiard victory last night on the 14-inch balk-line table in the tournament now in progress for the championship of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club. He defeated Albro Atkin more easily than any of his opponents thus far, rolling up the required 300 points at the completion of the forty-eighth inning to 145 for Atkin in forty-seven innings.

The contest finished amid a blaze of enthusiasm for the coterie of club members gathered around the table, for within two innings of the end Norris made the record-breaking run for the present season of 62 points. When he passed the 61 mark set by Dr. A. B. Miller in the opening game on Wednesday night, there was a simultaneous outburst of applause, and only one point remained to complete the game. But the former Chicago champion stumbled at this point, missing an ordinary cushion follow shot. It was a far easier shot than many of those which Norris had successfully made in his long run, but he doubtless felt as though that one was the deciding shot of the match, and as often happens in such critical cases, missed it.

When Norris began his record run in the forty-sixth inning, he had a total of 237 points to 138 for Atkin. Twelve points in the sixty-second run were made in the centre of the table, and over half of the others were draw shots, a point that Norris plainly understands to a nicety, and in the execution of which he manipulates the balls cleverly and gracefully. Norris finished with the grand average of 6 12-48, the game being ended in three innings less than on the previous evening, when Norris defeated John A. Hendrick. In the first night's game, when Dr. A. B. Miller was beaten by the narrow margin of eight points, sixty-six innings were necessary.

The game last night, before the big run enlivened the event, was uneventful. Atkin started out with a run of eight in the first inning, while Norris failed to count. It took the latter until the sixth inning to get really going, when he made a run of 32, the best of the evening, next to his 62. Atkin was simply outclassed from the start, and only made three runs above single figures—15, 12, and 11. Besides the two runs mentioned of Norris's, he also made runs of 22, 19, 16, 14, 11, and 10.

Norris will meet to-night Dr. Leonidas L. Mial, a Class A player, and who won the National handicap tournament in 1897, and one of the best games of the match is looked for. The scores were:

C. S. Norris—0 1 2 2 7 3 2 1 5 3 0 0 0 0 3 1 0 1 6 16 11 6 2 5 1 1 0 6 2 1 0 2 5 3 2 10 4 1 4 1 1 3 10 7 14 2 2 1 8 1 1 2 6 2 0 1. Total, 300. Average, 6 12-48. Highest single run, 62.

HORSE RACING RESTRICTED.

Western Turf Congress Votes to Rescind Rule Respecting Western Tracks.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—By the close vote of 7 to 6, the Western Turf Congress decided to-night to rescind the rule limiting racing on Chicago and St. Louis tracks to dates between June 10 and Nov. 15. The old rule allowing racing between April 1 and Nov. 30 is now in force, as before the last annual meeting.

The meeting was harmonious, and the defeated delegates declare that they will abide by the majority vote of the congress. The meeting adjourned without taking action on any other question, having been in session a little over two hours. The following members voted for the change: Washington Park, Hawthorne, Harlem, St. Louis, Memphis, New Orleans, and Tanforan. Those voting against it were Little Rock, Latonia, Highland Park, Louisville, Nashville, and Newport.

Ingleside was denied a vote in the meeting after the Chair had ruled that it was entitled to one. The decision of the President was not sustained, the vote standing 4 to 8. President Howard based his ruling on the fact that the California club's membership did not expire until Dec. 31, while the opposition contended that the membership expired with the close of the racing season.

LIEUTENANT GIBSON DEAD.

Kentucky Derby Winner Succumbed to an Operation for a Bowed Tendon.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—Lieutenant Gibson, an even-money favorite for the American Derby last Summer, in which race he ran a poor third, after having performed brilliantly in Kentucky, winning the Derby and the Clark Stakes in record time, died a week ago last Tuesday at Washington Park track, after suffering for several months from the effects of being fired. Charles H. Smith, the owner, at one time refused an offer of $20,000 for him.

For some reason the death of Lieutenant Gibson was kept a secret, and he was carted away and buried late at night. It was only yesterday that the fact leaked out.

After the colt's remarkable work in Louisville and Cincinnati and his poor showing in the American Derby, the general opinion was that Gibson had been given too much fast work in preparation for the big race here. A little later came the news that he had broken down and had been fired for a bowed tendon.

When Mr. Smith was seen to-day in reference to the matter he expressed regret that the fact of the colt's death had been made public. "It was not my intention," he said, "to say anything about Gibson's death, but it is true he died a week ago Tuesday and was buried without any publicity. I had great confidence in Gibson. His sufferings were far more a matter of regret to me than could have been any pecuniary loss I experienced by the disabling of the colt. He was a fine horse, a well-bred one, and when he died I wanted him buried with just as little publicity as possible."

English Trainer to Retire.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—John Dawson, the well-known Newmarket trainer, announces his retirement from the turf.

Penn's Basket Ball Team Beaten.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Dec. 28.—A game of basket ball was played to-night in the armory here between teams of the University of Pennsylvania and the Mount Vernon High School, which resulted in the Mount Vernonites winning by a score of 19 to 7.

During the first half the game stood 7 to 5 in favor of the High School team. In the second half the home players scored 12 goals, while the visitors only made 2. Hermes of this city played a wonderful game, throwing 5 out of 9 baskets. The superior team work and blocking of the Mount Vernon boys were a feature of the game. The line-up:

Mount Vernon High School, 19.	Positions.	University of Pennsylvania, 7.
Hermes	Right field	Wilkenson
Bourne	Left field	Mikey
Appell	Centre	Bennett
Clark	Right guard	Saussler
Coffey	Left guard	Darragh

Referee—Mr. Johnson of University of Pennsylvania and Mr. Cornell of High School. Umpires—Messrs. Evans and Steele. Timekeepers—Messrs. Bailey and Harper. Scorer—Mr. Harper.

Soldiers in Basket Ball Contest.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Dec. 28.—The Fourth Separate Company's basket ball team of Yonkers was defeated by the Fifteenth Separate Company's representatives of this city in the State armory here to-night by a score of 31 to 18.

Western Baseball League Formed.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—At a meeting held this afternoon and evening in the Great Northern Hotel, the Western Association of Professional Baseball Clubs was formed. No officers were elected, this action being deferred until next Wednesday, when an adjourned meeting will be held in this city. The members of the association so far determined upon are: Kansas City, Minneapolis, Detroit, Louisville, and Toledo. Eight clubs in all will comprise the association, but those present at the meeting to-day declined to say what the three other cities would be, saying that they will be taken from a list of half a dozen places which had made an application for membership.

Manning Renews a Baseball Lease.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 28.—James H. Manning, the owner of last year's Kansas City baseball team in the American League, has renewed his lease on Exposition Park, in this city, for five years, notwithstanding he is to manage the Washington team. In view of the rumors that the American League No. 2 may place a team here, President Tebeau of Kansas City's new Western League team, who departed for the East to-day to secure players, said he would strenuously oppose the entry of another team.

Teachers Approve of Football.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—A special to The Record from Springfield, Ill., says: "At the State Teachers' Association, now in session in this city, leading representatives of the high school teachers of Illinois, acting in the high school section, placed the seal of their approval upon the game of football, with proper supervision by high school authorities and under such regulations as shall insure the elimination of brutality. After a thorough discussion of the merits of high school athletics, favorable resolutions were adopted.

"The committee will formulate regulations to be submitted to the high schools for signing, and only those schools obligated to conform to these rules will be allowed to enter contests. The central feature of the organization will be Faculty control."

Taylor Will Not Ride Abroad.

BOSTON, Dec. 28.—Major Taylor, the colored bicyclist, who previously had announced that he would ride in France, Germany, and Austria during 1901, to-day stated that he had abandoned the project. Taylor was given the choice between two contracts made out by a syndicate. One was for $10,000 to race on Sunday and other days; the second, for $3,000, eliminating Sunday racing.

Taylor, who will not race on Sundays, did not give the $10,000 contract a moment's consideration, and he deems the $3,000 one too small to be accepted.

SMALLPOX SCARE IS UNWARRANTED

Result of Baseless Rumors, Dr. Blauvelt Explains.

Only Three Cases Fatal Out of Total of 91—Absolute Immunity Not Insured by Vaccination.

"The widespread apprehension of the people of New York concerning the outbreak of smallpox in the Boroughs of Manhattan, Brooklyn, and the Bronx is absolutely unwarranted, and is entirely the result of baseless rumors that have gained, as sensational rumors always do, extensive circulation," said Dr. Alonzo Blauvelt, Chief of the Division of Contagious Diseases of the Board of Health, yesterday afternoon.

"As a matter of fact," he continued, "there have only been eighty-four cases of the malady in the Borough of Manhattan, two in Brooklyn, and five in the Bronx since the first case was discovered on Nov. 5 last. Of these only three resulted fatally. The small death rate is the most substantial evidence of the prompt cognizance of the situation and care exercised by the Health Department, which has been put to a great deal of useless labor because of those baseless rumors.

"This morning a woman came into a grocery store near where I live, and addressing herself to the proprietor said in a voice loud enough to be overheard by a half dozen customers, including myself: 'I hear there's four cases of smallpox in No. —, just below here. The Board of Health men have been there twice this morning.' There was no truth in the report. Here is another instance: An ambulance from the J. Hood Wright Hospital was backed up in front of a tenement house in East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street yesterday noon, and soon attracted a good-sized crowd. One of our inspectors who was passing by stopped for a moment and heard a man say: 'There's smallpox in that house, and the Board of Health's trying to conceal it. They're trying to throw dust in the eyes of the public by utilizing other ambulances than their own to remove smallpox patients.' The fact is there was no smallpox in the house at all.

"The public need have no fear that the contagion will gain any considerable foothold, and as for it becoming epidemic the chances are very remote. There have been no cases discovered in two days now. There may be a few more sporadic cases, but in no section of Manhattan, even the most susceptible to contagion, will there be any alarming outbreak. I feel safe in saying this, because I know of the safeguards thrown around suspicious neighborhoods and of the close watch being kept by the Board of Health in neighborhoods where the disease has appeared.

"Physicians unacquainted with the disease have caused some delay in isolating cases, but, generally speaking, they have exercised commendable haste in communicating with the proper authorities. This has prevented the infection from spreading, as the history of most all the cases shows that isolation, where physicians were called in, was exceedingly prompt."

In reply to several questions suggested by communications received from various sources by this newspaper, Dr. Blauvelt said:

"No, vaccination is not an absolute safeguard against infection. The history of the disease shows that nobody, whatever the condition, is exempt from the liability of infection. The records of this department show that persons who once had the disease became infected again. One attack, therefore, does not confer immunity from the malady.

"There are also instances where persons recently vaccinated contracted the disease. In some cases the victim became infected before vaccination, and usually the disease was of a mild form; in others the history shows that the patient had not been revaccinated within five years—the term of life of the virus in the average person. Our Inspectors and physicians are vaccinated regularly, and the virus is fresh and potent. Although they often come in contact with the disease, they never contract it, yet there is a possibility that they might.

"There are now sixty-one cases isolated on North Brother Island. No patients are allowed to leave until they are entirely cured, and all danger of spreading the infection is passed. The most infectious period of the disease extends from the appearance of the eruption till the drying up of the pustules."

Since Nov. 5 over 50,000 persons in Manhattan have been vaccinated. Of this number fully 80 per cent. had never before undergone the operation. The highest number vaccinated in one day was 1,800.

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment will be requested to make an extra apportionment of money to the regular budget for 1901, to enable the Health Department to carry on the work of vaccination in all the boroughs until all who can be reached are treated.

SMALLPOX SCARE'S HARDSHIPS.

The appearance of smallpox has brought many hardships in its train aside from those of the people who have contracted the disease. In the districts where it exists or where there have been cases the laundresses and seamstresses, women who go out for any kind of day's work, are finding their employment taken from them at a time in the year when they most need the money. People who have employed women in the districts where the disease has appeared are afraid to have them come to their houses to work or to give them laundry work to take home. A woman who has been brought in contact with the suffering on the upper west side of the city tells of many sad cases there.

As the Chairman of the Relief Committee of the Guild of All Angels Church, Mrs. Sarah Whittingham of West Seventieth Street is constantly being called upon for aid by women who up to the present time have been self-supporting. One source of relief which has always been a part of the mainstay of many of these women has been in the employment bureau of the guild. This guild has given out work to large numbers of women, garments or bedding to be made up. The work, while it did not give the women doing it entire support, was a great help, but since the appearance of smallpox in the neighborhood it has been impossible to continue it. Eight or nine of the women who previously had received work from the guild live in the house where the first case of smallpox was discovered.

"If present conditions continue," said Mrs. Whittingham, "it is going to be serious. At a dinner recently I was speaking of the trouble women I knew were having in losing their work, and another woman told of a number of her friends who had given up the laundresses they had been employing on account of the epidemic. It is evident that the distress of which we hear is only a part of it. The precaution taken by the employers is quite right, but it makes it very hard, and I wish a fund could be raised to tide these poor people over the hard times."

GREAT FAILURE RECALLED

Daniel A. Lindley Files a Petition in Bankruptcy.

Was a Partner of Field, Lindley, Weichers & Co., Whose Debts Amounted to Over $3,000,000.

The sensational failure nine years ago of Field, Lindley, Weichers & Co., grain and stock brokers, was recalled yesterday by the filing of a petition in bankruptcy by Daniel A. Lindley, one of the partners, to get rid of the firm debts. The total liabilities are $3,101,877, and he has no assets. Mr. Lindley gives his occupation as a clerk at 27 William Street, and his residence at Montclair, N. J.

Waldegrave Harlock, his attorney, prepared a long explanation regarding the liabilities in the schedules. The schedules, it states, are prepared as accurately as practicable in the existing situation. The debts which are not in judgment have been taken from the schedules heretofore filed in the assignment to Charles W. Gould. All of the debts and claims which are not in judgment are barred by the Statute of Limitations and are placed in the schedules because the petitioner is advised by counsel that it is his legal duty to do so and for no other reason. The petitioner does not intend to revive them or in any way take them out of the statute.

There are eight claims on judgments amounting to about $1,200,000. The debts were all contracted by the firm between April 1, 1891, and Nov. 27, 1891. They are principally for money loaned and advanced to the firm, and for money due on account of stock transactions. There are claims to the amount of over $1,000,000 in favor of banks and bankers for money loaned to the firm. They held securities which it is believed have been disposed of and applied by the creditors to the satisfaction of their claims in whole or in part, but it is impracticable, if not impossible, for the petitioner to ascertain the present status of the claims, all of which were extinguished by the statute of limitations several years ago. For that reason the original amounts have been inserted in the schedules as they existed at the date of the firm's assignment.

On Dec. 2, 1893, in Westchester County, in the suit of Robert E. Dietz, the assignment was set aside as null and void, and Norman E. Dike was appointed receiver of the assets of the firm. All the assets were surrendered to the receiver, converted into cash, and distributed by the receiver in the manner required by the order of the Supreme Court, and on Jan. 17, 1894, about $14,000 was paid by the receiver to Mr. Dietz in payment to that extent on the judgment of $112,467 recovered by Mr. Dietz, and thereupon the final settlement of the business and affairs of the partnership was effected.

The names of 125 creditors are given in the schedules, the amounts of their claims ranging from $5 to $552,961. The largest creditor mentioned is the Union Pacific Railway Company, $552,961 for moneys claimed for differences between the value of certain securities deposited with the firm by the company, and advances made thereon by the firm, for which a judgment was recovered on Aug 7, 1894, against Messrs. Field and Welchers of the firm. The Merchants' Bank of Canada advanced $243,539 to the firm and obtained judgments therefor. Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne advanced $268,856 to the firm, for which they obtained judgments. There is $98,500 due the estate of Robert E. Dietz for damages from the sale of securities held by the firm. Among the unsecured creditors for money due on account of stock transactions are the estate of Carl Welchers of Schlessing, Germany, $108,538; Ellis H. D. Lassen of the same place, $93,397; Selma Klostern of the same place, $93,397; estate of George F. Welchers, $101,393; estate of Cyrus W. Field, $138,989; James R. Keene, $6,660.

Among the banks and bankers who held securities for moneys advanced to the firm are Kuhne, Loeb & Co., $48,625; Watson Bros., $137,000; W. L. Lawson & Co., $122,000; John V. Cockcroft, Sing Sing, $97,000; Manhattan Company, $85,000; Phenix National Bank, $50,000; Chase National Bank, $30,000. Waldegrave Harlock, the attorney, said that he supposed that these claims of bankers and banks had all been paid in full, and he did not think there was any interest in the securities over the advances made on them. They had, however, to be put down in the schedules.

W. L. STRONG & CO.'S FAILURE.

Receiver Denies that It Has Been Decided to Pay 50 Cents on the Dollar.

Edward A. Treat, receiver for William L. Strong & Co., denied yesterday the report that his investigation of the firm's accounts has reached that stage where it has been determined that the creditors shall receive 50 cents on the dollar for their claims.

"There is no ground for such a report," said Mr. Treat, "and no one has any authority to make the statement. I have made no report yet, and I am not now prepared to say when I shall be ready. Nothing can be said until I have made my report and consulted with the advisory board. Therefore it is impossible to say whether we shall be able to pay 100 cents or a smaller sum."

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

New York City.

THE COLTON EXPORT AND IMPORT COMPANY.—The Colton Export and Import Company, dealer in Oriental goods at 530 Broadway, made an assignment yesterday to Thomas Sproull. The deed was signed by Charles W. Colton as President. The company is a West Virgia corporation, incorporated in November, 1898, with a capital stock of $100,000, and it was said last month that at a meeting of stockholders it was voted to increase the stock to $250,000, and some changes were made in the Board of Directors. Mr. Colton, the President, was formerly connected with A. A. Vantine & Co., dealers in Japanese goods, and for five years up to August, 1898, was Vice President of A. A. Vantino & Co. corporation. After severing his connection with that concern he started the Colton Export and Import Company. Hugh W. Harmer, the attorney, said yesterday that a creditor threatened an attachment, it being a foreign corporation, and to protect all the creditors alike the company had made an assignment. He could not tell the assets and liabilities at present.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

FERDINAND FRESE.—Ferdinand Frese, bartender at 509 East Houston Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $1,586, and no assets. The debts are fourteen years old.

CHARLES P. JANOVER.—Charles P. Janover, cigar manufacturer at 230 Pearl Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $3,363 and assets $1,782 in stock, fixtures, accounts, and cash. He has been in business a year.

ABRAHAM BOLTAN.—Abraham Boltan, residing at 226 East Sixtieth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $17,850, and no assets. The debts were contracted in 1896. He was formerly a dealer in auction dry goods and a shirt manufacturer.

JAMES MARTIN & CO.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed by creditors in the United States District Court, Philadelphia, against Thomas J. Martin, Edwin Martin, and William L. Martin, trading as James Martin & Co., and carrying on dye works at Richmond and Tioga Streets. The petitioning creditors are H. W. Butterworth & Sons' Company, whose claim is $4,341.64; the Corn Exchange National Bank, $5,000, and the Central National Bank $4,002.31.

ALEXANDER BACKER.—A petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed yesterday against Alexander Backer, jeweler at 371 Eighth Avenue, by the following creditors: Charles Altschnl, $219; Jacob O. May, $145, and Henry Seasler, $173. It was alleged that while insolvent he transferred a portion of his property, consisting of a large stock of jewelry, and paid money to certain creditors to prefer them. He has been in the jewelry line since 1883, and opened the present store on Sept. 1 last.

Bradstreet's Weekly Failure Report.

Bradstreet's reports 213 failures in the United States during the week, against 262 for the previous week and 220, 218, and 207 for the corresponding weeks of 1899 to 1897. The Middle States had 85, New England 35, Southern 24, Western 43, Northwestern 18, Pacific 6, and Territories 2. Canada had 15, against 28 for the preceding week. About 90 per cent. of the total number of concerns failing had capitals of $5,000 or less, and 6 per cent. had from $5,000 to $20,000 capital.

MR. LONG TALKS COMMERCE.

The Guest of the Boston Commercial Club—Senator Hoar's Eulogy of the Secretary.

BOSTON, Dec. 28.—Surrounded by some of the most prominent men in the financial, business, and social life of Boston, Secretary of the Navy John D. Long was the central figure at a banquet at the Algonquin Club to-night, when his achievements in public life were the theme of many speakers. The banquet was a complimentary one, given by the members of the Commercial Club, a body of merchants devoted to the welfare of Boston's trade with the outside world.

The presiding officer was L. B. Burnham, President of the Commercial Club, who welcomed Secretary Long. The club Secretary then read a letter from Senator Hoar, who eulogized Mr. Long. The letter was in part as follows:

"I should be glad to express my great personal regard for your eminent guest. But, as an American citizen and a citizen of Massachusetts, I should be glad of an opportunity to say what I think of the Administration of that great department during a great and unexpected war, without a mistake, without a miscarriage, without a public complaint, and without a scandal. The Secretary had, I have no doubt, able counselors. It is a proof of his great executive capacity that he knew how to choose able counselors. But his has been the controlling mind, to whom the ablest counselors brought only suggestion, never dictation.

The special guest of the evening was the last speaker. Secretary Long made humorous allusions to the occasion and its incidents, and then gave a summary of the commercial growth of the Nation. He spoke in part as follows:

"Commerce is only another name for civilization. This is the season of the year when we celebrate the landing of the Pilgrims, whom we always associate with the idea of a religious exodus; whereas, in fact, their venture was largely a commercial one, with a view to developing the resources of the New World, and of profiting in a thrifty way by an exchange of its products with those of the Old.

"That the Pilgrims were good business men is shown by the fact that in a few years they bought out their promoters and carried the enterprise to success on their own footing. They were expansionists, reaching well out from their own borders, and for a century or two no man crossed the ocean oftener than Winslow, their Minister Plenipotentiary and commercial agent, who looked after their intereats abroad. It is an interesting fact that nearly three hundred years later we, their descendants, not in the little Mayflower, but in the great ocean steamers of to-day, are returning across the sea to plant on the shores of the Oriental isles the institutions which they planted here.

"The recent unhappy tumult in China is only the effervescent accompaniment of the bursting of the seclusion of that uncounted people; and its commercial relation with the world at large, so recently enlarged to us by the admirable administration of Secretary Hay, will in the coming century bear fruit in an interchange of agricultural and manufactured products such as even the imagination cannot now picture.

"And now may I, with all modesty, say that the navy is not without its title to credit. It has led the way as in Japan. It has made the flag respected. It is rapidly developing into proportions which will enable it to be the safeguard and help of the mighty international commerce that is coming. As our products go abroad all over the globe, as our ships carrying them sail every water, as we are gradually drawn into closer commercial activity with the world, there will be increased necessity for the resources of diplomacy, and with these the backing and moral prestige of a corresponding naval strength.

EX-GOV. GOODELL ACCUSED.

CONCORD, Dec. 28.—At a hearing before the Governor and Council to-day, on charges made by ex-Gov. David H. Goodell of Antrim, that the Police Commissioners of the City of Manchester have been derelict in duty in not securing the enforcement of the prohibitory liquor law of the State, D. A. Taggart, one of the counsel for the Commissioners, declared that Mr. Goodell had secured injunctions against certain places, but upon the payment of money to himself and counsel had dropped proceedings.

Mr. Taggart's charge was made in answer to the allegation of Mr. Goodell's counsel, that liquor saloons were allowed to exist within 150 feet of primary schools in Manchester. Mr. Taggart replied that Mr. Goodell had secured injunctions under the Nuisance Act against those very places, but upon the payment of $3,400 to Goodell and his counsel, had neglected to carry forward proceedings against them.

$10,000,000

Southern Pacific Company

2-5 Years 4½% Gold Bonds.

Due December 1, 1905.

(Redeemable at the option of the Company on and after December 1st, 1902, at par and accrued interest.)

At the price of 98% and Accrued Interest, payable as follows:
$50.00 per Bond on January 7, 1901, and
$937.50 per Bond on February 1, 1901.
$987.50 per Bond of $1,000.

The Bonds are Coupon Bonds in denomination of $1,000 each, with the privilege of registration as to principal. They are dated December 1, 1900, from which date they begin to bear interest at the rate of 4½% p. a., payable half-yearly on June 1st and December 1st. Both the principal and interest of the Bonds are payable in the City of New York in United States Gold Coin of the present standard of weight and fineness and without deduction for any tax or taxes which the Southern Pacific Company may be required to pay or to retain therefrom under any present or future law of the United States or of any State or County or Municipality therein.

Mr. Charles H. Tweed, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Southern Pacific Co., states the following in a letter to us, dated Dec. 27th, 1900:

"The $10,000,000 Southern Pacific Company 4½% Gold Bonds are a direct obligation of the Southern Pacific Company, and are secured by a Mortgage or Deed of Trust dated December 1, 1900, to the Central Trust Company of New York, Trustee. They form part of a present issue of $15,000,000 of such bonds, secured by deposit with the Trustee of $7,174,000, face value of various bonds, and $59,487,000, face value of various stocks, of companies controlled by the Southern Pacific Company, besides stock of Wells, Fargo & Co. to the amount of $1,530,000 face value.

The Mortgage contains a statement of the securities deposited with the Trustee, as well as the terms and conditions under which further issues of Bonds may be made against deposit with the Trustee of additional securities or the mortgaging of additional properties as security thereunder, but the aggregate amount of Bonds at any one time outstanding thereunder is not to exceed $30,000,000.

The Company reserves the right, upon three months' previous notice, to redeem all or any part of the Bonds at par and accrued interest on, or at any interest date after, December 1, 1902, under certain terms and conditions, as stated in the Mortgage, but if a portion only of the outstanding Bonds are at any time to be so redeemed, their distinguishing numbers are to be determined by lot.

The proceeds of the $15,000,000 Bonds will reimburse the Company for a portion of its capital expenditures during the last five years, including the acquisition of the control through stock ownership of upwards of 580 miles of railway, and of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and will furnish funds for the improvement and betterment of its properties.

THE EARNINGS AND EXPENSES OF THE SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY,

RAILWAY STOCKS A FEATURE.

The standard railway stocks were the features of the market yesterday, with notable advances in many of them. St. Paul, for instance, showed a net gain of 2½ points, Northwest of 1¾, Rock Island of 1, Burlington of ¾, Omaha of 1, Delaware and Hudson of 4⅞, and Pennsylvania of 1¾.

A pretty race was made during the day between St. Paul and Burlington—the former a 5 per cent. stock, the latter a 6—for first place. At the opening St. Paul was selling at about 140⅞, while Burlington was 141⅝. Each showed good strength on what was said to be inside buying, but St. Paul finally forged ahead to 142. Then it reacted somewhat, whereupon Burlington again took the lead, only later to be obliged once more to give way to St. Paul, which closed at 143⅛, as compared with Burlington's close of 142⅞. The especial strength of St. Paul was on a statement that a 6 per cent. dividend is assured on the stock.

In the other issues there was no news to explain the advances except in the case of Delaware and Hudson, which, it is confidently stated, will at the next dividend meeting be put on a higher dividend basis.

MONEY MARKET SITUATION.

The course of the money market yesterday was watched with interest, and, in some quarters, with anxiety. Loans made during the day carried over until Monday, the last business day of the year, and some fear was expressed that rates might be arbitrarily marked up. Nothing of the sort, however, happened, the call rate at no time rising above 6 per cent., while the close showed the low figure of 3 per cent.

What was of more significance was the lending during the day of large sums of money at 5½ and 6 per cent. to hold over until Jan. 2. This was taken to indicate that the making of loans on Monday will not be attended with any difficulty, and certainly that there will be no sharp marking up of rates.

TO-DAY'S BANK STATEMENT.

The bank statement to be issued to-day will have less interest for Wall Street this week than for some time past, for the reason that, whatever it shows, it is recognized that with the January disbursements so near at hand all danger of any money stringency is past. The statement, however, is expected to prove favorable. The known movements of money during the week indicate a gain to the banks of some thing like $6,000,000, of which nearly one-half represents the gain from the Sub-Treasury, chiefly on account of interest and premium payments on bonds. Bankers say that whether a decrease or increase in surplus reserves is shown will matter little, and that money after the new year is bound to be relatively easy.

SEABOARD AIR LINE SUITS.

Apropos of numerous reports in relation to the litigation between Thomas F. Ryan and the Seaboard Air Line, Mr. Ryan yesterday gave out for publication the following statement:

I am in no way responsible for the various reports that have been persistently furnished to the press of the country during the past two months, regarding a settlement of my differences with the gentlemen who are at present in control of the Seaboard and Roanoke Railroad and its allied companies, and I still decline to discuss that question.

As to the particular statement which appeared in an afternoon paper of this city on Thursday, saying "the withdrawal of this [my] suit was one of the conditions on which the Seaboard Air Line agreed to harmonize traffic arrangements with other southern roads," I desire to state that it is absolutely without foundation and wholly untrue. I am not and will not be a party to any such agreement as described. No such proposition was ever made to me, and no one in my behalf has suggested such a line. On this point I beg to refer to the officers of the other railroads referred to by the party who gave the information to the press. The representative of the paper in question was imposed upon.

As to the gratuitous opinion expressed regarding the extreme severity of so-called legal warfare, that answers itself, and the motives which inspired it are apparent to all.

TRADE DEVELOPMENTS.

There is not much new to be said in treating of the week's developments in the business world. What changes there are are along the lines of betterment and improvement. In some trades unprecedented activity is reported. Retail trade has most benefited and holiday business is said to be abnormally large. Purchases of Christmas presents were on a much more extensive scale than in former years, and tradesmen say that this, to them, is the most suggestive evidence that could be presented of the general prosperity.

On the general situation Bradstreet's says:

A fitting close to a year of exceptional and, in some respects, unprecedented activity is furnished by the very general report of large holiday business in the past week. The best reports as to this sort of trade come from the Southwestern section, but, except in some parts of the Spring wheat and lumber belt of the Northwest, satisfactory advices are quite general. Heavyweight clothing, too, has been measurably helped for the same reason, but, despite a good business in the past two weeks, the fur trade has apparently lagged somewhat, owing to mild weather. In wholesale trade business has been of seasonably small proportions, but reports from leading lines, such as iron and steel, shoes and leather, lumber, glass, and Spring dry goods have been encouraging, chiefly, of course, as regards the views entertained as to the outlook, rather than as to new business actually accomplished. Stocktaking is now in progress, and details as to accomplished results will probably be forthcoming soon after the close of the year.

Along much the same lines, Dun says:

So general preparation had been made by Eastern business interests for a squeeze to money near the end of the year that the expected advance did not occur, and collections in the interior were so good that banks made general complaint of the scarcity of mercantile paper offered for discount. This outcome was particularly encouraging, though business will need more money after Jan. 1. Meanwhile a good undertone has been continually in evidence, founded upon the active distribution of merchandise South and West, sellers assuming an indifferent attitude, except in cotton goods and some branches of silk, where the general improvement has been reflected to comparatively small degree.

In New York the hesitation in these lines is partly explained by the overshadowing influence of retail holiday trade, which has been on an unprecedented scale, in a measure accounting for the increase of bank clearings here of 16.2 per cent. over 1899 and 32.9 per cent. over 1898 for the week. In both cotton and silk circles better things are expected in January, and in no direction has reduction of working forces in mills occurred. Some wage differences have been adjusted, and in this respect the situation is unusually bright.

***

Of iron and steel, Bradstreet's says:

New business in iron and steel was well sustained and quite good for the period under review. St. Louis reports a good volume of business in pig iron, and one 5,000-ton lot is mentioned. Chicago notes free sales of finished products and of hardware, and 15,000 tons of rails taken. The impression prevails that an immense amount of heavy bridge material will be needed next year. From Birmingham comes intimations that a large business in pig iron is under consideration and may be announced next week. Coke prices promise to be lower, some cuts of 30 to 40 cents being already announced.

Export trade is quieter, a reflection of the continued decline in prices abroad. Wages of some classes of iron workers, it is predicted, will be lower, but less is heard about a big break in ore. Some large Pittsburg steel works have announced that no cut will be made in wages. Reduction of pig iron production and that the aggregate will be little below 14,000,000 tons, and, therefore, slightly in excess of 1899. Iron ore shipments by lake routes will run nearly 19,000,000 tons, the largest ever recorded.

On the same subject, Dun says:

More talk of a general reduction in coke and cheaper ore after navigation opens might be calculated to unsettle quotations of the finished products, but iron and steel continue the even tenor of their way. In every department of this industry more business is offered than can be accepted unless purchasers are willing to give much time for delivery. One large foreign contract was lost on this account, and at many points domestic operations are delayed by inability to secure material. Instead of the agitation for cheaper steel rails that was so prevalent a short time ago, producers are said to contemplate an advance. Domestic contracts in this line exceeded 50,000 tons at Chicago, and among foreign orders is noticed one for 17,000 tons for Australia, with many smaller sales. Structural material is wanted for buildings and bridges, with noticeable activity in this department for export. The disastrous results of last year's inflation of prices have borne fruit in the conservatism now prevailing, and this is the best feature of a most satisfactory market.

***

One indication as to the volume of holiday trade, according to Bradstreet's, is found in reports from some leading express companies that the holiday rush of packages this year was the largest on record:

Southwestern reports as to actual results are probably most satisfactory, but Western reports generally are good. Kansas City reports a year of phenomenal business, while St. Louis reports sales ahead of all records, and losses due to failures or bad debts exceptionally small. Chicago reports manufacturers' sales for 1900 $75,000,000 larger, and jobbers' sales 10 per cent. heavier, while the number of persons employed in industries is the heaviest on record. Louisville reports retail trade 20 per cent. above the average. Omaha's trade is the best for years, and a satisfactory holiday business is reported in the Northwest, except at Duluth, which is apparently affected by wheat crop shortage. On the Pacific Coast holiday trade is excellent, with San Francisco reporting all trade records exceeded. At the East it is to be noted that New York holiday trade was very large, and higher-priced goods were in demand. Baltimore's trade was the best in years, and that of Pittsburg was the best ever known.

***

Dun declares that it is not a bad sign that the local jobbing trade in footwear is quiet, nor that orders received by manufacturers from salesmen are small, as most travelers returned home for the holidays. Hence, new contracts are not large, but factories are running at full capacity, and in many cases refuse to duplicate orders at previous prices:

Shops are assured of brisk employment well into the new year, and makers expect to buy leather at better terms. Aside from hemlock sole, for which there is a scarcity, prices are barely maintained, and export buying has been proportionately better than domestic. Hides average lower, making the fifth successive week of decline at Chicago. Wool lost the temporary increase in activity, sales aggregating only 4,576,700 pounds, a decrease of 2,161,500 pounds compared with the preceding week. Stocks at the close of the year are excessive, although dealers are encouraged by the knowledge that manufacturers' supplies are light. Contradictory estimates are still heard regarding the cotton crop, but receipts show a further increase over last year, but the effect is neutralized by reports that a much larger proportion of the yield has been marketed.

CANADIAN TRADE.

Throughout the Dominion holiday trade, says Dun's Review, has reached unusual proportions, and the outlook for the new year is most encouraging, while the past year's business exceeded expectations. St. John reports heavy wholesale trade and few losses. Much of the increase is attributed to the activity in eastern Nova Scotia shipments of deals, which were 60,000,000 feet more than in 1899. Retailers report the largest holiday trade in many years. Christmas trade was the best for some years at Halifax, and travelers are making large preparations for the new year's business.

While wholesale trade is of the usual quiet holiday character at Montreal, retailers have been very busy and collections are good. Fall money is easy at 5 per cent. Retail trade is brisk at Quebec, and collections satisfactory. Wholesale trade is quiet at Toronto, but prospects are bright for a good Spring business. Christmas retail trade was very heavy, and in the more expensive articles. Holiday trade was unusually good at Hamilton, and collections prompt. Vancouver reports holiday trade not up to expectations, and below last year in volume. Jobbers there are less active in leading lines, and collections slow. A good Christmas trade was done at Victoria, and collections are fairly satisfactory, but general retail trade is rather quiet.

THE BUSINESS YEAR.

Discussing the trade conditions during the year, Bradstreet's declares that the year, as a business year, was not so good as the optimists had hoped for, but, on the other hand, it failed to justify most of the pessimistic predictions with which the advent of a year of a Presidential election was greeted. In some respects, indeed, it would seem as if it suffered because of close comparison with a year of such enormous expansion and intense activity in all branches of trade speculation and industry as 1899 rather than because of any special defects or shortcomings of the year itself. In many respects, indeed, and measured by different standards, the closing year of the century has witnessed many gains made over 1899, though it is probable that the entire turn over, measured in dollars or in profit, was not so great as in the latter year. Continuing, Bradstreet's says:

If aggregate bank clearings be taken as a guide, then business was smaller, and yet if clearings at the great speculative centre, New York, are deducted, an actual gain is shown in the rest of the country over 1899. In speculation in stocks undoubtedly a smaller business was done, the falling off from last year being probably one-fifth. Speculation in the cereals was less active, and the results in this line were certainly depressing to the bull element. On the other hand, cotton witnessed the greatest speculation and the highest prices paid for at least a decade. Crop yields were rather smaller as a whole, but it is unquestionable that the actual money value of the crops was far in excess of last year. Prices reacted from their high point, but the decline was small as a rule, except in iron and wool, and the break brought in new consumptive buying which had been discouraged by the rapidity of the advance in 1899.

Mercantile failures were slightly more numerous, and liabilities were fractionally larger than in 1899, but were far below recent previous years, and, if it be kept in mind that a new army of 35,000 men entered business during the year, the small increase in failures can be hardly regarded as significant. There were two great industrial conflicts during the year, that of building hands at Chicago and of coal miners in Pennsylvania, which tended, in conjunction with election uncertainty and textile mill shutdowns, to check trade during portions of the year, but industry otherwise was quite active at good wages.

As for the outlook, Bradstreet's says:

Back of the wonderful progress made by trade as a whole of recent years has been a conservatism of spirit which has been of value in discouraging unwise ventures, and which has likewise kept prediction well within bounds. One cause of trade uncertainty in 1900, a Presidential election, will not be a disturbing feature this time, and the final judgment passed upon currency issues has been helpful to trade generally. Prices, though somewhat irregular after the conflicting movements of the Summer and Autumn, are agreeably steady, and yet not so high as to automatically check consumption as in the past year.

On the other hand, it is to be noted that trade in leading European countries has been quieting down of late, and this, in the light of past history, seems bound sooner or later to be reflected in our own country's export trade. More than ever before, probably, is the element of buoyant confidence and hope perceptible in the business world, and, therefore, more than ever is the necessity present for broad-minded conservatism governing future arrangements.

Mr. Currier to Resume Business.

Israel L. Currier of the firm of Currier & Bunker, which on Thursday made an assignment, says he expects to resume business himself on Jan. 1. No plan of settlement has yet been decided upon, but it is thought a satisfactory arrangement with all creditors will be made shortly.

Against Discretionary Pools.

The Board of Governors of the Consolidated Exchange has passed resolutions calling attention to the "discretionary pool" business and warning all members of the Exchange against having business relations with the pool men.

John B. Stetson Company.

It is announced that out of the profits for 1900 the directors of the John B. Stetson Company have declared the regular half-yearly 4 per cent. upon the preferred stock, a regular dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. upon the common and an extra dividend at the rate of 3 per cent. upon the common. There will still remain over $200,000 to be added to the surplus.

Southern Pacific Bonds.

In the reference yesterday to the issue of Southern Pacific bonds by Speyer & Co., a typographical error made it appear that the bonds were offered at 96 and interest. This should have read 98 and interest.

WALL STREET TOPICS.

Stockholders of the Buffalo Hump Mining Company to vote at a special meeting on Jan. 14 on a proposition to reduce the capital stock from $3,000,000 to $1,000,000.

Payment begun by the Chicago and Northwestern and the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha of the interest on their funded debts, due Jan. 1, 1901.

Decrease of $72,592 in imports of dry goods at the Port of New York for the week, as compared with the previous week, and increase of $113,488 as compared with the same week last year.

Special meeting of the stockholders of the Empire State-Idaho Mining and Development Company called for Jan. 14, to vote on a proposition to increase the capital stock from $1,000,000 to $6,000,000.

Declaration of an extra dividend of 3 per cent. on the old common stock and $1.50 on the new common stock of the J. B Stetson Company, as well as the regular payments.

Gross car earnings of the Twin City Rapid Transit Company for the third week of December average $839 per day.

According to Southern dispatches, an agreement has been reached between the Central Foundry Company and the independent manufacturers of soil pipe in that section by which the price will be maintained after Jan. 1.

Shipments of 772,000 ounces of silver to Europe by to-day's steamer.

Vice President Cary of the American Car and Foundry Company quoted from Chicago as saying that orders now on the books represent a volume sufficient to keep the company's capacity fully engaged for several months of the new year.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call, 3@6 per cent., closing at 3 per cent.

Time money 4@4½ per cent. for thirty days, 4¼ per cent. for sixty days, 4½ per cent. for four months, and 4½@5 per cent. for five to six months. Mercantile paper, 4¾@5 per cent. for sixty to ninety days' indorsements, 5@5½ per cent. for choice four to six months' single names, and 5½@6 per cent. for others.

Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $326,292,122; balances, $12,028,827; Sub-Treasury debit balance, $596,196.

Money on call in London, 3¾@4⅛ per cent. Rate of discount in the open market, 4@4⅛ per cent., for short and 4⅛ per cent. for three months' bills.

Foreign exchange was firm. Nominal rates were $4.82 for sixty days and $4.86 for demand. Rates for actual business closed as follows: Sixty days, $4.81⅞; demand, $4.83@$4.83⅛; cables, $4.85⅞@$4.86; commercial bills, $4.80½@$4.81⅜.

Continental exchange was quoted as follows: Francs, 5.20@5.20 less 1-16 and 5.17½ less 1-16@5.17½; reichsmarks, 94½@94 5-16, and guilders, 40 and 40¼.

Exchange on New York at domestic centres: Chicago—20c premium. Boston—Par @15c premium. New Orleans—Commercial, 75c discount; bank, par. San Francisco—Sight, 17½c premium; telegraphic, 20c premium. Charleston—Buying, par; selling, 1-10c premium. Savannah—Buying, ⅛c discount; selling, par. Cincinnati—Between banks, 14½@15c premium; over the counter, 50c premium.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—The discount situation is unchanged. Money is much wanted in connection with the settlement, and the tenders for Treasury bills. Applications for £1,500,000 at £96 2s. 6d. will receive 85 per cent., and for £1,000,000 at £98 1s. 3d. will receive 54 per cent. The Stock Exchange subscribed moderately. The applications amounted to £2,000,000. The average rate for six months was £3 16s. 5¾d., and for the year £3 16s. 7d.

Business on the Stock Exchange to-day was active, and the tone was fairly good. Consols were firm on the belief that money will be distinctly easier when the year-end requirements are satisfied. Home rails started firm, but afterward Southeasterns were easier, on traffic prospects in consequence of the gale. Great Westerns and Northwesterns were in good demand, and so were Peruvians and Portuguese. Argentines were strong.

Americans opened steady and hardened, notably Denver common, Milwaukees, and Northern Pacifics. The volume of business was fairly large, but chiefly professional. There were several indications of profit taking. Grand Trunks receded in the absence of support. Kafirs were harder, in spite of the scarcity of business, and the reported damage to machinery near Johannesburg. They were favored by the statements regarding the exodus of the Boers and the flight of De Wet. De Beers advanced on the dividend.

Consols for money, 97 9-16; consols for the account, 97⅝; Atchison, 48⅛; Canadian, 94½; St. Paul, 146⅛; Illinois Central, 134; Louisville, 89⅞; Union Pacific preferred, 85⅜; New York Central, 147½; Erie, 25⅜; Pennsylvania, 74⅛; Reading, 13⅝; Erie first preferred, 60⅜; Northern Pacific preferred, 89⅝; Grand Trunk, 7½; Anaconda, 10¼. Rand mines, 30¼.

Bar silver steady at 29⅛d.

Money, 3½@4¼ per cent. Rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 4@4⅛ per cent.; three months' bills, 4⅛ per cent.

The amount of bullion withdrawn from the Bank of England on balance to-day was £50,000.

Spanish fours closed at 69¾.

In Continental Centres.

BERLIN, Dec. 28.—Home funds were in good demand on the Boerse to-day. Chinese 5s were harder. Americans were maintained. Canadian Pacifics opened firm and closed dull on realizations. Mines fluctuated and banks were quiet. At the close and after Boerse hours prices were generally firm on the report that De Wet had been captured.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 41 pfennigs for checks. Discount rates: Short bills, 3½ per cent.; three months' bills, 4½ per cent.

PARIS, Dec. 28.—Three per cent. rentes, 101f. 45c. for the account.

BULLION AND MINING.

Silver bullion certificates were quoted on the Stock Exchange at 64½@65⅛. There were sales of 100,000 ounces at 65⅛@65¾.

Bar silver was quoted in London at 29⅛d per ounce, and in New York at 63¾c. Mexican silver dollars at 50c.

On the Consolidated Exchange 200 shares of Alice sold at .50, 500 Argentum Juanita at .28, 200 Brunswick at .20, 500 Dunkin at .15, 300 Isabella at .08, 100 Portland at 3.30, 100 Standard at 3.50, and 1,000 Work at .20.

IMPORTS OF DRY GOODS.

The imports of dry goods at the Port of New York for the week were valued at $1,945,772, against $2,018,864 last week and $1,832,284 last year. The value of dry goods marketed was $1,989,223, against $2,042,758 last week, and $2,065,280 last year.

FINANCIAL ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The statement of the Third National Bank of Boston will be found in another column.

It is announced that coupons are to be paid by the Southern Pacific Company, the Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville Railway Company, the Bridgeport Traction Company, and the Consolidated Water Company of Utica.

Detelle will be found in another column of dividends declared by the Texas Central Railroad Company, Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg Railway Company, Railway Automatic Sales Company, and National Biscuit Company.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

The continuation of unusually large transactions in the Stock Exchange market has apparently led to a directly opposite condition in the outside market. For the past few days the transactions there have been on a very small scale, and yesterday there was a still further decrease in business. Only a few issues were traded in to a larger extent than 500 shares, and those that showed totals of 1,000 shares were very exceptional. This dullness was also accompanied by considerable irregularity in prices and not a few issues ended the day with net losses. The copper stocks were even duller than the rest of the list, while the most active issues were supplied by the industrials.

***

DISTILLING OF AMERICA drew considerable attention because of sharp declines that occurred in both issues of the stock. The decline was particularly noticeable in the preferred stock, which, on transactions that scarcely exceeded 500 shares, declined nearly 2 points. The stock was very weak at the opening, and the first sale of the day was effected at 30½, which was 1¾ points below the closing bid of the previous day. Trading in the common stock was as light as that in the preferred, and this issue showed a net loss of half a point. Notwithstanding the weakness of the stocks, it was stated in well-informed quarters that developments of some importance are under way and may be announced shortly.

***

CONSOLIDATED EQUIPMENT was more active than it has been of late, and on transactions in something over 500 shares sold fractionally above the final price of Thursday. It is stated by officers of the company that satisfactory progress is being made in the further development of the company's business.

***

ROYAL BAKING POWDER preferred, which recently has attracted little attention, showed considerable strength, and on small transactions rose to 95. It closed with a net gain of 2½ points at 94¾ bid.

***

TELEPHONE, TELEGRAPH AND CABLE suffered a further decline, and at the close was offered at 2⅛, with 2 bid. The further weakness in the stock was attributed to the approach of the final day for the payment of the assessment of $5 a share, which was called about a month ago. Trading in the stock was small.

***

NEW ENGLAND GAS AND COKE bonds, which for a week or more have been steadily recovering from the recent decline, yesterday advanced further to 69. They closed at that figure and showed a net gain of 2¼ points. The stock was also substantially improved.

***

INTER-STATE OIL, which since the support of the pool operating in the stock ceased, has been moving about very erratically, was yesterday offered lower than ever. The stock was for sale at 30, and the best bid made during the day was 10.

***

AMERICAN BRIDGE sold to the extent of about 1,000 shares, between 45¾ and 45¼. It closed at the latter figure, showing no change for the day. The preferred stock sold as low as 95, but was in demand at that price at the close.

***

SHEET STEEL, preferred, sold to the extent of 500 shares, at 76½. It closed at 76½ bid, a net gain of one point.

***

Closing quotations yesterday, compared with those of the previous day, were as follows:

BANK TROUBLES IN GERMANY.

BERLIN, Dec. 28.—The special committee appointed to investigate the affairs of the Deutsche Grundschuld Bank, one of the embarrassed mortgage banks, reported today in the most unfavorable vein. The holders of obligations of the institution will meet to-morrow.

The Potsdam Court has opened bankruptcy proceedings against the estate of Herr Sandden, recently a Director of the Prussian Hypotheken Aktien Bank, now under arrest in connection with the embarrassment of that institution, with a view of protecting the interests of the bank's creditors. The newspapers assert that the greater part of Sanden's fortune is safely invested in England.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Corner at Broadway and Dey Street Said to be Under Option.

EAST 49TH STREET PLOT SOLD

Fifth Avenue and Upper Broadway Corners Change Hands—Other Dealings by Brokers.

The Livingston estate has sold the two four-story dwellings 4 and 6 East Forty-ninth Street, 50 by 100.5. It is said that the purchaser will erect a bachelor apartment house on the site.

Officers of the Mercantile National Bank were emphatic yesterday in their denials of reports that its property at the southwest corner of Broadway and Dey Street had been sold. Potter & Brother, the reported purchasers, also denied that they had bought the property. In other quarters, however, it is stated that this firm has secured options covering the Mercantile Bank's holdings, a plot about 46 by 100, on the immediate corner, as well as an "L"-shaped parcel surrounding the corner, with a frontage at 187 Broadway, making in all a plot about 71 by 150.
